Showdown Set For Drafting German Treaty

LONDON, Jan. 23. (P)- A showdown on Russian opposition to Inc., Elgin, III., and of Batavia full participation by the smaller nations in drafting German and Austrian peace treaties appeared imminent today as Australia came forward to present her views to the Big Four deputy foreign ministers council.

Australia has demanded full representation at all sessions of the deputies council and has expressed resentment toward any efforts for a 'big power peace' for the defeated powers.

There even were hints from Australian and British sources today that the Australian representative, Col. W. R. Hodgson, might refuse, temporarily at least, the inpeace views unless assured of an under the conspiracy statute proequal voice with the Big Four in treaty deliberations. Australia has been backed by Brazil, Canada, and other "small nations" in the demand for representation - sharply opposed by Deputy Foreign Minister Feodor T. Gousev of Russia.

Hamilton, who receives tax collections from the revenue department and pays out warrants for its operation and who receives all federal funds allotted to the Georgia highway department, said difficulties over bonding of key officials raised legal obstacles to his recognition of appointees named by Herman Talmadge.

Rival administrations were appointed both to the state revenue commission and to the state highway department by Talmadge, who was elected governor by the legis lature, and by M. E. Thompson, who claims to be "acting governor" signed.

In the highway department Hamilton said, the Talmadge appointed treasurer has not been confirmed by the state senate and hence transfer of bond from the previous treasurer is illegal. Pay Case Is Asked Brief Questions British Get Bad News-- the dispute over the gover-norship, State Treasurer Food Ration To Be Cut LONDON, Jan. 23. (IP)-Austerity-ridden Britons learned today they are to get less fresh meat and less beer and that cuts in bread and bacon rations may be necessary soon.

This bad news to millions now eating poorer fare than they did during the worst war years brought a scorching attack on the labor government, with Lord Woolton the wartime food minister, declaring to parliament: "It's high fime the people had a break in this debilitating austerity."

Food Minister John Strachey announced that the fresh meat ration was cut because of a drop in home production of beef and mutton, but added that extra supplies of corned beef would go on sale to keep the weekly ration at one shilling four pence (about 28 cents) worth of meat.

Under the present ration Britons must use at least two pence (about 4 cents) worth of corned beef. Beginning Feb. 2 they will have to double that, thus cutting the fresh meat ration to a shilling (about 20 cents).

The output of beer, already so scarce that some pubs close early nightly because their supplies have run out, will be cut 25 to 50 per cent immediately because of the coal shortage, the brewers announced.

The possibility of cuts in bread and bacon rations was announced in the House of Commons by Lord Henderson, government spokesman, who said "acute shortages in the world supply of major foodstuffs would persist through the crop year of 1946-47."

Good Course In Its Richest Sense

Beauford H. Jester has taken over as the first governor in the second centennial of Texas statehood.

In his inauguration address, the Governor adhered closely to the line set up in his campaign for the democratic nomination, declaring himself for a "people's path," which he interpreted as a middleof-the-road course. This means, he said, that it is to be somewhere between the right and left extremes.

This is a happy phrase, blessed with alliteration and political sex appeal. It can be, however, a significant one if it is unfolded in a democratic manner. By this we mean that democracy at its best continually is in the process of recoiling differences between the extremes for the benefit of the most people. In this spirit democracy is something alive and vital.

On the other hand, there is the danger of action designed to appease rather toan compose, and in this atmosphere interests and groups infect the democratic processes.

The governor goes into office with a robust majority from his party and from all the people; he goes into office at a time of many pressing problems and of challenging opportunities. Every Texan, regardless of his previous views, should join in the prayer and hope that men of vision in the legislature, together with the governor, will make it possible to achieve a "people's path" in the richest meaning of that phrase.

Example Of Speaking Frankly

George C. Marshall, the new secretary of the state, has done one thing which should set itself up as an example for many men who aspire to mantle of statesmanship.

As he took the oath of office, Gen. Marshall made a public statement which stands as a refreshing criteria for plain speaking.

He declared that he was not a candidate for any political office; he could not be drafted . . . ; he was making the statement to stop any speculation in connection with his name and political possibilities .

That should, except for those who have nothing better to do with their time than try to read into statements something that is not there, squelch this romantic business of trying to inject personalities into future campaigns.

So in the future if anyone wishes to still speculations about their prospects in any field of political endeavor, they have only to fall back on Gen. Marshall's example.

By this forthright pronouncement, the new secretary has done much for the nation in further putting our foreign policy firmly on a bi-partisan basis, and thus to remove the constant cry of politics from much of what he might do or say.

RFC Drops Small Business Loans

WASHINGTON. - Last week the Reconstruction Finance Corporation issued an inconspicuous routine announcement stating that its BPA program would expire Jan. 22. To most people this meant nothing. To thousands of little businessmen throughout the country, however, it meant the difference between prosperity and the opposite.

To people inside the RFC, furthermore, it represented one of the cleverest rush-jobs of backstage maneuvering in recent RFC history. Two Republican RFC commissioners, taking advantage of two democratic absences, abrogated the RFC plan to guarantee 7 per cent of bank loans to small business up to $100,000. In the last year these support loans to small business have been the most important loans the RFC has made.

Here is the inside story of what happened.

Charles Henderson. RFC chairman and generally considered a friend of small business, was absent in California. George Allen, another Democrat, and a staunch champion of small business, resigned effective Jan. 16. John Goodloe, nominated to take his place as a Democratic commissioner, had not been confirmed by the Senate.

This left the RFC, on Jan. 17 - the day after Allen resigned - in control of three men two Republicans and one Democrat.

On that date also the two congressional ' committees on small business had not yet been reorganized. Both have staunchly championed RFC loans to small business, but since the new Congress began, the two committees have been in the throes of reorganization. . . .

BIG BANKER VIEWPOINT On Jan. 17, therefore, one day after Allen resigned, and before the small business committees on Capitol Hill could get going, Commissioner Henry T. Bodman moved to drop the "blanket participation agreement" whereby the RFC automatically underwrote 75 per cent of loans which a bank extends to small business.

Commissioner Bodman's background is the National Bank of Detroit, one of the most powerful financial institutions of the automobile capital. Behind it are the Fisher brothers, of Fisher body fame, and General Motors. They are also linked with the Bankers Trust and the Guaranty Trust in New York. This group represents big without enthusiasm. The Republicans incidentally had the unofficial blessing of Democratic Secretary of the Treasury Snyder.

And that was how the RFC maneuvered to take one of its most significant steps of the past two years. For, since the BPR program was put into effect in March 1945, the RFC had lent small business a total of $464,650,102 - a flow of capital which could not help but have a tremendous impact on the country. NOTE - Though Republican RFC commissioners voted against small business, GOP leaders on Capitol Hill generally hold the opposite. Republican National Chairman Carroll Reece has been strong for small business.

CAPITAL CHAFF At his latest cabinet meeting President Truman gave instructions on how to get along with the new Republican Congress. He told his cabinet members not to fight the new Congress, but to insist upon justice. Be courteous, careful, and cooperative, he advised, but stand up fon your rights. Of late, incidentally, the President has seemed much more confident. . . President Truman may have to put a "help wanted" sign outside the White House. He's offering a job paying $30,000 a year and no income tax (which is more than his own net income), but the job is going begging. The vacancy is head of the World Bank - recently occupied by Eugene Meyer. So far. Truman has had no takers. Reason is - it's almost as difficult as runing the United Na-

Spitsbergen, main island of the Svalbard group toward which Moscow is making passes, had been operating as an organized community for only 17 years when the Russians first began to covet it.

That was during the First World War, when the last Czar wanted to buy out the private. Norwegian coal owners, who had gone in along with British and American developers after 1900. The only objective then, for a Russia which was only slightly interested in the northern shipping routes, was the nine to ten billion tons of coal which are estimated to lie beneath the frozen surface.

Now Spitsbergen, which became a legal entity for the first time in 1921 by a treaty under which the world powers accepted Norwegian sovereignty, reflects the impact of world affairs from several facets.

Soviet Russia first acked Norway to cede parts of Spitsbergen in 1944 for bases which could have been important then. Norway's exiled government in London declined to act on such a matter until it was back home. Since then, important political angles have entered the picture. Spltsbergen lies northeast of Iceland, about half way between Murmansk and the North Pole, and guards the sea route above Norway's North Cope. It lies along with much-discussed rocket-route across the Arctic. It is between Russia and Greenland, that enormous island on the Atlantic's northern fringe which was penetrated by the Germans

so recently, and whose staging stations between Europe and America will be even more important in any future conflict. In the last war planes and ships from Spitsbergen could have met the German planes and ships from Norway which so harrassed the Allied convoys to Murmansk. . . .

But much of this little spot may lie across the communication lanes of the modern world from which it was so long isolated, the recent Russian moves have placed it even more squarely across the path of American policy. The United States wants a system of bases which, coupled with the availability of British strong. points, can be used to help keep any future war at a distance.

Russia probably sees Spitzbergen as an opportunity to meet us, as far from home as possible, at one more point.

The sheriff of Henderson county came to Dallas and refused to stay at a hotel unless he had 200 feet of rope for use in case of a blaze. It was during that series of disastrous fires, and you can't blame him.

The story was printed, and a gentleman named S. A. Sellers of Dickson writes that the sheriff should be warned. "He'll kill himself," said Mr. Sellers worriedly. "Those heavy pigskin gloves of his will be hotter than his pistol ever got. "He should go out to an oil well drilling rig in East Texas, go to the top of some 136-foot line. And they are not half inch. He will find out just how good he is at rope sliding."

Mr. Sellers goes on to say that if the sheriff must have a safety devise, why not try the new safety cable with a safety buggy the oil people have de-, veloped? He said it has a seat and brake to regulate the speed, and is sold at all oil field supply stores.

The fastest comics are the boys who remember the most. In that way, they have enough ma-

WHEN a comic with a worse memory than the traditional alisent-minded prof comes along and still rakes in the cash in large four-figured chunks each week, it is the exception proving the rule.

Texas Labor Laws Need Modernizing

aws.

By PAUL BOLTON Herald Austin Bureau

AUSTIN, Jan. 22. - If the 50th Texas legislature is not too preoccupied with bills to curb labor

M. A. Langley of the Fairview conservation group has recently had about ten miles of terrace lines run on his farm. He hopes to complete the terraces within the next few weeks.

Gordon Buchanan has a small field of small grain which includes both wheat and Speltz. This is his first trial with speltz but he believes that it may be better on sandy land than wheat. Both crops are planted in regular width rows and are affording good grazing.

Frank Hodnett of the Knott Conservation Group and R. W. Mc-New of the Hartwell group have recently placed their fields on contour

The soil scientist with the Martin - Howard SC District is preparing to take several soil tests on different types of soil in this area. The samples will be sent to the SC laboratory at Fort Worth where they will be analyzed for plant nutrients, mainly lime, nitrogen, potassium and phosphorous, Also a few samples will be run on salt and alkaline spots, on irrigation water and for organic content. It is believed that these tests will result in more accurate information on the soil needs and deficiencies of local areas. They will help farmers in applying better cropping methods to conserve and add fertility to the soil.

Recent application for complete conservation plans have been made for the B. J. Daniel farm on the Gail road and the J. O. McCrary farm near Fairview.

Sam Buchanan of the Center Point conservation group is building several more terraces. Most of the farm will be terraced except Last Rites Held some deep sandy land where terraces are not needed.

But under the G.L. Bill of Rights, Willie (who has a wife and baby) is getting a free education at the Agricultural College. And Uncle Sam is giving him a ane report: "Deportment, excelent; Progress, above average."

That goes for all those undergraduate veterans. Like Willie, they ppreciate an education more than ever now. They're industrious and well-behaved-their favorite beverage is milk, or a temperate glass of beer. For them the "three R's" seem to mean: Responsibility, Re-
