

TWO PRO OFFICERS SLAIN NEAR EL PASO

Boy Killed Here is Not Dallas Youth

BRECKENRIDGE MAN PROVES HE IS FATHER

Mystery Finally Ended When Aged Woman Relinquishes Her Claim to Body.

The body of the young man who was killed in Ranger Saturday afternoon by E. H. Kelley and shipped to Dallas yesterday as Arthur Norton is being today returned to Breckenridge as the son of T. D. Teakell.

Grandma Norton of Dallas, to whom the body was sent, told attendants at the morgue that it was the body of her grandchild.

Only a faint scar on one finger and a slight bump on an arm from a former broken bone finally established the fact that the young man was really the son of the Breckenridge man.

Mr. Teakell later yesterday came to the Milford Undertaking company's morgue and asked to see the dead boy, who for forty-eight hours had lain in state while thousands passed in awed review, sorrowful that one so young was so suddenly cut off from his life and kin.

ATTORNEYS IN RAIL UNIONS' CASE CLASH

CHICAGO, March 22.—General W. W. Atterbury, vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad and labor committee chairman of the Association of Railway executives, took the stand today in the railroad employees' controversy, and hammering home his points with mighty blows on the table, told the railroad labor board that the only possibility of peace in railroad matters lies in permitting the men and officials to get together and negotiate their own rules and working conditions.

Attorney Walsh, representing the unions, and Attorney Atterbury were almost constantly clashing throughout the second day of the examination of the Pennsylvania railroad officials. The first conflict came over the classifying of employes for the standardizing of wages and working conditions.

MEN WHO TRIED TO SEIZE BERGDOLL ARE ON TRIAL IN GERMANY

BERLIN, March 22.—Frank Zimmer and Carl Neaf, the American detectives from the United States army of occupation, arrested at Eberbach while trying to seize Grover Bergdoll, the American draft dodger, were arraigned in Mossbach on Monday.

By Associated Press LONDON, March 22.—Details of an entirely new type of seaplane, which can either fly or cruise as a warship, were announced here.

STILLMAN, OF BIG N. Y. BANK, QUILTS PLACE

Publicity Given to Action to Divorce From Wife Is Given as Cause.

NEW YORK, March 22.—James A. Stillman, a powerful figure in the field of international finance, today tendered his resignation as president of the National City Bank, but the board of directors refused to accept it.

NEFF SIGNS BILLS OF BIG IMPORTANCE

AUSTIN, March 22.—Governor Neff today by approving bills set aside Nov. 11 as Victory day and a legal holiday in Texas; gave $550,000 to the prison commission to help it pay debt; put the highway department under control of the legislature and made it a misdemeanor to bet on any election.

HARDING ISSUES HIS FIRST PROCLAMATION; CALLS EXTRA SESSION

WASHINGTON, March 22.—President Harding issued his first proclamation today, for the purpose of calling the Sixty-seventh congress to meet in extraordinary session on April 11.

Whereas, public interests require that the congress of the United States should be in extraordinary session at 12 o'clock, noon, on the 11th day of April, 1921, to receive such communications as may be made by the executive.

TWO CHARGED WITH THEFT OF AUTOMOBILE FROM EASTLAND MAN

EASTLAND, March 22.—Bob Tally and another man are being held in Eagle Pass under a charge of having stolen an automobile from Dr. Richardson of this city. The sheriff of Eagle Pass made the arrests at the instigation of the county attorney's department.

Judge Hill Scores Gamblers

TELLS GRAND JURY THEY ARE COUNTY'S MOST VICIOUS ELEMENT

Also Instructs for Strict Investigation of County's Account With Former County Officer, But Says Alleged Shortage May Not Be Criminal Offense.

EASTLAND, March 22.—The accounts of county officers and infractions of the gambling laws were named by Judge Hill as major matters of investigation, in his charge to the grand jury empaneled here yesterday.

In his charge, Judge Hill called attention to the suit filed against a former county officer, presumably ex-District Clerk Russell, and urged upon that body a thorough investigation of the alleged shortage, saying the services of the county auditor and other auditors would be at their disposal.

"You are instructed that the gravamen of the offense is a fraudulent misapplication, and that the offense is complete when the funds are fraudulently misapplied and diverted from the due course of deposition contemplated by law.

"Gentlemen, in counties of a given population, so which class our rapidly growing county has advanced, the law provides that a portion of fees and costs paid to certain county officers should be certain to be transmitted to the county treasury.

the docket and you will present no indictment against any officer for retaining fees, commissions or costs not authorized by law unless you should find fraudulent intent in connection therewith, such as false entries in books, or misstatement of facts, or some other badge of fraud.

"Turning to the criminal statutes, Judge Hill expressed himself as being especially solicitous that gambling and gaming houses should be curbed, saying that they more than anything else are injurious to the morals and character of young men.

"The hijacker that holds you up and filches from your pocket money is taking trash compared with character of the young man which he loses by the association of gamblers and vicious environments of the gambling den.

U. S. LAUNCHES SECOND OF WORLD'S LARGEST BATTLESHIP TODAY

CAMDEN, N. J., March 22.—The United States added the second of the world's largest battleships to its fleet today with the launching of the super dreadnaught Colorado at the New York shipbuilding yards into the waters of the Delaware river.

CANDIDATES CANNOT FILE AFTER TODAY

Ranger's Woman Vote Will Be Deciding Factor in Election.

Today is the last day on which candidates may file their names on the ballot for the offices of mayor and city commissioners who are to be elected April 5.

In the mayor's race there are three candidates: S. R. Black, independent; John Gholson, who is heading the Citizens ticket, and W. R. Fleming, who is at the head of the Non-Partisan party.

Considerable interest in the election among the men along the streets and club women also are showing some evidence that they are interested in the outcome.

PARCEL POST CHICKS SURVIVE LONG TRIP

CHATFIELD, March 22.—After traveling seven days and six hours to Leonard, N. Y., and return to Chatfield, by mail, it was found that only two out of 100 day-old chicks shipped by a local hatchery had died.

It is an old axiom of the day-old chick business that young chickens, when hatched, need no food or water for three days, but this shipment doubled that time with a 2 per cent death rate.

SOLDIERS' HOSPITAL IS NOT YET LOCATED

STAMFORD, Texas, March 22.—Reports have been received by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce from their Washington office regarding the Soldiers' hospital appropriation bill, stating that nothing has yet been done towards locating these institutions.

The appropriation, which was carried in a special bill, amounted to $1,860,000 and provision was made that the fund should be handled jointly by the public health service and the bureau of war risk insurance. Both these divisions are under the general supervision of the treasury department and it is understood that the funds will be administered by a special committee appointed by these divisions and acting on their advice. This committee has not yet been appointed, but when appointment is made, will have charge of selecting locations for the hospitals and supervise the construction of the institutions. It is not known just how much new construction will be done but it is expected that in most instances the plants will be new.

LAWYER PROFITEERS WILL BE FROWNED ON

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Lawyer profiteering in connection with army desertion cases will not find favor at the war department. An announcement by the judge advocate general says rewards will not be paid to attorneys who advise deserter clients to surrender, then attempt to collect government rewards for apprehension of the soldiers.

"His claim," the army legal head declared in connection with a lawyer who had filed such a demand, "being incompatible with his duty to his client."

STOWAWAY, 15, HELD IN SHACKLES ON STEAMER

Due to the recent ruling of the state department, Jon Jacobson, 15-year-old Rumanian lad may be forced to spend five years aboard the steamship Eldena, which is moored in the Erie Basin, South Brooklyn, N. Y. Jon, after numerous attempts to reach this country, stowed away aboard the Eldena at Bizerta, Tunis. When Captain J. W. Nicholson reported the boy as a stowaway at Ellis Island he was told of a new ruling which would not permit the lad being sent to Ellis Island or landed. The rule calls for the stowaway being returned to the port from which he embarked. The captain was warned that if Jon escaped from the ship, he, the captain, would be liable to a fine of $1,000. To guard against the boy making his escape, Captain Nicholson, much against his will, is compelled to keep Jon shackled by a chain to a stanchion in the engine room. Jon's father and mother are in this country having come here seven years ago, but the boy has lost their address. Should the youthful stowaway remain aboard the Eldena for five years and a half, under the American flag, he will then be of age, and entitled to enter the country and become a citizen.

ROOMING HOUSE LANDLADY OF OIL FIELD TOWNS HAS HER OWN QUAINT PHILOSOPHY

Stakes Her Pile in Man's Game, But Always Cheerful Loser.

Nearly every known class of adventurers in the world has heard and heeded Ranger's call. The business man, the gambler, the gun-man and the "painted lady" have been here. The soldier of fortune who bet his stake and won or lost has come and gone. It was a town about which clung the mystic hope of sudden fortune.

It has called to the vagrant and the adventurer into the primitive places of earth.

With the exception of the "cooing doves," who are in the vanguard of any boom, the majority of these have been men. Yet among the number have been women soldiers of fortune yearning to uncover the mysteries of the byways of the world.

Chronicles have been written of the venturesome waitress who came and lingered, saved her stake, and in time surrendered again to the lure of "green hills far away," and passed on to discover what might lay beyond the mist that enveloped the next hill.

And the pretty typist, most self-dependent of her sex, who plied her profession in many parts of the country, to find in Ranger at last the thing she sought—romance.

These things have been told and forgotten. For a passing moment they thrilled the prosaic stay-at-homes, who felt a fleeting wish that the blood of the tribe of Captain Kidd flowed through their veins, that they might forget their love of soft living, and go away adventuring.

Now comes the "rooming-house landlady," who has played the game as men play it, and who has invariably lost. It is a tale of hard luck that has camped on her trail in every chance for big money in every boom that has happened in years. But in the telling of it she never rails at fate.

When Luck Turns.

Today as a rooming-house keeper, luck is still going against her, but with a smile she will tell the listener that "she should worry," because it was dead certain that "if things did not get better they would get worse." Before she had passed the high-school age this woman had felt the urge that drives men into the desert seeking the glint of gold; that prompts them to bury vast sums of other people's money, sinking holes in the ground in quest of the green and purple liquid that means sudden wealth.

This subtle desire to "play the game"—not as women play, with eyes and smiles—but as men play it, with hardships and death as pawns, drove her into the mining camps of Arizona and Wyoming.

Even to a soldier of fortune funds are necessary, so in the vanguard of the boom she could be found operating a rooming house. Money thus derived was bet as men bet, always to lose. Many mining claims in many states that gave wonderful promise turned out to be nothing but dirt.

In one case claims were secured almost against the now famous "Glory Hole" in Wyoming. Much money was spent in assessment work, but "blew it" the "Glory Hole" rolled out wealth for its owners, but the woman's "assessment money" is still tied up in the claims she staked.

Nevada and California knows this woman, as does every spot where men congregate seeking earth's riches, for here money can always be earned in the "rooming-house" business. But fortune has decreed her no profit in the man's game.

Bets Turn "Dusters."

So on the heels of the oil boom she came to Ranger. She has seen others amass fortunes, but her bets have all turned out to be "dusters."

With years of experience she has tried to place her money where it could not fail to win, but the gods took a hand, and while the liquid wealth poured out of the ground for others, she turned again to the sure expedient of offering shelter to the lords of creation.

Upon this she has always depended as a sure producer of ready cash. Now even this has failed her, as drilling operations slacken, work is less plentiful and there are fewer adventuring men to house.

She eats, and that is about all.

Yet always there are two outstanding features in the woman's tale. In all her bets she has never won, and in all her losing she has never whined. She has only one philosophy. She knows that "if things get no better they are sure to get worse."

Today she is waiting for another boom, and while she waits she ponders on the lure of Tampico. Perhaps she will be gone tomorrow.

THE MERRY JOURNEYS OF MARY JANE

"What do you want to make honey out of Mary Jane Syrup for, Mr. Bumble-Bee?" asks Mary Jane.

Mary Jane and the Bumble-Bee

ONE day when the sun began to get warm, Mary Jane started to eat a nice spread of bread and Mary Jane Syrup on her way to school. Just then a big bumble-bee buzzed around and he smelled all this de-li-cious Mary Jane Syrup.

He buzzed and buzzed around till finally Mary said to him "Say, Mr. Bumble-Bee, why don't you go and bother somebody else for a while, and let me alone?"

The old Bumble-Bee said "What right have you got to sit here and eat all that de-li-cious Mary Jane Syrup, when I'd like some of it to make honey out of?"

Mary Jane said "What do you want to make honey out of Mary Jane Syrup for?—that's sweeter and nicer than any honey, and fit for a prince to use on his pancakes and waffles and gingerbread and corn pone."

And old Mr. Bumble-Bee said "Well maybe you're right about Mary Jane Syrup, but give me a little anyhow, just for a treat."

Mary broke him off a nice piece of bread with a lot of syrup on it, and they sat there together and had a regular party. Mary told her mother about it after school, and her mother said "That's right—never be selfish. We have lots more Mary Jane Syrup in the house, and it's so ec-o-nom-ic-al to use that you can give anybody a treat of it any time you want to."

And so now every boy and girl in school has Mary Jane Syrup at home, because Mary Jane told them about it in school, and let them taste her de-li-cious lunches whenever they wanted to.

DIMPLES, SMILES, EATS, 'N EVERYTHING GO WITH GIRLS ON SALE TONIGHT

Girls will be sold tonight to the highest bidder in the basement of the Methodist church. With every girl will go some good things to eat. The proceeds from the sales will go into the treasury of the Home Missionary society. The auctioneer, who will stand on the block and cry, "What am I offered for this fair damsel?" is said to be an artist in his line. It is certain, being a gallant, he will agree with the girls themselves, after they have been "sold," that they did not bring what they were worth. It will not cost anything to get into the auction room. Getting out will be another matter.

MINUTE MOVIE

To Show Famous Studebaker Movie. Film shows manufacture of new light-six in newest and most modern automobile factory in the world—will be shown tomorrow night at the Majestic theatre. Said to be the most remarkable industrial movie ever produced—shows most up to date efficiency methods. What is declared to be the most remarkable industrial film ever taken will be exhibited here tomorrow night at the Majestic theatre. It shows the complete manufacture of the Studebaker Light-Six in the newest and most modern automobile plant in the world. Although of an industrial nature, this movie abounds in human interest, with plenty of action in some cases cases real excitement. It shows the making of Studebaker cars from the raw material down to the finished car. One of the unusual features of this film is that special lighting and coloring effects were used in many of the scenes, making them realistic to a striking degree. Veritable miracles are performed by automatic and other ultra-modern devices that do nearly everything but talk. A view of this movie is in some ways more interesting and inspiring than a trip through an automobile plant itself, because many details and operations which escape the eye on such a journey are caught by the camera. An educational advantage of this film is that it shows the manufacture and assembly of each individual unit in continuity. For instance, in the making of the crankshaft, each step is pictured from the forging operations down to the complete machining of this important unit. The same applies to the camshaft, motor, body and other parts. The numerous inspections through which each part passes to insure its accuracy and quality are vividly pictured, and throughout the picture an impressive feature is the speed and efficiency with which results are secured, as well as the high type of men to whom the various tasks are allotted. All operations shown are performed in the Studebaker plant at South Bend, where the new light-six is manufactured complete. To see this great movie is to get all the thrills of a trip through the newest and most modern automobile plant in the world.

In this film you will see the various parts that go into the NEW LIGHT-SIX transformed from red-hot metal to the carefully finished and inspected unit. You will see in operation the newest methods, the most painstaking standards and the most efficient machinery in use in any automobile factory.

Although of an industrial nature, this movie abounds in human interest, with plenty of action and in many cases real excitement. It is an education in itself.

THIS REFORM BUSINESS.

A year ago announcement that the W. C. T. U. or any other body would wage a fight on nicotine and worldly pleasures of a Sunday was not greeted with very much alarm. It will not be in many places now. Yet the campaign has its serious aspects, to those who believe in at least some vestige of human liberty. Its gravity is emphasized by the very fact that a wave of this kind has a momentum. Idaho, Utah, one of the Dakotas and perhaps other states have passed or at least seriously considered bans on the cigarette this year.

The Times editor holds no special brief for the cigarette, except that he sees no harm in them and does not believe anyone can prove them harmful, and the further fact that he can prove by 2,000,000 men in a position to know, that cigarettes "won the war," or at least had their part therein.

The Times editor confesses to no great amount of disrespect for the W. C. T. U., provided it will be temperate, as its name implies, and not seek to force its own pet pleasures of abstinence down the throats of persons who think otherwise.

However, we can at least have the pleasure of some further years of internecine warfare before the arbitrary program of no tobacco, no Sunday golf, autoing, baseball, toothpick wielding and other sports and amusements are cast into outer darkness. There are signs that the people are getting fed up on this reform business. The frank disrespect accorded extreme enforcement of the prohibition law, even by professed prohibitionists, is one of them.

Just as the saloon keepers by their excesses killed the liquor business, so will the reformers kill the reform business, if they don't watch out.

Some day the people will find a way to speak their mind. Some day there will be lawmakers who will not be browbeaten and who will not fear defeat if the voters do not approve of their principles. Some day we will be able to sleep at night without awaking to find a new shackle about our feet.

For just as the saloonkeepers killed the liquor business by making it obnoxious, so will the reformers kill the reform business.

LET'S FIND MORE.

It is too early as yet to begin actual jubilation over the vase made from Ranger clay; now on exhibition at the Chamber of Commerce. That, of course, must wait on further tests and then if they prove satisfactory, on a survey of the extent of the deposits.

Nevertheless, it is a cause for optimism. For if in this one specimen came through in such fine shape, it is a good indication that the material is of first-class quality. And if such deposits exist at all, chances are that the material is here in enormous quantity. There's certainly something to look forward to.

Even if it is brick clay, that itself is no inconsiderable item. A brick plant alone does not mean a city, judging by other Texas towns, but it does mean 500 to 1,000 additional inhabitants, if Millsap, Thurber and Elgin can be taken as examples of brick making communities. And a few industries of various sorts will give a basis for further expansion.

And if the material should be found suitable for pottery work or for tile, luck—or our resources, as you will, will be much greater. Such plants have a wider market and are much larger than mere brick works. Whoever these deposits may prove to be, or even if further tests should show they are not especially valuable, this step in learning Ranger and its resources should be followed up. There quite possibly are other things here that could be exploited if their existence, quality and quantity are known. And the surest and quickest way to find them is by scientific investigation.

Ranger should make such scientific exploration a major plank in its Chamber of Commerce program for the coming year.

'BACK TO FARM' SLOGAN REVIVED AND ACREAGE REDUCTION IN PROSPECT

STAMFORD, March 22.—The slogan "Back to the Farm" is being heard once again according to the service bureau of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. This means that labor will not be so scarce as a year ago, nor will the hired man command such high wages. It also now seems certain that there will not be such a large acreage of staple farm products such as cotton and corn as last spring. Neither will the cost of production be so high. In this way the farmer's problem of the relation of his cost of production to selling price will likely be solved.

Farmers are gradually selling their products as they find a demand or as necessity compels. Movements of corn and wheat are larger than generally supposed.

Figures show that cotton acreage is being cut throughout West Texas from 80 to 80 per cent, while wheat acreage has been heavily increased, especially in the plains country. A large acreage of spring wheat and oats has been planted and due to the increase in dairy cattle and swine the feed crop acreage will doubtless be large.

RIPPLING RHYMES

SAFE OR SORRY.

"I'm sorry as a man can be," the motorist explained, when he had run down Mr. Chee, and left him maimed and sprained. "I'm sure I would not strip the fur from any walking gents; I would not have such things occur fifty-seven cents." But Mr. Chee with busted bones, goes homeward in a crate, and he exclaims, in wailing tones, "Your sorrow comes too late! and you but watched the road ahead, maintaining lawful speed, I would not have a broken head, my person would not bleed. You did not care, just where you went, you teetered left and right, and now my collarbone is bent, my whiskers are a sight." The motorist leaves Mr. Chee, and heaves a heart-sick sigh, and for a week or maybe three, he'll drive with cautious eye. With earnest care he will advance on streets where commerce thrives, and give pedestrians a chance to save their mispent lives. But soon he'll wear of a pace that's safe but deadly slow, and then again we'll see him chase dispensing death and woe. And though he's pinched by peelers bold, he still will scoot and zip; when once the speed germ gets a hold, it won't relax its grip.

"Tinker Bob" Stories by Carlyle H. Holcomb

THEY START FOR THE GREAT FOREST.

"I thought you could catch that monkey," said Tinker Bob as again Silky climbed a cocoanut tree after his roll on the ground with this fellow who was going to catch him and give him to the man in the city who would take him to the Northland. "Why don't you catch him?"

"I'll show what I can do with him," said the young fellow whose eyes were flashing with anger. He again lifted his gun to his shoulder and pointed it directly toward the Monkey who sat in the cocoanut tree.

Tinker Bob knew it would be dangerous for Mr. Monkey to remain there when this enemy was so close so he tapped the Stone of Knowledge and suddenly Silky was out of sight, for the Wonderful Creature of His Desire had come to the Monkey and taken him away. So strange was all this that the young fellow who wanted to kill Silky began to tremble with fear.

"Where has that Monkey gone, am I getting blind, or what has happened?" He looked about a bit trying to see if he was blind, but he could see Tinker Bob and all the other things about the grove, yet there was no Monkey to be seen. "Tell me quickly what has happened to that Monkey?"

Before he could say more Silky stood beside him, for Tinker Bob had tapped the Stone again. Thereupon the fellow was so surprised that he fell to the ground. "Where did you come from?" he cried, but Silky made no reply. "I'll get you this time," and he pulled his gun and again Silky disappeared, and the fellow with the gun began to be afraid. "O indeed, you must be the King of the Forest," he said to Tinker Bob. "This could not happen unless you willed it so. Do bring that Monkey back and he can have all the cocoanuts he wants and I will never disturb him as long as I live." It took him a long time to come to himself but now that he did realize that Tinker Bob was King of the Forest Silky the Monkey came back and stood beside him, and looked at him wisely.

"Well, Silky, it is time that we were getting ready to go to our home in the Great Forest of the North. The birds and beasts will be looking for me very soon, and we must not disappoint them. Bid this saucy fellow farewell and we will start forth on our journey."

Silky put his arms about the fellow's neck and hugged him tightly. Now the latter wasn't used to that sort of a greeting and he was afraid, but Tinker told him that it was the only way Silky had of saying goodbye so he took it as it was meant.

With their magic basket full of cocoanuts the King of the Forest and Silky started away toward the Land of the North where there were many creatures waiting for the return of their King.

Tomorrow we will see how they journeyed and what happened on the way.

Little Bennys Note Book by Lee Pope

Last nite pop went to a bankwet, telling ma he wouldnt be home late but not to wait up for him jst the same, and I went to bed and started to dream about berglars, and I woke up and thawt that I herd one down stairs, thinking G, heek.

And I snuck out of bed and it was dark as the dooce, and I felt eround and picked up one of my shoes for a weapon and went and looked over the banisters, saying, Hello down there.

Nobody ansering anything, and I sed, Get out of there or I'll shoot.

Wich jst then I herd another noise and I quick threw the shoe over the banisters and somebody sed owtch.

Being pop's voice, and I thawt, Holy smooaks, gosh. And I sed, Is that you, pop?

Shh, yes, for the love of Pest dont throw the other one, see pop. Soundng like somebody trying not to tawk loud, and I sed, Whats the matter, wats you doing, pop? Wich jst then the setting room clock struck 8, provin wat time it was, and pop sed Shh, shh, do you want to wake you mother, is this eny time of the nite to be yelling and throwing shoes eround? And he llt the lite in the 2nd floor hall and started to rub his shoulder, and I went down saying, G, pop, I thawt you was a bergler, G pop, its a good thing it had a rubber heel, aint it pop?

Meaning the shoe, and pop sed, Shh if I didnt want to avoid waking up your mother Id show you if it was a good thing or not.

Prably meaning it wasent, and I went back to bed and this morning at breakfast pop moved one arm stiff like somebody that was hit on the shoulder by a shoe, ony I didnt ask him about it on account of no wanting to remind him, ma saying, Wat time did you get home last nite, Willyum? and pop saying, O not so late, not so late.

Me not saying anything.

THE WOMAN WHO SAW

Defrauded.

They stood near the entrance to the subway at Thirty-fourth street and Broadway—the bright-eyed fresh-cheeked Grandmother and the handsome little Grandson. "The pampered child of wealth" mused the Woman as she watched Grandmother delving into her handbag for the fare before making the plunge into the seething mass of homegoers who were crowding the entrance in their rush to get up-town in time for dinner. Tight hold of her hand clung little Grandson, his brown eyes snapping with excitement, yet he was slightly bewildered too, despite his fine air of bravado.

At last Grandmother captured the elusive coins and started toward the subway. At the same moment a limousine drew up to the curb beside her and from its depths a voice called, "Oh, Mrs. D—, you aren't thinking of taking the train are you? Jump in and let us take you home. So glad we happened along."

Grandmother turned, pleasure and relief on her face. Obviously it was for her a rescue. But not for the grandson. Dismay was stamped on every one of his features.

"But Nana," he protested in a voice of keen disappointment, "you promised me this time I could surely ride on the subway!"

Through Alien Eyes. An immigrant steamer came in one day recently and a guide was chaperoning a batch of the newly arrived to the Pennsylvania station via the subway. There were faces such as Millet and Cezanne loved, faces marked with the ruggedness of the soil, the stamp of centuries of labor, and in the eyes of those twenty-odd foreigners the dawning hope of the opportunities promised by the new country.

One woman whose tight-fitting waist was oddly trimmed down the front with a double band of handmade embroidery, sat in the whirling train absorbing sensations. Her gray skirt fell to the tops of heavy boots, and oves all to keep her warm, a bright red wool shawl clung to her shoulders, the color of the yarn vying with the brilliant hue of her complexion. Her brown hair was guiltless of covering of any sort.

It was between rush periods and the few men and women in the car were of the usual staid, middle-aged type. Then the train stopped. In walked a specimen of the cheap "flapper" variety. She stared contemptuously at the bareheaded foreigner, pulled aside her apology for a skirt and haughtily moved on.

Had she seen the look of mingled amazement and disgust in the peasant woman's face; had she seen the covert jab the foreigner gave her husband's ribs, Miss Modern New York might have had cause for thought.

Every Sunday Afternoon at Four.

The deep toned notes throbbled in a message of melody to all those who had come to the Sunday afternoon organ recital at the City College. Through the first selection the Woman sat with closed eyes, drinking in the pulsating music. But during the second selection, an Oriental theme, she looked up and about.

There were very old men and women in the audience. Here and there the vividly plumed hat of a flapper appeared. Men shoddy and men well groomed, past thirty and under fifty, could be counted. Women in luxurious fur wraps and women in shiny black jackets sat side by side. Youths of college age held their girls' hands, while black and yellow men sat next to white. Every country was represented there, where sunlight turned to rose and lavender and blue as it slanted through the stained glass windows, while the organ's song floated light and high, muffled low through-out the arched auditorium.

Allies and enemies were there. Capitalist and laborer met there. The radical and the conservative had seats in the same row. But—on every face was an expression of contentment. Under peace.

Sports... FAST SHORTSTOP TRY FOR PLACE ON STAFF OF CHICAGO NATIONALS

CHICAGO, March 22.-One of the best infielders of the Western league who performed last season with the St. Joseph club, will try for a permanent berth on the Chicago Nationals this season.

The athlete is Johnny Kelleher, shortstop, who managed St. Joseph last year, and who, critics declare, is the best shortstop turned out in the circuit in years.

In addition to piloting the club, Kelleher played spectacular ball throughout the season. He has a wonderful arm and gets the ball away fast.

Kelleher batted .293 last year. He is fast on the bases, his record for thefts being 34, which mark was bettered only by two other members of the league.

MORAN WILL HAVE NEW MACHINE WHEN PLANS UNDER WAY COMPLETE

CISCO, March 22.-Manager Pat Moran of the Cincinnati Nationals is creating practically a new baseball club here. Due partly to the holdout brigade, including Eddie Roush, Heinie Groh, Larry Gopf and Jake Daubert and to the releases and trades of the past winter, the world's champion machine of 1919 is unrecognizable today.

Not one of the 1919 infielders is practicing here. First, third and short are reposing on their dignity, and second has returned to the Pacific coast league from which he came.

The right fielder has been traded, center is missing and Duncanson, who broke his leg last year, only remains. But one of the three fast catchers is here, Ivy Wingo. One has retired, the third has been released.

Four of the numerous pitching lights that showed so well in 1919 are still invisible-Eller, Luque, Bressler and Fisher. Moran has a great pitching staff of ten players, ready to deliver and hit, as the second Cincinnati-Columbus game, ending in 18 runs and 17 hits for the Reds, showed.

Moran has four "lefties" and six right-handers, all with different styles, speed and delivery. SANDCRABS ARE IN THE RUNNING FOR WINNING OF PENNANT

GALVESTON, March 22.-With what he characterizes as Galveston's most promising array of pre-season talent on hand, President N. E. Leopold of the Sandcrabs, believes the locals will hop off in the 1921 race even up with the other Texas league clubs.

Harry Lee, pitcher, the only holdout of the season, now has signed a Sandcrab contract. Last year Galveston finished last. Business Manager Bob Tarleton and Playing Manager Roy Eilam, both of whom are keenly watching the development of recruits, also are optimistic over the island city's baseball chances this year.

Pete Lapan, acquired in a deal with the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast league, in the opinion of Manager Eilam, will plug the hole which now exists in the catching department. Mickey O'Brien regarded as a promising backstop and who played with the Pirates last year, will slip into the second string berth along with Wintry.

Pitchers signed by the Sandcrabs include Couchman, veteran who last year pitched his most successful season, Knight, Lee, Wilson, Schaefer, Jolly, McGraw, Jacobs, Cerniglia and Thompson. Texas league clubs can carry only sixteen men this season, including a manager.

CRYSTAL FALLS FARMERS WILL PLANT NO COTTON CRYSTAL FALLS, Texas, March 22.-A canvass of the farmers in this field reveals the fact that not a single one will plant cotton the coming year. When questioned the majority assert that they have had all of cotton they want for some time to come and will be content to grow feed in its place.

SEPARATION BILL SOUGHT. WASHINGTON, March 22.-Plans for the separation of the federal reserve banking system from the treasury department, which includes abolishment of the office of comptroller of the currency, were discussed today with President Harding by Chairman Louis T. McFadden of the house banking committee. Legislation designed to bring about these changes, McFadden said, would be considered at the special session of congress.

NEW WHITE BLOOM, NAMED AFTER MRS. HARDING, DISPLAYED AT FLOWER SHOW

Among the thousands of superb horticultural products on exhibition at the eighth international flower show at the Grand Central Palace, New York City, is an entirely new bloom which has been named the "Florence Harding." The new bloom, an amaryllis, is pure white and one of the rarest varieties of the species ever seen.

GARB OF TEXAS PLAINSMAN IS LOST AS DOMINANT TYPE IN CLOTHING WORN IN OIL FIELDS

HOUSTON, March 22.-The nondescript garb of the oil field worker has, in large measure, replaced in the popular mind, the traditional clothing with which the Texan of the plains used to bedeck himself.

Then chaparrals, high heeled boots and wide-brimmed hats were eloquent of the cowpuncher's occupation. Now the Texan-be he one connected with the great industry which has taken the state by its ears-wears anything from dungarees to fashionable business suits, the one touch which makes all akin, however, being the grimy, smary condition of his clothing, which comes from personal contact with the product in which he deals-crude oil.

According to figures from the comptroller's office in Washington, the year 1920 witnessed the production in Texas of 78,357,585 barrels of oil, valued at approximately $238,432,969. The last four-month period of the year saw roughly 23,639,504 barrels of the valuable product gush from the soil of the Lone Star state.

Gusher production-which means oil strike speculation, town booms, the activities of "lease holders" and other and varied excitement beside which the Klondyke gold stampede would seem a mild affair-is of comparatively recent date. Ranger, it was in Eastland county, on Oct. 17, 1917, where the oil world experienced the thrill of its life.

Although the origin of the oil city's name is slightly secluded, it appears likely that the town received its name from the fact that Texas rangers administered the only authority the city knew in the early days.

Like all other oil fields, the Ranger strike came after long endeavor. In the late eighties, F. P. Olcott of New York, possessor of the title to much of the H. & T. C. railway's land in the Ranger district, sold a considerable portion of his property, retaining, however, a reservation of the minerals contained therein. Whether he thought of the possibility of oil being discovered on the land is not known. At any rate, according to a recent report of J. T. Robinson, commissioner of the general land office, and covering the period of 1918-1920, Ranger was simply a "wide place on the Texas & Pacific."

A Rush of Oil. Oil came on Oct. 17, 1917, and another well quickly followed; it, too, being a success. Others came in gushers and the field widened spreading to the west and north. It was a bonanza; even trees sheltered people who rushed to take part.

Although the "stamped" to Texas fields is of comparatively recent date, oil was discovered within the confines of the Lone Star state as far back as the early eighties, when the valuable product was used by Nacoches county stockmen for the eradication of cattle ticks. Tradition existent in that county has it that the early Indians and Mexicans were aware of the presence of oil. Chronologically the Corsicana field was the next to be opened up to development, discovery of oil in paying quantities in that county coming in 1894. The first car of "crude" left Corsicana in the following year and Corsicana became the "oil city" of Texas. In 1901 came the third discovery, that of the Beaumont field, and with it came the rush to the Texas coastal field.

The Sour Lake area became acquainted with the front pages of Texas newspapers in 1902, and in October, 1903, Hardin county achieved renown as an oil district. Harris county, in which is located the city of Houston, next came into prominence as an oil producing region, discovery of oil being made in January, 1905. In 1907, Reeves county was added to the list and in 1908 Matagorda county achieved that distinction. Wichita, wherein now lies the renowned Burk Burnett district, became known as an oil producing county in 1910, while San Patricio county broke into the column in 1913. Marion and Harrison counties, on the boundaries of which lies Caddo lake, claimed to be oil producers in 1914, when Tar Island, in the center of the lake, began to yield oil. Comanche county in 1918, Stephens county in the same year, Fort Bend in 1919, Brazoria in 1919, Potter in 1919 and Wilbarger in 1920, quickly leaped forward to take their places at the side of the earlier oil producers.

RED CROSS SETS NEW MONTHLY RECORD FOR AIDING EX-SOLDIERS

All records for numbers of former service men receiving assistance in any single month since the close of the war from the Southwestern division of the Red Cross were broken in February, the shortest month of the year, with a total of 11,119 cases handled in the 28-day period, according to Edward B. Orr, director of civilian relief for the division, comprising Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

The number of cases handled in this territory has jumped from 6,440 for the month of June, 1920, to the present figure of 11,119, an increase of nearly 75 per cent for the eight-month period. A total of 1,175 more letters were necessitated in February to handle this business than in the month of January, which also was a record month.

Unemployment and financial stringency are the main causes of this big increase, according to the director of civilian relief, who pointed out that thousands of men who neglected their privileges when money was easy and labor at a premium, are now seeking information and guidance in obtaining compensation, hospitalization and other disability benefits.

LABOR'S DUTIES NEED EMPHASIZING, IS ASSERTED

Organized labor today more than all else needs to emphasize less its rights and more its duties.
The leaders of more than 100 trade unions the other day in Washington drew up a "bill of rights." That bill claimed certain "rights" which no one disputes. Labor had no need to demand the right to organize. Labor now possesses it. Labor had no reason to demand the "right to and practice of collective bargaining"; labor now has that right.

There are many fair and reasonable claims that the public readily and unanimously grants to labor. First and most fundamental of these is the right to receive a good day's pay for a good day's work. In the determination of what constitutes a good day's wage many factors must be considered—the cost of living, the rates paid in various lines of labor, the degree of experience and skill involved in any work done, the general conditions under which the service is performed. Few employers, and certainly not the public as a whole, have any desire to stint labor. The public is quite willing to see labor receive a liberal and generous treatment. The American people believe in a fair deal and always have tended to sympathize with the "under dog" in times of industrial churning.

What the public objects to is something altogether different. The country grand jury at Cleveland on June 9, 1920, after having devoted a fourth of a year to a careful examination of the housing situation in that city, declared the principal reason for the big boost in the cost of building was "the refusal of labor to do a real day's work in return for a real day's pay." There is the sore spot in the present situation. Union labor beyond all other things needs to consider what duty it owes to the community. The good will of the community is the greatest asset of labor.

The public today reluctantly is compelled to believe that unionism stands not only for the "rights" lately emphasized in Washington, but for a great mass of rules that decrease enormously the service labor renders for the wage it receives. The Herald lately has cited many illustrations of the way these rules work in the railway service the country over as well as in New England and in the building trades in Boston. Numerous letters commenting on these editorials are daily received at this office, indicating how intense is public interest in all the questions at issue. Of the hundreds of actual cases cited, possible error is pointed out in but two or three. Every day brings its tale of personal experience from some one who has suffered under the union rules.

limit the labor supply by strict apprenticeship rules and high admission fees, to slow up the speed of production in order to reap the larger returns of overtime. The United States commissioner of labor in his seventh special report said: "It has been found that there is in the building trades a very general feeling that by working slower the work will be made to last longer." The report quotes a rule to prevent a foreman "rushing his men." A carpenter's union fines "any member who does an unreasonable amount of work. The unions prohibit the use of labor-saving implements, prescribe the size of paint brushes, require "under the rules" that men shall receive a dollar an hour day and night for doing what does not need to be done at all, compel the employment of skilled men for duties that ordinary unskilled men could do as well, and here in Boston double time for over time, which directly invites the worker to shirk through the regular hours. One of the most excessive demands we have noticed was that of the building trades in Cleveland, where they are said to have announced in the newspapers their intention to erect no buildings to be occupied by individuals or firms not approved by union labor.

Undoubtedly large numbers of workers themselves see the inequity of these rules, realize the damage they are doing the whole union cause, and understand the injury they work upon the community as a whole. Such rules tend to the deterioration of the character of the individual workman. Not all American workmen like to take "big money" for work not done; they like to feel that they have earned what they receive. Once in the union they are helpless; they must abide by the rules and obey the leaders. The best thing these leaders can do is to talk less about "rights" that no one denies and look about for ways of increasing production and stimulating efficiency. Labor dislikes the public's opinion of its present practices it has only itself to blame. Once owners and employers and the people in general see the rank and file of the union workers really getting on the job there will be no trouble in agreeing on a wage scale.

MONEY IN CIRCULATION.
On February 1, 1920, the money in circulation in the United States totaled $6,141,265,012, as against $6,340,436,718 on January 1, and $5,864,171,213 one year ago. Based upon a population of 108,000,000, the amount in circulation per capita on February 1, 1921, was about $56.85 and on January 1, 1921, it was about $58.70.—From the Journal of the American Bankers' Association.

DISHWASHER INHERITS $40,000. TO SPEND IT
SPOKANE, Wash., March 22.—Frank Stevens, dishwasher, was "pearl diving" as usual in his place of employment this afternoon, following receipt of a letter today telling his aunt was dead.
The letter further advised Frank that he was the sole beneficiary of the $40,000 estate.
He was asked what he would do with the money.
"Spend it," he answered succinctly, "and went on 'pearl diving.'"

POULTRY DRESSING.
In making dressing for poultry try just moistening the bread crumbs and then mixing them in a spoonful or two of baking powder, according to the amount of bread that is used. Great care must be exercised not to render the dressing sticky by packing it too tightly into the fowl.

MOTHER IGNORED.
"Yes, I am going to marry Mr. Bullion."
"Really? Why, he's old enough to be your father!"
"I know. But, unfortunately, he does not seem to care for mother."
"Where is the man who keeps this restaurant?" asked a disgusted patron.
"He's gone out to lunch," replied the waiter.

TALAAAT KILLED TO AVENGE ATROCITIES, SAYS SLAYER
BERLIN, March 22.—Salomon Teilirian, the Armenian who yesterday assassinated Talaaat Pasha, former grand vizier of Turkey, in a statement to the police today said he committed the crime to avenge Talaaat's persecution of the Armenians, and especially for the murder of Teilirian's parents, who, he asserted, were taken from their home and put to a horrible death.

The police have ascertained that Teilirian undoubtedly came here to assassinate Talaaat.

The most helpless girl in the world

She was so fair and slim, so slight and airy, they called her Feather, this heroine of "The Head of the House of Coombe," a great new story by

FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT
the author of
"LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY" and
"T. Tembarom"

For one thing, she married Robert Gareth - Lawless which meant entertaining and living on the "right side of the street." Overnight she was left penniless—and incredibly helpless. No girl was ever so hopelessly helpless as Feather. It made her charming but it caused all kinds of trouble, especially to the Marquis, the head of the House of Coombe. Why not read it tonight—in—
