Lena Wilson of the Canadian lumber district has literally put one over on the New York flappers. Many is the flapper in this country that would like to have married Bud Stillman, simply for that million and more dollars given to the bride.

Mr. F. M. Law of Houston speaking before several thousand farmers at the A. & M. College short course declared the farmer must work out his own salvation, must solve his own problem and that he can expect nothing in the way of Government aid.

Henry Ford seems to be spending considerable time these days retracting statements and compromising or otherwise settling law suits out of court. We all remember the incident of five years ago when Mr. Ford acquired the apparent enmity of the so-called Wall Street interests.

In all the newspaper stories we have seen about the big affair at Cisco last week, none of them mentioned anything about the chicken barbecue tendered the visiting men at the celebration. Maybe the intentions were to keep it quiet.

SOCIETY AND SOCIAL AFFAIRS

Stockholders In A. T. & T. Company Number 420,291

On June 20, 1927, the record date for the quarterly dividend payable July 15, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company had 420,291 stockholders. This is the largest number to whom the corporation has ever paid a dividend and is believed to exceed the combined total stockholders for the next three largest American corporations.
Included in the list are more than 70,000 Bell Systems employees. Less than 4 per cent of the outstanding stock is held in the names of brokers, the balance being owned by investors throughout the country and including some 6,000 living in foreign countries.
The average number of shares held per stockholder is only 26. More than one-half of the stockholders own ten shares or less, however, and more than three-fourths own 25 shares or less. No stockholder owns as much as 1 per cent of the outstanding stock.

Couple Closes 7 Year Honeymoon Move Home Now

HOUSTON, July 28.—After a seven year honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Holton are enroute to Portland, Ore., to establish their home.
The couple stopped here for a few days rest enroute from the southern most point in Florida, Cape Sable.
Married seven years ago in Minneapolis they purchased a car especially equipped for touring. They have visited 20 of the largest cities in the United States in addition to trips into Mexico, Cuba and Canada. They have visited many notables among whom were Thomas A. Edison and John D. Rockefeller.
Their most thrilling adventures, they relate, was in coming through the flooded Mississippi river valley. The road was 10 to twelve inches under water with 10 to twelve feet of water on either side. A single mistake and they would have been drowned, they said.

team, an unusual sight in these modern days, caused excitement and damage as it careened down San Antonio street here.
Two huge horses hitched to a large dray became frightened while the driver was unloading the wagon. They started down the street weaving from side to side and side-swiping cars along their path. Five automobiles were damaged.

Looks Like Yanks Have Pennant About Cinched

The manager of a major league ball club, in quest of a pennant, always tries to figure out some way in which he can win 90 ball games. It is a big league tradition that any club able to put over that many victories must be regarded as a serious pennant contender.

In the American league last season, the New York Yankees, with 91 victories, 63 defeats and a percentage of .591, finished in front. The St. Louis Cardinals, with 89 wins and 65 reverses, showed the way in the National League. The Cards, who finished the season with a mark of only .578, were good enough to win the world series. Thus precedent ran true to form in the majors last season, since the Yanks won the pennant with one victory over the 90 mark while the Cards were one game away.

Conditions in the majors this year are much the same as last. The Yankees are making a runaway race in the American while the National is enjoying a four-cornered affair.

One needs only to delve very lightly into the standing of the clubs to appreciate what a wide open race the Yanks have made of the American League derby.

With 89 games of the schedule completed, New York has captured 64 battles and been vanquished only 25 times, giving the Yanks the high hat percentage of .719.

All of which means the Yankees could go into a terrible slump, play only a trifle better than .400 ball during the remainder of the season, and still finish with as good a mark as in 1926.

Figuring 89 games out of the way leaves 65 more contests to complete the 154-game schedule. In order to win 91 games, which was good enough to win the pennant last year, New York needs to win only 27, while losing 38 games.

Cold "figgers" make it look very much like a cinch for the Yankees. If a club able to travel at a better than 700 pace in the first 89 games can't play 500 ball during the remainder of the race, it really doesn't deserve to win.

The Yankees are a much better ball club this year than last, and it would be no surprise if Huggins and Co. reached the 100 mark in games won.

Of course a lot of things can happen in baseball. Nothing is certain. This time last year the club was as far out in front, yet had but a three-game margin at the finish.

However, New York has far better reserve strength than in 1926 and the injuries already suffered by a number of stars have in no way stopped the club's winning ways.

"Mile Posts On the Devil's Highway," Pastor's Subject

A good audience greeted Rev. J. R. Smallwood at the Central Baptist Church, Ranger, last night at which time he spoke on "Mile Posts on the Devil's Highway."

The first mile post, the preacher said was putting self ahead of Christ; the second milepost, unfaithfulness; the third mile post, failure to pray; the fourth mile post, following the wrong crowd. "Follow the crowd that follows Jesus—let Jesus put us on the right highway. If we are not ashamed of Jesus we will tell others about him and help them to set their feet on the right highway," he concluded.

There was special music by Leo Underwood. Tonight the subject will be "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Jesus Christ."

WE MAKE LOANS ON HOMES PAY LIKE RENT
Ranger Building & Loan Association

Gripings by Gus

Hear ye, hear ye. From henceforth there will be a flat charge of three bucks or its equivalent in vegetables, clothing or home brew for anybody to get their name mentioned in this here column unless we decide to mention it of our own free will and accord.

The reason for this decision is that so far nobody has told us what we can put in here and only the editor may tell us what we can't. And he's pretty liberal.

The question involved is this: What is news? Our contention is that whatever anybody wants published had enough to ask you to publish it is advertising, and vice versa, whatever they don't want published is news and makes good reading and other people clamor for it. Human nature makes this true because people always want to know things about other people that other people don't want known.

The distinction briefly is this: News is information that everybody wants about things that have happened to people that don't want it mentioned. Advertising is what one guy wants everybody to know about.

Now, that that's all settled, let's talk about naming the big celebration in Ranger on October 21-22.

It will be a home coming. It will commemorate the tenth anniversary of the bringing in of the first well. It will be for the old timers. It will be for the newcomers. It will be for oil men. It will be for farmers. It will be for skimmers, carpenters, rig builders, drillers, tool dressers, boiler-makers, laborers, truck drivers, welders, and everybody else that has ever lived in Ranger or worked in the Ranger field.

It needs a name that will tell most of this in the fewest number of words, and a name that is catchy and will stick in a fellow's mind after he has heard it once.

Send in your suggestions with a postmark not later than Sunday and if your name is the best you'll get five dollars and a ticket to the free barbecue. Besides we'll put your name in the paper.

Lots of excitement down on Canal street Wednesday afternoon.

As usual, there was a gang of cars there and one unsuspecting tourist who, incidentally, happens to be a motion picture actor named Bobby Montgomery, well, anyway, he drove off into Hagaman Creek thinking it was only a few inches deep and the water came above the carburetor and naturally he stopped.

His mother and sister were in the car and the water kept rising until it was above the floor boards and nearly into the seat. Somebody went to hunt the fire chief to get a little help to pull the car and soon there were rumors afloat that three people had drowned down there on Riverside Drive.

Fire Chief Murphy came to their aid—you know he is nice about things like that—and outside of a little dampness and the loss of a couple of hours time the folks went on their way.

It was one of the biggest rains we have ever seen here and I reckon we've seen a thousand. We had a similar one about seven years ago that washed away several of the Mexican tents and made the colored folks hunt higher ground.

After seeing that you wonder what the Mississippi looks like when it breaks a levee or so.

Oak Grove News

Special Correspondence.
Oak Grove, July 28.—Albert Hill, constable of precinct No. 8 of Stephens county, but who does his trading in Ranger, was in the city today and in speaking of crop conditions at Oak Ridge and Oakley, said that they had a fine rain yesterday in both communities, but not near so heavy a rain as Ranger had. Mr. Hill stated that lots of late feed stuffs was being planted but that cotton was not doing well. He said that some was waist high but had no blooms on it.

Natural Gas "The Sanitary, all purpose fuel"

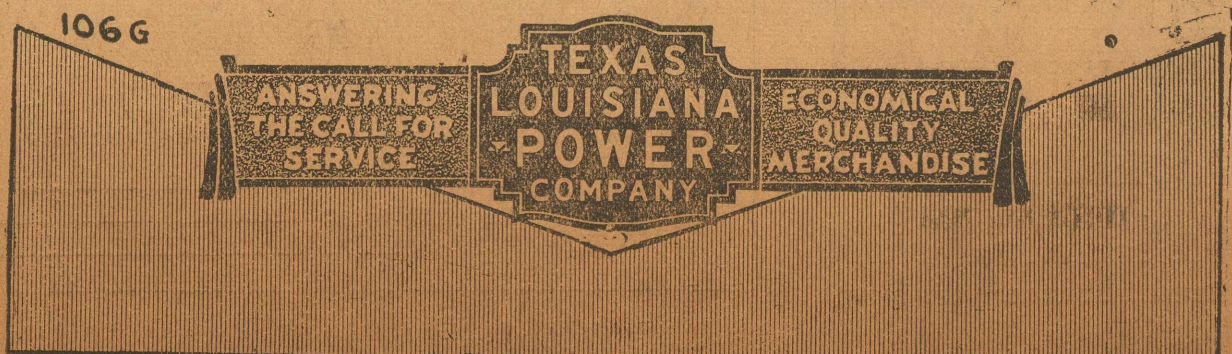

WE KNOW of millions of women who use gas in preference to any other fuel. But we have never heard of a single woman who prefers wood or coal to gas.

Every woman who has used gas knows how it lightens the work of keeping a house clean and healthful.

No coal scuttle or wood box in the corner to collect dirt and make extra work.
No ashes or cinders to be cleaned out, and no smoke to spoil the walls.

It is so clean, so convenient and so economical that you cannot afford to use any other fuel.

REVIVAL OF SMUGGLING ALONG ENGLISH COAST

By United Press.
LONDON.—Smuggling, a lucrative profession carried on in Britain over a hundred years ago, is showing a marked revival and is greatly perturbing the Board of Trade officials who are responsible for the patrolling of Britain's shores. Along the coastline of the English Channel are numerous hamlets and villages whose local history is rich in smuggling legends, of the old days, when government activity finally made this business too risky to be carried on. In these remote spots a successful revival of smuggling is being carried out on a large scale, due to the poor supervision these places receive from the coastguard patrols.

Production of electricity by public utility plants in Texas is increasing rapidly. In April of this year the total was 140,893,000 kilowatt-hours, an increase of 28 per cent over April last year.

Follow the Arrows AND You follow the Air!

- Here's where the warmest air in the refrigerator enters the ice chamber and is rechilled and purified by contact with the five exposed sides of the block of ice. When you cover the ice, or put foods in the ice chamber, you interfere with the purifying and chilling of the air.
- Here's the coldest spot in your refrigerator, where the pure, cold air, descending from the ice chamber, does its best work of food saving. This is the place for milk, cream, butter and such easily perishable foods.
- This is the next coldest place. The air here begins its journey back to the ice chamber. In this pure, cold air is the place for meats, etc.

4. Air not quite so cold here—but, when refrigerator is properly iced, this is just the place for cooked foods—foods without strong odors—and vegetables.

5. This is the least cold place in the refrigerator, but it will keep fruits and some vegetables very satisfactorily—things having decided odor should be put here, as the air will pick up the odors and these will be condensed on the cold film of water when they come into contact with the cake of ice, ridding the air of all odors and returning it to the bottom of the refrigerator pure and cold.

Ranger Attorney Voices Opinion On Amendments

"by an impartial court" and of "due process of court," but this subject does not justify a wholesale change in compensation provisions of the constitution. It demands merely legislative provision for compensation by fees not dependent upon conviction, the officers being compensated directly by the State or State and County. All municipal judges should be paid regular salaries by the cities and all police officers should be paid salaries as now, and deprived of all extra fees as witnesses and for other alleged services in all criminal matters. That would answer the call of the Supreme Court for a fair trial and due process, and should not be the excuse for a general salary raid. If the Governor should be paid more or the legislators are not duly compensated, they should be, but it is not necessary to make a crazy quilt of the constitution to attain that end.

The proposed tax amendment is too absurd in its provisions to be seriously discussed. California's experience with a somewhat similar provision should be an all-sufficient answer to the scheme. It is the chimera of a disturbed imagination, or a deliberate effort to shift the burden of government, and I am uncertain which. There should be a more scientific distribution of taxation than now exists, but it has always been so and always will be so long as men bear taxes, and such a condition does not justify the adoption of a legal abortion as a constitutional provision. In the discussion of the amendments the only thing we have definitely heard on this subject from its proponents has been an almost deafening silence.

To sum up: I am opposed to the first and fourth proposed amendments as being merely disguised salary grabs. To the third, segregating objects for taxation, as disguised efforts to shift public burdens for class relief. And favor the second, changing the appellate system, as a prac-

FINDS GENERAL BUTLER DIFFICULT TO QUESTION

By United Press.
SHANGHAI.—This General Smedley D. Butler, who commands the American marines in China, waxes humorous at times.
Witness a newspaper reporter who recently rushed into the headquarters of the general a day or two before the "devil dogs" sailed for Tientsin.
"Say, General, is it true that all the marines are going to be sent to Pekin right away? What about it? When'll they go? What are they going to do up there? Are they—?"
"Listen, son," quoth the general. "As far as I know the marines will leave for the north somewhere about the thirty-second of the month. If you'll just keep quiet and come to me on that day, 'I'll tell you all about it."

RANGER VISITED BY CLOUDBURST LOW SECTIONS OF CITY FLOODED

A rain of almost cloudburst proportions swept over Ranger yesterday afternoon, leaving in its wake enough water to flood the lower part of Main Street, all of South Commerce and two blocks of North Commerce as well as all other low places. It was estimated that during the two hour downpour at least 3 1-2 inches of rain fell. The rain was accompanied by electricity and wind. Tourists on the Strawn Highway reported counting five telegraph poles on the ground between Ranger and Strawn, and in the city a number of homes suffered from leaking roofs.

The low places on some of Ranger's main streets were impassable and but for the police and fire department's standing by ready to give assistance and stop traffic, there would doubtless have been some accidents.

From the Banner Ice Cream Company's plant on North Commerce, to the other side of the dip on South Commerce, was a stream of water several feet deep. Trucks of the Banner Ice Cream Company could not leave the plant until the water went down. That section of Commerce Street got all the flood waters from Mirror Lake and Cemetery Hill, and the small stream that usually takes care of the surplus water was inadequate to the occasion, so water filled the dips on North Austin, North Cherry and North Rusk Streets and flowed all over North Commerce Street. This water came down North Commerce Street, was joined by the surplus of Walnut, Main, Pine and Elm Streets and swept on toward the lowest place on the street, the concrete dip on the South end. The other side of the watershed was in the meantime doing its duty toward the Leon River, and traffic was held up at the Texas and Pacific underpass just outside of the city limits for two hours and a half. For the first time in its short history, the West Texas Coaches, failed to negotiate the swirling stream, but on this occasion a truck from the Prairie Oil and Gas Company came to the rescue and pulled the one that attempted the crossing from its watery stalling place. Guards were placed at this point and on each side of the concrete dip on South Commerce, where one car belonging to a Californian attempted to cross, not knowing of the dip, got marooned and had to be pulled out by members of the two departments. The car was flooded and the driver was delayed several hours in Ranger while mechanics repaired the damage done his engine by the water and sand that rushed into it. On East Main Street water that rushed from the Commerce Street dip, flooded that area, but the larger stream into which the waters eventuually emptied near the Hamon-Kel depot did not overflow. Young Street at one certain low place was reported to be bank full. Rainfall reports from over the county were scarce this morning, but the telephone company reported rain at Breckenridge and a heavy rain at Strawn. Probably an inch of rain fell at Eastland.

Will your skin bear close scrutiny?

Skilled physicians recognize the appearance of pimples, boils and other skin eruptions as being an indication of an abnormal condition of the system. This is why so many thousands have been enabled to free themselves of these unsightly blemishes and painful annoyances by taking a course of S.S.S.

You owe it to yourself to try S.S.S. It helps Nature build up red corpuscles. It improves the processes by which the blood is nourished.

"I suffered from impure blood—was weak, and I had lost so much weight, I didn't look natural. I had pimples and was also bothered with a breaking-out that itched terribly. I also had boils one after another. I tried different kinds of remedies, but nothing did me any good until a friend advised me to take S.S.S., which I did. This was some time ago. Now I feel well, and I am getting along fine. S.S.S. stopped the itching and it cured me of boils. I advise all weak and run-down people to give S.S.S. a trial. It clears up the skin and makes you strong and fills you with energy." Mrs. J. W. Barker, 1337 Walnut Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

S.S.S. is made from the rich roots of medicinal herbs and plant and is prepared in a scientific way in a modern laboratory. It is the tried and reliable.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Attempts have been made on the life of Elise Marberry, an American girl, who owns and manages considerable property near the little town of Porto Verde, in west central Brazil.

Several mysterious deaths have occurred, but so far she has escaped harm, due to the shrewdness of her cousin and protector, Vilak, who masquerades as her attorney under the name of Davis. Vilak is a curious mixture of American and Oriental blood and a student of criminology. He tries to persuade Elise to leave the country, leaving him there with his friend, Lincoln Nunnally, an elderly American chemist, to solve the mystery.

Elise at first refuses, but after her two-year-old orphaned nephew is kidnapped, to be found again by the alert Vilak, and another attempt is made on their lives, she agrees. Her departure is prevented by the threat of floods. Messengers ride through the countryside warning the natives. Then Vilak decides to proceed to the house of one Gavirod Prentiss and warn him of the danger. Prentiss is a recluse and a forbidding man, as well as an enemy of Elise's, and she suspects him of some knowledge of the conspiracy against her. Nevertheless, she agrees that it is their duty to warn him.

Vilak learns that the flood warning is a ruse to get Prentiss out of his house and persuades Prentiss to admit them. They barricade themselves in a small stone tower. Unknown attackers open fire on them. Vilak, seeing their ammunition running low, decides to dynamite the dam to the small lakes above Prentiss' place and disperse the enemy with a real flood.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY CHAPTER XXX

Five minutes passed. Ten minutes. A tuco-tuco, that strange South American animal which, like the mole, lives always underground, began its fantastic, resonant hammering beneath them. The green caterpillar, which had crawled up the wall, now crawled down again and vanished into the crack from which it had come.

Fifteen minutes. Shots rang out from the trees near the gate. Elise's powder-smoked lips quivered. Twenty minutes. Still no sign of the two men who had departed.

Elise rested her weary wrist. "Do you think—he's hit?" she asked slowly.

"No—no—no," the old man's voice expressed a cheerfulness he did not feel. "He's all right."

"Let me tie up your arm again. The bleeding's recommenced." She made the bandage tighter. As she did so, the door opened cautiously. Vilak stepped inside. His clothes were covered with mud, his face scratched with brambles.

"Bad shots," he grunted. "Or they would have had me. Moon went under for a minute. Thought I was safe but it came out in a hurry and they saw me. Fuse's lit all right."

The old man wonderingly watched him shut the door. "Where is—er—Prentiss?"

"Went over to the house to get something. Said he'd be back in a minute."

Once more the log thundered against the gate with an increased violence which showed that the attackers had well profited by their rest. The iron, weakened by the previous assaults, could no longer resist. It cracked explosively.

"Broken through," Vilak snapped. "The water'll have to be fast."

A torch glared along the creek, then another and another.

"Try to smoke us out, probably. Won't get them very far, when we're in this stone tower."

The torch seemed to speed through the gate. Vilak fixed. The torch went out. A moment later all the torches were extinguished.

Vilak swiftly glanced at his watch. "Fuse been burning seven minutes," he said placidly. "Two minutes overdue as nearly as I can calculate a makeshift affair. Our friends are now undoubtedly crawling through the gate. If it doesn't go off soon, we'll be in trouble. Wonder what's keeping Prentiss."

He slipped a pellet of betel into his mouth and fixed his gaze upon his watch. A bit of mortar loosened by the firing dropped down upon his muddy black hair and a few of the gruffs fell into one of Elise's eyes. Quickly, dextrously, he began to remove them.

A flash of light colored the sky behind the house; the roar of a powerful explosion shook the ground.

"There it goes," Vilak murmured. The roar of the explosion was followed by the clatter of crashing rocks, then the steady, dull thunder of rushing water. Frightened shouts arose from the bushes at the creek; the watchers in the tower could see shadows scurrying frantically about, some dodging back to gate through which they had come, others racing to the house, all fleeing from the unseen, booming peril whose nature they could divine only dimly.

With a muffled report, the fazenda wall toward the lake collapsed as a huge wave of water sweeping down from above surged against it. A mad, moving mountain, spreading wider and wider as it went, it circled house and tower, and hurtled toward the creek, sweeping away trees, walls, low-lying sheds, anything which came within its fierce embrace.

A second wave came down upon the first; it swirled up the ground around the tower and began licking at the foundation stones. The three inside watched it fascinated, tried to distinguish whether the black forms bobbing on its crest were branches or men. But the moon had gone under a cloud again and they could see clearly only a few feet ahead.

The water began trickling over the door-sill. The old man eyed it apprehensively. Vilak caught his glance. "No use worrying, Nanny," Coolly he lit his cigarette. The trickle became more rapid. Vilak held out his cigarette case. The old man shook his head nervously.

"I tell you there's no use worrying, Nanny," Vilak went on to say, his eyes again at the window. "Either the water rises, and makes the tower collapse, or it doesn't. These are the only two things that can possibly happen. If it collapses, then it'll be time to think about it. Meanwhile, we've done everything we can, and there's nothing to be gained by getting nervous about it. Wish it wasn't so confounded dark. Could see then whether our friends had gotten away or not. Wonder what's become of Prentiss?" He extended the cigarette case to Elise.

"You're not going to desert me, too, are you cousin?"

She brushed her hair back from her blackened face. "Surely. I'll smoke with you." She smiled faintly. "Not of yours—if you don't mind."

They climbed up. "More water than I expected," he went on. "Lose either deeper, or we started that one next to it on a little voyage, too. One thing's in our favor; the higher the water rises, the more ground it has to cover. Certainly oughtn't rise much more."

They stretched out on the table, their feet overhanging the edge, the old man watching the water creeping higher and higher up the walls, Elise leaning down and trying to wash some of the powder stains from her eyes and mouth.

The water climbed half way up the table, then neared the top. The tower gave a slight quiver and a gap appeared in the stones near the foot. Nunnally lit his cigarette sizzle into the water. "Don't you think—er—Vilak—we'd better try to depart from here? The water's still rising. And that wall seems about to—er—topple."

"Refuse to worry until it gets at least a couple of feet higher. Then we'll get out on a log or something if we have to. Water can't keep rising forever. And that's a pretty good wall. Yet, at least, I'm not going to let an insignificant craft in it rout me out of my comfortable seat."

He leaned back lazily. A centipede crawled out from the under side of the table-top onto his coat. He brushed it away.

The rise of the water slackened. Soon it became stationary. It remained thus for perhaps ten minutes, then slowly began to fall. Inch by inch it crept down down the walls, exposing now the black seat of a broken chair, now the tops of two iron pots standing on the floor, now with a final splash vanishing, and exposing the muddy floor itself.

They climbed down from the table and, going to one of the windows, attempted to peer out to watch the retreat of the rising water. But the disconcerting appearance of the moon for the night seemed permanent, their eyes could not pierce the obscurity. They could gauge its fall somewhat, however, by the growing faintness of the murrain eddies as they dropped lower and lower down the slight rises on which stood the house and tower.

"Wonder how Prentiss fared in all this," Vilak said. He stretched again. Elise vigorously slapped a foot which had gone to sleep; the old man shifted the bandage to curiously regard the wound.

In a quarter of an hour they were standing outside, while Vilak was flashing his electric torch on the water in the low gully which lay between the tower and the house. "Be down enough to get across in a few minutes," he said thoughtfully. "Funny about Prentiss. Wait a little while, and if he doesn't come we'll go out to look for him."

Soon after the odd trio slushed through the mud to the house, Vilak's lantern sprayed the gloomy exterior with a white circle of light.

"Prentiss!" he shouted. There was no answer. "Prentiss! Where the devil are you?" he called again, making a megaphone of his hands to gain greater volume.

His only reply was a wolf-like howl from an aquara off in the forest. Her great blond eyebrows puckered.

"Funny. Mighty funny.—Let's go inside."

They entered the desolate structure. Again they walked through crumbling living rooms, moldering bedrooms, the ruins of a kitchen. They peered into every musty cupboard and pried into every skeleton of an attic. In one hall which formed the gloomy entrance to the forlorn building were a few muddy prints which Vilak had no difficulty in recognizing as the marks of the heavy hunting shoes Prentiss constantly wore. Beyond this there was nothing. Man and dog as well had vanished. (To be continued)

Prentiss has vanished and cannot be found. Vilak decides to banish one of Porto Verde's many dangers.

Youth's Greatest Charm for Women

The greatest charm of womanhood is that youthful vivaciousness and buoyancy of spirit which comes with good health; and there is no reason nowadays why every girl or woman shouldn't have this charm.

Thousands of them who found themselves growing weak and listless are now using St. Joseph's G. F. P. to build them up and strengthen them.

How well satisfied these girls are with this vegetable compound is best shown by the words of Miss Fontdella Early, which are typical of those of girls and women everywhere who are using St. Joseph's G. F. P.

Miss Early, who lives at 1600 Hauger St., Little Rock, Ark., says, "Now I'm on my seventh bottle of G. F. P., I feel just wonderful and never miss a day from school. I am always going and having a good time. I want every girl to know about this medicine."

Imperial Sugar Company Shows Larger Output

The announcement of the completion of the new panhouse addition to the Imperial Sugar Company at Sugar Land, Texas, increasing the capacity of the plant from one million to one million five hundred thousand pounds of Imperial Pure-Cane sugar daily, indicates the success and progress of an institution that is growing with the great Southwest.
There is romance connected with the building of this enterprise located at Sugar Land, Texas, on the Old Spanish Trail in Fort Bend county. It is a community of which the entire South is proud and of which the world is beginning to hear.
It is fittingly called "Sugarland" for this rich agricultural district is a veritable "land of milk and honey." But there is yet a greater reason for the name. Here in this model community, Imperial Pure-Cane sugar is made. This brand of cane sugar is familiar to thousands of housewives in the South, but many of them may not know of the romantic Utopian surroundings in which it is made.
When in 1907, I. H. Kempner of Galveston, and W. T. Eldridge of Sugarland and their associates acquired this property, and established the Imperial Sugar company, they set about to consummate a lofty ideal. They aspired to build an industrial community which should not have as its prime motive the sordid making of money. In the first place they wanted to surround the employees with a healthy, happy environment that would make life for them—something more than a daily grind. Next they sought to manufacture a product that would be second to none in quality. And finally they hoped to found an institution which should do much in the upbuilding of the Southwest.

After twenty years of consistent effort, the founders modestly speak of the success of their ideals. The industrial community of Sugar Land, with its population of about twenty-five hundred, is an example of civic as well as industrial progress. Each home is a modernly equipped bungalow-type house, with attractive, pleasant surroundings; its streets are paved, its schools of the highest type, the utilities and other conveniences of community life are modern in every respect.
The combined payroll of the Sugar Land Industries is over a million dollars annually. The Federal Government receives about five million dollars each year for import duties on raw sugar and these industries have a gross annual business of over twenty million dollars. The development of the Imperial Sugar company and its associates manufacturing enterprises is one of the outstanding stories of southern industrial progress and Messrs. Eldridge and Kempner are justly proud that their many struggles have not been in vain.

MASONITE MAY SOLVE SCRAP LUMBER PROBLEM

TROUPE, July 28.—Masonite, a new synthetic lumber, is expected to be the solution for the wood waste from saw mills in East Texas. Masonite is formed by a process of steam explosion of small pieces of waste lumber into chips of uniform size. These chips are pressed into lumber of any desired size and hardness.

Many Farm Life Delegates Will Go To Meeting

By CHARLES E. AHRENS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

EAST LANSING, Mich., July 28.—Eighteen organizations representing a vivid cross-section of American farm life will convene at Michigan State College here Aug. 1 to 6 inclusive, for a week of discussion to be given over to the fundamental problems confronting the farmer and the small community.
The week has been designated as National Country Life Week, and more than 3,000 delegates are expected to come from all parts of the country to attend the conference. According to its sponsors, it will be by far the largest gathering of its kind ever held in the United States.
Among the more prominent organizations to be represented are the American Country Life association, the American Farm Economics association, the International Country Life Commission and the National Catholic Rural Life society.

Although indications are that the conference will adopt no specific platform, it is planned to establish the ground-work for closer relationship between the farm groups of the nation and thus to attain a unity, not evidenced in the past.
William Jardine, secretary of agriculture, will give the keynote address of the conference. What his subject will be is not yet known, but it is thought he will speak extemporaneously, giving an "inside" viewpoint on his impressions of the "farmer and his problems."
Other speakers who will address the various groups include: L. J. Taber, Barnesville, Ohio, president of the National Grange; L. S. Tenney, chief of the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics; Judge Florence Allen, of the Ohio Supreme Court; Dr. H. C. Taylor, rural economist at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill.; Judge Ruth Thompson, Muskegon, Mich.; Henry Morris, Economist, London, Eng.; Dr. H. C. Halpin, rural economist for the U. S. Department of agriculture and Dean Mann of Cornell university.

An important feature of the week's activities will be the first meeting in the United States of the International Country Life commission. The commission was organized at Brussels last year for the purpose of studying the needs of the farmer, both social and economic and to recommend any reforms thought necessary for international betterment.
One of the principal topics of discussion during the week, according to President Kenyon L. Butterfield of Michigan state college, will be "farm income and farm life" and its corollary subjects. No attempt will be made to arrive at a solution of the so-called economic difficulties although all phases of farm relief will be discussed by delegates of the various groups.
The major portion of the time, it is expected, will be given over to social reform discussions, and means to give the farmer more time to spend in recreational pursuits.
Women will play an important part in the conference, since both the Michigan League of Women Voters and the Farm Women's institute, a Michigan organization plan to hold meetings at the college during the week. Judge Florence Allen of the Ohio Supreme court, who holds the distinction of holding the highest elective office, state or federal of any woman in America, will address the league of women voters.

Necklace of Bear Claws Cause of Indians Dispute

By United Press.

PONCA CITY, Okla., July 23.—Who shall own the bear claw necklace, emblematic of power in the tribal councils of the Otoe Indians?

That question soon will be submitted to Charles H. Burke, Indian commissioner, and Hubert Work, secretary of the interior, for solution.
A dispute as to the ownership of the necklace with two dozen bear claws attached is being waged among two prominent Otoe Indian families. The necklace has been an ornament of the tribal head chief for several generations, and is a mark of distinction in the tribe. Its possession is greatly desired and the holder is always a much envied person.

Owned originally by Chief Two Strike, living in Nebraska, before the tribe was moved to Oklahoma, it was later the property of Two Killer, Medicine Horse, White Horse, Arkeket and various others.
In the life of Chief Two Strike, he received a certificate or written statement from the Indian department recognizing him as chief of the Otoes. This the story of Mary DeRoin, who says she is the granddaughter of the old chief.

Medicine Horse was chief of the Otoes when the tribe was brought to the reservation 20 miles south of Ponca City, in the '80s. He had succeeded Walthah-va-bayh-yinga, the son of Two Strike as chief, and thereby came into possession of the bear claw necklace, which he wore on all state occasions. According to testimony, Medicine Horse was no blood relation to Two Strike, but had been selected as chief of the Otoes, nevertheless. Members of the Green family, one of the contestants for possession of the necklace, contend that the bear claws should have passed from father to son and on down through the generations, with Medicine Horse having no inherited right to it.

The other contesting family, the Woolsey Kents, seek the necklace on the argument that Kent is the son of Mary K. Diamond, granddaughter of Medicine Horse, and the necklace, therefore should be the property of that family.
