Ex-Governor of Texas at 86 Does Two Men's Work

By United Press.
AUSTIN, Sept. 5.—Doing the work of two men at the age of 86, former Governor Joseph D. Sayers, whose birthday is September 23, is Texas' oldest department head.

Practically all of Governor Sayers' life has been spent in public service. He was born in 1841 at Grenada, Miss. When he was 10 years old his parents moved to Bastrop, Tex. He was raised there and educated at Bastrop Military Institute. He was therefore prepared when the civil war began. He at once entered the Confederate army and rapidly rose in rank until he was a major at the time he was wounded.

Back from the war, Sayers turned to law practice in which he soon made a distinguished mark. He was sent to the Texas state senate in 1873. Then in rapid succession he became lieutenant governor, member of congress and governor. Since his governorship he has held two state offices, chairman of the industrial accident board and chairman of the board of pardon advisers.

As governor, Sayers and Mrs. Sayers entertained President and Mrs. McKinley at Austin in 1901. McKinley was a warm admirer of Sayers despite their differing political affiliations. When Sayers left congress after serving in six sessions, McKinley declared he had been one of the most valuable men to the national defense who ever served on the naval affairs committee.

While in congress he also secured an appropriation of $1,000,000 to recompense Texans for losses incurred in frontier defense. Besides his political offices, Sayers was grand master of Masons in Texas in 1875-76.

LABOR DAY.
It is hard to write about our major American holidays without becoming trite and repetitions.
Many columns of dreary verbiage have been written about such occasions as July Fourth, Decoration Day, Washington's Birthday and the rest. But no holiday has caused the outpouring of quite so much sheer tush as has Labor Day.

This is too bad. Labor Day is one of our most significant holidays. It is peculiarly an American institution; in no other country in the world could it exist in quite the form it takes here.
Yet, ordinarily, its appearance is the signal for the loosing of ever so many platitudes and near-truisms about "the dignity of labor," and so on.

We have a feeling that the ordinary American worker does not give two cents for all "the dignity of labor" in the world. The American worker has his eyes on other things.
For the fact that makes our Labor Day, and the labor to which it is dedicated, stand out as a portent and an omen, is the fact that American laboring men are not greatly concerned with the old-world shibboleths. Such phrases as "class consciousness" have little meaning here. American workmen, as a rule, are too prosperous to worry much about their "class"; they are too busy looking at the latest models of automobiles and considering the purchase of that new house in the suburbs to worry greatly about labor's dignity.

This gives our European friends much pain. To them, American labor is "50 years behind the times." American labor does not take to sympathetic strikes; American labor is too well satisfied with what it has to take much interest in politics; American labor, in other words, is too busy working and making money to act as European labor acts.
But there is another way of looking at it. Isn't it just possible that American labor, instead of being 50 years behind the times, is 50 years ahead? May it not be that the situation in which American labor now finds itself is the situation toward which all laboring classes are struggling?

Our civilization is different from Europe's; profoundly different. In no way is it so different as in its industry and the relation of that industry to the workmen who operate it. Mass production, advertising, machines and cheap power have pointed us in a new direction; and while our employers and investors are growing wealthy as a result, our workers are enjoying a prosperity that seems fabulous to an Englishman or a Frenchman.

And so it is that the very calm way in which American labor greets Labor Day is, after all, the most significant thing about the whole occasion. We are too busy with the concrete realities of work and work's wage to get very excited about their abstract phases. We are, in truth, hewing out a new order; an order as unlike Europe's as the Europe of today is unlike Europe's as the Europe of Louis XI; an order in which—may we not dare to hope?—the problems and clashing interests that seem at times to point Europe so dangerously close to revolution will be peacefully solved, to the satisfaction of all parties.

That is the significance of our Labor Day.

Every variety of food grown in Texas—and nothing else—will be served to the newspapermen of Texas, the agricultural and livestock exhibitors and the county agents at the "All Texas Dinner," which is to be one of the features of Press Day, Monday, Oct. 10, at the State Fair of Texas. The list of good things is of astonishing length and many of the dishes served will be fine foods that the average person does not know is produced in the Lone Star State.

Gifford Clegg of Breckenridge spent the week-end with Gus Coleman and family at the Texas flats.

Miss Lucile Thompson, sister of Joe Thompson, former linotype operator on the Ranger Times, is reported quite ill at the City-County hospital. Miss Thompson formerly worked for Leveille-Maher Motor company but recently has been working in Mineral Wells.

Mrs. A. Neil, who has been spending the summer in Tulsa and other Oklahoma cities, is expected home today.

Mavericks Get First Workout Early Monday

The Eastland Mavericks gripped their first football of the season this morning when some thirty members of the squad and candidates for the team met on the campus of the old high school. Uniforms were issued to eligible candidates last Friday.

A slight workout was given this morning consisting of running and passing in order to limber up the joints that have become somewhat cold during the summer months. Workouts will start in earnest before the last of the week.

The outlook for a championship team is indeed bright, even at this early part of the season. With several of the regulars back in the line up and much promising material to work on in addition it is expected that Eastland will prove a hard contender for the Oil Belt title from the time the first whistle is blown for the first game.

Sixteen Year Old Boy Injured When Truck Turns Over

Harold Pitteullo, 16 year old boy, thought to have been traveling with a carnival, was hurt Sunday afternoon, when a truck in which he and another youth were driving turned over on the Bankhead highway. The boy was taken to a sanitarium in Eastland, where he received first aid, and on account of being without funds, was later transferred to the City-County Hospital, Ranger. His face is so painfully cut that he can tell very little about himself, but according to Miss Grace Stewart, superintendent of the hospital, his clothing was torn off of him and he is without clothes.

The boy, Miss Stewart said, was small in stature and slight, and that he needed clothing badly. Anyone having garments of men's or boys' wear that they will pass on to this boy, will kindly call the hospital and a porter will be sent for the articles. In this connection, the superintendent said that the hospital was often called upon to supply garments and that an ample store room would take care of any surplus clothing, especially baby clothes, that one wanted to contribute.

Does Your Skin Repel Or Attract People?

Pimples, rashes, blotches and other skin irritations are as disgusting to other people as they are annoying to you. Don't let an unsightly skin repel people—clear it up and attract them.

Black and White Ointment, used according to directions, is recommended for quick relief in cases of burning, itching, broken-out and eczemic conditions of the skin. It is pleasant to use, highly beneficial and scientifically safe.

For best results use Black and White Skin Soap with Black and White Ointment. All dealers sell them at small cost.

Lost at Second Dope Is All Upset Sews Them Up

By BILLIE EVANS

"More ball games are lost around second base, between the shortstop and the second sacker than in any other spot on a ball club."

The speaker was Heinie Wagner, in his day a great shortstop, now acting as assistant to Manager Bill Carrigan of the Boston Red Sox. We were discussing the difficulty of getting together a winning team.

"We have lost so many games this year it is hard to keep track of the reasons, but I do know this much, more of them have been lost around second base than in any other way."

"Failure to make double plays, when two-ply killings would get the pitcher out of trouble, slowness in covering the bag, lack of precision between the shortstop and second baseman, are just a few of the many ways enough runs can daily be tossed away to make the difference between victory and defeat."

"We have tried a half dozen combinations, but as yet are still in the experimental stage."

There is no denying Wagner's logic. There have been few great ball clubs without stars at short and second. Most of the important plays revolve around that spot in the infield.

How Dope Cracks.

Strange how the dope of April is often scattered to the winds, completely turned over, by the results of September.

A perusal of the averages of the major leagues reveals these facts: Heinie Manush, batting champion of the American League of last year is struggling to keep from dropping below the .300 mark.

Charley Gehringer, rated substitute for Marj McManus at second base for Detroit, has won the job at that position, leading the regulars in batting with a mark better than .300.

Johnny Neun, who for several years has subbed for Lou Blue at first for Detroit, given a chance to show his worth, ranks next to Lon Gehrig among the first sackers in batting, has played brilliantly in the field and won for himself a place in the hall of fame by making a triple play unassisted.

Harry Heilmann, after a bad start struck his stride during the months of July and August, to take the batting lead from Lou Gehrig, who has held it most of the year.

Detroit, as to players and teams, has figured in the most reversals of form. The Tigers hold the longest winning streak of the year, 13 consecutive victories after a slow start.

Moore Praised Highly.

The New York Yankees have a mighty appropriate name for Pitcher Wiley Moore, who has done some mighty fancy hurling for the champions.

The other day, as Manager Miller Huggins waved to Moore, warming up in the bull-pen, to hurry to the rescue of one of the faltering veterans, Charlie O'Leary remarked to me:

"Well, here comes the 'Big Needle and Thread Man' again." I waited for a further explanation, but getting none, asked:

"Who?"

"Why, the 'Big Needle and Thread Man.' He sews up all the ball games for the Yanks."

Moore has already been in over 40 ball games for New York. He is credited with 16 wins and O'Leary tells me he has held the lead for other pitchers in just about as many games, literally sewing up the games.

"We can already thank Moore for at least 25 of our victories," says O'Leary.

What a help from a pitcher whom none of the scouts regarded as good enough for even a major league trial. He's the game's oldest youngster, making the big league debut at 30.

Although the United States is proud of the fact that its homes are more modern than those of other countries, it remains a fact that 42 percent of the homes of the nation are not yet served with electricity. Switzerland leads the world in per capita consumption of electricity, mainly because with so many waterfalls in the tiny republic, there is power in every back yard, so to speak.

If you're going to be married, give your prospective partner $10 to spend for music and if he buys "Home, Sweet Home," marry him, an artist advise. But, suppose he brings home a saxophone to play it on!

Perhaps some radio expert can explain why there's never any static during the bedtime story or sermons.

Diet With Tomatoes

THE popular pastime of dieting has been made more interesting and more scientific by the fact that everybody is informed nowadays on the topic of food values. Both men and women with a tendency to embonpoint approach the problems of diet with intelligence and a sufficient knowledge of food properties to guide them safely through a reducing diet which, while taking off pounds will at the same time give a well balanced ration, containing the elements necessary to the maintenance of health.

A Versatile Food

There is no food which seems to fill all requirements when counting the calories like tomatoes, particularly the canned ones which may be had all the year, and always uniform in quality and flavor. This vegetable is at once low in calories and rich in vitamins—a rare combination. In other words, tomatoes supply the chemical elements necessary to health minus the fattening quality which the starchy foods possess. A modicum of this starchy ingredient may be supplied by the addition of bread. A special qualification for tomatoes on a diet list is the fact that they may be prepared in infinitely various ways.

Tomato King is something different that may be done with this vegetable and is made in the following fashion: Cook these ingredients for 20 minutes: one can tomatoes, one bay leaf, speck of mace, one teaspoon salt, six peppercorns, one slice onion. Strain and reserve one cup of the strained tomato mixture. Melt two tablespoons butter, add four tablespoons flour and pour in slowly the tomatoes. When smooth, pour this over three well beaten egg yolks and set aside to cool. Beat three whites very stiff and mix gently with tomato sauce, turn into a well greased ring mold, set in a pan of boiling water. Bake in a moderate oven twenty minutes. When ready to serve, remove from pan carefully, fill the center with braised mushrooms.

Christening the Windsor-to-Windsor Plane.

The plane which Phil Wood and C. A. Schiller plan to fly from Windsor, Ont., to Windsor, England, was christened recently at Windsor. The principals in the ceremony are shown above (left to right): Phil Wood, Mrs. Phil Wood, Miss Ada Green and C. A. Schiller. Mrs. Wood is holding the bottle of champagne, broken over the propeller of the big Stinson-Detroiter plane in which the trip will be made. Miss Green is Schiller's fiancée.

This being Labor Day, there is not so much doing around the old town. Most places of business are closed, some of them have their flags out in front of the store and some of them don't.

Some of them will probably forget to take in their flag tonight like they do every holiday.

Ranger will be well represented among the contestants at the Eastland Rodeo today. It is reported that John Thurman, Wade Swift, John Ames and Lou Wallace will enter in the roping contests.

There will be also a wild cow milking contest. That ought to be fun. That's our drink we've never tried yet—wild cow's milk.

Here's a little tip for some of the boys who drop over into the adjoining county in the cool of the evening, as it were, and, being to some extent in a hurry, they may drive rather fast on the return flight.

Bob Hammett, motorcycle officer, is spending a few of his evenings out that way now and it might be your luck to get caught if you are in too big a hurry.

And don't get sore at Bob if it happens to be you that gets caught, because he is doing his duty in regulating the traffic down that way and curbing some of the reckless driving that we have all seen and some of us have done—

Dempsey Known As Killer Among Prize Fighters

By HENRY L. FARRELL, United Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK.—With the notable exception of Gene Tunney, the records will show, not one fighter amounted to much after he had met Jack Dempsey.

Tunney is the notable exception because he whipped the killer and the killer didn't land any of the punches that had brought to a close the career of so many others.

Jess Willard never amounted to much after he was butchered by Dempsey and it may be that he wasn't before, that.

Fred Fulton was positively ruined by Dempsey and it may be, in the same way he was terrible before Dempsey knocked him silly with one punch.

Billy Miske was started to his grave by the beating he took from Dempsey but it is one of the tragedies of the game that Miske was dying when he fought the killer and made the sacrifice of his life to get the purse money for his fight.

George Carpentier was so softened up by the hammering he received from the champion at the time that he turned into one of the easy marks of the ring, falling before the clown Siki, Gibbons and Tunney.

Tom Gibbons went the limit with Dempsey in Shelby but he took a terrible trimming. One punch on the temple made his head so sore that he couldn't wear a hat for days.

Up to the time that he met Gene Tunney, Gibbons never had been knocked down but he was knocked out by Tunney. It wasn't the punches of Tunney that caused his defeat that sweltering night, it was the failure of his own structure to hold up.

Tunney has always held it against the writer that after the Gibbons and Dempsey fights he went to greater lengths to explain why they had lost than to tell why he had won. But that is neither here nor there.

All of this leads up to a question of what effect the terrible body beating he took from Dempsey will have upon the future of young Jack Sharkey, one of the best prospects in the heavyweight class, despite the fact that he was knocked out by Dempsey.

If Sharkey hasn't been crushed inside and softened by the terrific lacing he took in the stomach—even before that questioned punch that finished him—he ought to go on.

Sharkey is not of the sensitive type who would be ruined mentally by the humiliation of a knockout. He has enough ego to believe that he could come back and beat Dempsey and he also has the consolation of a personal opinion that he was fouled.

Sharkey was a darn good fighter before he met Dempsey and he should be a better fighter now if he hasn't been broken up by the punishment. Unless he has an unconquerable ego the lessons he learned in the Dempsey fight should bear fruit many fold.

Most important, the lesson Sharkey should have learned was that he is not the only young man in the business who knows how to fight. He should have been taught at a great cost that skilled trainers and a smart manager deserve attention and that two or more heads are sometimes better than one and are always better than one when that one is dazed and dizzy from a punch.

Sharkey has natural tools, which if used in accordance with instructions, might have won his fight with Dempsey or at least might have given him a more graceful exit from the ring. He is a beautiful boxer and instead of trying to be a killer like Dempsey his game is to follow that of Tunney, chop 'em down and then let 'em have it.

The young Boston heavyweight should have learned also that he hasn't enough of a punch to bring down a rugged fighter like Dempsey or Paulino or a clever boxer like Tunney or Delaney. He punched himself out on Dempsey in the first round and all he saw was Dempsey's knees shaking and Dempsey tearing back at him on his wobbly pins.

Another lesson to be learned was that he needs footwork. He acted like he had glue on his shoes in the Dempsey fight. He didn't know how to back-step or side-step away from the Dempsey rushes and had to stand there and take them.

William Muldoon, senior member of the boxing commission, told him he was making a mistake by not paying attention to footwork when he was training for Dempsey. Muldoon told him to get some fast little fellows to work with but Sharkey ignored the advice—and suffered for it.

If he has not been badly injured Sharkey ought to go on and he is in a good spot to get to his goal. Regard the winner of the Dempsey-Tunney fight someone will have to be found to meet the champion next year and Sharkey has a chance to fight himself back into first place among the challengers—

If Dempsey hasn't ruined him.

TURNS SPRUCE LOGS INTO SILK STOCKINGS

By United Press.
KARLSTAD, Sweden. — Making silk stockings from spruce logs has now become a regular Swedish industry. An exhibit at the Vermont fair here showed how the transformation is made.

The Billerud Works, which produce lumber, pulp, paper and hydro-electric power, as well as artificial silk had an exhibit showing how logs are cut, floated to a sulphite mill and there turned into fluffy white wads which are later spun and woven into stockings, scarves and other delicate feminine wearing apparel.

The Swedish artificial silk industry is now doing a good business at Kyrkebyen, one of the Billerud works in Vermont, where 125,000 cubic meters are yearly turned into cellulose and later into silk. 25,000 tons of which are exported every year to various silk factories all over the world.

It happens every day in Jack Dempsey's life, this punching away at sparring partners at Lincoln Fields. The ex-champion is fast reaching the condition he seeks for his fight with Gene Tunney a few weeks from now, and these sparring partners are the ones who are helping him reach that condition.

Joe McCarthy Is Miracle Man of Chicago's Cubs

By CHARLES E. AHRENS, United Press Staff Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 27.—Over in Chicago, they're calling Joe McCarthy the "miracle man."

Being called that is nothing new for the manager of the National league's league leading Cubs.

Four years ago down in Louisville, Ky., they began calling him that and the name stuck as the Louisville Colonels went through the American association for a couple of pennants and enjoyed the profits of one or two little world's series with International league pennant winners.

McCarthy has been a hustler from the time he shook his first rattle, and William Wrigley, owner of the Cubs, in transferring the fighting Irishman from the side-show at Louisville to the big tent in Chicago, made a wise move. In fact it was so wise that Mr. Wrigley may have a world's series at his door this year, and reap a neat profit from his "rain" to go Cubs.

During the days of his pennant winners in the American association, McCarthy's team was the fear of all rival managers. No lead was too much to overcome and no avalanche of runs on Louisville's part was too great but that one or two more would be welcomed. McCarthy was the boss, the master mind, the coach on the third base lines and everything else in the repertoire of the managership business. McCarthy was often doing the playing from his post on the base lines, not Louisville.

The Chicago Cubs are not the run-getting machine that the old Louisville team was in the American association. And the Cubs' pitching comparatively, if the American association can be compared with the National league, is not any better than was Louisville's of two or three years ago.

But McCarthy has instilled a part of himself in the Cubs. He has taken once ordinary pitchers and made them the topics of newspaper headlines. He has made two or three runs serve for 10 in the box score. Through his dynamic personality he has made the Chicago "bearcats" win games on almost sheer nerve.

But it is not the first so-called wonder team that Joe McCarthy has built up. It was Louisville that gave him that reputation, and even now down in Kentucky, they call Joe McCarthy their own. In Chicago, they may boast of Joe McCarthy, but in Louisville, a Chicagoan making that boast would be in for the stiffest sort of an argument.

The great team that McCarthy built up at Louisville lasted one year as a pennant winner without the guiding genius of his peppery manager. This year it has been fighting a down the ladder battle with Columbus for possession of last place.

Before McCarthy went to the Cubs he knew very little of the technique of major league baseball. Occasionally when the Colonels had an off day, he saw Cincinnati or perhaps Cleveland play on their respective home lots.

They're Gauging The Pirates Is Claim Made Now

By HENRY L. FARRELL (United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Rated before the season opened as one of the strongest clubs in the league, the Pittsburgh Pirates were one of the big disappointments of the season.

They haven't lost the pennant yet officially but their chance isn't worth odds, to say the least.

Before the season John McGraw, in discussing the relative strength of the champion Cardinals, the Pirates and the Reds, said: "The Pirates are the team the Giants will have to beat to win the pennant." It looked at that time as if his Giants were the team that would have to be beaten.

While the Giants looked good, the Pirates looked just as strong but records prove that the best looking club doesn't always win. The Pirates were generally regarded last year as the strongest club in the league but the Cardinals won by playing for one run.

If the Chicago Cubs win this year it will be said that they were not the best club that they won by the use of the same system.

With Donie Bush a new manager, constituted to make players hustle (something the Pirates have not been famous for) and with internal dissension removed it was thought that the club would be more successful this year and would win the pennant. But like the Reds, although not as bad, they failed.

When the Pittsburgh club was in town recently, the writer asked a champion Pittsburgh roofer who follows the team; the reason for the rather poor showing of the team.

"They're gauging us," he said. He explained that every club in the league was out to get the Pirates and that while there was no clear evidence of "sloughing games" they all were bearing down extra hard against Pittsburgh.

"When they see us coming," he said, "they save their best pitchers and prime them for us. In one particular case a star pitcher was used twice against us in the same series."

"Don't they do that against other clubs?" he was asked.

"That's a foolish question," he answered. "Look at the records and see how pitchers rotate. They don't like a couple of our players and they're making the whole club pay for it."

He didn't go any farther into it. He felt too badly about it for words. It has been heard, however, from other sources all around the circuit that the other clubs were out to get Pittsburgh for some reasons other than they didn't like "Oil" Smith, the Pittsburgh catcher, Kiki Clyler and some others of the players.

Big Money Can't Always Buy Good Baseball Clubs

By CHARLES E. AHRENS (United Press Staff Correspondent)

PEORIA, Ill., Aug. 31.—The ledgers of the Cleveland baseball club reveal a story which might be called "What price ball players."

For the past few years, the management of the Cleveland club has been under fire by Cleveland fandom. Charges have been made that officials of the club have passed up opportunities to buy good ball players. Some have even accused the management of "being pennywise."

Whenever a Cleveland fan writes a letter in protest, he almost always includes this line in the letter: "If Jim Dunn were living he would go out and buy some players and the Indians would be up there."

E. S. Barnard, who is now operating the club, from 1916 to 1921, $197,000 was spent for new talent for the Indians. His star purchase was Tris Speaker for whom Dunn paid $50,000.

The approximate $200,000 that Dunn spent for ball players was productive of a team that won the American league pennant in 1920. Of the $500,000 spent for players since his death, only a small portion has been prolific of material to hold its own in American league company.

The ledgers of the Cleveland club indicate that the amount paid for players isn't so important. A certain element of luck plays a part as does managerial ability and the right amount of coaching in educating recruits of big league standards.

Willis Hudlin, ace of the Indian pitching staff at present appears to be the outstanding star bought since the death of Dunn. Hudlin was purchased for $36,000 cash and a player. Luke Sewell, first string catcher also is rated as a star in the American league but his services cost the Indians nothing, Sewell having joined the Indians direct from college.

Rube Lutzke cost the Indians $36,000; Glenn Myatt $50,000; Fonseca, $35,000; Hodapp, $50,000 and Grant, $10,000.

Other players of minor importance have been bought and discarded. Some of them failed to measure up to the price paid, but that is the gamble a big league club takes when it casts around for ball players.

Dunn's policy of hiring no scouts is blamed in part by the present management for the low position of the team. Back in the years before 1920 it was possible to buy seasoned players from other big league clubs but since the war, good ball players have been at a premium and not procurable except at prohibitive prices.

Since Dunn's death, a system of scouting has been developed, but thus far no outstanding results have been obtained. Ball players have been brought up from the minor leagues and failed to answer the demands of the management. Club officials are still hopeful, however, and predict the Indians will be among the leaders before many more summers become history.

Summing up the story told by the Cleveland ledgers, "It isn't what you pay for a ball player—you have to have the luck."

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

Mom'n Pop

By Taylor

The PENNY PRINCESS by anne austin

BEGIN HERE TODAY Vera Cameron, plain but efficient private secretary, agrees to let Jerry Macklyn, advertising manager for Peach Bloom Cosmetics Co., transform her into a beauty, after she falls instantly in love with a man who ignores her. Jerry proposes to publish her photographs in advertising booklets. In refashioning her, the beauty specialist uses a picture which Jerry finds in his desk. Vera is so beautiful after the change that Jerry falls in love with her. His love persists even after Vera's aunt, Flora Cartwright, tells Jerry that Vera is to spend her vacation at Lake Minnetonka because she hopes to meet there the man she is in love with. At the summer hotel, Vera is mistaken for someone else and is treated with a deference that mystifies her. Schuyler Smythe, the man she is in love with, tells her he met her five years before at Palm Beach. She attempts to convince him and the other guests of her true identity. She finds frank and continued denial difficult. Schuyler is devotedly attentive to Vera, much to the jealousy of Nan Fossdick, whom, rumor says, he has intended to marry for her money. In her room, Vera opens a letter which Jerry gave her before she left. From it, she learns that he fears she will be mistaken for a Vivian Crandall, who is in the midst of a matrimonial mixup. The clippings he encloses tell of wealth, marriage to a Russian prince, divorce, disappearance. Jerry warns Vee-Vee not to try to play "princess incognito." Vera, for some unknown reason, tucks the letter beneath her blouse but puts the pictures and clippings in the drawer. As she goes down to join Schuyler for dinner, she says to herself that she fears she will disobey Jerry's advice.

Fear leaped in her throat as she went on cold, jerky feet to the door.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XX During the following two days Vera Victoria Cameron, whom every guest at the hotel believed to be Vivian Crandall, an ex-princess, was so busy being "wooded" by Schuyler Smythe and practically every other unattached male at the big resort hotel that she had little time to worry about the consequences of her recklessness in not advising Jerry by wire that the situation which he had predicted in his letter had actual come to pass. Not once did she admit, in words, that she was Vivian Crandall, for she frequently shrugged her white shoulders and quirked that fascinating right eyebrow of hers, when inquisitors were busy trying to worm an admission out of her, in a way that said more plainly than words: "Oh, have it your own way! But I'm not telling!" She was clever enough to know that her amazing popularity was not amazing at all, that these well-to-do handsome, eligible young vacationers were not paying court to Vee-Vee Cameron but to Vivian Crandall and to Vivian Crandall's 40 millions. If the royal mantle of Vivian Crandall had not been accidentally flung about her shoulders, she would have been merely a very beautiful little nobody, a charming partner for a summer flirtation. As it was, however, she received the deep homage which even these comfortably rich young men—40 millions and to a woman who has worn a crown. She wondered sometimes, but only fleetingly, because they kept her so busy, how they could accept her so unquestioningly, how she escaped being exposed a dozen times a day. But the clippings which Jerry had sent her gave her a partial explanation of that fact. The Princess Vivian had moved only in the most exclusive circles of New York and Newport society before her marriage. No princess of royal blood had ever been more carefully guarded than the little dollar princess. After her marriage she had scintillated at foreign courts to which these moderately rich people who patronized the Minnetonka hotel had no entree. Comparatively few people in America had had the privilege of intimacy with Vivian Crandall or the Princess Vivian. She overheard Mrs. Bannister explaining the amazing fact of Vivian Crandall's choice of the Minnetonka as a retreat: "The poor little thing has been under someone's thumb all her life. First her mother ruled her with an iron hand, denying her the least freedom to mingle with ordinary people. Not that I think we are ordinary, you understand—Then Prince Ivan, jealous and domineering as those foreign men are, kept her from having any life of her own at all. When she quarreled with her parents over her divorce—Mrs. Crandall is simply paralyzed with horror over the very idea of divorce—the poor thing just made up her mind to live her own life for a while. I don't blame her at all. She has a right to know Americans, to choose her next husband from among the real backbone of the country, if you know what I mean—" Thus Mrs. Bannister before she began to sulk because Vee-Vee had so little time for her, before Vee-Vee began to try to avoid her ceaseless pricking little questions. Another unintentionally overheard remark made by Mrs. Bannister on Tuesday was not so friendly: "Oh, of course she's insufferably conceited! Who was it that discovered her, introduced her, was kind to her when she arrived here, friendless and unknown, I'd like to know?" But when she encountered Mrs. Bannister later in the day, on the lake shore, Mrs. Bannister gushed and complimented her as usual. "I'm getting a marvelous education in the penalties one pays for being rich. Boudiers, toudiers everywhere!" Vee-Vee told herself with a slightly bitter twist to her mouth. No wonder the real Vivian Crandall had a patina of disillusionment and bitterness overlaying the exquisite loveliness of her face. "They say," Vee-Vee overheard a closer. Why, you haven't even let me kiss you yet! But—I'm going to now!" His arms, which had been upraised in a gesture of impotent despair, fell heavily upon her shoulders, gripped her like cables of steel. She strained away from him, but his body bent with hers, so that her slender waist seemed about to be broken. "Not yet, Schuyler! Not yet!" she pleaded, though her body throbbled with desire for the pressure of his mouth upon hers. She laughed; without sense or intention, a low, rich, shaken chuckle of mirth, which purchased her release. "You're laughing at me! I might have known you weren't taking me seriously. You, that could marry any man in the world you want—" His voice was broken, came in whistling gasps over his dry, parted lips, but his arms had released her. "You're jealous, Schuyler?" she asked softly. She had to say something, though her mind was whirling with chaotic thoughts. Why had she not let him kiss her when she wanted his kiss so much? Her reason was not a reason at all, but an instinct of decency that could not be drowned in passion. When he kissed her it would be Vera Victoria Cameron that he kissed, not an unwilling imposter. "Am I jealous? Oh, God! Jealous! I'm eaten up with it, Vee-Vee! I can't sleep, I can't eat—When I think of you in that damned Russian's arms, I nearly go crazy. But when I think of you, hiding here to save yourself from the man they say was your lover in Paris—" "Hush!" she commanded him sharply. "There was no lover in Paris. Tell me, Schuyler, would you rather I had never been married, that I was—a girl?" she added softly. Oh, if she could only tell him the truth, so that he would believe her and yet not hate her for having taken that other woman's place— "I wouldn't have you changed," he said ardently, reaching toward her again. "If it took all that is past to make you the woman that you are today, I am a fool to be jealous of that past. But I hate him for having made you suffer. Oh, Vee-Vee, don't hold me off any longer! Let me love you, let me make you happy. I'll make up to you for all that you have suffered. I love you! Can't you love me? I'm not a conceited puppy but I would not have dared hope Sunday, when you came walking into my life again, if there hadn't been something in your eyes that gave me permission to hope—Vee-Vee! Tell me—" There is no knowing what she might have done then, with his low mystical voice pulsing in her ears and making her nerves vibrate with joy, if they had not been interrupted.

The interruption could not have been more startling. It was a laugh, a hoarse feminine laugh that rose high on a crescendo of pain and shattered on a sob. A girl's tall, big body crashed through the hedge behind her. "Who is the man they're talking about—the lover you divorced Prince Ivan for?" Schuyler's breath was hot on her neck as he drew close to her. "I haven't dared ask you before—you have a genius for discouraging questions and I wanted to forget that there is supposed to be another man—but who is he, Vee-Vee? God! I can't stand this much longer! You let me come just so close and no to Vivian Crandall's reputed lover, for whom she had divorced the prince. A party in the lobby, coated and hatted for a late drive along the lake shore, tried to persuade her to join them, but she escaped, going directly to her room. She was wearily raising her arms to remove her evening dress when a sharp tattoo beat upon the door, an insistent summons which said that the knocker would not be denied. Fear leaped in her throat as she smoothed her dress and went on cold, jerky feet to the door.

(To be continued) Vee-Vee is confronted by an angry Nan Fossdick, and learns that her secret is no longer safe. Read the next chapter.

University Gets Valuable Papers of Wm. G. Brown

Special Correspondence.
AUSTIN, Sept. 5.—A rich collection of letters and papers which were the property of the late William Garrott Brown, who lived from 1868 to 1913 has recently been given to the University of Texas library by Mrs. H. P. Brown of Austin, the author's sister-in-law.

These papers number between 200 and 300 and cover the period from the time Mr. Brown entered Harvard university until his death. Mr. Brown was an author and for some years a teacher. He was an essayist as well as historian, and from 1908 until his death he wrote editorials for Harper's weekly. The value of his letters and papers lies in his comments on persons of prominence with whom he came in contact in the fields of history, literature and politics. The papers contain many of his own opinions and judgments on matters of national importance.

Probably the most valuable papers of the collection are those discussing intimately Mr. Brown's own work and giving the sources he used with his plans and purposes.

Aside from the letters which he wrote, there are a number of letters written to him by such persons as President and Mrs. Cleveland, Presidents Wilson and Taft and James Bryce and Bliss Perry.

For the university of Texas special interest is attached to those letters in the collection which refer in intimate terms to Dr. W. J. Battle, now professor of classical languages in the university, David Franklin Houston and Sidney E. Mezes, all former presidents of the university. Each of these men was a classmate of Mr. Brown while at Harvard.

Besides his editorial work on Harper's Weekly, Mr. Brown wrote a number of books. These were principally published during the years from 1902 to 1905. His best works are "Andrew Jackson," "The Lower South in American History," "Stephen A. Douglas," "The Foe of Compromise and Other Essays" and "The Life of Oliver Ellsworth."

His "Lower South" is a picture of the cotton states from 1820 to 1860. Of this work it has been said that although "he called it a 'thin and fragmentary sketch' in which he had merely 'tried to imitate with outlines' yet, if he had written nothing else, that alone should perpetuate his memory."

Second Coming Of Christ Is Being Predicted Again

By United Press.
PARIS.—The end of the world has been predicted once more, this time by the Seventh Day Adventists of the north of France, who met here for their annual congress. According to the signs on which the prophecy is based the second coming of Christ will take place within a few months. "Cyclones, earthquakes, volcanic activity, meteors, political perturbations, all of which were foretold by the prophets of old, signify that the end of the material universe is in sight," said Maurice Fliche, one of the apostles of the Adventist creed. "Christ will appear surrounded by the angels in the midst of a cloud, as predicted in the Apocalypse. The just will be taken to paradise where they will live 1,000 years. Then they will come back to a reconstituted world and live here eternally happy.

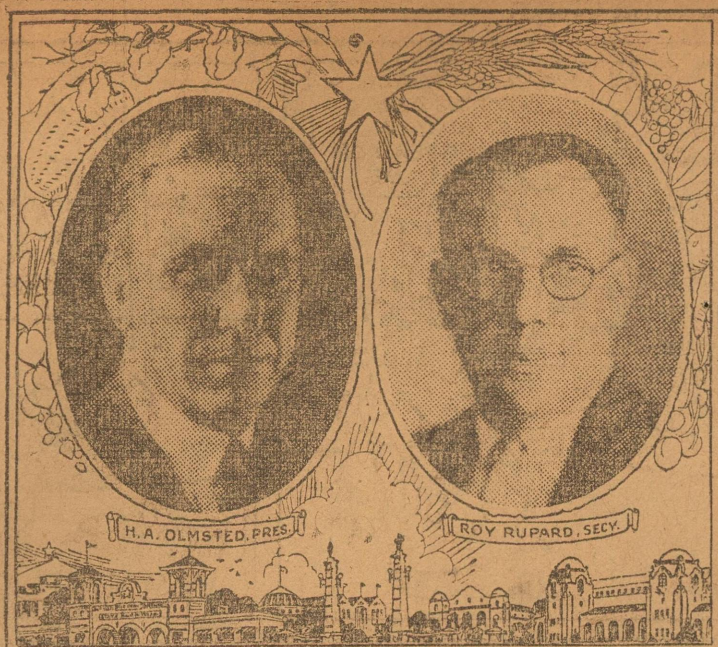

"Those who are not counted among the just will perish. We are doing everything to diminish the number of those persons. We conduct missions all over the earth. Our doctrine, which was founded in Washington in 1863, now has 250,000 adherents. This number is constantly increasing. The expense of the missions is covered by voluntary subscriptions. Baptism by immersion is one of the fundamental tenets. We are endeavoring to bring about an era of universal peace. Our textbook is the Bible which teaches universal love."

Harry A. Olmsted, President of the State Fair of Texas, is one of Dallas' most prominent business men and is well known throughout the state, particularly among the newspaper fraternity. He has been on the board of directors of the fair for many years and has served several terms as president in the past, always with success. He is responsible for many of the new ideas introduced this year. Like all of the other directors of the State Fair, he serves without pay.

Roy Rupard, the new Secretary of the State Fair of Texas, has been connected with that institution for about 13 years. He began his work in a minor position in the office and has worked his way to the top, now having the distinction of being the secretary of the largest State Fair in the United States. Mr. Rupard is a man of pleasing personality, keen knowledge of what the public wants to see at a great State Fair and ability to procure it.

VOTE FOR THE PIONEER MOTHER.
Everybody who attends the State Fair of Texas, Oct. 8 to 23, will have an opportunity and is urged to vote in favor of the model which he or she thinks most true to the type of the pioneer mother. E. W. Marland of Ponca City, Okla., is to erect a statue 70 feet high and costing a half million dollars to the memory of the pioneer mothers of America and he asks the help of the people of Texas in making the choice. The 12 bronze models already submitted by as many eminent sculptors will be sent to the fair and shown there so that everyone may have a voice in the selection.
