'lonely hearts" slayings. State Police Col. Herbert E. Barnes said George Brennen, 19, arrested yesterday at the Lackland Air Force Base near San Antonio, would be charged with being an accessory after the fact in the slaying of one of two elderly men. Mrs. Brennan, 44-year-old twicemarried brunette, and another son, Robert, 15, have been charged with murder in the slaying of Wade N. Wooldridge, 70, Bedford, Va. Another son, Ra; mond, 23, has been charged with being an accessory. Barnes said New Hampshire potice will file charges of the slay-ing of the second victim, Hugo Schultz, 66, Epson, N. H. The state police official previously announced Mrs. Brennan, Robert and Raymond signed statements telling how Robert shot Wooldridge at his mother's order and Mrs. Brennan

She had met both men, Barnes said, through "lonely hearts cor-respondence" and plotted their deaths with robbery as the motive. At San Antonio, Asst. Atty. C. M. Biery said George Brennan told him in an oral statement that he joined the Air Force "to get away from all the tension around the Wooldridge's body.

In connection with Schultz's death George said his mother wrote him to come to New Hampshire and 'we took the body back to Dover with us and buried it in the yard near the other one," Biery said. Texas Ranger Zeno Smith said last night he was awaiting the arrival of a warrant for George Brennan, Young Brennan, the Ranger said has agreed to waive extradition. In their statements, Mrs. Brennan, Robert and Raymond were quoted by Barnes as saying the bodies of Wooldridge and Schultz were buried in a pigpen, late: dug up, burned and the remains scattered on a city dump.

State police found "a bushel bas-ket of lonely hearts letters" on the Brennan farm and have been attempting to trace the men who wrote these to Mrs. Brennan.

Drunkenness Has No Place As Plea In Mitigation Of Crime

When all else fails, insanity and drunkenness are two stock-in-trade pleas in the field of criminal jurisprudence.

Where insanity can be established, it is a perfectly valid plea. It is sometimes subject to abuse but it should not be ruled out, because those honestly suffering its afflictions cannot rightfully be held accountable. But drunkenness is a horse of a different color. It is argued with some logic that a person under the influence of intoxicants or drugs has lost control of his facilities to a degree comparable with those with mental lapses or phychosis. The mitigating plea frequently is that the defendant would not have committed the alleged act had he been his sober self.

"Whereever a plea of drunkenness he used in mitigation of crime, it is not justice but sentiment that allows it to influence the verdiet of a jury or judge. Any man who makes himself drunk knows before he does so that he is prone to do things he might not do while sober, yet he goes about his drinking, regardless.

"The man who drinks and then starts driving a ear knows that he is making a potential killer. Drunkenness should be no plea in any trial. No drunken man becomes so against his will (with all due respects to those who have lost the will to resist). Verdicts allowed to be influenced and lessened because of drunkenness tend to excuse the practice instead of punishing it."

viewpoint, one can understand why the seamen put so much faith in the aircraft earrier. Truly, it was a formidable weapon in its time, but never did any type of warship become obsolete so quickly, Every American must thrill to the saga of the Yorktown and its sister ships, which played so vital a role in the win the South Pacific war; but that does not alter the cold fact that the carrier has outlived its usefulness in the Atomic Age.

The Air I ree has contended that the $185 million United States is an invasion of its own field of long-r nge strategie bombing. In this it is perfectly right. Shortrange fighting is the Navy's province, and it is the height of absurdity for it to be building a carrier for the same kind of work that land bases could do better and more economically. Moreover, land bases are not so vulnerable.

The old order dies hard, and it is not strange that the Navy still should be thinking in terms of Trafalgar, Jutland and Midway. It does not realize that the days of great warships and great sea battles are over for this planet. However, it is too late for repining; the keel of the world's biggest aircraft carrier already has been laid, and the work must go forward, even though it should turn out in the end that we have built nothing more than an extravagant monument to Naval folly .- R. End Of Military Rule In Germany Will Lead To End Of Occupation

The hard core of the German agree- to "supervise." ment reac'ted in Washington last week is that "military gov roment as such will be terminated." That decision will stand. Military government has been deteriorating rapidly and is already so feeble and ineffectual that if the Foreign Ministers had not decided to put an end to it, it would have soon broken down anyway. The historic words terminating it have been spoken. Now all the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't put Humpty Dumpty 'ogether again. But the rest of the agreements can be taken only as a temporary arrangement on the way to something which, for better or worse, will be quite different from the system outlined in the occupation statute. The men who made these arrangements are the ablest who have dealt with the German question since the war, or during it, and they can have few illusions on the main point: that the end of military, government is also the beginning of the end of all military occupation.

The system proposed is described in the Schuman-Bevin-Acheson statement as one in which "the function of the Allied authorities will become mainly supervisory." They will supervise a German government which is to be set up in the next few month -. But when -e look at the occupation statute we find that the Allied authorities are to "sup-rvise" a government which is disarmed, which does not control its foreign trade and its currency. which is not supposed to have a foreign policy and cannot make international agreements, which has a constitution that is to be construed by the occupying powers and can be amended caly if they approve, which is still to be controlled in the Ruhr, in scientific research, in respect to "restitution, reparations, decarfelization, deconcentration, non-discrimination in trade matters, foreign interests in Germany," disple d persons and admission of refugees, and in order "to ensure' use of funds, foods, and other supplies in such manner as to reduce to a minimum the need for external assistance to Germany."

Imagine M. Francois-Poncet and Mr. McCloy, if he is to become high commissioner, and their British colleague attting in Frankfurt and trying to supervise the German federal and state governments. "Their staff personnel shall," we read, "be kept to a minimum." Yet they are to know all that the German authorities do in respect to what are in reality all the main functions of governm forty-five million people. They are to know it because the occupation statute gives them "the right to request and verify information and statistics," and then when they think they know, they must proceed

How? By telling the German authorities they must do this or that they must not do that? What happens if the Germans deny the allegations, dispute the statistics, challenge the decisions The occupation statute does not say because as a matter of fact ther- is little the high commissioners can do to enforce their supervision. They cannot reestablish military government. They cannot, except in flagrant cases, arrest and remove officials, and the cannot cut off German imports for fear of throwing the Gormans into the arms of the Russians.

While all this is going on the armies which remain in Germany will not be mere garrison troops like, let us say, the regiment of Marines which before the war we kept as legation guards in China, The troops in Germany are not merely occupying Germany. They are a covering screen for the defensive forces of Western Europe. They are in effect deployed in the advance sone of what may se a theater of war. Therefore railroads, telegraph and telephones, and indeed all facilities that may be needed for the support and maintenance of the troops, will have to be kept under the intimate control of the military commanders, not of the eivilian high commissioners,

If all prayers were answered, the muddle would be terrific and a lot of me would be put away.

"We had a definite agreement,"

he continued, "with the F. W. & D. C., and the City of Electra will have the support of practically every town that will be effected by the new ruling." Moore said the agreement made by Robert L. The schedule is reversed for the southward trip, except that passengers from Trinidad, Colo., or beyond may be discharged at Chan-ning and Claude.
