Speaker Defends Canada's Stand on Wood Pulp Export

By Associated Press
NEW LONDON, N. H., Aug. 26.—Edward Beck, of Montreal, secretary of the Canadian Pulp and Paper association, told a forestry conference yesterday that the question of removing restrictions upon the exportation of pulp wood from the crown lands of Canada to the United States was one for judicial determination rather than for political agitation.

The conference was held under the auspices of the Society for the Protection of New Hampshire Forests and was attended by forestry experts and paper makers from the United States and Canada. Mr. Beck was invited to present Canada's side of the pulpwood controversy brought to notice by the passage in Congress of the Underwood resolution calling for an American commission to visit Canada with the view of obtaining the removal of restrictions on pulpwood exports.

Mr. Beck declared that Canada had no reason to avoid inquiry into the equity of its timber laws by impartial tribunal. He said it was not true that the present shortage of printing paper in the United States was chargeable to the Canadian timber regulations but that it was due to world-wide conditions, aggravated by the "inordinate use of paper by both American and Canadian publishers." He declared that free access to Canada's pulpwood would not give American publishers cheaper or more abundant paper, as had been claimed.

Mr. Beck asserted that the Canadian pulpwood restrictions did not apply to privately-owned lands from which more than 1,000,000 cords of pulpwood were annually exported to the United States. In addition, he said Canada exports nearly 600,000 tons of pulp and about 650,000 tons of paper to the United States every year, comprising approximately one-ninth of the American pulp consumption and one-third of all the newsprint paper consumed in or exported from the United States.

Conservation Measure
Restrictions on the exports of pulpwood from the crown lands, he declared, were brought about solely by the desire to conserve the pulpwood resources and utilize their products for the up-building of the pulp and paper industries within the Canadian provinces and with no intent to injure American industries.

"The real question at issue," he said, "is not whether this material shall be available for the use of American publishers, but whether the material cut from these lands shall go in the form of raw pulpwood to the United States or shall be put through at least one stage of manufacture in Canada." So far as Canada's pulpwood is being cut a high percentage of it already was going to the United States in one form or another.

"Without a very heavy increase in the rate of cutting, involving the early destruction of the supply, no relief to American publishers from this means would be impossible," said Mr. Beck. Quebec's pulpwood is now being consumed at the rate of over 1,000,000 cords a year and the best informed expert opinion estimated the resources of that province would not last more than 50 years at the present rate of consumption, said the speaker who declared that Quebec's forests are threatened with early exhaustion.

Canada's great need today, said Mr. Beck, like that of the New England states, is for the inauguration of a reforestation policy that will insure a permanent supply of timber for her wood-consuming industries. Without it he predicted the same fate for the Canadian pulp and paper industry that is now threatening the American. To open the crown lands at this time to unrestricted exploitation, he said, would only hasten such a condition and in the end benefit nobody.

The teacher was trying to give her pupils an illustration of the word "perseverance."

"What is it?" she asked, "that carries a man along rough roads and smooth roads, up hill and down, through the jungles of doubt and through the swamps of despair?"

There was a silence, and then Johnny, whose father was a motor car dealer, spoke up.

"Please, ma'am," he said, "there ain't no such car."—Kerolite News.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr.
(Tomorrow—Frank Walsh.)

By DICK DONAHUE
The younger Rockefeller went to Colorado in 1914 at the conclusion of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company strikes, to prove to the workers that the Rockefeller interests were not heartless, ruthless things. It was a swing around the state, during which he visited mines and other properties of the company, that I met him.

A definite plan of pacification had been laid out for him. Many lives had been lost in skirmishes between striking miners and militia troops just before his arrival. Though the strike had ended when he reached Colorado, feeling still ran high. It was to relieve the tension and establish a friendlier feeling in the hearts of the miners toward the company that he came.

His plan contemplated visits with miners at their homes, trips down mine shafts in rough clothing, dances with miners' daughters, baby kissing and what not—all items calculated to salve the wounded feelings of the miners.

It was a difficult job for a millionaire son of a millionaire to accomplish. It required infinite grace and tact. It must have been a hard thing for a cultured man such as young Rockefeller was, to rub shoulders and associate intimately with rough, and, in many instances not overly cleanly miners and their families. Be he ever so democratic, which young Rockefeller distinctly is not, it must be a difficult task. It must be said to the credit of Rockefeller that he did all these things gracefully. He accomplished his mission. When he left Colorado the miners swore by the C. F. & I. instead of swearing at it. They had been influenced by the cunning plan of Rockefeller and his associates and were mollified. I understand the feeling has continued to this day.

BAKED APPLE BERRY
NEW EASTERN FRUIT

International News Service
BOSTON, Aug. 26.—While the Pacific coast has introduced great apples, the loganberry and other fruits into New England, the local markets are this year for the first time in at least a decade retaining a new eastern product. It is the baked apple berry, known to botanists as Rubus Chamæmoris, but it tastes much more agreeable than that. The initial shipments received here came from the Cranberry islands, off Mount Desert, Maine. The baked apple berry is said to flourish nowhere further south than northern Maine and New Hampshire. The fruit is sweet, and the housewives who have sampled it say it "tastes like more."

WHEN TO STOP.

If one wished to resort to homely philosophy and commonplace comparison, this Pole-Bolshevik melee over in Eastern Europe might be likened to the game of dominoes.

Likewise the war. Some months ago the Poles were sweeping Moscowward with what seemed resistless momentum.

At the week is over, present indications are, the Poles will have cleared their admitted borders of the invading Soviet forces.

On the other hand, if the Poles' success is due to the craft of allied strategists and supplies from Western Europe, it is possible that they may pursue their success with moderation.

He won his title back from Ted Lewis in an Ohio ring and since that time the bars have been up to pugilism in this city. His fights for New York audiences have been in New Jersey, where decisions were not permitted.

Britton is a popular champion, for he makes a fight of every entrance into the ring. His sincerity in this respect kept him in good favor even during the notorious Frawley law, when champions were wont to enter the ring out of condition and stall through ten rounds with the knowledge that they had nothing to fear from their rivals so long as they protected themselves from a knockout.

Tex Rickard is a campy promoter. Nothing but champions please him in his matches—and the very best of championship matches at that. He likes Britton's methods and personality, so the boxing world need express no surprise if he announces he has obtained Britton's services for an early Madison Square Garden entertainment.

On the other hand, Moran has spent the best part of his life trying to grab the heavyweight title.

He beat Luther McCarthy and Al Palmer during the "white hope" mania here but grabbed no title. He fought Johnson in Paris, and although he lost the decision, he stayed the limit. Then after Willard beat Johnson, Charles Francis Moran had a sock at him and again lost the decision.

We hear now that Moran is about to depart for Dear Old London to take a whack at Joe Beckett, the English champ. As Bill Mizner says: "You can't blame a guy for trying."

BIG EX-FIREMAN TAKES DAY OFF AFTER RESCUING SEVEN PERSONS FROM FLAMES WITH AID OF LADDER

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Louis Tischer, erstwhile fireman and at present truck driver, awoke this morning and decided not to go to work today. Not that he isn't a hard-working, industrious young man, but after having extemporaneously rescued seven persons from the top floor of a burning tenement house last night, he felt a bit done up in the morning. At his home, 7 West 114th st., surrounded by his family and his tiny French poodle, "Toots," Mr. Tischer spoke casually to a Globe reporter about the exploit which was termed by Deputy Chief "Smoky Joe" Martin as the most heroic feat he has seen in forty years of fire fighting.

"There wasn't anything else to do about it," he said, in a very every-day tone. "I was passing with my machine, and I saw immediately that this family on the top floor of 122 Forsyth street, was in terrible trouble. I used to be a fireman until eight months ago, when I got busted out for breach of discipline, and it seemed just second nature for me to hop out of my car and climb up the side of the building."

While he was playing human fly the hook and ladder arrived, and a ladder was put up. It lacked about two feet of reaching the window ledge, where the seven persons, including a small girl, were poised perilously on the verge of falling to the ground.

"I stood on the top rung of the ladder, and swung 'em over the ledge down below me, where another fireman took care of them. Some of the women were pretty heavy," Tischer smiled ruefully. "You must feel all in now," was the reporter's comment.

"Oh, no," replied the proud hero calmly. "I don't feel tired, but I just thought I'd stay home and go to Brighton for a swim later on. It's pretty hot."

When questioned about his dismissal from the fire department, Mr. Tischer was extremely reticent.

"I can't talk about that," he said. "I was discharged for punching a superior officer in the nose. That is a very serious offense, but there was a provocation. I got a rehearing of my case about two months ago, but I haven't heard anything about it yet. But Chief Martin, who shook hands with me when I came down off the ladder, said he would help to get me back in the department. He thinks it's where I belong. I think so myself."

AND NOW WE'LL HAVE LOTS OF MINCE PARTIES

International News Service. WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Mince pie parties are likely to grow in style and popularity under a ruling of the prohibition enforcement commissioner that mince meat may be seasoned with "intoxicating liquor."

This is expected to ally somewhat the fears of prohibition entertained by many New England congressmen when the subject was before congress.

The ruling of the commissioner does not restrict the percentage of alcohol to be used, but simply requires the manufacture of mince meat from time to time.

The prohibition commissioner apparently entertains no apprehension about the ruling, having been advised by chemists that properly made mince pies are not intoxicating.

CHAMPION TURNCOAT OF MEXICO FINALLY FACES FIRING SQUAD; KILLED ZAPATA BY TRICKERY

MONTEREY, Mexico, Aug. 26.—General Jesus Guajardo, who treacherously tricked and slew the wily rebel leader Emiliano Zapata, himself fell a victim of his own deception when he was captured by government troops and executed here July 18, last. The tale of his latest and last adventure is thus told here:

Thirteen months ago Guajardo, a colonel in Carranza's army, attacked a detachment of his own faction's troops, killed and wounded several of them and convinced Zapata that he had a new adherent. Then as Zapata greeted him in salute, he ordered his men to fire on Zapata and the noted rebel chief was blown out of his saddle.

To reward this act, Carranza made the double dealer a general, and a little over a year later he turned upon his benefactor and joined the successful revolution of Obregon and de la Huerta.

After many misgivings they accepted him as a general in the new army, and gave him the command of a brigade and he started for Torreon on a campaign against Villa. While en route he stopped his trains, assembled his regimental commanders and explained that he had resolved "not to recognize" the de la Huerta regime any longer but to go into the field for the newest revolution and join Ozuena, Ricardo Gonzalez and the others fighting to the eastward around Monterrey.

But several colonels, his chief of staff and half his command deserted him. Finally Guajardo abandoned the train and started to march for the mountains of Nuevo Leon. Soon he learned that Amaro, leaving the chase for Villa for a time, was upon his track and that the risings around Monterrey had been failed.

The remnant of his command melted away under attacks of government troops until there remained only one faithful colonel and an orderly.

Dressed in civilian clothes, General Guajardo hid in the home of a relative in Monterrey.

Meanwhile Colonel Antonio Cano, one of Guajardo's colonels who had abandoned him, had been captured by federal troops, taken to Monterrey and released there.

Next day Colonel Cano called at the house where Guajardo was hiding to visit the owner, who was also his relative. To his surprise, he found there his late commander, Gen. Guajardo, who asked him not to reveal his whereabouts.

Cano, however, revealed Guajardo's hiding place, an order for his arrest was issued and with several other Colonels, Cano was sent to execute it.

Cano was admitted to see Guajardo and pretended to unfold the plans of the future. While they were talking, the federal colonels entered and arrested Guajardo. He was taken a prisoner to the state penitentiary.

Orders came from Mexico City that he should be tried by courtmartial, which was done that night, July 17 with practically no defense to offer, he was found guilty, the sentence was approved by General of Division Eugenio Martinez at Monterrey and early in the morning General Jesus Guajardo stepped out of his quarters in the old barracks at the Plaza de Armas, where he had been tried and said farewell to a few faithful friends.

Then he stepped in front of the firing squad and paid with his life the final penalty of his treachery to the new government.

Fathers of many of the children who were killed or starved to death during the war and they had no one to care for them.

The Red Cross was doing much to remedy conditions, according to Mr. Joseph, but he said there was so much to be done it could not attend to it all. Food in Syria was plentiful for those who had the money to pay the high prices for it.

The brother who returned with him has been engaged in Red Cross work in that country.

Engine Repairs Delay Freight to Breckenridge

Six railroad engines belonging to the Hamon & Kell line have been taken out of service temporarily by the company, on instruction of a government inspector, for complete repairs.

According to officials of the company, its business has been so heavy between this point and Breckenridge that it had to use the engines regardless of the fact that they should be placed in the round house for a thorough overhauling.

While waiting for their return to service, freight in the local yards of the company is piling up. Since opening its roads to the Hamon & Kell interests have had every engine they owned constantly busy moving freight into Breckenridge. Officials of the company expect to have the engines back in service within the next day or two.

The Autumn Exposition

Dress with its Dawn in the Dim Distance of the Past, finds it's noontide glow in the Wonderful Expressions of the Season to come, assembled here.

—A far cry, indeed, from the primitive garments of grass and the cloak of animal skins to the masterpieces of artful designing with which Fashion ushers in the Autumn.

Suits developed from Duvetyne, from Velours, trimmed with soft, luxurious Furs at collar and cuff; Dresses of Satin, Crepe de Chine, Crepe Meteor, Kitten's Ear, with long, straight lines and trimmings of embroidery and beadings. Coats are to be seen this season of fine soft Duve de Laine, Duvetyne or Volivias, with flowing lines of fascinating grace. Hats in every conceivable and desirable color and design, showing the newest Pheasant shade.

—The most important chapter in the Book of Fashion for Fall deals with Suits, for of all the various articles of Feminine Apparel none are so attractive, so splendidly designed and so fascinatingly NEW in motif and conception. These pictures are reproductions of some of the best numbers we have for Autumn and they show clearly that touch of master designing which divides the mediocre from the exclusive.

The Frocks for Fall are so Desirable so Different and Fascinating, it is a Hard Matter to Describe them

—The long, straight lines, which remind one of the costumes to be seen in the Orient are evident, with their broad girdles so low as to be almost hip girdles. There are Satins, Crepe de Chines, Crepe Meteors, Kitten's Ear Satin and in the wool dresses there are Tricotines, Poiret Twills and a new fabric called Tricofine, which is a much finer, softer weave than Tricotine.

—There are dresses for afternoon and dinner wear which have embroidered motifs and are seen in numerous shades of brown, golden brown, tete de negre, chocolate seal and others; there are navy and black and combinations of color which include brown and tan.

—The sleeves are three-quarter and elbow-length with here and there a long sleeve, and in addition to embroidery there are Bugle Beads, Iridescent Beads, and Braidings extensively used. For the street there are numbers so wonderfully embroidered in eyelets designs that they must have an underdress of Duvetyne or Satin which shows bewitchingly through the delightful designs. A wonderful array of Dresses for Autumn, for each individual need and for every occasion.
