43rd Legislature Probably Will Be Remembered For Bringing Back Prize Fights, Horse-Race, Beer

Longest Session in History Adjourns: Oil Troubles Rather Than Smooths Waters As Majors And Independents Maintain Large Lobbies

By GORDON K. SHEARER

United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN, (UPI)—The forty-third Texas legislature will probably live in history as the one that brought back beer, horse-race betting and prize-fighting to Texas.

Legislation of that nature caught the popular fancy.

It will also be remembered as the one that ended a quarter century of increasing state government costs and put them back to three-fourths of what they have been for the past two years. It is first under the present constitution for the past two years.

In a writer of more than 1,500 bills, few major ones, went through to become law.

Oil troubled rather than smoothed the waters throughout the more than four months of the session. Both majors and independents maintain large lobbies.

Victory went to the little fellows.

Starting out with demand for a new commission to promote oil production, the oil interests ended up with the oil commission and an estimated $12,000,000 annual tax on the industry.

Near Victory.

Once the majors seemed on the verge of victory, The House had passed a new oil commission bill. This bill authorized Governor Miriam A. Ferguson appoint a new body which could advise the 700,000 barrels a day production. The oil commission had authorized against any objections.

There was hilarity in Austin that night. Ernest O. Thompson, railroad commissioner and only the appar effect of drinking prevented his resentment of remarks Charles F. Roeser, head of the Text straint was not enough. Government must not be content to keep industry from doing certain things; it must be ready to persuade or force industry to do things. Its control must be positive rather than negative.

This, at any rate, seems to be the second Rooseveltian philosophy, as embodied in the legislation which is now taking shape. It is marked contrast to the creed of the first Roosevelt; but it is worth noting that it is a perfectly logical development from it. The contrast is more apparent than real. Once government has begun to exercise supervision over private business it can not turn back.

as Oil and Gas Conservation association.

Midnight saw the oil forces still jubilant over an apparent victory. A group was in the lobby of the Stephen F. Austin Hotel. Rep. Gordon Burns of Huntsville, vigorous opponent of the new oil commission and bitter denouncer of oil tactics came into the hotel. Soon there was a founding mass of men, kicking, biting, gouging and striking. Burns was sent to a hospital. Roeser emerged with a fast blackening eye.

The house of representatives ordered an investigation and reprimanded Roeser, W. C. Straube of Corsicana and Bryan W. Payne of Tyler. A few days later the senate killed the oil commission bill.

Two Cent Oil Tax

Later the house adopted a two-cent-a-barrel oil tax proposed by Burns' house seatmate and roommate, Rep. Alfred Daniel of Crockett. The senate passed it and added an intangible asset tax on oil pipe lines. The house then succeeded.

Other bills were more successful. A sales tax, advocated by the governor and pushed by the administration with all its force, failed before the protest of merchants and organizations warning the legislature of its effects. A state income tax passed the house. A senate committee killed it.

Lobbies got more prominence than usual. Rep. George W. Winkham of Mexico, secured enforcement of the rule barring lobbyists and others from the floor during sessions. He secured a resolution for registration of lobbyists. A few of the minor ones put down their names. There was an unofficial registry, however. It was compiled by Roscoe Fleming, Fort Worth newspaper man.

First came the emergency car-Banks and then insurance companies got moratoriums. "First Monday" sales days at court houses were stopped in successive months by emergency acts.

Moratorium

Then came a general real estate moratorium under which forced sales may be enjoined for 180 days and on re-application for another six months. Its validity now is before the Third Court of Civil Appeals.

In this part of the legislative session there was enacted also tax postponement measures.

Along with this portion of the session went a fight to the finish between Governor Miriam A. Ferguson, advised by her husband, and the state senate over appointments. It was a draw.

The governor blocked confirmation of late appointments made by her predecessor filling the board of education. She failed to get two-thirds of the senators to confirm her appointment of Frank Denison of Temple to the state highway commission. Whether a majority vote to confirm entitles him to the office was decided against Denison by the ninety-eighth district court in a ruling upheld by the third court of civil appeals May 29.

Next came the reformation era; then the liberalization era.

Many of the session's problems were passed on to the people for referendum.

On next August 26, they are asked to pass upon:

Amendment of the state constitution to make effective the statute legalizing 3.2 beer.

Repeal

Selection of delegates who will decide whether Texas shall ratify federal prohibition repeal.

Issuance of $20,000,000 state relief bonds.

Amendment to permit counties of 25,000 population or more to adopt home rule charters.

Amendment to include properties in counties with state tax exemptions to participate in the tax exemption on residence homesteads up to $3,000 value.

On November 6, 1934, the people are asked by the legislature to decide upon:

Abolition of the fee system of paying officials.

Permitting the legislature to consolidate counties.

Classification of property for tax purposes, with a view to taxing mortgages and notes.

Permitting municipal officers to have four years a term.

Permitting home rule cities to make charter changes annually.

Permitting reorganization of county government. (This amendment is distinct from the county home rule amendment to be voted upon August 26.)

Closing days of the session saw a disposition to let out-of-state repeal of state prohibition rest until a decision has been made on federal repeal.

Dr. Hunt Addresses Class

We brook was fortunate, this year, in securing Dr. J. W. Hunt, president of McMurry College of Abilene to deliver the commencement address. His subject was "Nothing Without God" and in his characteristic manner, he delivered a wonderful address. He pictured to the class the grandeur of the mountains whose ice covered summits pierce the clouds and whose symmetrical canyons fall away in sheer walls of granite, deep and yawning and showed how these awe inspiring scenes speak to the soul of man of the God whose Law they are. He told of masters in art and in music and of scientists that each of these have been inspired by the thought of a deity. His address was thoroughly enjoyed by the class as well as the large concourse of friends who had gathered to witness this final act in their high school career.

Five students received diplomas. These were: Garth Fugusy, Kebs Skelton, Ocella Berry, Emily Conway and Virginia Callan. Garth Fugusy was salutatorian and Virginia Callan valedictorian.

School Fears New Credit

Westbrook is proud of the accomplishments of her school this year. This has been a very satisfactory year in many respects. A fine spirit of cooperation has prevailed throughout the school and entire community. Many things have been accomplished which have been a greater credit to the school than the development of English.

One of the most notable things accomplished has been in the securing of additional credit in the department of English. Through the faithful and efficient work of Miss Cora Ott and her pupils Westbrook enjoys the distinction of having the fourth unit in English as an ordinary achievement for a school of this size.

It is an extraordinary achievement for a school of this size to have been able to secure the fourth unit in English. This place Westbrook is proud of and will be proud of in the future.

Dizzy Dean Pitches Cardinals Into First Place in National

CHICAGO—The St. Louis Cardinals mounted to first place in the National League Thursday on the strength of a fine job of pitching by Dizzy Dean who held the Chicago Cubs to six hits, scoring a 6 to 1 triumph.

The victory was the high flying Cardinals' seventh straight and their twelfth in thirteen starts and hoisted them above the idle Pittsburgh Pirates by a margin of four percentage points.

Dean held the Cubs scoreless until the ninth inning. Three of the half dozen blows of him were made during the last two frames. Meanwhile, the Cardinals worked on Guy Bush and Roy Henshaw for eleven hits and benefited by five fielding misplays.

Les Douscher, not usually an important hitter, paced St. Louis with a double, two singles and a walk for a perfect day at the plate. He scored one run and drove in two.

St. Louis ... 000 100 140-6 11 0 Chicago ... 000 000 001-1 6 5 Dean and O'Farrell; Bush, Henshaw, Nelson and Hartnett.

PHILADELPHIA—Steady pitching by Freddy Fitzsimmons coupled with solid hitting by his mates against Jim Elliott gave the New York Giants a 7 to 2 victory over the Phillies in the opener of a four-game series Thursday. It was New York's fifth straight over the Phils this season.

Homer Peel and Gus Mancuso led the attack with three hits apiece.

SHREVEPORT, La.—The International Radio Corporation, of which Sam D. Hunter, local oil man and capitalist, is the chief stockholder, has purchased the facilities of radio station KWKH, owned and operated by the Hello World Broadcasting company, organized by W. K. Henderson, for $50,000. It was authentically announced.

The purchase was made subject to approval of the federal radio commission, before whom a hearing will be held in Washington on June 14. With the sale of the facilities, the Hello World Broadcasting company voluntarily assigns the present frequency of 850 kilocycles now being used by the station.

The International Radio Corporation is composed of T. G. Roberts, president, and John T. Guyton and S. D. Klema and others officers.

The sale of radio station KWKH means the retirement of W. K. Henderson from before the microphone, according to Mr. Roberts, who said that the sale of the station carried with the broadcast license.

Business Control In New Form

To get a good understanding of the new relationship between business and government, all you have to do is contrast attitude of President Franklin D. Roosevelt with that of his distinguished predecessor, T. R.

Each took office at a time when the public was deeply dissatisfied with the way in which social values were being ignored by the industrial and financial community. In each case the ordinary man felt that some realignment was necessary, although there was not in either case any general agreement on what should be done. And in each case there was a radical fringe eager to move along paths which might be theoretically admirable but were pretty likely to be disastrous in practice.

Theodore Roosevelt insisted that what had happened in business and industry was a direct concern of the government. He saw that society in self-protection must do something to restrain the profit motive, and the anti-trust laws came into his hands as the most effective weapon.

There was little talk then of making the government a partner in industry—although it is interesting to remember that T. R. was not afraid to threaten the anthracite coal barons with direct government intervention. It was his theory that the government could do all that was needed by exercising its supervision from the outside. Business was to be allowed to go its own way but Uncle Sam was to be alert in the background with a big stick ready to rap any head that got too far out of line.

That theory was followed without important changes up to this year; but by the spring of 1933 it had become painfully evident that more than that was needed. Simple re-

NEW YORK (UP)—Our own Indianapolis speedway round-up: Captain Eddie Rickenbacker's work in the pinch when the drivers with 100,000 customers in the stands and the race overdue, refused to drive unless Howdy Wilcox was allowed to start. His patience exhausted, Rickenbacker walked into the sullen group and laid down the law. "There's going to be a race today if I have to drive myself. Wilcox is out. Get back in your cars—the race is on! A minute later it was... the one-time ace of aces is the kind of guy you'd call on if you needed someone to bat for Ruth. The electric tension in the pits during those seconds between the time a driver signalled he was coming in and his arrival... the same sort of fierce excitement that you find on a college football bench in a tight game.

Wondering how Babe Stupp felt when, after repeated refusals to stop for gas, he ran out of fuel and stalled half a mile from help... He must have felt like kicking his chubby self clean to his native California, for at the time he was two laps out in front... that heart-stopping moment at the southwest turn when Lester Spangler made the guess that cost him his life... smoking along at better than a hundred, Spangler saw the car directly in front of him whip into a dizzy spin... Spangler chose to whip to the top of the bank and go around... the gasp from the spectators when the spinning car suddenly shot straight in front of Spangler and then realized the youngster had pulled the shorter straw... walking with this same Spangler to a spot back of his garage the day before, for a look at the mother rabbit and six bunnies he was raising... and his reply when we asked if he was raising them for their lucky feet: "Naw, I don't need any charms. I'm just naturally a lucky man."

The magnificent and amazing manner in which information on the race is gathered and collected for the gentlemen of the press... although the 500-mile grind is the most complicated sports event in the country, it's easier to cover than a horsehoe pitching contest... The riding mechanic who got sea sick during the race and rode miles and miles slumped down in his seat, totally oblivious to everything going on around him... The relief we felt when Gar Wood waved the checkered flag ending it all.

New Way Ends Body Odor by Removing Cause, Stale Perspiration Curds, with Deep-Pore Cleansing

THERE are certain people who refuse to believe that a medicine is any good unless it is strong and bitter! Perhaps you have thought this about remedies for Body Odor—that you could correct it only with a strong and evil-smelling soap... Now happily the cause of body odor—Stale Perspiration Curds—has been discovered. And research chemists have developed a quick and odorless way to end it instantly. Stale perspiration contains calcium, salt and particles of fat. The thick and sticky lather of most ordinary toilet soaps is unsuited chemically to mix with this waste material and set it free. Instead, it hardens into clogging curds! That's why deep-pore cleansing is needed to remove the objectionable curds—and it is a scientific fact that there is only one way to accomplish this. by buying QUALITY!

It all started about a year ago when her best friend went shopping with her. They went from store to store searching for "Bargains" until her best friend became disgusted and with simple, common-sense talk convinced her that to buy quality was actually cheaper than to buy "cheap" merchandise. Her friend explained to her that she could save time and money by reading the advertisements in The Daily Herald. She now makes up her shopping list before she leaves home and saves half of her shopping time in the hot weather.

Back in those days she and her family had only the things they actually needed. Today, after she has learned to buy quality, she does not have to replace the children's clothing, her wardrobe or her own apparel, nearly so often and they have much more than they did a year ago for now when she buys a new garment it's an addition to their wardrobe instead of a replacement . . . and too, they've just traded-in their 1929 model car for a brand new 1933 model . . . about a month ago they bought that new living room suite they had needed for so long . . . and all because, just a year ago, she learned to read the advertisements and to insist on quality.

She Is Captured By Giant Beast

Fay Wray, above, stars with Bruce Cabot in "King Kong," showing at the R & R theatre Saturday night at the 11:30 o'clock matinee and Sunday and Monday.

"King Kong," the thrillingly imaginative story of how a prehistoric ape is discovered, taken captive and brought to New York, where it escapes its captors, throws the metropolis in a panic and creates tremendous devastation is due at the Ritz theater commencing Sunday.

Fay Wray plays the girl whose frail, golden beauty so entrances the great beast that his heart for the first time in its seven million years of existence, for Kong has lived since the Jurassic Age, knows an emotion of tenderness and love. It is on the girl's behalf that he fights prehistoric dinosaurs and later panics a great city.

Robert Armstrong and Bruce Cabot portray the two adventurers seeking to get a motion picture of a legendary ape and to make a drama out of his reactions to the beauty of a woman. This modern thrill adventure is from an idea conceived by Edgar Wallace and Merian C. Cooper. It is a Cooper-Scheidt production, and once again, as in "Guns" and "Chang," they have startled and thrilled the world.

Agricultural Agent Reviews Problems Of Farmer, And New Federal Farm Legislation

O. P. Griffin, farm demonstration agent for Howard, Martin and Midland counties, has prepared a review of the new farm legislation and farm readjustment plans, which is herewith presented: Causes Leading Up To Present Situation With prices that have prevailed for farm products the past few years, the farmer has no buying power. With a decreased market for manufactured products factories could not run full time. Unemployment of millions resulted thus destroying their buying power. Every step led the world deeper and deeper into the depression. People could not pay their debts and there was danger of foreclosure and farmers and others losing their homes. Taxes could not be paid, unemployment led to extremely low wage scales, sweat shops sprang up, and their competition today is undermining our industries.

At the beginning of the present administration we were going deeper and deeper into the economic depression and no leader had pointed a way to get out. Banks were failing by the hundreds. Farmers were preventing foreclosures of mortgages by force, a farmers holiday was threatened and in many places picketing of highways resulted in bloodshed. To put it in the words of Mr. Slaughter of Yale, America was facing a danger worse than the world war. The Farmer And Other Classes The farmers alone did not cause the depression, nor can they alone remedy it. It will take the cooperation of all classes working together to turn the tide. The farmer is not the only producer. A bale of cotton as it leaves the farm is only a potential production. Before it can bless humanity this cotton must be ginned, transported to the mills, be spun into thread and woven into fabrics. The men working at the gin, or the railroad, at the spinning mill, or the loom are "Producers" in just as true a sense as the farmer is. This is true of all our production. The men working in the factories of full kinds, running trucks, or working on the railroads or engaged in commerce or banking are all producers and must be taken into account in any plan to end the depression.

The Congress and the administration at Washington have not hoped to end the depression by legislation. They have worked out a plan and made it legal. It is up to the citizens of this country to furnish the leadership and put these plans into execution. Secretary Wallace says "We must either solve our social and economic problems or resort to the law of the jungle."

Some Provisions Of The Farm Bill The Farm Bill does not attempt to deal with details. Unusual powers are granted to the Secretary of Agriculture and to President Roosevelt. The method of procedure is only outlined and is subject to change at any time, if it is shown the plan is not working right.

There are three important parts to this bill. One gives the president power to regulate the amount of money in circulation and to extend or restrict credits.

Another part of the bill takes care of farm mortgages so as to prevent foreclosure for 5 years. It lowers the interest rate on farm mortgages to 4 1/2 per cent, and provides a way for all farmers to secure this benefit. It also provides a way for farmers to get money to pay taxes on their land. There are also provision for refinancing other farms indebtedness.

But this part of the bill would afford only temporary relief from debts. These debts and taxes must be paid some day. The third or rather the first part of the bill sets out a plan for raising the price of farm products. This is to be done by one or more of several ways made possible by the bill. The administration may place a tax on cotton, wheat, etc. now in storage sufficient to bring the price up to normal, that is, make a bale of cotton high enough to buy as much as it did in normal times. For this purpose a five year period just previous to the World War is taken as normal, and too, the president has the power to inflate the currency if he thinks that will help and is necessary to bring this about.

But this raising of prices artificially must be followed by decreased production or it would be extremely difficult to continue. In order to decrease production this money collected as taxes on cotton now in storage is to be given to the farmers who will cooperate. In order to establish confidence in benefit payments being made, Congress appropriated one hundred million dollars to be used to make the payments until the tax money comes into the treasury. This is one time the farmer who cooperated in controlling production will receive benefits for it as an individual, whether the other fellow cooperates or not, and those who will not cooperate may have to sell their cotton on the world market without protection as to price.

The effect of decreased production on prices is well illustrated by

Farm Adjustment

Along with the national adjustment program it will be necessary to make local adjustments. The farmer's best market is his home and next to that the consumers in his home town. With feed so plentiful it is ridiculous that a large part of the meat supply of Howard county as well as being purchased from other sections. But it will require the cooperation of both county and city people to bring about a change even of so simple a matter as this. There must be adjustments made in production. If pigs are fast fed until they are about six months old and then butchered a high quality meat is produced at the lowest cost. But in order to cure meat that is fed in this way cold storage will be necessary; for only a few of the pigs will mature at the time when the weather will permit of butchering. But it is entirely practical for farmers living within ten or twelve miles of town to butcher hogs at any time of the year and cure the meat if they can have the cooperation of the storage company. When the right kind of country hams, bacon, picnics, etc., are produced and properly cured they will find a ready market to the extent that they are needed in town. This is only one item of local production that can be made to serve the people who live in town and at the same time give the farmer another way to increase his cash income. There are many others. A well planned program should be worked out, and it should be borne in mind that it is not for the purpose of "helping the farmer." For if markets continue as they now are a few more years the farmer will take care of himself. But as the farmer's buying power is increased all other classes are benefited. Therefore the so called "Farm Adjustment" is of universal interest and should receive support from everyone for the benefit of all.

WHIRLIGIG—Continued from page 1. tion that the League Council settled the Peru-Colombian dispute on the upper Amazon. Few here paid any attention to the statement. But the diplomatic corps started buzzing. Some thought it a most significant international step. We have not been on speaking terms with the League. We have heretofore strongly resented any attempt of the League to handle affairs on this continent. We have a Monroe Doctrine which gives us that right. Now we not only speak to the League but are gratified she did something we always before resented. That is only one significant indication we may have a different feeling for the League from now on. When the Republicans were in power they were very cautious on that subject. Whenever they were compelled to deal with the League on opium or whatnot it was always made clear that we had our fingers crossed. That day is gone. Raile—Rail officials are dead set against the labor amendments to the pending reorganization legislation. They have told their boys in Congress that they would rather have the bill killed than accept the labor clauses. That makes the situation strained. The labor officials have already told their people not to let the bill pass unless those amendments are in. The rail crowd figures it can get along well enough without the bill. The roads are beginning to come back. Reports are around in financial quarters that the Baltimore and Ohio already is out of the red. Others have improved their position materially. Freight rates of the brain trust is working on some railroad reorganization schemes independent of the bill. He may arrange to put as many roads as possible through the reorganization wringer. The E. C. rules give the administra-

as required. Such an emergency is unlikely to develop. The best opinion holds that a billion dollars or more could be floated without blinking an eyelash. But the Federal Reserve doesn't want to commit itself too far in other directions until it knows definitely it will not be needed as a life-saver. The government has a certificate issue of $272,000,000 coming due on June 14th. A bond issue of $600,000,000 or more is being discussed to replace it on that day.

Sprague—Professor O. M. W. Sprague, who will have a lot to do with currency problems, differ from most of his fellow economists in one respect. He doesn't like lobbies. He has a reputation as a realist and is said to adapt himself quickly to unusual problems. His background is conservative but there is no guarantee he will act that way. He is credited on the inside as the man who really worked out the mechanics of the original British stabilization fund.

Taxes—The fast thinkers in Wall street have already opted out a plan to escape the extra burden if consolidated income tax returns are abolished. In cases where top companies own their subsidiaries it would simply be a matter of changing their stock interest in the subsidiaries to a debt relation. You don't have to pay taxes on debts. Utility groups are fighting the new tax plan to limit under-company. Most of them haven't the nerve to peak out in their own names, but are circulating their security holders and employees. They tell them what terrible things will happen to their jobs and incomes if the new taxes go through and urge them to protest as individuals to their representatives. A local expert in tax matters states that fully 20 per cent of people gainfully employed escaped paying an income tax entirely. He adds that the only possible cure for this condition is to abolish tax-exempt securities and see no likelihood of that because of political complications.

Notes—Chinese resistance to the Japs was so weak in Jehol that our officials have an idea the Chinese sold out. Their defense of Peiping was nothing remarkable but it appears they put up a somewhat better stand there. Even the Chinese newspapers scented something was wrong when the Japs were signed. It was probably just a little Oriental diplomacy in which palm-softening is always an important part. In connection with Hull's statement to the League, both he and Mr. Roosevelt were strong League supporters when that subject was an issue in 1920. Our officials here believe the Japs will keep things quiet in the Far East at least until the London Economic Conference is over. Former State Secretary Stimson's recent unexplained conference with Mr. Roosevelt was on Far Eastern questions. Mr. Roosevelt highly respects Mr. Stimson's views on that subject.

Irony—New York financiers see irony in the British loan to France. The truth is that Britain is now reeling to France some of the funds which French citizens stipulated to store away in Britain. This cross-channel hoarding causes the French government anxious moments.

AUDIT—Continued from page 1. purchase of bonds added a figure to general fund disbursements that exceeded total revenue by $731,92. but expenditures for scheduled purposes were well under revenues. Total due from delinquent bills for the years 1925-1932 included $218,000. Other liabilities amount to $2,467,877, approximately two-thirds of which must be paid during the ensuing year. Meter deposits, to insure payment of water accounts, was given by the auditor as $10,142.25. Accrued revenues for the water and sewer departments is $19,371 and $2,938.24 respectively. At the close of the fiscal year, investments for interest and sinking fund purposes were $16,500, with an additional $3,000 having been added recently. Of the 1932 tax roll, $5,450.59 will not become delinquent before July 1, the amount representing the balance due by tax payers who took advantage of the split payment plan authorized by the commission. Transferred—The remainder of the 1932 roll, on which no payment was made, has been transferred to the delinquent roll in the amount of $36,237.21. Total due from delinquent bills for the years 1925-1932 included $22,437.85. Since 1925 there has been in excess of $14,000 paid against back taxes aggregating more than $96,000. Where delinquent taxes increased more than 100 percent in 1931, they showed only a 1-1/2 gain last year. Total assets were given as $1,273,779.23, with surplus of $622,292.21. Inspection of depository bonds and securities thereon revealed the bond of each depository is in excess of the funds on deposit in each. Deposits are divided almost equally among the West Texas National, First National, and State National banks of Big Spring.

HOME TOWN—Continued from page 1. any person how or why he ought to invest his money. We are simply pointing out the inestimable value of this industry, and the fact that conditions are such that we are in danger of losing it. And that danger is, we are fully convinced, very real. We are in danger of losing it because the same problems confronting a majority of men in all lines of business confront J. S. Cosden. He, like thousands of others, has the ability, and the experience, to successfully operate once he gets started again. The starting process is the big problem. The problem confronting Mr. Cosden is, also, similar to that facing the average Big Spring citizen. Mr. Cosden needed no local capital to help build the old plant here in 1929. But if he had needed it, he could have gotten it without any delay because there was plenty of it around here. Now, Mr. Cosden does need local capital badly. And, it is just as "badly" scarce. The only answer, if we have the proposition clearly reviewed, is that sacrifices are going to have to be made if this industry becomes permanent for Big Spring. Sacrifices are being made and will continue to be made by Mr. Cosden and associates until this project either is finished or found to be impossible of realization. Sacrifices are going to have to be made by those who invest in the Cosden Corporation and thus provide the cash with which to rebuild the refinery. Josh Cosden is known by all who have had dealings with him to be one who never forgets a favor or a friendly gesture. If Big Spring shows him, as to her very limit in manifesting that she really does value this industry and wishes to do its part to aid it, then Josh Cosden will always be appreciative. He is one who will "ride" with those who "ride" with him. If Big Spring has a part in making possible the rehabilitation and future success of the Cosden Oil Corporation's operations, Big Spring will always have the Josh Cosden one whose friendship and trust will be worth a very great deal. When he succeeds and thrives, Big Spring will go upward with him. And, there are plenty of men who occupy the highest posts in the oil industry of the world who will lay 4 bet that Josh Cosden will succeed even in the face of the tremendous difficulties that he must overcome.

Baer-Schmeling Fight To Attract Large Audience

United Press Staff Correspondent NEW YORK (UP)—Next Thursday night a new chapter will be written into the chronicle of blows and blood, gold and glory that comprises the history of heavyweight pugilism. Max Schmeling and Maxie Baer will climb through the ropes at Yankee Stadium, weather permitting, for a scheduled 15-round bout, bringing to a climax a daring venture in prize fight promotion. Neither fighter is a champion, and yet their meeting is being arranged in greater splendor and with louder ballyhoo than most recent title bouts. Moreover, it is being staged in the face of opposition from Madison Square Garden, center of the world's boxing industry, and right in the Garden's own balliwick, just when an army of crepe-hangers is mourning that the fight game is virtually dead. According to the promoters, the financial success of the bout already is assured by advance sale of tickets. About 80,000 fans are expected to attend. Schmeling is a former heavyweight champion, and Baer is a promising, colorful young fighter, but the big reason for the bout's apparent success is the fact Jack Dempsey is handling it. Schmeling probably will be a 2 to 1 favorite on the night of the fight, because of his greater experience. Baer went 20 rounds with Paulino Uzuadun at Reno, losing to the Basque wood chopper, but Schmeling chopped Paulino to pieces in a 15-round meeting. Both are hard hitters, and it's doubtful if the fight will go the limit. The Californian will have at least a 15-pound weight advantage. HOSPITAL NOTES Big Spring Hospital Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Three Indicted For Goldthwaite Robbery

FORT WORTH (UP)—Ranger Captain H. T. Odneal announced indictments had been returned at Goldthwaite against three men in the $785 robbery of the Priddy State Bank last March 31. Wanda Stewart, Cecil Gregg and Ed Schaefer, now held in a California jail on charges of robbery in that state, were named in sealed indictments returned last week. Knowledge of the indictment was withheld pending the arrest of Glenn Boyle, alias Ted Rogers of Cleburne, an alleged accomplice. He now is in jail at Goldthwaite, and charges have been filed against him, rangers said. A single clue led to the roundup of the suspected bandits by Captain Odneal and Rangers Sid Kelso and Leon Hanna. A shotgun left behind by the robbers at Priddy was identified as one stolen in California.

Jury No-Bills Man On Accusation Of Bigamy

FORT WORTH (UP)—Peace and happiness returned to the Garden of Eden, truck farming area near Birdville. Leonard Collins and Bertha, his childhood wife, were no-billed by the county grand jury here on a bigamy charge filed by Coy Lindsey, who claimed his marriage to the 15-year-old bride two years ago had not been annulled. The American Offer Amended

For some time there has been a resolution before Congress which would have authorized the President to join with other powers in prohibiting the export of arms and munitions to any nation which he considered a menace to world peace. The offer recently made at Geneva by the Administration through Mr. Davis does not literally depend upon this resolution. But practically it does. The peoples of Europe would regard the offer as of little value if all that it meant was that Congress would in each case have to make the decision as to whether the United States would or would not assist the blockade against the "aggressor." The Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate has now reported the resolution with an amendment which provides that the President may lay an embargo only against all the parties in the conflict. He may not single out the aggressor nation, lay an embargo against it, and continue to let arms and munitions be shipped to it opponents. Thus the Senate Committee has in effect refused to give the President power to join in the so-called sanctions of peace, and has refused to let him, by the judge to whether the United States should be neutral. For all practical purposes the amended resolution vetoes the offer recently made at Geneva. The offer to "sanction" would still remain, but the offer to do something after the consultation is virtually nullified. For under the resolution as it now reads the American offer could be carried into effect only by act of Congress in each particular case. To my mind it seems clear that to give the President the power to judge which is the aggressor nation and to join in punishing it is almost indistinguishable from giving him the power to declare war. How true this is was borne in upon me last winter when I happened to be at Geneva in the critical days of the Manchurian affair. The sentiment of the smaller powers in the League was strongly in favor of declaring that Japan was the aggressor and of proceeding to act under Article XVI of the League Covenant. What prevented this action was that Great Britain would have had to use her navy to apply the blockade, and Great Britain had no appetite for war with Japan. Now if at that time the United States had been under obligation to identify the aggressor in that dispute and then to lay an embargo against Japan, the whole responsibility in the Orient would inevitably have been concentrated on us. The last and the decisive word would have been ours. If we refused to declare Japan the aggressor the other great powers would have said, as in fact they did say, that they could not act under the Covenant. If, on the other hand, we did declare Japan the aggressor, it would have been the United States which had in reality set the blockade in motion, and from the Japanese point of view we should have become the principal enemy. This practical demonstration convinced me of something which I had previously only dimly suspected: namely, that to stand outside the League and yet to accept the final responsibility as to whether the League should apply force, was the most dangerous way possible of attempting to organize international peace. We should be creating a situation in which responsibility would not be distributed, as President Wilson originally conceived it, among the members of the League, but where the whole responsibility for what the League did or failed to do was placed upon the United States. In any actual crisis the President would have to decide what should be done at Geneva.

it not a sound foreign policy, as I see it, to attempt to buy the specific disarmament of any nation with a vague and uncertain commitment as to what we might do in the future. But even if the responsibility were not too great a one for the United States to assume, it is certainly too great a one for any President alone to assume. The abrogation of neutrality is so near to being an act of war and in great conflicts so certainly leads to war, that the decision should be fully and openly shared with Congress. If the reasons for intervening are not clear enough to convince Congress, they are not clear enough to justify the President. And if, with the issues unclarified, the American people not understanding their interest in the quarrel, the United States were drawn into war, the President might easily find himself with his own people divided. The trouble with the American attempt for the past 12 months to force some measure of land disarmament in Europe has been that, until the underlying political conflicts are mitigated, the armistices will reduce only if they receive equivalent guarantees. The recent offer at Geneva has been an attempt to provide them with such guarantees, and yet to keep a free hand for the United States. It can not be done. A guarantee which meant anything in Europe would mean the abandonment of complete liberty of action by the United States. A really free hand is no guarantee and no substitute, therefore, for armistices. This dilemma can not be resolved by a diplomatic formula which might mean one thing in Europe and another in the United States. It is far better to be precise in these matters, to define exactly what we will do and what we will not do, and to raise no false hopes as to what commitments the American people in their present state of mind are really prepared to make and maintain.

The responsibility is too great a one for the United States to assume. As regards the Far East it would, as I have already indicated, isolate us as the principal enemy. As regards the continent of Europe, we should if we persuaded nations to disarm because they expect our help, be driven into a position where any injury they suffered because they were insufficiently armed was chargeable to us.
