50 COAL MINES DESTROYED IN GREAT BRITAIN

Misery and Want Stalking Abroad as Industrial Structure Crumbles.

By LLOYD ALLEN
United Press Correspondent.
LONDON, April 30.—Fifty coal mines already have been destroyed by flooding. It was officially announced here today. This indicates the extent to which the entire structure of British industry is collapsing under pressure of the miners' strike.

Further evidence of the growing industrial paralysis was shown in these conditions:

Only thirteen steel furnaces are operating out of a total of 500. Train schedules have been reduced 80 per cent.

All express trains have been discontinued.

A curfew law is being planned for all lighting.

Daylight saving is to be extended another hour.

The country is expected soon to be dependent upon foreign coal.

A cargo of German coal shipped via Holland was unloaded at Ipswich under police protection.

Misery and hunger are growing as the business depression increases.

The United States gunboat that lived in Turkey throughout the war—saw British raid Constantinople harbor in 1916—caught in fire of Turkish artillery—The story of the French submarine, Turquoise, captured by Turks—The crew of the Scorpion, first American to draw German blood—CONSTANTINOPLE, March 28. (Delayed)—The Scorpion, veteran of the Spanish-American war, interned here when the United States joined the allies, and now Admiral Bristol's flagship, has been ordered sold by the navy department. The Scorpion has been stationed here much of the time since 1908, when it became a dispatch boat for the American embassy. It is a converted yacht.

When the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau made their sensational escape at the opening of the war, and raced down the Mediterranean to deliver themselves to Turkey, it was an American grand stand which watched the thrilling finish in the harbor of Constantinople.

From the deck of the gunboat Scorpion, flying the flag of the United States, the officers and men, with no little amusement, beheld the evidently Teutonic crews of the erstwhile ships of the German navy, hastily donning their German caps and donning Moslem fezzes as the Turkish flag was hoisted to the masthead.

United Press Correspondent.

They found six cases of beer and two barrels of mash which were destroyed. The place was deserted when found, and no arrests, according to the latest information obtained, have been made.

MAN BLOWS HIS BRAINS OUT AT LOCAL HOTEL

E. L. Nevitt and Woman Companion Had Been "Jakin" It Up Four Days.

In a drunken frenzy, superinduced by four days of drinking "jake," during which he saw terrible and pursuing creatures, L. E. Nevitt Friday afternoon about 5 o'clock placed a pistol to his right temple and sent a bullet through his head in his room at the Bernardo hotel. The shooting occurred in the presence of a woman signing herself as Mrs. T. D. Thomas, but whose rightful name she afterwards said is Alva Rhoades of Amarillo, who had been with Nevitt, she testified, since April 13. At the inquest held by Justice of the Peace McFatter she testified in detail how the man met his death and to the fact that the pair had been on a four-day "jake" jag. She was absolved from blame in the matter and Saturday Justice of the Peace McFatter will render a verdict that Nevitt came to his death by a gun in his own hand, wielded at a moment when he was not in a responsible mental condition.

NEWSPAPER REPORTS PRIZE FIGHT BY AID OF WIRELESS PHONE

By Associated Press.
PITTSBURGH, April 30.—Unique in the annals of journalism and newspaper enterprise was the achievement recently of the Pittsburgh Post which reported by wireless telephone the fight of Johnny Ray, of Pittsburgh, and Johnny Dundee, of New York, lightweights. Instantaneous news service of the fight, round by round and blow by blow was given the Post reporter at the ringside, enabling the paper to have an extra on the streets a few minutes after the last gong sounded.

Locks Door.

She declared that he finally said he would give it to her if she would unlock the door, which she did, but he still would not give up the weapon. She coaxed him for it again. "I will give it to you," she asserted that he said and looked queer when he said it like he might have meant that he would shoot her.

Goes Wild.

"I rang for the porter then; Nevitt saw me and went wild. I knew he was going to kill himself and I ran for the door and screamed; I did not want to see it; before I could get the door open he fired the shot and I ran into the hall screaming, then the others came."

Acquaintance Slight.

The man's companion knows little about Nevitt's past or his people. She told John E. Milford, who is holding the body, that she thought he had a wife at Santa Fe, New Mexico, and she also thought that he told her one time that he had been fire chief at Breckenridge.

MARSHAL FOCH HASN'T TIME TO READ HIS MAIL

Gets Bushel a Day From All Classes, Friends and Enemies.

PARIS, April 29.—Marshal Foch says that one of his great regrets is that he has not time enough to properly digest the big mail he receives. Like most men in his conspicuous position, he gets daily a batch of correspondence that keeps his aids busy. Friends and enemies alike write him profusely and their letters run the whole gamut from ecstatic adulation to frenzied vituperation. This morning he received a dozen letters from the same person, an American. All were registered. The American must have known that this class of mail gets first attention by the marshal's staff.

Nearly every mail brings a letter from some pro-German in America inviting the marshal to have himself hanged or to go to the place of fire and brimstone. By every mail someone sends him an ode or a song written in his honor.

Mothers write him informing him they have named the finest baby in the world after him, and American fathers send word that they would on some anniversary or other have taken a good drink in his honor.

had the United States not gone dry. Authors send him their books and inventors forward him descriptions of wonderful new engines of destruction or schemes to suppress war. The marshal's advice is asked on all the subjects with which he says he is least familiar.

What has amused him most lately was a post card received from San Francisco with the photographs of two pickanninies and the inscription, "Here's Young America."

DOCTOR SAVES MAN'S LIFE BY WIRELESS WHILE ABOARD SHIP

GALVESTON, April 29.—Medical advice by wireless saved the life of R. C. Pomeroy, an assistant engineer aboard the U. S. S. Oklahoma City, according to word received by her agents here. The "medical attention" was given by Dr. Anson D. Ingalls of the steamship Black Arrow, while the two vessels were about 85 miles apart.

Suspecting from the wireless description of symptoms that his patient has either angina pectoris or pleurisy, Dr. Ingalls so fought his case that a stop at Bermuda was unnecessary and the Oklahoma City reached Charleston, S. C., with Pomeroy safely on the road to convalescence.

THROWING HANDBILLS IN STREETS UNLAWFUL

To scatter handbills over the streets is unlawful according to an ordinance that is now in effect, and the city commission will make an effort to have the practice stopped.

Just whether they will issue an order to have the ordinance rigidly enforced is not known. However, it is said that the practice must stop.

It is pointed out that from this source much paper gathers in the streets and is both unsightly and requires much time to remove it.

According to Professor W. H. Pickering there are winds on Mars with a velocity of 230 miles an hour.

'DRUG-STORE PINKS' AGAIN APPEAR TO ANSWER ACCUSATIONS

Two girls who were the heroines in the X. Y. Z. $1000 steal which was the aftermath of a liquor lark at a local hotel a few days ago were again in the police station Saturday morning. Also they were still red of lip and pink of cheek—drug store red and pink.

A man who admits that "he looked on the corn when it was white," accused one of them of entering his room the night before and stealing $90.

The girl, in tearful protestations, disclaimed her innocence. She never saw the man before, she said; while he declared that she did take the money, and offered to withdraw the charges and to let her go if she would just produce four $20 bills which he said his roll contained.

Only one of the girls is being "detained." The other is not implicated.

UNLAWFUL TO SPEND COUNTY'S MONEY FOR AUTOS FOR OFFICERS

AUSTIN, April 29.—It is unlawful for a commissioners' court to expend county funds to furnish either of the following county officers with an automobile: Judge, each of the four commissioners, sheriff and superintendent of public instruction. This opinion was given by the attorney general's department in answer to a query from F. A. Tompkins, auditor of Nueces county. Mr. Tompkins said that it had been the custom to furnish each of the county officers with an automobile.

The opinion also held that the members of the commissioners' court and their bondsmen are liable to the county for the unlawful expenditures for the automobiles and those receiving the machines are liable to the county.

Go to Church Sunday

The value of any institution in a city is the service it renders to the persons in that city. Its right to live and its right to ask for co-operation of the citizens of that city, depends on the kind of service it renders.

The church is no exception and if true to its founder, Jesus Christ, it must "produce the goods" in a service that will justify its existence. That the church has done a great service to man is unquestioned; but whether it has done its full service may be questioned.

The churches of Ranger are here to serve the community in every way possible in the betterment of the people and the creation of a better environment in which to live.

To fully perform its work the church must have the full co-operation of every one in the city, from the officials and paid servants, through the merchants and business people and all others interested in the welfare of Ranger.

If the church does not have this co-operation its larger mission fails.

The church tries to reach the spiritual, mental and social interest of its people and to this end seeks the hearty co-operation of the citizens of Ranger. It calls upon all members of any denomination, whose membership is elsewhere, to line up with the church of their choice at once, and lend themselves to the larger usefulness of the churches in Ranger. You cannot build Ranger without churches.

TINKER BOB STORIES

By CARLYSLE H. HOLCOMB.

JERRY R RETURNS. MR. SPARROW IN TROUBLE. "Chip, chip, chip, chip," cried Mr. Sparrow, "that's just the way they all treat me in the forest, O King. I don't understand why it is that I have to endure all of this terrible abuse when I never do anything to anyone. I always stay here all through the winter and then when the birds come back in the spring there is trouble all the time."

"Thief, thief," shouted Jerry, "I can tell you why you are always in trouble. You are always going about looking for it. If you would let other folks alone, they would let you alone. It doesn't pay to meddle with everybody's business for it is a sure sign of trouble." Tinker Bob never said a word, for he knew that Jerry had been in trouble enough times himself to be able to tell Mr. Sparrow all that he needed to know. Silky the Monkey was astonished with the words of Jerry. He didn't know that Jerry was such a good speaker.

He gave Jerry a good pecking on the head. "Thief! That's what you are." "Chip, chip, but I'll have you know that I am no foreigner. This is as much my country as it is yours and I am going to stay here. If there is anything that makes me angry it's to have someone call me a foreigner, so there, take that, and that," and he gave Jerry a good pecking on the head. "I don't intend to let a saucy Jay tell me what I can do." "That's all right," said Jerry, "but you are a foreigner anyway. You came from across the ocean and you came because they wouldn't have you in motor boats. Anyway you will never get this house again."

embassies requesting that all neutral ships, for their own protection, should immediately withdraw from the open harbor.

It was said that the letter had been given to the captain of a Greek tugboat. This assertion, however, has never been verified, nor has a copy of the letter ever been seen. So far as is known it was never delivered. Suspicion exists that it fell into Turkish hands. This suspicion is strengthened by the fact that almost coincidentally several tugboat captains of Hellenic race "disappeared."

It was with a sense of expectancy, quickened by this rumor, that the Scorpion's lookout watched the early morning preparations of the Turkish transports to sail.

The moment for departure had almost arrived when a sudden shout from the quartermaster of the Scorpion brought all hands scrambling on deck.

"British submarine," rang out the cry. Sure enough, heading at full speed for the troop ships, with the rifle of water white around its periscope, was a British submarine.

explosion. A Turkish lighter vanished from the water, and presently fell back again in fragments. A big hole was blown in the side of an empty transport.

The first torpedo was followed almost immediately by a second. The Scorpion's crew watched its white streak as it slid past their gunboat on the port side, headed up the Bosphorus. It went under a small boat and passed on upstream to sink without doing the foe any injury.

Meantime a Turkish torpedo boat, with no little intrepidity, had dashed at full speed toward the hostile visitor, evidently intent upon ramming it. But the British were too quick, and when the Turks reached the point where the submarine had been it was no longer there—submergence had carried it to safe depths.

All the harbor police and patrol boats were rushing around looking for the "sub." Turkish naval officers of high rank grabbed rifles and put out in motor boats, hoping to get a shot at the invader.

The shore artillery continued to rain shells around. Some of the shells menaced the neutral shipping much more seriously than they did the British enemy. "They came so near the Scorpion," said Lieutenant Commander Stewart F. Bryant, one of its officers, "that the men had to be ordered below decks. The Scorpion, in the midst of the excitement, beat all its previous records for getting up steam and shifting position."

Stops Turk Expedition. Nothing more was seen of the submarine, which made its escape without being ordered below decks. GEO. T. HEMMINGSON, City Secretary.

dare venture out with their transports. All the troops were disembarked and the sea expedition to the Dardanelles abandoned. The reinforcements proceeded to the trenches either by rail or on foot.

The Fourth of July was celebrated on the Scorpion in 1916, and one of the interesting features of the celebration was the reading of the Declaration of Independence by an Englishman who was a guest.

Soon thereafter it was assigned a berth in the Golden Horn, between the two bridges which connect Stamboul, the old Turkish quarter, with Pera, the European section. The new position gave the crew an opportunity to watch a daily panorama of ceaseless change and interest. At some hour in the twenty-four a sample of practically every race and tribe on the face of the earth passes over one or other of those bridges. Nowhere can be seen a more amazing array of costumes, bizarre, colorful, oriental.

See Strange Sights. Officers and men of the Scorpion saw the Turkish troops, commanded by German officers, going away to war; they saw the Turkish wounded returning; they saw the British prisoners captured at Gallipoli, marching to the Turk prison camps. Enver Pasha, the Turkish minister of war, attended by his Teuton advisors, was a daily spectacle, speeding over the bridges in his big touring car.

Near by lay the yacht of the fugitive khedive of Egypt, a beautiful vessel. Not far away was the steamship General, the headquarters of the German admiralty staff, which, in reality, directed Turkish operations. Toward the Bosphorus was a pontoon bridge, over which, occasionally, the sultan and his harem could be seen passing in pomp and magnificence.

German submarines were frequently seen. They would go gliding by the Scorpion on their way to the arsenal quays and dry docks. One, it was said, had made the trip from Kiel, sinking two British warships in the Dardanelles en route. An interesting story which our officers could never verify, was told in Constantinople about the French submarine Turquoise, which was captured by the Turks.

Heroic Sacrifice of French. The Moslems could not understand the macher, so they ordered the French engineers to start the engines. The French men started the submerged apparatus and the "sub" dived, carrying French and Turks along with it, never to return.

The first American battles with the Germans were fought, I think, beyond all question by the crew of the Scorpion.

One night two men from the Scorpion were sitting near a large group of sailors from the Breslau and the Goeben. One of the Germans walked ostentatiously past our men, remarking in audible, if broken English:

"The German navy can lick the American navy any time it wants to come out."

"Come out?" shouted one of the Scorpion boys. "Whadayamean come out?" And what are you doing here? Why aren't you out of the Kiel canal with the rest of the schooner sinkers? Take that!"

Shed First German Blood. Biff! So the battle began. "At its height," according to neutral accounts, "seventeen Germans were being smashed by four American fists. Then the Germans threw beer bottles, and the Americans went down."

But the Scorpion's crew drew the first German blood! The Scorpion is still at Constantinople under the command of Admiral and United States High Commissioner Mark L. Bristol, but according to the dispatch at the beginning of this article—received and published since the first writing of the Scorpion story—there is a "For Sale" sign hanging on it.

RANGER TODAY

By WILLIAM A. HART Article I. FIRST IMPRESSIONS

(This is the first of a series of articles on Ranger Today, written for the Times by William A. Hart, field director of the American City Bureau, who is visiting the city. The next will appear tomorrow.)

"The Ranger Camp," they told me when I was coming here, "is down and out."

There were only three things the matter with that statement: Ranger isn't a camp; it isn't down and it isn't out.

And Ranger can't care up on its hind legs and refute that statement any too quickly. Pass the word along, write in your letters, publish it in your dispatches; put the Chamber of Commerce on the job; set it up on a billboard near the railroad station where he who rides may read: "Still going strong."

I came to see an oil camp and I found a modern city, with modern business blocks, wide streets, fine schools and fine residences, a new hotel, a new church recently dedicated and another about ready for dedication. A center of trade, a banking center, in spite of appearances a town still doing more business than many an eastern city a century old.

Local Color. True, there is about the city like a fringe the shacks of the original oil camp. As far as I, as a sight-seer, was concerned, this was a picturesque bit of local color, showing how recent the great boom was that spread the name of Ranger all over the country.

I had no feeling that these shacks were a blot on so new a city. Nor that their use still as dwelling places was a reflection on its modernness. I realize that it will be only a matter of time when all these shacks will disappear, ruled out of existence by sanitary and building codes, the pressure of insurance risks and that rise in the scale of living which is as instinctive in an American as growth is to a tree.

Such codes as I have referred to, along with more good roads, the modern high school projected, and other improvements, are only a matter of months.

Like Young Couple. Ranger is in the position of a young couple newly gone to housekeeping and faced with the necessity of having all at once the same equipment as neighbors who are getting ready to celebrate their golden wedding. Some things must wait.

I found myself, a few minutes after arriving, in a modern and beautiful hotel. There are cities of fifty and a hundred thousand all over America which would like to have that hotel. In those cities they assure me that the greatest need of any city is a good hotel. Ranger has several, and from that single fact has its future in part assured.

Out on the street, a little later, I began to put questions. The first four men I met replied that they had been in the city only two weeks or less. One had driven in from a neighboring oil field to spend Sunday. Ranger has lost some people, yes, but there are new ones arriving every day. I know it, I have met them.

The real trouble with the regular Rangerite is that he is constantly comparing the present with boom days. Of course it isn't boom time now. It is the way with booms that they have an end. But there has been many a boom that was like a battle charge. After the trenches had been taken it is necessary to consolidate the position. Ranger is now in the period of consolidating its position. The future is over but the position will be held.

Then I began to meet the men of Ranger. I found that these men are of the empire building type. On a flood-tide of oil money they hold a city in a day. The flood has receded temporarily. The tide is out. But though tides go out they come back. And these men who started Ranger under a certain set of conditions give the impression that they will be capable of continuing it under any other set of conditions that may be presented to them.

Rangerites Not Quitters. They aren't quitters, these men. The quitters have left. They never were an asset to the city. What is left is stamina, brains and will power.

Of all my first impressions of Ranger this is the only one that has a real bearing on Ranger today. I find that there are men, and numerous men, in Ranger today who are of sufficient brains, ability and force to keep the city going during its post-boom period. Therefore I feel and I know that Ranger will grow.

In short, this is the sum of my first impressions of Ranger. That there is a city whose history has just begun; one of the youngest cities in the world; yet a city which in some aspects is far ahead of many a city in other parts of the land as old as the nation itself.

A little perseverance, a little planning, a bit of the good old American virtue of "boost," a little of faith—and the rest shall be added unto you.

THE WOMAN WHO SAW

At least once every year the Woman treats herself to a day at the zoo in company with some small folk belonging to an out-of-town cousin. To the child, the trip to the city is an event long anticipated, and still longer talked of after its consummation.

This year's expedition had been one long delight. Selecting a "pay day," when there was certain to be no overcrowding, they had lingered as long as they wished before each particular cage, and many an interesting were the comments of the "young visitors."

During their wanderings they had been closely followed up by an ill assorted couple, no longer in their first youth. The husband was an under-sized, timid little man, overshadowed by the ample proportions of his wife. When he ventured a remark she snapped out her replies, until the Woman wondered how she had ever been persuaded to be a party to an excursion for which she had such evident distaste. The lady's expression registered impatience and disgust at the whole performance.

At the tiger cage everybody paused. Here the Woman's young charges found a close rival to the monkeys, and the henpecked little man gazed as if he, too, was fascinated. There was something about the inmate of that special cage which held him spellbound. His companion took one look, sniffed contemptuously and moved on a few paces, but nothing disturbed the reverie of Hubby.

Impatient at the delay, the lady decided to put an end to the sightseeing. "For goodness sake, James," she said angrily, "do come along. What-ever are you thinking of?"

With a last lingering glance at the creature behind the bars and a loud desire to make amends for the discomfort he had caused his irate spouse, the meek one replied, innocently, "You, my love."

Omniscience. It is indeed a beautiful quality, that love which can behold only perfection in the loved one. Thus mused the Woman as she witnessed the adoring glances exchanged by the young married couple seated across the aisle from her in the Fifth avenue bus. She was sweet faced and inexpensively clad, and very careful to display her unglowed left hand, one finger of which bore a plain gold band. He was a pleasant youth, with an air of pride in possession. And the world was theirs!

Just ahead of the couple were two alert, well dressed men conversing earnestly, their voices rising until their words could be heard distinctly. The men spoke enthusiastically of a mutual acquaintance and his wonderful ability as a salesman.

"He certainly knows how to sell," said one. "He can sell anything anywhere, whether it's f. o. b. Bayonne, Hoboken or Canarsie."

The little bride also overheard, and she queried sweetly of the youth: "What does f. o. b. mean?" "F. O. B.? Why, that means 'freight or baggage,'" came the ready response.

Smiling adoringly up into his face, she accepted his definition, saying, with wonder and admiration in her voice, "You know everything, don't you, dear?"

BASSETT LAYS LASH ON 'HELL'S INCUBATORS'

"Hell's Incubators," was the subject of Evangelist Bassett last night at the First Baptist church. Dancing and card playing were especially denounced by the speaker in one hour of scathing invective against present-day amusements. "Sow wheat" and you will reap wheat, sow card tables in your home and you will be apt to reap gamblers, sow the dance in your home and your family may help feed the brothel some day," was one of his statements.

There will be no service Saturday evening, this being the "rest" night of the evangelistic party. Tomorrow there will be services at 11 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. and a service for children at 3 o'clock.

MOTHER AT 13 PERMITTED TO KEEP HER BABY

CHICAGO, April 30.—The Juvenile court here today straightened out a few of the tangled threads of Mary Propowinks. Mary is fourteen years old, but she is the mother of a fourteen-months-old girl, who has blue eyes and light hair, like Mary.

The court told Mary she could keep her babe, and arranged for her to attend school until she is sixteen, when she can work and support her child.

In July, 1919, Mary met Steve Danko, twenty-two years old. Mary and Steve went to Detroit and settled down as man and wife. When the babe came—Mary was thirteen then—she thought that happiness was coming to her at last.

When Mary was fourteen her mother went to Juvenile court officials and asked that Mary be found and made to work for her mother. She was brought from Detroit, but it was found she only had gone to the third grade in school, and Illinois law requires that only those who finish the fifth grade may work. And she could not attend public school because of her motherhood.

So the court decided that Mary might attend the school conducted in connection with its juvenile activities, and a charitable institution will furnish the necessary funds for keeping Mary and her babe.

When she is sixteen, if she still is in love with Steve, who is back in Detroit, she may marry him.

DAME FASHION WAS ALLURING TO PURITANS

By Associated Press

BOSTON, April 30.—Dress reformers of the present day, who deplore the abbreviated skirt and the peek-a-boo waist may be astounded to learn that even in the good old Puritan times the lure of Dame Fashion had a bewitching effect on the young men and maidens. Researches into the ancient laws of the Massachusetts Bay colony have revealed that the fathers had their own troubles with their offspring who recognized a snappy style when they saw it.

In 1634, just four years after the arrival of Governor Winthrop's ships, the apparel question had become so pressing that the law makers tried their hands as fashion moulders. Here is the statute placed on the books in its original wording:

"The court, taking into consideration the greates, superfluous and unnecessary expences occasioned by reason of some newe and immodest fashions as also the ordinary wearing of silver, golde, and silke laces, girdles, hat bands, etc., hath therefore ordered that no person, either man or woman shall hereafter make or buy apparel, either woollen, silke or linnen, with any lace on it, silver, golde silke or threed, under penalty of the forfeiture of such clothes.

"Provided, and it is the meaning of this court that men and women shall have liberty to wear out such apparel as they are now provided of, except the immoderate greates sleeves, slashed apparell, immoderate greates rayles, long wings, etc.

"This order to take place a fortnight after the publishing thereof."

IN CINCINNATI!

CINCINNATI, April 30.—A truck loaded with many thousands of dollars worth of whiskey was struck and wrecked today by a Baltimore and Ohio train at a crossing twenty-five miles from Cincinnati.

Under the muzzle of pistols pointed by drivers of the truck passengers from the train swarmed over the wreck and filled their pockets with pint bottles of bonded whiskey.

"Drop them bottles, or we shoot," challenged the driver.

"Shoot," answered the passengers, charging with heroic frenzy upon the embankment on which the bottles were strewn. At the risk of their lives a good time was had by all for everybody agreed that it was good whiskey, it being the best brand made by a late lamented distillery at Frankfort.

Two Kinds of Women

We know a woman, who when she needs to purchase necessary things for the home or family puts on her shopping costume, dabs a bit of powder on her nose and sallies forth.

She shops here and there and chases up one street and down another hunting and h-u-n-t-i-n-g. When she gets home she is j z y and j-a-d-e-d. She feels all mussed up mentally and physically.

We know another who has learned the art of reading the advertisements before she starts out. She finds out what she wants and where to get it. Then she goes straight down town and right to the store that has IT.

In this way she saves time, money and effort and comes home fresh as a daisy and ready to get friend husband a good dinner instead of taking him to the cafeteria.

Which one are you?
