They do not address pupils as "pests" or "blockheads" or by other objectionable terms, and they have no need to use the whip. Teachers who permit exhibitions of temper in themselves, or whose nerves become unstrung by failure to observe the ordinary rules of health are not fit to be teachers.

School boards are soon to elect teachers for another year. They should be guided in their selections as much by ability of the teachers to control themselves as by their mental attainments.
