Strong Cross Winds Of Yesterday Not Due For Today.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, Aug. 26.—The Pöcker monoplane Old Glory may start its proposed non-stop flight to Rome today if the wind is favorable.
"If a west wind blows she starts," the flyers said.

The plane was left on the tilted runway last night after strong cross winds prevented the takeoff yesterday. Everything was in readiness when the flight was called off by the unfavorable weather.

Rising easily from the hard packed sand the trim yellow plane headed out over the water and through the early morning mists.

Harbor Grace, New Foundland, was her destination. Here the two Deland brothers hope to start the attempt to go around the world in 15 days to break the world circling record of Edward S. Evans and Linton Wells, their fellow townsmen.

HOME-COMING COMMITTEE REQUESTS NAMES BE SENT IN

The crying need just now for the success of the Ranger Home Coming Old Jubilee, to be held in Ranger on October 21-22 to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the discovery of oil, is names of former citizens for the invitation list. This fact was brought out at a meeting of the publicity committee, composed of Walter Murray, Rip Galloway, George Kelley and Rena B. Campbell, yesterday afternoon at chairman John Gholson's office, where they were joined by Wayne C. Hickey, Howard Gholson and Mrs. Chas. Moore.

The necessity for sending names of former boom day citizens in is obvious and to make it as easy on people as possible the committee decided to place jars in drug stores and hotels, beside which will be a blank form on which to write names and addresses of former citizens of the city, and drop them in the jars. These jars will have their contents collected daily and as names come in invitations on stationery telling a graphic story of the event in lettering and in illustration will be forwarded.

The committee also decided to interest the merchants and professional men and all others whose correspondence is large in using this stationery for their correspondence until after the celebration.

Car signs advertising the event, it was reported, had been ordered and will be used on cars of oil men, scouts or tourists, who can carry the invitation they will bear to the farthest points.

It was further agreed that plans as if to say "Come'n catch me."

Naturalist Says Albatross Like Living Airplane

By United Press.
AUSTIN, Aug. 26.—The albatross is a living airplane, according to George Finlay Simmons, curator of the Cleveland, Ohio, Natural History museum, who is here visiting his brother, Assistant Attorney General D. A. Simmons.

G. F. Simmons recently returned from a 22-months cruise to Africa and South America collecting bird specimens for the Cleveland museum.

"We had lots of time to study birds in flight," said Simmons. "The albatross is like a living monoplane. He takes off by stretching his immense wings out to full length. They remain opened. He doesn't flap them to get off but merely uses them like the elevators on a plane.

"He propels himself over the water with his feet until he has sufficient speed to rise. The albatross will glide in the air for hours without once flapping his wings.

"I believe there is a slight movement. It is not a flapping of the wings up and down but probably a hitching forward of first one shoulder and then the other. This gives propulsion like a skater gets by shifting weight. Unless there is some such movement, it is inexplicable how the albatross can rise without wing flapping, as I have repeatedly seen them do."

Simmons formerly was a zoology instructor at the University of Texas, and later head of bird investigations for the Texas game department.

HOLLOWAY FAMILY BACK FROM FISHING ON SAN SABA

Prof. R. F. Holloway and Mrs. Holloway of Ranger and their two lawyer sons, Robert Holloway of Brownwood and Sterling Holloway of Eastland have returned from a fishing trip on the San Saba river. The professor came back chuck full of fish, squirrel and some almost unbelievable stories of the number of fish they caught and the number of squirrel they almost caught by hand.

Like Brutus, he is an honorable man, but it was a little hard to believe when he said that the squirrels just cocked their heads on one side as if to say "Come'n catch me."

DOG DAY DANCE TONIGHT AT COUNTRY CLUB.

It looks as though the weather man was going to be nice to the dancers of Ranger and its surrounding cities, without being dog tired from negotiating the country club road during or after a rain storm. The novel idea of a dog day dance had tickled the risibles of the most unimaginative and since its always the new and untried that lures, there is pretty apt to be a goodly sized turnout at the dance tonight.

The original Rainbow Serenaders will furnish the music which is as much of a guarantee to good music as the word sterling is to silver.

1920 CLUB MEETS IN PEPPY CALLED SESSION.

The 1920 Club, with fifteen present, met in a peppy called session at the Gholson Hotel yesterday and in less than an hour time, elected four new members, took up different matters, and adjourned. Poe, A. H. Allison and Miss Beulah Bowles were elected to fill these vacancies.

There were several names on the waiting list, all good live fibers for future vacancies that may occur.

So far no students have applied for the 1920 Club Scholarship loan was brought out. There are no strings attached to this loan other than a student taking advantage of the loan must have been a student at the Ranger High School. The fund is now available to students who wish to take advantage of it.

The year book will be ready for the printer next week, the study books for the coming year are here and everything is in readiness for opening up the coming year's work.

After the meeting those present were guests of the legionnaires for a social meeting, during which time ice cream and cake were served.

Thousands Visit Swimming Pool On Opening Night

"The Willows" Ranger's new park and swimming pool opened Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock and during the evening was visited by several thousand people whose spirits were not daunted by the rain that persisted in falling now and then. In spite of the coolness of the evening, due to the lowering clouds, the great swimming pool was full of happy swimmers, all bubbling over with appreciation of the swimming facilities offered them.

On account of the nearness to the city and the fact that the pool is shady enough to be enjoyed for swimming at any time during the day, it is thought that each day will see a gain in the visitors. Last night hundreds of cars were parked near the pool and a number of picnic parties were noted in the park.

The management expressed itself as being greatly pleased with the number present at the opening and the interest that has been manifested all along in the building of the swimming pool and the opening of the park.

The Ranger High School Band pepped things along with some splendid music.

The water in the pool was pronounced delightful and exhilarating by all those who took a dip.

Suit Asks $19,000, One Child Killed Another Injured

In a suit filed in the 86th district court of Eastland county against Max Starr and wife of Ranger, Barney Bronstein and wife, also of Ranger, seek to recover a total of $19,000 for the death of Bertha Bronstein and the injury of her sister, Clara, daughters of the Bronsteins who were injured in March when a car in which they were riding and which was being driven by Mrs. Starr, turned over on the Bankhead highway east of Ranger. $15,500 of the $19,000 is asked for the death of Bertha, who was six years of age, and the balance of $3,500 is sought as compensation for the injuries sustained by Clara.

Plaintiffs allege in their petition that the two children had been invited by the Starrs to accompany them and their children on an automobile ride and that while they were in the car for this ride, Mrs. Starr carelessly and negligently allowed the car to turn over with the result that the Bronstein children were injured, Bertha dying from the injuries and Clara being more or less permanently injured.

Barney Bronstein also alleges that he is in the mercantile business and that Clara assists him in his store, and that since her injury he has been deprived of her assistance and besides has had to spend money for medicine and doctors for her. He asks $1,000 compensation which is included in the total of $19,000.

AVIATION SERIES NO. 10
WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Both the army and navy are services offer the young man interested in aviation an opportunity to learn it from the ground up, and guarantee him a training that will assure him a place in commercial aeronautics if he does not desire to become a military aviator, according to the two assistant secretaries in charge, Edward P. Warner, in the Navy Department and F. Trues Davison, in the War Department.

"The army air corps," Davison said, "offers a fine opportunity to the young college man who has no definite idea for a life pursuit."
He pointed out that men with two years of college are eligible to become cadets in the army air school at Brooks and Kelly Fields, San Antonio, Texas, and March Field, at Riverside, Cal., upon graduation from which they are enrolled in the reserves and can go into commercial aviation or into the army air service.

"There are two things necessary in the air service," he said, "planes and pilots. A plane in the air is worth ten in the hangar."
"If you have planes but do not have capable pilots, the air service is not worth much. We must have able pilots so that the planes will be up to their maximum value."
Army Service
"The army air service teaches a man not only how to fly, but also trains him as a mechanic. Just recently, the army air service opened extended training in aviation sciences to enlisted men. At Chanute Field, at Renton, Ill., enlisted men are taught mechanics of the airplane, aerodynamics, as well as radio, telephone communication from land to plane, and aerial photography.

"When his term of enlistment is up, if he does not wish to remain in the army, the enlisted man can become a very valuable factor in the airplane industry, with the knowledge he has gained of practical aeronautics."
"The army is losing many men, and while we hate to see them go, they do well in branches of commercial aviation, and that in turn reflects credit upon the army aviation training. The army air corps is very thorough in its training. It makes efficient fliers, so that its pilots do not jeopardize their own lives, or the lives or property of others."
The navy, as well as the army, has to train more aviators now, because of the number leaving the service to go into commercial aviation. It also trains mechanics as well as fliers; it was pointed out by Warner, and gives enlisted men an opportunity to learn to fly.

"The naval reserve," he said, "offers an opportunity for young men to get a very thorough and valuable flying experience at the expense of the government and qualifies him for commercial flying or entrance into the aeronautics industry."
Great Demand
"Both pilots and mechanics are going to be in great demand in naval air service. We have to train men now in increasing numbers because of the depletion caused by those leaving to enter commercial aviation."
Enlisted men can become pilots in the navy. There are now 130 enlisted pilots, Warner explained, while there are about 500 officer pilots. He said he expects the number of enlisted pilots to increase to nearly 300 within the next year.
Outside of opportunities for the young man who wants to enlist in the naval air service and get a thorough training in aviation, there is the naval reserve in which a limited number of well qualified young men can learn to fly, Warner pointed out. Students in several colleges which maintain naval reserve units are sent to summer flying schools for two periods of six weeks, after their sophomore and junior years, and if they qualify are given commissions in the reserves.

Adoption by congress last year of the five-year building program for both army and navy air service opens the way for capable young men who want to enter the government service as aviators, or who want to get the training the government affords. In addition to an increase in personnel, congress provided for a building program that will assure the army of a force of 1,800 first-class planes by 1931, and the navy, 1,000.

Turkish Women Forsake, French Adopt Trousers

By HEDDA HOYT,
United Press Fashion Editor.
NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—With modern women of Turkey forsaking veils and harem trousers for smart French frocks, the French woman is reversing the order and wearing harem-hems.
Some of the most recent imported gowns have skirts with harem hem treatments, modified of course, but harem-y nevertheless. An attractive dinner gown, typical of many, has a draped bodice, a wide crushed hip sash from the folds of which emerge gathered skirt panels which attach at the hem to a slender skirt foundation giving the harem trouser effect. Almost every gown using the harem hemline has a wide draped hip sash. Oftimes the bolero bodice effect is combined with the harem skirt idea, the bolero extending to the top of the swathed girdle.

While it is quite evident that harem hems will not be a popular choice with American women, there will be a sufficient number of these models to keep them from appearing bizarre. As a rule chiffon or georgette is the material used for the gown of harem effect since the skirt must be soft in effect and since such gowns are used for dressy afternoon or dinner occasions. Most models are sleeveless and made with rounded necklines.

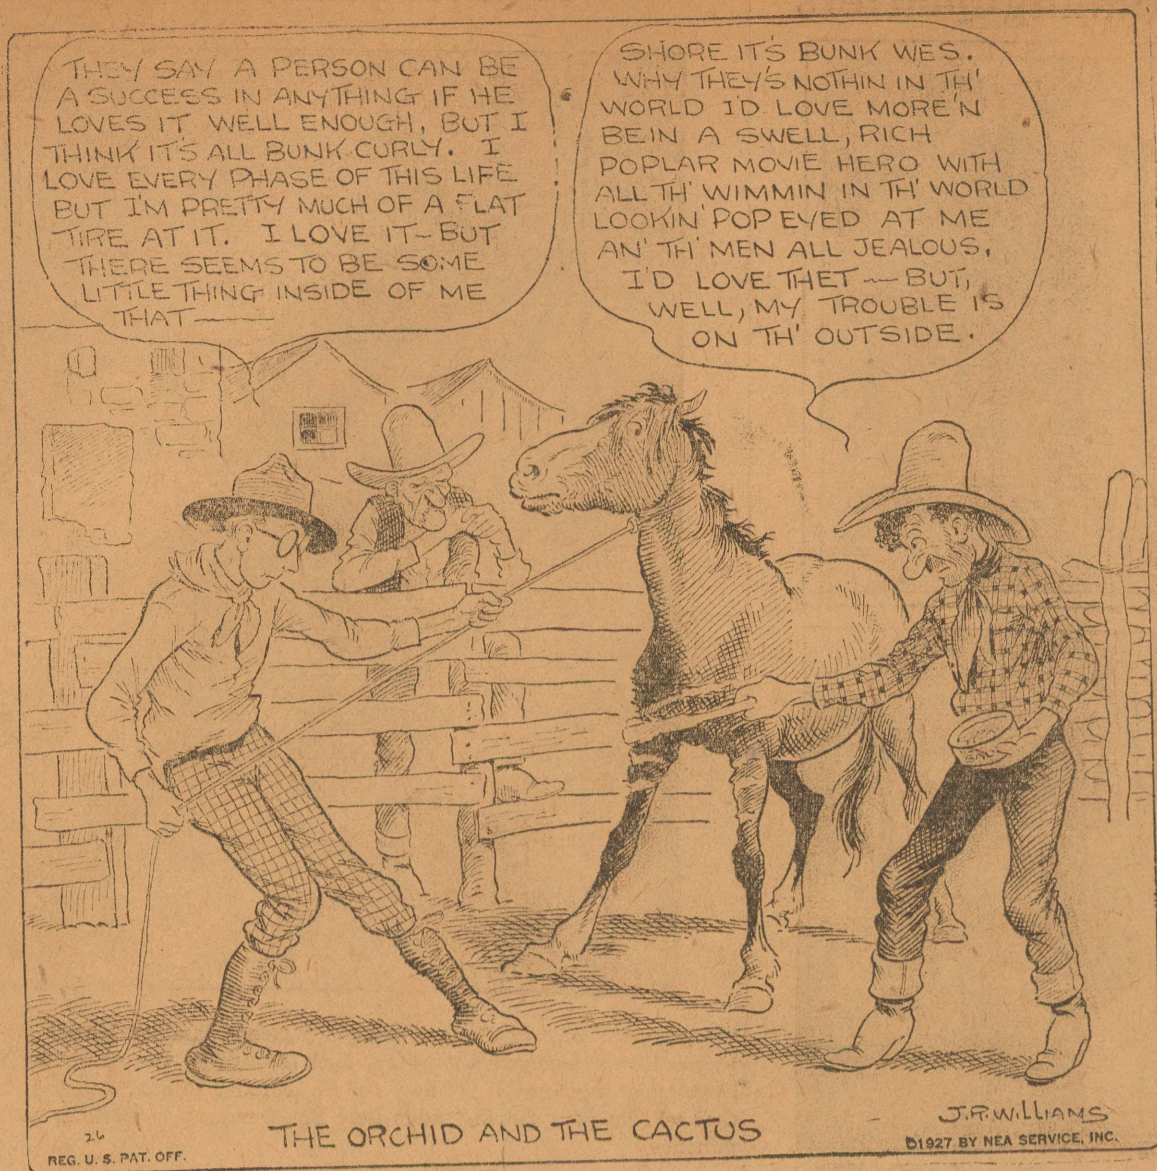

Recently we saw a well dressed matron wearing a harem outfit at tea-time. We say "outfit" since her hat and shoes also had an oriental effect. Her gown, similar to the model previously described, was made of gray georgette. Her shoes were of soft gray satin in sandal effect, heeled and outlined in mauve. A draped turban of velvet in three shades—gray, white and black—had in its front folds a huge cluster pearl pin. One earring of graduated pearls with a large pearl ball at the end was attached to the turban. The effect was more attractive and more subdued than it appears in print. Getting away from fluttering skirt treatments is, in itself, somewhat of a relief. The turban also offers a variety from the small or wide-brimmed hat sans trimming.

It must be realized, however, that the harem skirt is not for the short woman. One must be tall and slender and have sufficient poise to carry the harem skirt.

TOOTH AS LARGE AS HAND.
By United Press.
NASHVILLE, Tenn.—A tooth with grinding surface as large as a man's hand has been found in a ditch near Lebanon pike.

The molar was brought to a zoologist by J. D. Perry, who said it was similar to mastodon teeth. Mastodons dwelt in this section during prehistoric times.
The tooth, Perry said, was in such excellent state of preservation he was inclined to cast doubt on its age, but couldn't imagine an animal big enough to own it.

RADIO WORLD'S FAIR WILL OPEN IN NEW YORK IN MID-SEPTEMBER

By WILLIAM J. FAGAN,
United Press Radio Editor.
NEW YORK.—Elaborate preparations are now under way for the Radio World's fair to be held at Madison Square Garden Sept. 19 to 24 inclusive. In addition to the exhibits to be maintained by numberless manufacturers of radio receiving sets and allied equipment, there will be the customary "personal" appearance of radio artists and broadcasting direct from studios located on the exhibition floor.

Edgar H. Felix has been appointed director of broadcasting for the show and will have complete charge of all arrangements for broadcasting from the studios. He is an authority on radio subjects and formerly was associated with WEAF's press department. Felix is preparing broadcasting novelties, in co-operation with leading stations, which will be seen by visitors to the Radio World's fair and heard by the radio audience of most of the United States.

Twenty-two of the nation's leading radio trade organizations will sponsor the fourth annual radio industries banquet, to be held Wednesday evening, Sept. 21, at the Hotel Astor. The largest number of stations ever to join in broadcasting a single event will be linked together to broadcast the entertainment features of the banquet. Paul B. Klugh, general chairman of the feast, announced.

Both chains of the National Broadcasting company and the new network of the Columbia Broadcasting system will broadcast speeches of the 300 entertainers who will regale the diners and the radio audience with their wares. Efforts are being made to extend the broadcasting of this gala event to the Pacific coast network of the National Broadcasting company also.

Four sets of microphones will be used in the Astor grand ballroom on this occasion, three for the network stations and a fourth for local New York broadcasters.

The day of the banquet, according to Klugh, will be known as "National Radio Day." In addition to the Radio World's fair, shows will then be in progress in Rochester, N. Y., and St. Louis, Mo. Local banquets in conjunction with the radio industries dinner are being planned in many cities, the program from New York to entertain those present at the smaller gatherings.

As in the past, J. Andrew White will act as master of ceremonies, but he will be assisted in his introduction of radio and concert artists by prominent announcers representing the south, the central states, the west coast and the chains participating in the broadcast. Special efforts are to be made to prevent those present in the banquet hall from interfering with the performers, in order that listeners both in the hall and in their homes may have the best possible entertainment.

Chicago Facing Big Fight to Win National Flag

There is no doubt about Manager Joe McCarthy of the Chicago Cubs knowing his stuff.

In discussing the National league race recently he spoke thusly: "The second division clubs in the National league are in a sense the fellow that make the National league race close one and prevent any club from running away with the race. Any of them are liable to rise up and smite you not once but twice in the same place, I mean the neck, on the same day." McCarthy made such a speech before his club invaded Boston a few days back and all the Braves did was take a double-header from the Cubs, winning each game by a one-run margin.

Two trimmings in one day at this stage of the race hurt considerably since all the other pennant contenders won.

Slaps From Weak Ones.
The month of September, by the way, promises to be a strenuous one for the Cubs. It will test the courage and ability of the team to the limit. It's tougher on the nerves to be out in front and trying to stay there, than to be trailing, always within striking distance.

Recently the Cubs suffered general setbacks that will tend to show just how good the club really is. The fact that it is, on the whole, made up of young players, makes the test all the harder to survive.

When a club that is leading the league goes into the eighth inning of a game winning 5-1 and loses 6-5, because a sixth place club, Brooklyn, is able to put over two tallies in the eighth and three in the ninth, it's a bitter pill to swallow.

As if this wasn't enough, a few days later, Chicago, with the ace of its pitching staff, Charley Root, working, goes into the ninth inning of a game leading in the seventh place, Braves, 5-2, only to have Boston knock Root off the mound and score four runs to win, 6-5. Defeat in the second game of the double-header followed, 2-1.

Three such reverses by a one-run margin against sixth and seventh place clubs won't help the morale of the Chicago Cubs if there is the slightest inclination to waver.

Cubs Good at Home.
The Cubs so far this year have been a much better team at home than on the road. In this respect, the National league schedule for 1927 is a distinct advantage to McCarthy's proteges.

After the club finishes its present road trip, most of the last 30 games of the long grind of 154 battles are to be played in Chicago.

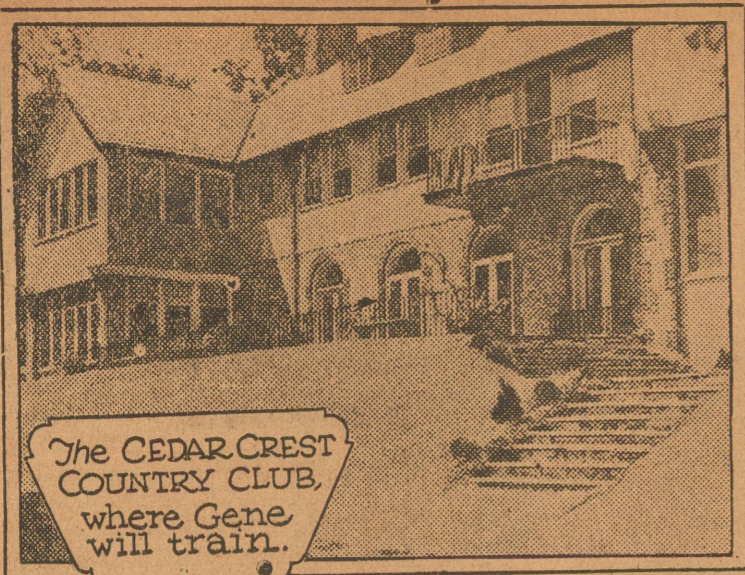

If the Cubs come home with a lead of five games, they can almost be counted on to win, but if the margin is three games or less, it is certain to be a battle to the final week of the season.

In figuring the chances of the Cubs it must be remembered that Pittsburgh, several years back, enjoyed a seven-game lead in early September, only to fritter it away by the time October rolled around.

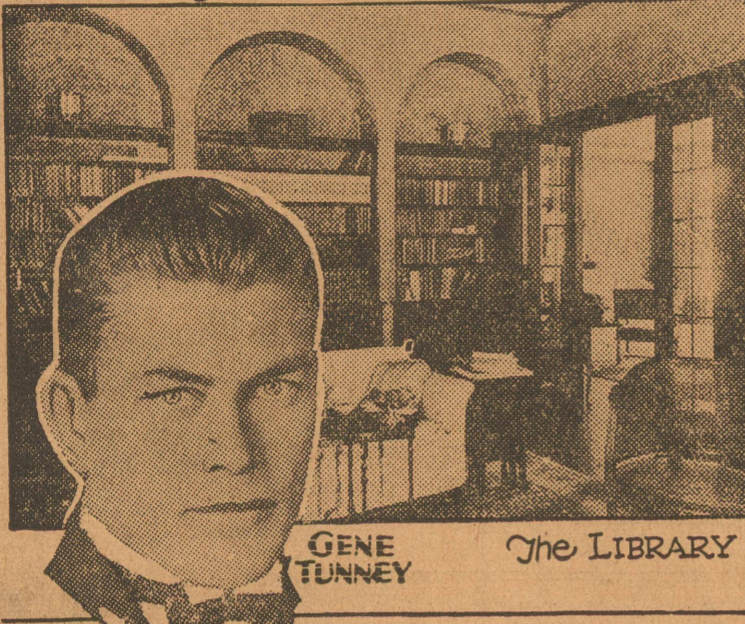

A victory for the Cubs would be popular. Fandom is always with the underdog. Those who were pulling for the St. Louis Cardinals at this time last year are now shouting loudest for Chicago.

Well, it's about time to be up and pursuing one's studies again—and the co-eds.

Winter Baseball Being Planned In Valley Towns

HARLINGEN, Texas, Aug. 26.—Texas will enjoy year-round baseball if plans under way here for a winter baseball league in the lower Rio Grande valley materialize.

A meeting will be held here within a few days to discuss organization of the league. The league is proposed by William Gunn, manager of the San Benito Saints, and Dick Jeffries of the Harlingen team.

Gunn feels confident that the league would attract many professional players from the northern and eastern leagues who wish to keep in shape for the spring training season.

Other valley cities interested in winter baseball are Weslaco, Mercedes and McAllen. The probable attendance at the winter season games will be the deciding factor in organizing the league, according to Gunn. The matter is being presented to chambers of commerce in this section in the hope of securing their support.

Huggins May Be Recognized By Public Some Day

By HENRY L. FARRELL (United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Miller Huggins, if he lives long enough to win about a dozen pennants for the New York Yankees, may be recognized by the public. His success so far with the Yankees rates him as a great manager, but because of his retiring disposition and his unassuming ways, he has not impressed himself upon the public as McGraw has.

McGraw is a showman, the greatest in the game; Huggins is a hermit of the diamond who permits his players to get the bouquets. McGraw and Chase were of the blustery type while Huggins, a mere mite of a man, seems to have been afflicted with the complex of his size.

Compared to McGraw's record in nine world's series and Connie Mack's in five, the four of Huggins do not command the same esteem but under the conditions which the three had to face, Huggins has been very successful.

Huggins, however, is well on the way to his fourth pennant and the future promises more. If the Yankees don't win the pennant this year they can yell "foul" louder than Jack Sharkey did and if they don't win one or two more with that young dynamic ball club, it will not be the fault of the management.

Huggins is Quiet.
When Connie Mack broke up his great Athletics after their 1914 defeat by the Boston Braves, he said with the confidence inspired by success: "I'll build up a new young team." Mack has been building ever since but he has failed to get a winner and for eight years he was in the cellar.

McGraw's Giants went to pieces after the 1924 series and McGraw went to work to build another winner. He had at his command almost as much money as the Yankees and with a great ambition to celebrate his silver jubilee as manager of the club with a world's champion this year, he made some of the greatest trades in history before the season opened. But apparently the Giants are not going to get there this year.

The Yankees had their collapse after they had finished second in the 1924 series, but it attracted little notice and only the comment: "Well, there's the end of a money-bought club," after they had finished seventh in 1925.

Huggins didn't blast from the house tops that he was going to outdo another pennant winner out of a seventh-place club, but he went quietly about his working, discarding veterans and picking up young players here and there.

In the spring training camp in 1926, the Yankees didn't look like much. In fact they looked so little like much that Huggins received the unkindest cut of a career that had been filled with unkind cuts when he was branded in print as a "sap."

Proved Not Sap.
Huggins took it like the man that he is and made the use of deeds instead of counter-attacks, to prove that he was not a sap. Starting north his team began to command attention by murdering every club they met and then went through the regular season to a pennant like the well-known goat through the hoop.

True, they almost lost the pennant in the closing weeks of the race, but the slump was due to the inexperience of the young players. With the same club he is dashing through all opposition this year.

The sagacity of Huggins was shown when he bought Mark Koenig, Tony Lazzeri, Benny Bengough and stuck along patiently with Gehrig. The task of finding a good young first baseman, second baseman, short stop and catcher at the same time would have been enough to send anything but a great manager to the bug house. But Huggins did it.

He didn't use the millions of Col. Ruppert's dollars at his command to buy ready-made stars. He went out and bought young players from the minors.

In two years Huggins developed a team that is generally recognized as the most powerful in modern days of baseball.

Told Huggins to Go.
The entire experience of Huggins has been a fight, a tremendous fight for a little man, but a big stout heart is worth more than stature.

Ban Johnson, then president of the American League, recommended that the Yankee management secure Huggins from the St. Louis Cardinals as the manager and he was secured.

The Yankees at that time were a terrible outfit and Col. Ruppert, half-owner of the club was too much of a sportsman to have a joke paraded in his name. So he and Col. Til Huston, his partner, opened the safe and told Huggins to go to it.

His success was so slow in arriving that Huston demanded that he be fired. Ruppert refused and Huston sold himself out of the club. Ruppert then told Huggins that he was the absolute boss of the team and to go to it.

Huggins also had trouble with his players. Ruth and a number of others wouldn't pay any attention to his orders and the morale of the club was destroyed by the Babe's actions.

Huggins then got busy. He plastered a fine of $5,000 on Ruth and sent him home. Babe had been fined before and the fines had been remitted when Huston was part owner, but when he approached Ruppert he was told:

"That fine stands and I'll tell you now if you don't obey orders and act like the other players you'll have some more taken out of your money."

Since then the Babe and the others have been playing ball and Huggins is the boss.

Huggins may not have his name printed on the records in huge letters, but every time he looks at the huge Yankee stadium he must get a kick out of it. Monuments like that stadium stand.

Pumping a flooded railroad yard dry—hoisting 50,000,000 gallons over a bank in 24 hours—was a feat performed by the Illinois Central railroad at Mounds, Ill., just after the recent Mississippi rampage. The road used an emergency electric outfit consisting of three big motor-driven pumps mounted on a car and accompanied by three or four other cars carrying tools, pipe and crew's quarters. This portable plant restored rail service days quicker than would have been the case without it at a time when hours counted heavily in the movement of fruit crops from the south.

Flynn Explains a Punch

"Don't want any of Gene Tunney's punches landing here," says Leo P. Flynn to his heavyweight entry, Jack Dempsey, the ex-champion, who is training at Lincoln Fields now for his coming fight. "Because, if they do, that will be your finish," adds Leo P. Dempsey is working to avoid such punches.

Running From Cat Is Plain Suicide Says Zoo Keeper

By United Press.
HOUSTON, Tex., Aug. 26.—Francis Miller, photographer for the Houston Press, probably owes his life to the cool nerve of Hans Nagel, keeper of the municipal zoo, and a buggy whip.

Miller entered the arena at the zoo to take pictures of two leopards doing tricks. He was accompanied by Nagel and Tom Bayler, Nagel's assistant.

In his haste to cross the arena to "shoot" a picture, Miller broke into a trot. The flash of a running man caused one of the leopards to spring. As the animal leaped, Nagel sprang beneath the hurtling beast, striking at it with his whip. The leopard's leap was deflected and it fell to the ground.

Miller started running around the arena. The leopard gave pursuit. "Don't run," yelled Nagel. Miller halted. So did the leopard. Nagel quickly drove the animal back to its perch.

"Never run from a cat—it's plain suicide," Nagel cautioned.

FARMERS BUILD OWN LINES IN PHONE RATE PROTEST

By United Press.
STANLEY, Wis.—Utilizing barbed wire fences, a culvert, trees and bottles, two farmers living near here have constructed with a minimum of expense a two-party line with satisfactory results because they objected to the rates of a local telephone company.

Strung along the fence and over forest saplings, the line runs through a mile and a half of pastures and woods to connect the farm of M. Aaseth and N. Almborg.

The Aaseth-Almborg line begins at the former's home with a short length of wire connecting with the barbed wire fence, along which it runs for 40 yards. The wire leads under a road through a culvert and then overhead by means of the saplings to the Fred Stocker farm, where connection is made again with a barbed wire fence leading to the Almborg farm house. Old bottles are used as insulators.

The system is practical with two phones and the simplest of signals.

Black lace used as a lingerie item, for trimming or instead of fabric is emphasized in fall collections. Entire-steps of black scalloped-edged laces with the scallops forming the borders are shown for dresswear. When black lace is used for trimming it is generally combined with pale pink georgette or net and this combination is repeated often.

Ranger Legion To Play Fort Worth Cats September 13

At a meeting of Carl Barnes Post No. 69, of Ranger last night, the members accepted a proposition from the Fort Worth all-Star Pennant Winning Cats of 1924-25 to play a game with them in Ranger on September 13 and will begin getting in to their fighting clothes right away for this game.

Much enthusiasm was manifested in the coming Seventeenth district quarterly Legion meeting to be held in Cross Plains on September 10 and 11, at which time a large delegation from this post will attend. Efforts will be made to have the Seventeenth district meet here on October 21-22 and attend the Ranger Home Coming and Oil Jubilee. It is said that a very large number of members of the Seventeenth district came to Ranger just as soon as they got their discharges from the army.

Work on the program for the opening of the American Legion hall on September 9, was taken up and plans for that event are just about complete.

After the business session, the Legionnaires served ice cream and cake to the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the American Legion, who met in their club room and enjoyed the feast themselves.

The only thing we want to know about the new Ford is how much noise it is capable of in a narrow alley between 5 and 6 on a Sunday morning.

FALL MILLINERY

By United Press.

NEW YORK.—Velvet and velvet combined with contrasting fabrics will play important roles in fall millinery. Plain, embossed and printed velvets will perhaps be most important although the following combinations are also frequently shown: velvet and velours, velvet and satin, velvet and felt, velet and bengaline, velet and brocade and velvet and gold leather.

It is thought that plain velours and felts will prevail for morning wear while velvets and combinations of velvet and other fabrics will rule for afternoon occasions. Perhaps it is due to the velvet vogue, that turbans of draped type are returning to fashion. One sees many turbans among the French millinery as well as among American models.

First Aid Work To Feature Oil Show at Tulsa

Special Correspondence.

TULSA, Okla.—Flirting with death, dismemberment and serious injury is the lot of the oil field worker, of which there are many millions. Yet of all dangerous industries, the oil business stands among the leaders in keeping deaths and injuries at a minimum.

Much of the credit for this state of affairs is due to the extensive safety and first aid programs carried on by the United Bureau of Mines and the Mid-Continent Oil & Gas association, and aided by dozens of specially trained safety engineers employed by most of the large oil companies.

Almost every lease and refinery in the midcontinent oil fields now has at least one man trained in first aid methods, while many of the larger refineries boast of two or three first aid teams. One refinery has a team of stenographers trained in first aid work.

According to records of the Mid-continent association, 60 persons injured in oil field accidents during 1926 and declared dead by physicians were revived by first aid methods used by workers.

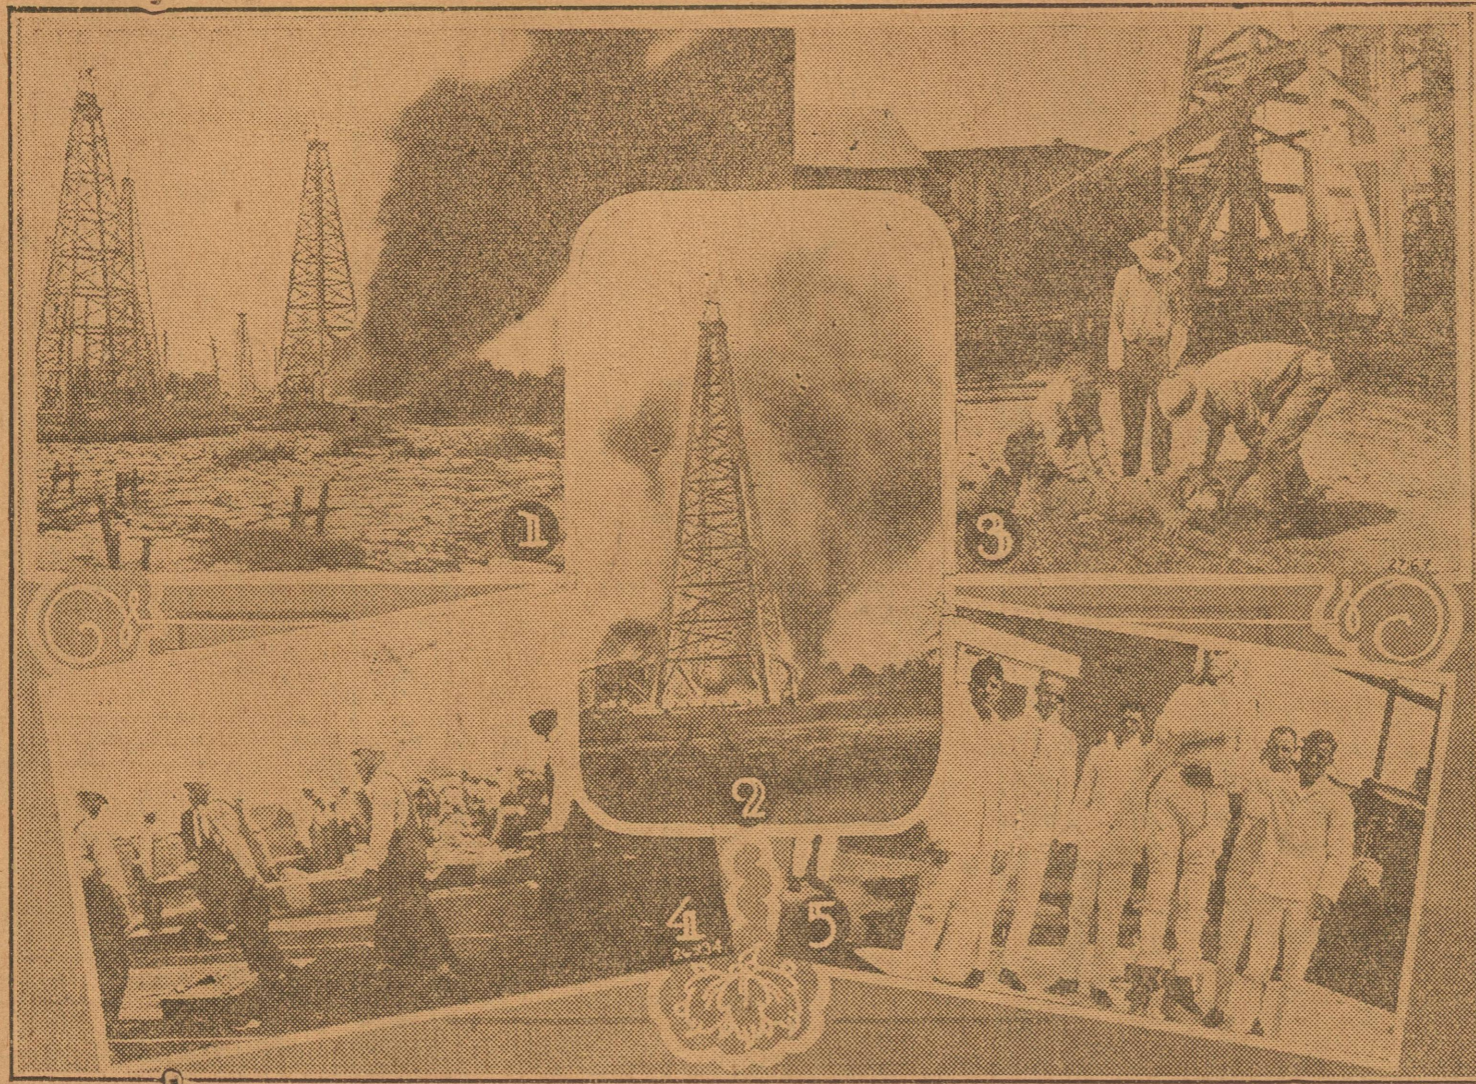

Safety and first aid demonstrations will be one of the features of the International Petroleum exposition to be held here from Sept. 24 to Oct. 1. The main attraction will be the contest between first aid teams from oil companies. More than 30 organizations will send teams to the meet, which will be held the opening afternoon of the exposition. Each team will be given certain first aid problems to work out and will be required to demonstrate bandaging, resuscitation, stretcher making and various other activities.

Here is a sample problem: "Rig builder falls, sustaining the following injuries: Simple fracture of the right elbow; right big toe torn off, bleeding profusely; lacerated wound four inches long on left side of chest beginning just below shoulder, moderate bleeding; in state of shock. Impulse blanket stretcher and lift patient ready for transportation." Hundreds of people watch the demonstrations each year.

Another big safety feature will be the bureau of mines mine disaster car, a railroad coach fitted with all apparatus for use in caring for persons injured in fire or oil field disasters. This car is rushed to the scene of any big mine or oil disaster to aid in rescue work. Motion pictures will also be shown of first aid work.

The exposition is the big event of the oil industry. Thousands of persons attend the affair, which is named the "world's fair of the oil industry" and special trains will bring oil men from the Pennsylvania, California, Texas and Oklahoma oil fields. Exhibits valued at between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 will be on display.

MEN TRAINED IN FIRST AID METHODS SAVE SIXTY LIVES IN OIL FIELD DISASTERS

Oil field and refinery workers lead lives of great hazard, but vigilance and training in first aid methods has minimized the loss of life and injury to a great extent. Of great importance is the latter, which has been given by safety engineers employed by the United States Bureau of Mines and the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas association. Teams are organized on many of the larger oil leases and at all the principal refineries. Each year those teams compete in a first aid contest and this will be held this year in connection with the International Petroleum Exposition in Tulsa, from September 24 to October 1st.

The accompanying pictures are: 1 and 2, oil field fires which cause a large percentage of the casualties in the oil industry; 3, workers on a lease applying first aid methods to a fellow workman who has been injured; 4, a first aid team carrying their "patient" to the judges' stand during one of their contests; and 5, another first aid team after completing a problem on their "patient."

first year as head coach at the University.

"Texas must develop new men for several important positions," he said. "For instance, we have no proven punter, passer, kick-off man or place-kicker. New men will play both of the end positions. "Strength of other positions will depend on the condition in which Captain O. Higgins, Leo Baldwin, Johnnie Estes, and Eddie Beular, who were crippled by leg injuries last year return. If they come back in good shape, that will help make us."

"Good material in track makes a good team, but football is different," Littlefield said. "It takes something else to make a football team. I had the best high school football team I have ever seen once. I could beat any high school in Texas with it today. Its success did not depend as much on the material as on the support it got."

"There are three things that I believe football players must be taught. They are knowledge of the strategy of the game, knowledge of the fundamentals and familiarity with the rules."

"To learn the strategy of the game, the men must watch every play in the games and know why they are good or bad. None of my players can have his head under a blanket while the game is going on.

"We drilled on the fundamentals in the spring, and we are going to work hard on them this fall. I have sent each player a rule book so he can learn the rules."

"Success of a team sometimes depends on how well it is taken care of. Accidents can ruin a good team. "Texas appears to have a slight schedule disadvantage, playing both S. M. U. and A. & M. college, two of the strongest teams, away from home."

Petition will be filed with the I. C. C. requesting them to reopen the "Common Point" case insofar as it relates to rates and description on iron or steel pipe, (both cast and wrought) couplings and connections. The present rates on pipe are lower than other iron and steel articles and the commission will be requested to put these articles on a more nearly proper basis than that prescribed in their order.

University Gets Manuscripts On Mexico History

AUSTIN, Texas.—Through special arrangement there will soon be added to the University of Texas collection of Latin American literature, photostat copies of the manuscript collection of the Rev. Father Mariano Cuevas, famous Mexican historian and one of the best known living authorities on the history of Mexico during the sixteenth century.

The Rev. Father Cuevas, who has been engaged in research at the University throughout the summer, owns a collection comprising 98 volumes and numbering about 20,000 documents gathered from the archives of Mexico, Cuba, Spain, the British museum, the Vatican and other places in Europe. They represent the work of their owner during the past twenty-five years.

The Rev. Father Cuevas is historian of the Jesuit Order of Priests and his home is in Mexico City. He is author of a monumental work, "The History of the Church in Mexico." Four volumes of this history have been published and the author is now gathering material for the fifth in the University of Texas library.

Southwest Teams On Equal Terms As to Strength

AUSTIN, Texas.—"All football teams in the southwest conference this year are just about on equal terms in strength and prospects and Texas looks no better than S. M. Littlefield has just returned from his vacation and is getting everything ready for the opening of his

Mothers of Large Families Need Help

Too often nowadays mothers, in their efforts to do for their families, find it a burden.

Thousands of these mothers are now, in the privacy of their own homes, and at small expense, using St. Joseph's G.F.P. to build them up and strengthen them.

Among these happy mothers is Mrs. Pauline Fowler, who lives at 1120 E. Quincy St., San Antonio, Texas.

Mrs. Fowler says, "I hadn't been feeling what you could call real good for some time and just recently I got so I felt tired out all the time, and couldn't walk more than thirty yards without feeling exhausted."

"I didn't know what to do to get back my strength until I began hearing my neighbors tell what G. F. P. is doing for them."

"I felt so much stronger by the time I had finished the first bottle, I kept right on using this medicine, and now I feel just as strong and healthy as I ever did."

Women have used St. Joseph's G.F.P. for over 50 years!

THE LITTLE THINGS

Away back in the year 1757, in his maxims prefixed to Poor Richard's Almanac, Benjamin Franklin said: "For want of a nail, the shoe was lost; for want of a shoe, the horse was lost; and for want of a horse, the rider was lost." So you see the importance of a little thing like a horse-shoe nail!

If you are disposed to neglect the smaller advertisements in this paper, you are making a mistake. You are missing money-saving opportunities. You are missing important information about something that some day you are going to buy. You are throwing away your road-map and following your nose.

The big stores of today were little stores years ago. They used advertising space judiciously and became large. At first, their announcements were smaller than they are today. But those small advertisements told about real values, real savings for their customers.

In other words, the size of an advertisement is no indication of its importance to you. The message is the thing. Some of the most important merchandise news is often printed in tiny type. Even in the largest advertisements you will find small type. Read the small type as well as the big black type. Read the little advertisements as well as the large ones. It pays.

Advertisements come in all sizes—but the smallest one may carry the biggest news for you. Read them all

We Usually Win But He Usually Gets Defeated

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)
NEW YORK.—Even a great jockey has to have a good horse under him to win, you can hear it argued around the race track. A great horse, the argument follows, will win with any kind of a boy on him but a Sande or a Fator can't push a plug first under the wire.

Along the same line you can find expert opinion to tell you that the best of football coaches have to have good material to turn out a winner and the "master mind" of baseball can't make a better single with the winning run on third base.

Applying the same reasoning to the prize ring, opinions can be found differing as to whether the manager makes a fighter or the fighter makes the manager.

Lindbergh has been given credit for inventing the expression "we" but it has been in use for a generation around the ring.

When the fighter wins, the manager says "we." When the fighter loses the losing end of the firm is "he." And it thus follows that the manager of a great fighter insists upon the credit for making him and if he finds himself with the contract of a punk—"I can't do nothing with that bum."

Kearns and Dempsey
Jack Kearns always has insisted that it was he who made the left hand of Dempsey the deadliest punch in the ring.

"When I first got him," Kearns says, "I strapped his right hand to his side and made him fight with his left alone. That's how he got that left."

Dempsey stood for the fable as long as he and Kearns were on friendly terms but when their partnership was dissolved it was one of Dempsey's first acts to blow up the myth.

"Nobody taught me to fight," he said. "I learned in the back rooms where you had to have both hands. If anybody taught me control and how to punch it was Jimmy De Forest."

There may be some doubt about the value of a manager in handling a fighter outside of the business end of the game but there can be no question of the value of a good trainer and a good second in the corner.

If there could be any doubt, it was proved in the case of Jack Dempsey and Leo Flynn.

Dempsey came to New York to sign for the Sharkey fight without a manager. Tex Rickard knew that he had been poisoned by worry before the Tunney fight and he insisted that Dempsey get someone to handle him and take charge of his camp. Rickard suggested Leo Flynn and Dempsey accepted.

"I'm not taking you for the money in it," Flynn said when he accepted. "If I didn't think I could do something for you I wouldn't waste the time. I know where you were wrong in Philadelphia and I know how to beat this Sharkey but I will have to be the boss of everyone."

Flynn then tossed a contract on the table calling for his services for the Sharkey and Tunney fights for a consideration of one dollar.

It was a hard job for Flynn, as Rickard knew it would be. There were around Dempsey one or two secretaries, Gus Wilson, an assistant manager and trainer, Harry the Greek the rubber and a couple of cops.

But Flynn let them know he was the boss and told them if they didn't do what they were told he would

Prince of Wales Receives First Railway Ticket at New Station

When the Prince of Wales formally opened the new Union Station at Toronto, his first action was to visit the ticket wickets of the Canadian National Railways, there to receive Ticket No. 1, of the issue from the new Depot, entitling him to passage "Between All Stations" and good "for all time." Photograph shows His Royal Highness at the ticket window, behind him in morning coat is Lieutenant-Governor Ross, of Ontario, and to his right, Mr. U. E. Gilk, General Manager of the Toronto Terminals. On the extreme right of the photograph is seen Prince George, with Mrs. W. G. Ross, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor.

sock "in himself and then toss them out of the camp. They grumbled behind his back but they danced when he was looking.

"Get your legs and wind in shape," Flynn told Dempsey. "Not too much road work. Get off your toes when you're fighting and punch short. And don't you hit that guy any place but in the belly."

Flynn Aids Jack

Dempsey followed instructions to the letter and the result is known. Flynn really made over Dempsey in the short space of a few weeks. Believe that there never had been anyone around Dempsey to coach him or correct him. The camp motto was—"Nobody can beat the champ."

"The work that Flynn did on Dempsey in the corner after the first round was a work of his particular art. He not only worked on him to bring him back physically but he used the old conversation to restore the morale that might have been slipping.

"Just a bum over there," Flynn said. "You don't see him making faces now. In the belly, Jack. No place else. In the belly." And he chanted the same thing from the corner all through the fight.

If Jess Willard had had a Flynn in his corner in Toledo, Jack Dempsey might not have won the championship. If a Flynn had been behind Firpo Dempsey might have been knocked out. But they were too arrogant or too ignorant to realize the importance of a good man in the corner and they paid for it.

Tom Gibbons never needed attention or instruction from the corner until the Tunney fight out he always wanted a friend back of him. "Seems then like I am not alone," he often said.

Discipline Must Prevail If Game Is To Succeed

By BILLY EVANS.

It seems the folks in Pittsburgh are very much disturbed because Manager Donie Bush fined Cuyler, one of the Pirate stars, $50 and later removed him from the lineup.

Not being thoroughly conversant with the facts in the case, I have no desire to take sides in the matter, but I do want to go on record as saying that Cuyler isn't the first big league star to have a healthy fine plastered on him.

Cuyler, as I know him, is a mighty fine chap. It is my thought that ordinarily he would seldom do anything on the field that would call for a fine. But after all, Cuyler is only human.

Star players are those who run out every hit at full speed, even though their effort is but a puny tap to the pitcher. The star always slides into the base, when by so doing he believes he can beat a play.

No star, however, should be immune from discipline and when he errs, should be handled in the same manner as the run-of-the-mine players.

As I understand the situation, Bush fined Cuyler because he failed to slide in one of the games with New York, then fighting Pittsburgh for the lead.

"Cuyler failed to obey instructions and was fined," is the way Bush briefly explains the unfortunate happening. "Any other player would have been so handled. I treat my players all alike. I am the boss and the boys must play my game."

One of the things that all managers stress, is the importance of sliding when such a play may enable the runner to escape the touch, beat the play or break up a possible double killing.

Many star players other than Cuyler have been fined for not sliding and often the fine has been more than 50 simoleans. Therefore, Cuyler is not being made a martyr to any new system that Manager Bush has inaugurated.

Taking money in the form of a fine has always been one way to penalize a ball player who fails to follow managerial instructions. It makes him remember.

McGraw Strict Disciplinarian.
John McGraw has been one of the game's greatest managers because his word is law and he brooks no interference.

In the world series of 1912 between New York and Boston, umpiring the bases, I heard him tell Chief Myers that he wanted him to dig for the plate on any fly ball hit to the outfield. New York wanted one run badly.

One was out at the time and when the batter hit a pop fly to Tris Speaker, a great thrower, not more than 50 feet back of second, it seemed suicide for the slow going Myers to try to score.

Starting for the plate he turned back when Speaker's throw seemed certain to cut him down by 20 feet if he went through with it. However, the ball took a bad bound and got away from Catcher Cady. Myers could have scored had he continued on to the plate.

McGraw was in a tantrum at third. In strong words I heard him tell Myers the slip would cost him a hundred bucks. It was a matter of discipline with McGraw. Myers had disobeyed and must be penalized.

Always fair, McGraw never failed to remit a fine if the player took his medicine graciously and sought to make amends. No doubt Myers got the $100 back.

Possibly there is an undercurrent to the Cuyler affair that has not been aired. Seems ridiculous to think a $50 fine would stir up so much gossip. Other players besides Cuyler have been fined.

Maybe after Coolidge is through being president he will settle down.

Stiff Physical Examination Is Road to Aviation

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer. WASHINGTON.—Every applicant for a government license to pilot an airplane must undergo a thorough physical examination by a physician authorized by the department of commerce.

Pilots who are licensed to carry passengers are put through an especially stiff test. The applicant is not required to sit in a whirling chair or walk on the ceiling with his head down. Neither is he placed in weird chambers to test his various senses. But although the tests for the civilian pilot are quite humane, they are guaranteed to disqualify the unfit as surely or more so than the army or navy tests.

Eyesight is the first thing tested and the "flight surgeon" in charge of the examination starts off, just like your oculist, with a series of letters of graduated size on the wall. The Howard-Holman depth perception apparatus is next trotted out, with an idea of testing the ability of the applicant to judge his distance from the ground while landing. The depth perception apparatus consists of a board with one post fixed in its center and a movable post operating in a runway. Twenty feet away, the would-be pilot slides the second post by means of cords until he thinks it is parallel with the stationary post. He must do this three times and an error of 30 millimeters just once disqualifies him unless he can later show that in mere temporary physical condition was responsible.

Goggles are then put on the applicant, with a red glass over one eye and nothing over the other, to test his ocular muscle balance. He must then wiggle his eyes as directed—pointing them up and down from the nose—to demonstrate his control over them.

He is then tested for color blindness and for ocular dilation, after which a perimeter determines his range of vision, which is measured on a chart marked off in degrees when he can see a light moved up from one side.

Hearing is the next sense investigated. The applicant is asked to repeat phrases whispered on the other side of the room. Tuning forks are used and the powers of the middle ear are tested by an apparatus which blows air through the Eustachian tubes, while the applicant makes a noise like a crow. This test, according to pilots, is the most painful of the tests.

Nose, throat, teeth, tonsils, sinuses, pulse rate, blood pressure, arteries, veins, lungs and other matters are subsequently looked at as part of a thorough general examination. The physician looks carefully for the symptoms of diseases which might disqualify the applicant.

Exhibit Space At Abilene Fair Is All Contracted

Special Correspondence. ABILENE, Aug. 26.—One of the many indications that the West Texas fair has climbed into the circle of the really "big-time" expositions is shown, W. G. Kinsolving, first vice president of the institution, thinks, by the condition now existing regarding space in the exhibition buildings of the fair.

Every foot of space in the merchant's exhibit building has already been contracted for, reports made to Kinsolving show, and much of the automobile building is sold out.

"It used to be," he says, "during the early days of the fair, that its officials and employees were forced to spend much time trying to fill these buildings with exhibits. Most of the merchants looked on a proposal to buy space as a request for a donation, but that is all changed now, for those who have during recent years had displays at the fair have practically all found it was a paying proposition and, as a result, selling the space has not been any job at all this year."

Several of the business concerns which have made reservations in the exhibition buildings have been working already for considerable time on their displays and folks who come to the fair will see many interesting, instructive and entertaining things in that department, officials assert.

On the floor in the automobile building will be a large number of the latest model motor vehicles for the inspection of the thousands who will attend the exposition.

COATS MAY OUTNUMBER SUITS FOR FALL WEAR

By United Press. NEW YORK.—Cloth coats are expected to outnumber suits during the late summer and early fall. However, suits for the tourist and for the tailored woman are being shown by most shops. Suits for sportswear will be made of tweeds and twills primarily. For formal wear, broadcloth and soft woolsens are the favored fabrics. Velvet although popular for gowns and coats, is not seriously considered for suits for the coming season. Fur trimming is absent due to the increasing vogue for separate animal scarfs. Colors listed as important are, tans, grays, browns and black. Fur neck-pieces harmonize.

FIREMEN OF TWENTY-SEVENTH DISTRICT MEET AT LAKE LEON

Volunteer firemen from the 27th district, which includes the towns of Breekenridge, Ranger, Eastland, Gordon, Strawn, Thurber, Gorman, Cisco and Rising Star, and which is affiliated with the State Firemen's association, held an enthusiastic meeting in Eastland Thursday night. Owing to the fact that rain was threatening the attendance was not as large as had been expected. Delegations from Ranger, Cisco, Gordon, Strawn and Eastland were present, making a total of about seventy-five besides a number of visitors.

J. H. Chestham, city manager of Eastland, and chief of the 27th district, presided and in a few well chosen words explained the purpose of the firemen's organization and the meeting being held at that time. He also gave a brief history of the 27th district organization.

The meeting was held at Lake Leon, four miles southeast of Eastland. A feast of barbecued chicken was spread before the business session was opened.

Standardization and co-operation were the topics of discussion by the various speakers. A woman's auxiliary for Eastland, the other towns already having such organizations, was suggested and a move started that may result in one being organized at Eastland.

Among the speakers were Chief Murphy of Ranger; Chief Pass of Cisco; Chief Hurt of Strawn; Mayor John Thurman of Ranger; J. C. Smith of Ranger; Murray Gill of the Oil Belt Power company, Eastland; John M. Mouser, Prairie Oil & Gas company, Eastland; Chief Ramsey of Gordon; Secretary Hickey of the Ranger chamber of commerce and Geo. W. Briggs of the Eastland chamber of commerce.

An appeal was made by Chief Chestham for more citizens, especially city officials to attend these firemen's meetings. He also pointed out that while most of the departments in the district were always well represented, two or three towns had never taken any interest in them.

The 27th district, the speakers pointed out, was shown at the recent state convention at San Antonio, to have been the liveliest and most active district in the state association. It was also stated that the splendid record being made by the 27th district would result in further reductions of insurance rates in this district.

When the 27th district was organized Gordon was the only town whose equipment was not standard, it was stated. Since the organization has been perfected, this equipment has been standardized and Gordon is just completing a new waterworks system.

At Olden, between Eastland and Ranger, where there is no equipment so far as trucks, etc., are concerned and where both Ranger and Eastland departments are frequently called to assist in putting out fires, additional hose and water mains are being installed to make the system of that town, so far as it goes, standard. This, the firemen say, will help the departments to give better service should they be called there in case of a fire.

J. H. Chestham appointed as a committee to work out plans for co-operation between the various towns of the district, Chief Murphy of Ranger, Chief Pass of Cisco, Chief Hurt of Strawn. The mayors of these towns were added to this committee on the suggestion of Chief Murphy. Chief Chestham was given much praise by the speakers for the work he has done in arousing an interest among the firemen of his district. The San Antonio fire department, which has offered to drill free of charge, any fireman sent there for that purpose, was also accorded great praise by the speakers. The San Antonio department, it was stated, was the best and most thoroughly trained fire-fighting team in the world.

The next meeting of the 27th district will be held at Cisco on the night of Wednesday, September 28th.

When Clarence Chamberlin returned to his home town an aerial stunt show was given for his entertainment. That's like giving a taxicab chauffeur an exhibition of plain and fancy driving.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Jerry Macklyn, advertising manager for the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Co., proposes to Vera Cameron, his secretary, that he transform her from the old-maid type she is into a beauty with the use of the company cosmetics and that her photographs, taken during the experiment, be used in Peach Bloom advertising.

Vera indignantly refuses but when she falls suddenly in love with a man whom she hears called Schuyler, she feels the need to be beautiful above everything else. She overhears Schuyler say he will be in Lake Minnetonka in June and Vera resolves to go there.

Vera's sea-green eyes remind Jerry of an uncaptioned Sunday supplement picture he has in his desk and he brings it out and asks the beauty specialist to use it as a model in refashioning Vera. Vera's aunt, Flora Cartwright, is amazed at the change wrought in her once homely niece and is likewise a little jealous.

Vera begs Jerry not to use her photographs in the advertising. He tells her if she will give up the trip to Minnetonka, he will tear the ads up. She refuses. Just before train time, he comes to her apartment, tells her he loves her and begs her to give up the trip. They part under strained conditions and Vera does not expect to see him again. However, he rushes into her Pullman just before the train is to leave and gives her a sealed letter which he cautions her not to open unless she is "caught in a jam."

And now, through a miracle wrought by Jerry Macklyn, she was beautiful, she was desirable.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XII

It was nearly twelve o'clock that night when Vera Cameron had completed preparations for her berth in the train that was speeding her toward adventure. But she could not sleep. Twice she turned on the light above her head and made sure that money, tickets and baggage checks were safe, tucked into a corner of the pillowslip.

She laughed at herself, sitting up in the narrow bed to gaze at her reflection in the strip of mirror between the windows. The sight of her camellia-white face, framed in a close-lying swirl of burnished copper waves, of her wide green eyes, of her perfect Grecian nose and her softly curved mouth never failed to give her a shock of joy, of amazed wonder.

She pressed the light button, then she lay back on the fat Pullman pillow, smiling to herself in the dark, repeating soundlessly the "beauty creed" which Flora Cartwright had insisted that she memorize: "I believe that I am utterly beautiful and utterly desirable. I believe that no man can look upon me without pleasure and without desire."

"But I can't believe that," she told herself. "It can't be true of me—of Vera Victoria Cameron! Oh," she moaned half aloud, clenching her hands on her breasts. "I don't want to remember! I want to think only of the future of Vee-Vee Cameron as she now is and will be!"

But she could not keep from remembering. She could not keep from living over a scene which had stamped itself indelibly on the sensitive mind of the child she had been then.

A mean little room in a mean little house in a mean little Missouri town. A gray coffin, of cheap painted wood, resting on two cheap pine chairs, which her mother had painted black and orange. A child—herself at nine—crouching on the floor at the head of the coffin, tears streaming out of her eyes, slipping down and over her pinched, freckled little face. A thin little claw of a hand lifting a heavy braid of ash-colored hair with which to dab at the tears which had been blistering her eyelids since her mother had died. She saw the miserable, scrawny little thing put herself up by the back of the chair to look yet again on the face of the woman in the coffin—a sweet, sad face that had been so beautiful, and that was beautiful again in the serenity of death.

She heard her grief-hoarsened frightened voice crying out, "Mama! Mama!" and again, as if she were living the scene for the first time, she heard with startling clearness—the rough whiplash of her father's voice: "Get out of here and make me a pot of coffee! Ain't a damn bit of sense in a great big girl like you whining and taking on for two days on a stretch. Your ma ain't coming back, for all your blubbering, and the quicker you take on some o' her work the better you'll be. Get out of here now, and stir up a batch o' biscuits, too. I ain't had a mouthful of food but what the neighbors brought in since she was took!"

"No, no! I don't want to remember!" the girl moaned, her lovely head worrying the pillow in desperation.

But she could not shut the flood-gates of memory. She saw herself cooking greasy meals and cleaning the mean little house, oversteering her slight strength so that her father would not beat her. Then she saw herself alone for days, too frightened to tell the neighbors that her father had deserted her, so terrified with loneliness that she would have welcomed his coarsely handed, some, drink-ravaged face and his brutal voice. Then she saw herself standing before a big-bosomed woman in the orphan asylum, trying to shrink into herself, hating herself for being so little and pinched and ugly. She heard the other children taunting her, "Greeney eyes! Preckle-faced!"

Aunt Flora had been in Europe when Vivian's mother died. It was Aunt Flora, newly married to her second husband—Jack Preston, who now wanted to marry Aunt Flora again—who came to the orphan's home to rescue her thirteen-year old niece.

Beautiful, glittering, glamorous Aunt Flora, wrapped about with her husband's love as with a shining cloak. Aunt Flora saying, "This can't be Vee-Vee—Grace's baby! Why, Jack, Grace was the loveliest thing! Much prettier than I am!"

Later she had heard Aunt Flora saying to Jack Preston: "The poor little thing is so pitifully plain, Jack. It will be a miracle if she ever marries."

Vera wondered, sobbing a little with self-pity, if it had been any wonder that she had never had gay good times like other girls, handicapped as she had been by her knowledge of her plainness and by her aunt's thoughtless prophecy. Her pride, trampled but not killed by life in the orphan's home, made her fiercely determined not to accept her aunt's bounty any longer than was absolutely necessary. She had studied far into the night, had earned the contemptuous reputation of being a book-worm and a dig and a teacher's pet, but she had plowed grimly through high school in three years, and had then worked for two years—until she was eighteen—in a Fourteenth street department store in New York, saving her money for a business course. At nineteen she had gone to work as a stenographer, savagely determined to be the best private secretary in New York. If love and marriage were not for her, she would force life to give her the next best thing—success. She had lived alone much of the time, working overtime in every job she had held, cooking her own frugal meals, making her own dowdy dresses, styling.

Intermittently, between her aunt's marriages, she had lived with her, sharing the expenses of the tasteful little apartment which Aunt Flora's alimony or, if the husband died, his insurance money and savings provided. Aunt Flora had never married a rich man; her four marriages had been love matches. And between them, while she was waiting to fall in love again, she had wheeled Vera into staying with her, because she feared loneliness more than anything in the world except old age. But the price that Vera had paid for a more comfortable home and more esthetic surroundings had been heavy, for Flora Cartwright had unconsciously nursed the girl's feeling of inferiority, had convinced her anew every day of their life together that she, Vera Victoria Cameron, was not made for love and marriage.

And now, through a miracle wrought by Jerry Macklyn, who, after all, had only done what Aunt Flora could have done at any time during the last five years, she was beautiful, she was desirable. Peter Darrow, mooning at her like a love-sick calf, the men at the office—married and single—trying to take her out to lunch, Jerry Macklyn himself asking her to marry him. For the first time in six weeks, since the miracle had been happening, she had leisure to taste the poignant sweetness of the cup of life which Jerry had held to her famished lips. Oh, it was good, good! Her body quivered with quick, shuddering sighs of happiness, of anticipation of something much more wonderful which was about to happen.

But—would it happen? She had fallen in love so ridiculously with a man she had never seen before, a man who had looked through her as if she did not exist. She was like her mother, who had fallen in love with John Cameron the first time she had seen him at a country dance, had married him the next day, throwing up her job as a school teacher in the little Missouri town. She was like Aunt Flora, who boasted that she had fallen in love at sight with every man she had married. It was in her blood—this reckless plunging into love, this mad impulse to fly after the beloved and capture him at any cost.

She went to sleep, murmuring Jerry's name. But the face of which she dreamed was dark, aristocratic, heartbreakingly handsome.

The next morning, after dressing herself with almost prayerful carefulness, she had a leisurely, expensive breakfast in the dining car, deferentially attended by the chief steward and himself, and gloatingly conscious of every admiring glance that the diners—men and women both—cast at her.

The train reached the little station of Minnetonka at half-past eleven. During the three-mile drive to the hotel on the lake Vera became painfully conscious that at least two of her fellow-passengers were regarding her with more than usual interest and curiosity. They were a young couple, fashionably dressed, evidently married.

Vera, out of the corner of her eye, saw the woman whisper to her husband, glancing from the initials on Vera's bags to her face. The husband shook his head at first, smiling indulgently, then, on looking more closely at the embarrassed girl who tried to pretend ignorance of their scrutiny, he nodded slowly, his eyes narrowing with speculation.

"I wonder what's wrong with me," Vera worried. "Am I too well dressed, or not well enough dressed, or what? But they act as if they thought they recognized me. Oh, well, it's silly to worry. If my own aunt didn't recognize me after my transformation, I don't see how they could."

But she was growing more worried every minute. Fear froze her into a statue of arrogance. What if they did see through her—recognized her as a stenographer on a two-weeks' vacation playing the great lady? Would they try to have her put out of their sacred hotel?

THE FILM SHOP

By DAN CAMPBELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

HOLLYWOOD.—French fried stories, tasty Hungarian literary goulash, German plots a la Pilsner, Russian caviar creations and English belles letters with Yorkshire pudding are going to give the movie-mad appetites a distinct change of screen diet.

Hollywood producers have gone "foreign" with a vengeance and there is a distinct flair for stories originally written by foreign authors, adapted by foreign authors, or both. It follows as a logical succession the craze of the film capital for foreign stars and foreign directors.

No less than four pictures are now being made on the United Artists lot by French, German and Russian writers. And others are being contemplated.

"The Garden of Eden" starring Corinne Griffith is an adaptation by Hans Kraly of the current German success by B. Bernauer and Rudolph Oesterreicher, "Tempest," John Barrymore's starring vehicle, is Russian play by Andre Birabeau and Gladys Unger, while Victor Hugo's "Camille" is a Norma Talmadge release.

May Edginton, the English novelist, is now writing an original story for Olive Borden at the Fox lot entitled "The Girl Downstairs." At Universal they are doing Victor Hugo's "The Man Who Laughs" with Mary Philbin and Conrad Veidt, and have just completed "Surrender" an adaptation of a Hungarian play by A. Brody entitled "Lea Lyon." Paramount had Lajos Biro, another Hungarian as a collaborator with Jules Furthman on "The Way of All Flesh" which stars Emil Jannings. That all but skims the cream from the list.

Material for screen magazines would appear to be scarce as evidenced by the following questions which representatives of the movie publications asked Dolores Del Rio to answer.

Does a girl have to be naughty to be a success in the movies?

What do you think of the Einstein theory?

Is Hollywood really as wild as it is painted?

Should a woman kiss her husband in public?

Do you think the modern girl is more wicked than her grandmother was?

Do you think that Wallace Beery has sex appeal?

Is it true that Rod LaRocque eats garlic?

Can a woman really love a fat man?

Is Hollywood safe for young girls?

In a few years the only man on the screen using makeup will be Lou Chaney—if the present stampede toward abolition of paint and powder for male players continues. John Gilbert has again joined the movement in "Love," his latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle.

Ends pain at once

No waiting—one minute after you apply Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads the pain is gone. After the corn is healed it never comes back. If new shoes irritate the spot again, a Zino-pad fixes it overnight. Old methods of paring corns, or using caustic acids, are dangerous.

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads are safe, antiseptic, protective, healing. They stop the cause of corns—rubbing and pressing of shoes. At all druggists and shoe stores. Cost but a trifle.

CONSOLIDATION FOR RAILROADS GREAT BENEFIT

Bill Providing for Consolidation of Roads Will be Submitted to Next Session of Congress.

By HERBERT LITTLE, United Press Staff Correspondent. CONGRESSIONAL SERIES. WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—One of the greatest of the economic steps planned for enactment by the seventy-ninth congress this winter is railroad consolidation, which has been seriously discussed for 20 years and considered the major transportation problem of the nation for the last six years.

A bill for voluntary consolidation of railroads in the public interest and repeal of the 1920 transportation act provision for an arbitrary consolidation plan will be reported to the house for passage by the interstate and foreign commerce committee, which has spent several months in drafting the measure.

President Coolidge and the interstate commerce commission have repeatedly asked congress to enact such a law. The bill drafted by the house committee has been studied all summer by railroad leaders, and early agreement upon its final form, and passage, are confidently expected by authorities here.

There are 161 class one railroads in the nation now. Most railroad men agree they could function more efficiently and economically if the great properties were merged into something between 12 and 30 great systems, preserving competition and all present trade-routes.

Congress attempted to solve the problem in the consolidation clause adopted in 1920, directing the commission to draft an arbitrary set of systems. At the commission's request, Prof. William Z. Ripley, the economist, prepared a 19-system tentative plan, upon which the commission held hearings. The commission decided that agreement upon a plan which would satisfy the roads and communities involved was a practical impossibility.

Now the house committee, after extensive hearings under direction of its chairman, Rep. James Parker, republican, New York, has drafted a measure. The senate commerce committee likewise held extensive hearings on the same problems, and is prepared to act speedily on the proposals presented.

The bill, according to its own language, advocates and authorizes voluntary consolidations, through purchase of property, lease, stock ownership or other method.

The commission's desire for enactment of the measure is grounded partly on the fact that the present law prohibits actual "consolidations" and its strict provisions have caused denial of permission to several roads to effect widespread unifications or mergers, including the Van Sweringen-Nickel Plate unification. Under the law, mergers cannot be granted unless they conform to the prescribed plan, and in the absence of the plan, no such unification can go through.

Under the proposed law, the commission will continue to exercise full authority over the railroads. In putting through the voluntary consolidations which the bill would authorize, the commission would hold hearings to ascertain if the plans proposed carry out the law's intent. The bill would also grant the consolidating roads exemption from taxation until the new system began bringing in revenues, and suspend from these transactions the operation of the anti-trust laws.

"I am convinced that the policy of voluntary consolidations is sound," says Representative Parker, pointing out that some of the greatest railroad lines of the country, including the New York Central, the Pennsylvania, the Union Pacific, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, and the Atlantic Coast line, were formed by the consolidations which started after the civil war and continued until the Clayton anti-trust act stopped them a little more than 10 years ago.

"To guarantee all stockholders a voice, the bill provides that all holders of outstanding corporate capital stock involved shall be given a vote in the consolidation operations."

Beautiful Woman Is Transformed Into an Old Man

By United Press. By HENRY T. RUSSELL, United Press Staff Correspondent. LONDON.—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, having withdrawn for all time the character of Sherlock Holmes from future stories, has more time to devote to spiritualism and the result of this increased interest has caused English scientists to smile while psychiatrists are impressed.

In a document published by Conan Doyle that famous writer told of an experience in which he and his wife saw the face of a woman transformed into that of an old man.

The famous creator of "Sherlock Holmes" explained how he and Lady Conan Doyle with their guests, Mrs. C. A. Wickland and Dr. Carl A. Wickland, noted psychic investigator of California, had a strange psychic adventure at Doyle's country home in Sussex, using Mrs. Wickland as their medium.

After a visit to an old moated grange, Mrs. Wickland is said to have suddenly exclaimed:

"There is such a strange old man walking beside us."

A moment later, she answered questions concerning the appearance of the "strange old man" explaining that he came from the moat which the party had just left, "through that door that opened."

"We had driven home," wrote Conan Doyle, "and were seated among the roses on my verandah, the Wicklands, my wife, and myself. We were talking of other things when the door suddenly gave a start. He's here."

"Then came the amazing moment.

Before our eyes she changed in an instant into a heavy-faced, sullen old man with bent back and loose, senile lips. The whole expression was utterly different. She choked and spluttered in an effort to express the thoughts of the control."

It was this statement which, in effect, means that a living woman suddenly and visibly became a man, which caused the widest and most varied type of comment throughout England. Psychics, of course, are almost unanimous in lending absolute credence to the report, which, they claim is but one more demonstration of those spiritual powers which, in our generation of scientific progress, of quasi-supernatural scientific devices like wireless telephony, are sneered at by many. Scientists, however, are inclined, if not to actually doubt the facts involved, at any rate to ask for scientific and absolute proofs of them. Hurrah! School is to start soon.

The I. C. C. has suspended the 12244 scale of rates applicable between Texas points on Interstate shipments of Hay, also on shipments between Texas points and Shreveport, La. Hearing is set for Fort Worth, September 28 at the Texas

Hotel. This organization will be represented and take the position that the present adjustment should not be disturbed pending final decision in the general investigation into the grain rates which the commission is now conducting.

in 1902, opened a small general store at Kemmerer, Wyoming. Such stores were typical of the times. Out of this one-town, one-man, one-store business has grown a Nation-Wide Institution of Department Stores. Its operations today offer a sharp contrast to those of a quarter of a century ago.

Then a few hundred people were served. Now millions of people are served by the hundreds of J. C. Penney Company Department Stores which are scattered from Coast to Coast and from the Gulf to the Great Lakes.

A Personal Word:

We are addressing ourselves to the families in this community and vicinity whom we do not yet number among our customers and friends!
