Pryor Says Tariff Measures Adverse to Cattle Raisers

EL PASO, Texas, Jan. 13.—(The T. Pryor of San Antonio, Texas, dealt vigorously with the tariff and other conditions which he declared adversely affected the cattle raising and shipping industry in an address Wednesday to the delegates to the annual convention here of the American National Live Stock association. He asserted that the farm and ranch industry of America is the "very life and veins of its existence," and should have a superior claim because its prosperity is the nation's best protection. "By the very nature of this business, he said, "it is more exposed to adverse influences and has less protection against losses than any other business of similar importance."

Foreign Competition.
The farming and live stock interests are suffering from competition with raw material from foreign countries imported into this country free of duty, Mr. Pryor said. "They cannot compete with cheap labor employed to cultivate or raise stock on cheap land and maintain our standard of living and property values," he continued. "If they are forced to do this, then poverty is their heritage—the producers are as much entitled to a tariff on the so-called raw material as the manufacturers."

"Why should they be compelled to sell in a free market and buy in a protected one? It is an unjust discrimination."
"We should be opposed to discrimination, as between corporations, systems or sections of the United States, and we should not ask for favors in any form, but oppose favoritism in all its forms. Is it right or just that for thirty or forty million farmers in this country to provide the necessities of life for the sixty or seventy million consumers, in addition to supplying themselves, and that, too, at an outlay of labor, consisting of from twelve to fifteen hours per day, besides producing this at a commercial loss? Most emphatically no."

Present System Scored.
"We can never prosper long under a system of one-half free trade, one-half protection, one-half subsidized and one-half taxed."
Mr. Pryor said some countries which ship larger quantities of farm products into America duty free are paying labor as low as 17 cents a day. "In Japan, for instance, a full grown man works for as little as 17 cents a day," he said. "During the past few months trainloads of Chinese laborers have been passing through El Paso en route to Cuba by way of Tampa, Fla. These Chinese laborers go there under contract to work on sugar farms and to work on a basis that means absolute bankruptcy and demoralization to our people in this country if we are compelled to compete with them in raising sugar."

"To bring this question nearer home to us there are five or six countries in the western hemisphere, including Australia and New Zealand, that have a population of 41,000,000 people, and 82,000,000 cattle. We have over 100,000,000 people and about 70,000,000 head of cattle. Due to cheapness of land and to the cheapness of labor in those countries their beef can be produced from two to three cents per pound, while it costs several times two or three cents to produce beef in this country. Coupled with the ocean freight rates as compared with the railroad rates in this country we have not the slightest chance to succeed if we are compelled to compete with those countries in production of live stock, unless we are given a tariff on our products that will at least equalize the cost of production."

Discusses Cotton.
Mr. Pryor said the same thing could be said with propriety and truth of cotton. He said under the old freight rate he could ship a carcass of beef or mutton from Buenos Aires to Boston cheaper than from Fort Worth, Texas, to Boston, and that the recent raise in freight rates gave still more advantage to water transportation—so that two carcasses now can be shipped from South America to New York or Boston for what it would cost to ship one from Fort Worth to those cities."

"The cattle business is passing through what might be termed the most critical period that has been experienced in many, many years, and this same experience would apply to quite all agricultural products," Mr. Pryor said. The speaker described the cause of business as twofold. "First, the withdrawing of credit in a large measure by the money lenders of the country to the live stock producers. Second, the unstable condition of the country in general and the fear of importation of meats into this country by foreign countries free of duty. These have a tendency to keep men who would like to invest out of the stock business and those who have already invested to dispose of their holdings. Without confidence in the future there is no such thing as a stable market. A bet on our products of sufficient amount to at least equalize the cost or production in the United States as compared to foreign countries would create confidence and stimulate production."

In conclusion, Mr. Pryor said income tax records indicated the country has 20,000 millionaires and asked whoever heard of "an honest to God millionaire farmer?" He said most of these millionaires made their money in the manufacturing business.

I.
Do you like surprises? The Boston Store has prepared some 500 packages, which they will sell on Friday, between 10 o'clock in the morning and 3:30 in the afternoon. They guarantee that each package contains merchandise valued at from $1.50 to $10, and you may choose your own package for $1. This is quite a novel idea, and should be attractive to shoppers.

One model, which is marked at half price, is a blue serge one-piece dress, with accordion pleated skirt, and overblouse trimmed with roman striped ribbon.

III.
Valliant's Book Store has just received a shipment of pictures. There is a splendid assortment, including some excellent Carot and Watts copies. There is a dancing girl series by Blenden Campbell, Brewer's etching of Rheims Cathedral, the well known Lone Wolf, by Kowalski, and others too numerous to mention. This department is now ready to take orders for picture framing, and are well equipped for this work.

RED CROSS HAS ARMY OF VOLUNTEER KNITTERS IN VIENNA

VIENNA, Jan. 13.—In Vienna just now there is as great a craze for knitting as there was in England during the war. This revival is due to Major Bateman, the American Red Cross commissioner, because it was cheaper for America to furnish wool than to furnish garments for the people of Austria. He organized a band of "Volunteer Knitters" whose number has grown to 20,000 women and 100,000 children. The yarn with which they work is furnished free and the finished garments, most of which are for the smaller children are distributed through American organizations. Austrian women invented the so-called "continental" method of knitting, which is said to be faster than any other and involves fewer motions, the familiar click of the needles for instance, being entirely absent. They claim to be the best knitters in the world and have already turned out thousands of garments using up the wool faster than it can be supplied.

SOLD CASING, KEPT PROCEEDS; GETS TWO YEARS

Special to the Times.
EASTLAND, Jan. 13.—J. A. Wray was convicted by a jury in the Eighty-eighth district court and given a sentence of three years in the state penitentiary. The indictment is for embezzlement and charges the defendant with converting to his own use on Oct. 25, 1919, the sum of $6,667.00, the proceeds of a sale of casing to Thomas Hester. Wray was acting in the sale of the casing as the field superintendent and agent of the Southwestern Petroleum company and was on this company's lease near Desdemona. The company authorized Wray to have the old casing taken from a dry well and also directed him to sell it, but the contention of the state was that Wray sold the casing and failed to account to his principal for the proceeds of the sale.

Wray did not go on the stand and in fact did not offer any testimony at all. The defendant has a family living on a farm in Arkansas. The defendant's counsel will offer a motion for a new trial and if that is overruled, will appeal the case to the court of criminal appeals.

Since the flight of William Hohenzollern into Holland, he has received more than $25,000,000 in salary as king of Prussia.

State Fair Was Once 'Wild West' Show, Says Kiest

DALLAS, Jan. 12.—That successful state fairs do not spring up overnight is well illustrated in the history of the State Fair of Texas, an institution without parallel in its plan of organization.

Mr. Kiest, who is publisher of the Dallas Times-Herald, has for many years been active in promoting the state fair and has watched it grow from incipency to its present proportions.

Broncho, Razor-Back, Etc. "When the Texas State Fair was first held in 1856, the broncho horse, the long-horn steer and the razor-back hog comprised the chief livestock interests in Texas."

"The wild west shows have carried off many of the few remaining long-horns and the demise of that class of cattle has been followed by the breeding of the best classes obtainable in the country."

"Along with the growth of the state's livestock industry has come the development of numerous other industries and potentialities. The chief of these was discovered only a short time ago in the seemingly unbounded oil pools of the state."

"In many lines Texas has much to show the world. The state fair, which is held annually at Dallas has successfully demonstrated to visitors and impressed upon the people of the state the value of these vast resources, and in carrying out the work has not only utilized the best features of other similar fairs in the country, but has made available to the public features not incorporated in other exhibits."

The present state fair had its origin in the Dallas County Fair, which was launched in 1862, according to Secretary Stratton. He said the statutes of Texas on file in the capitol at Austin show that during a special session of the Ninth Legislature on Jan. 9, 1862, an act incorporating the Dallas County Fair was passed.

T. & P. PROPERTY BROKEN LINK IN EAST MAIN WALK

One link in the sidewalk along East Main street is being halted pending the consent of the Texas & Pacific Railroad company to the building of a full width walk along its property at East Main and Lamar street, which is 100 feet in length.

The city has taken the matter up with Chief Engineer Mitchell of the railroad company and is making an effort to have the matter adjusted at once in order that the work may go forward. It will be explained to the engineer that in a short time the city will have a compulsory sidewalk ordinance in effect and the walk will have to be built.

Plans soon will be given to the engineers for the finishing touches and bids will be called for. The board in control will meet the middle of this month to accept or reject the bids. It is hoped that barring unforeseen obstacles, the new stadium will be completed in time for the 1921 football season.

It is estimated by the board that between $50,000 and $100,000 will be needed to do the work. If the bids prove to be around these amounts no doubt contracts will be let. The estimate is considered reasonably safe by members of the board.

The new "U" stadium will seat about 43,000 persons, thus equalling the capacity of the Harvard stadium and falling short of the Yale bowl by about 18,000.

Sports... Michigan Stadium to Be Completed for 1921 Season

International News Service, ANN ARBOR, Mich., Jan. 12.—Plans for the erection of a new concrete north stand and a new west stand to complete the "U" stadium on Ferry Field have been approved by the board of control of athletics at the University of Michigan and work on this project will begin in the spring if the bids are inside the $400,000 mark.

The old wooden north stand will be torn down and part of it moved over to the baseball diamond, where it will serve a much-needed purpose in taking care of the baseball fans in the spring. A modern concrete structure similar to the present south stand will take its place, while another one on the west side will connect the two, thus forming the giant horseshoe.

Plans were drawn up by Prof. Lewis M. Gram, of the engineering department, Can Make Additions. Prof. Gram says that if a greater seating capacity is needed in future years additions can be built above the present heights, thus forming the so-called "double deckers."

Michigan has long needed a larger stadium. Last year in particular inadequate seating facilities were badly felt. It is said that many more people would have witnessed the Michigan-Chicago game if short of the Yale bowl by about 18,000, they could have been accommodated.

The plans were drawn up by Prof. Lewis M. Gram, of the engineering department, Can Make Additions. Prof. Gram says that if a greater seating capacity is needed in future years additions can be built above the present heights, thus forming the so-called "double deckers."

Sentell Will Aid A. & M. Baseball Club Next Month

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Jan. 13.—Paul Sentell will return to the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas next month to help Coach D. N. Bible begin the selection of baseball timber, and start them on spring training. Sentell will remain with Bible throughout the entire season.

He came to A. & M. about the first of February of last year and remained about six weeks helping in the choice and training of the Aggie squad.

Mr. Sentell is a man of wide experience on the baseball field both as a player and manager. He has played in the National league and served as manager of several minor league baseball clubs. The Farmers are fortunate in securing Sentell as their baseball mentor. His success as an umpire has been marvelous, also since he has ceased his activities as a player. He umpired in the Texas league last year after leaving A. & M.

Team aspirants are already showing up on the campus. Many of the familiar faces that peeped over the neckband of an Aggie uniform are seen, as well as heard talking of their experiences during the summer on specially elected and organized squads that toured the small towns and played wherever there was a vacant lot.

Red Daniels, veteran pitcher, whose untimely sickness just as the season started last year prevented him from working on the mound, is expected to return to school the second term which begins January 22 and start training for his old position. His loss last year was considered more than any other factor as the reason for the Aggies' failure to capture the Southwestern championship, and his presence on the team this year will be one of the most deciding factors in the winning of the championship this year.

ROADS—ONE WAY OR ANOTHER.

Tonight, it is to be hoped, plans will be outlined whereby the maintenance of roads leading from Ranger into the oil fields will be cured for.

The best and simplest means for this must be decided. Many persons believe that a Good Roads association, in which all other civic organizations can join, and in which all contributing interests will be represented, is a good solution.

Others advocate an automobile club for the same purpose. They point to the wonderful roads of California, which they say have been constructed through the activities of such clubs.

Full and free discussion will doubtless bring out the best plan of operation. The means employed does not alter the issue, which is that Ranger must have good roads if it is to maintain its position as the dominant city in oil field commerce.

County agencies must be induced and forced to build them, if possible. If not, then Ranger must provide the money through private contributions.

Ranger is somewhat unfortunately situated to bring pressure to bear within its trade territory. Being close to the county lines, a large part of its trade comes from two adjoining counties, wherein the influence of the city on the politicians is sought.

Whatever the means, the roads must be built. Business men in touch with the situation have said that Ranger can well afford to spend $100,000 a year in keeping its roads in good condition, and that such a sum will be no burden if properly distributed among the individual concerns.

MEANWHILE WE GO HUNGRY.

Highly illuminating, even though it provides qualms, is the discovery in a cold storage plant in Milwaukee, Wis., of 25,000 dozen eggs which have been lying there approximately twenty months. They are in the liquid form preferred by bakers, confectioners and other producers of finished food products.

Orders have been issued to discharge them from storage. It does not follow, however, that they will be thrown upon the market. If arrangements can be made by the owners they may be shipped to Chicago, St. Paul or some other neighboring city for another impartment and to continue their function of indirectly controlling the price of eggs in the national market.

It is wearisome to be compelled from time to time to print matters of this sort—because revelations concerning cold storage abuses are quite common—and to watch with forced patience the deliberation of the United States senate in providing a remedy for this form of food piracy. Nourishment has demands which rise superior to every other human law.

voyors to withhold not only the surplus, but a part of the normal supply from the markets, and thus cause people to go hungry in the midst of a glut of production. There are dozens of instances like that in Milwaukee which have been brought to the attention of these delinquent representatives of the people, but action is deferred and deferred again until the heart is made sick. One is almost compelled to utter the appeal: "Oh, for one hour of Theodore Roosevelt!"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Most Peaceful Nation in the World—

By MORRIS

THE WOMAN WHO SAW

born to sing. Now and again, far too seldom, a child is born to whom the fairies tell tales and all the world sings. Such a one is Edward Black, a little shut-in, whose frail park of life ebbs and flows to the rhythm of poetry, and the whirl of elfin wings.

Of all the grown-ups who make the world a happy place for the small boy Edward's mother looms largest. To her he tells his fairy tales and dictates his verse. Never has he been to school or had a lesson, but he has taught himself to read, despite the doctor's orders that mental effort was too great a strain on his delicate body in which Edward's eager soul is housed. Spelling and copy books are not among his possessions, and ambition, distraction, uglification and leision have never crossed his path. With his dog and a few chosen friends, he lives circumscribed by frailty, content in circumstances, but his mind is free. Truly there are compensations in every deprivation.

When the Woman read the following poem by Edward she liked it. Later on he was glad to learn that a far better critic had thought well of it. None other than E. V. Lucas has quoted it. And so we give it the place of honor among the "Saws."

My mother stood in the candle light, With a red rose in her hair, And another at her throat. Her face is delicately moulded, With cool black eyes that seem To smoulder, like fire, far into the night.

Her cheeks are a gorgeous red, Her lips curved in a smile That seems like the morning dawn itself.

Her neck is soft and slim, Like a swan floating down the river, I love her, for she is my mother, And I love no other.

She shares my joys and sorrows, my mother, Her heart is kind and true, Her hair is black and glossy— I can't describe my mother's beauty.

The Capitalist.

Tony and Luigi wheeled their hardy well into the middle of the block, where they knew that a certain yellow-skinned little girl would welcome their wares and throw forth five or ten cents maybe. It was Saturday morning, and the janitors were out with hose and bucket and broom, throwing water about with the abandon if not the effectiveness of Dutch housewives. And there was Joseph, come from beautiful Florence, to scrub a da floor, make-a da fire and add his sunny charm to the joy of living in No. 52 West. He looked with scorn at Tony and Luigi, as the latter turned the crank that sent forth into the morning air a jazzy tune, while his partner smilingly held out his hat to a chance face at a window. Joseph plied his broom with zeal and splashed streams profusely near the two and their organ. "Ping" went a little wad of paper, with a coin in it, in the pavement. As Tony bowed graciously to the donor and stooped to gather a tribute to his presence, he remarked gayly to the swooning Joseph, "Ah, man, you work a too damn-a hard or a living!"

INSISTS UPON HANGING AROUND POLICE STATION

International News Service. DETROIT, Jan. 12.—Dan Bolitt, of his city, persisted in hanging around the police station here until the police attendants nearly had nervous prostration. He was first found hanging in his cell by his suspenders. Then he tried his shirt, he then his belt and finally his trousers. Not having anything else to hang himself to, he gave up the idea of suicide and decided that life was worth living after all.

"Tinker Bob" Stories by Carlisle H. Holcomb

THEY FIND A PECULIAR LAND.

Tinker Bob was very glad that he could get away from Jerry without being seen. For he had really seen enough of Jerry in the Great Forest. He was always glad to see him but he did not so much of hearing the stories he had to tell about other folk of the Forest. Said he to Lady Duck, as they were off and away from Jerry, "I'll find a place where Jerry will not find us, and where no other Creature of the Great Forest will find us."

This pleased Lady Duck. "Quack, quack," she said. "I am glad to be out of his way for once." They looked below and they found that they were rapidly getting away from where there was anything growing on the ground. "This seems very strange," said Tinker Bob. "There must be no grass on the ground about here and there seems to be no trees. We must be coming close to the seaside. I never in all my life saw such a place as this before. But then I never saw the seaside so I don't know how it looks. But I have heard from the Creatures of the Forest that it is bare and nothing grows there because it is so sandy."

He looked in surprise at the ground. Lady Duck was somewhat surprised also. "Quack, quack, I never did see such a place as this before myself. No this is not like the sea shore for I have been there many times. See those funny things that are growing in the sand alone without any other things growing about them. What this all means I cannot tell."

They just kept on looking. Tinker was sure that the Beautiful Creature of His Desire was not leading them astray for that Creature was the most steadfast of all his friends. But surely this was some different than he had expected.

"I cannot understand it at all," he said as he looked about on every side. "I cannot see anything now that is growing except those snarley looking things that seem to be growing by themselves."

FRENCH TAKE OVER FLEET OF GENERAL WRANGLER

International News Service. PARIS, Jan. 12.—In recognition of the help given him by the French Mediterranean fleet, General Wrangler, leader of the anti-Bolshevik forces, which were recently driven out of the Crimea by the Red armies, has offered the French government, which has accepted, the fleet he disposed of during his campaign in South Russia. This fleet includes one dreadnought, one cruiser, two destroyers and twenty cargo boats. It has a crew of 6,000. These ships were sent to North Africa and are to be used for trading between France and her colonies. The crews were sent back to join Wrangler's forces in the Near East.

RIPPLING RHYMES

A TRUE STORY.

There was a man who owned some flats, out in a western town, fit dwellings for aristocrats, all painted white and brown; and renters took their kids and cats to them and settled down. In time the greasy rent hogs rose, on get-rich courses bent; the hearts of many landlords froze, they gnawed at every cent; and people sought their parlors, to pay the monthly rent. And landlords got an evil name throughout that blighted grad; they played a profiteering game that made the victims mad; said victims said it was a shame, as they dug up the sand. While other landlords raised the price, the hero of this tale said old time prices would suffice, old contracts should prevail; he would not ask an extra slice of hard-pressed tenants' kale. These tenants, being safe and sane, to gratitude not dead, when rent day came did not complain, or fear the landlord's tread; but they gave him a handsome one, that had a golden head. Oh, all the tenants stood in line, and then, with scowly mirth, they sprung their tribute, high and fine, to one of sterling worth; and he was moved to shed, die being that tickled to the earth. He gets more pleasure from this gift than do the pirates gay, the profiteers who strive, to lift the prices every day, from all the coin their evil thrift has won and filed away.

"Tinker Bob" Stories by Carlisle H. Holcomb

WE ARE SURELY COMING TO A VERY STRANGE PART OF THE WORLD.

Everything looks so dry. I don't see how anything can grow here. We are surely coming to a very strange part of the world. Is it not funny to look everywhere and not see a tree when we are so used to trees of every kind in the world? I never could stand it—to live here where nothing grows."

Lady Duck spoke up right away. "Well, quack, quack, you can bet that nothing else lives here very long. This must be the end of the world."

It was beginning to grow dark and Tinker was wondering if they would have to stay on in the forsaken place all night. It began to look very much like that way. The basket began to lower and then they were sure that this was to be their place for the night. Tinker Bob could not understand, but he was not afraid.

Tomorrow we shall see what happened in the night.

Tomorrow—Tinker Bob Is Awakened.

Today was pops birthday, and after supper he was snoozing and thinking in the sitting room not looking any older than what he looked yesterday, and I handed him a 5 cent bottle of mulligande kind of sticky on the outside on account of me having used a little of it to see how good it was, saying, Merry birthday, pop.

O thank you, well, well, this is indeed a surprize, sed pop. And he started to first hold it in one hand and then in the other as if it was hot but really because it was sticky, saying, Well, this is very nice and thavifill of you indeed, well, well, its just the kind of mulligande I would of picked out myself if it ever occurred to me to pick out mulligande.

G, I'm glad you like it pop, say, pop, can I go to the movies tomorrow afternoon with Puds Simkins? I sed.

Well I should say you can, no Puds Simkins is going to have anything on you, especially on my birthday, sed Pop. And he gave me money for the movies, and ma came in with a big wire box, saying, Happy birthday Wilyum, wat do you suppose is in heer for you?

Well, well, surprize after surprize, well, sed pop, and ma gave pop the box and pop took the lid off and there was 2 slippers inside, pop saying, Well, well, just the very thing, just as my other slippers were getting comfortable, I mean worn out, well, well.

Im so glad you like them, and by the way, Wilyum, you mentioned meeting me down town to pick out a hat for me, sed ma, and pop sed, O, did I mention that, I thawt it was you that mentioned it, how about tomorrow afternoon? and ma sed, O Wilyum how perfectly lovely of you.

Its the best I can do on my birthday, sed pop, and just then my sister Gladis came in with a box with 2 more slippers in it and gave them to pop and asked him if she could get 6 pairs of kid gloves and charge them to him, wich pop sed she could.

Proving wen some people have a birthday its just as good as having one yourself.

The Real "Shopping District" Is the "Residence District"

A remarkably successful merchant was giving a talk to his numerous salesmen and saleswomen as had been his weekly practice for years.

The talk he had with them this day reflected the individuality of the man in its originality of presentation.

He had thrown upon a screen the map of his city and its suburbs. The relation of the homes to the business districts was clearly indicated.

"You have all heard of the 'shopping district' of this city. Ask ten people whom you meet to run a line upon this map around the shopping district, and, without hesitation, nine of them would mark out this business district you see here," pointing to the part of the map so labeled.

"But the real shopping district of this metropolis is here," pointing to the homes in the city and suburbs.

"It is in the homes that purchases are made. There the man or woman who is to patronize us or some other store forms the impressions, favorably or unfavorably, which influence his or her entire buying habit. True, a woman may not always make out a shopping list divided between this store and that, though this is often done. But in the long run she does spend her money at the store where her interests in quality and desire for good service are best served. She may make random purchases at stores of which she has very slight knowledge. But the greater part of her patronage will be given to the store or shop which continuously advances its claims of quality and reliability through the newspaper which she reads in her home. The growth of this store in the past ten years proves this beyond all doubt."

This city's "Shopping District" is nearest those stores who send their advertising news into it through the newspaper which reaches its homes.

Having the faith of its progressive readers, this newspaper is a steady influence in mental and material decisions. Its advertising news is a selling agency which means increased patronage and multiplied profits for the merchant who grasps the advantages offered through its columns.

BREAK OF ICE-JAMS IN SPRING WILL SEE RUSH OF OIL SEEKERS TO THE ARCTIC ELDORADO

EDMONTON, Alberta, Canada, Jan. 12.-High and dry on the banks of the Athabasca, the Slave, and the Mackenzie rivers are the little steamers which, when the ice jams break, will carry thousands northward to file on oil claims in Canada's new Arctic El Dorado. During the summer they ply the long reaches of the unmapped northern rivers, taking the bacon, beans, flour and other commodities necessary to life in the wilderness, returning laden to the gunning's ransom. When the snow flies and the rivers commence to freeze, the stern-wheelers are hauled on the bank, out of reach of the grinding ice floes, while the carpenter and the engineer overhaul them thoroughly in preparation for the traffic of the short open season, and be very sure that this winter the overhauling is a thorough one, for when they again take the water they will be crowded to capacity by the oil seekers who have booked their berths nearly a year in advance.

Ordinarily their passenger lists carry the names of the trader, the missionary, and the mounted policeman alone; seldom does the tourist patronize the steamers headed for the Arctic, but the finding of oil at Fort Norman has totally altered the complexion of traffic in the North, and next summer the little steamers will carry a class of passengers that none of the old-time traders in their widest flights of fancy would have thought possible.

So the river flotilla makes due preparation; hammer and wrench are busy on the little wooden hulls, while the sawmills are slashing out the lumber from which new hulls will be rapidly constructed to cope with the coming of men eager to drive their corner stakes on the new oil field, where the first hole punched in mother earth tapped a gusher which spouted ninety feet into the air.

Two Routes Are Open. To reach Fort Norman by steamer two routes are open; one by way of Fort McMurray and the Athabasca river, the other via Peace River town, and the river after which it is named. The distance in either case is about the same, while the length of the voyage can be best estimated by glancing at the map. Going by the Athabasca river, the railway is taken to Fort McMurray, where the traveler boards the steamer which carries him to Fort Fitzgerald. Here is a sixteen-mile portage round the rapids over which a steamer cannot run. On the other side of the portage another steamer will be taken which carries him to the mouth of the river, where the traveler boards the steamer which carries him to Fort Fitzgerald.

In general the conditions of travel on the different rivers do not vary, and the following account of traffic on the Athabasca is typical of the whole. Arriving at Fort McMurray by the Alberta Great Waterways railroad, the travelers will find that although McMurray is the main contact point on the land of navigation, that in relation to size it corresponds to about the average village. He will find the river steamers tied up to the bank of the Athabasca, with steam up, which will probably interest him more than the town, which is the usual collection of job traders' stores and warehouses, bank, postoffice, and so on.

Big Asphalt Deposits. Once on the steamer, the boat slips rapidly down stream with a steamer which is under her way, passing a few miles from McMurray the immense asphalt deposits on the river banks; great black, oily masses of asphalt, which are now under lease and will be worked by a big American company next season. The banks are high and wooded, while there is nothing much to vary the scenery, except perhaps an occasional massive of bear-remains point on the bank on the approach of the steamer, or a band of Indians in their canoes paddling up stream close inshore to avoid the current.

Leaving the Athabasca river the lake of the same name is reached, the crossing from the mouth of the river to the post at Chipewyan being a difficult one when the wind is blowing, which is usually the case. Very often the steamer is pushing ahead of her a scow laden with goods, and as the steamer is flat-bottomed and possesses no keel, besides having high deckhouses, they naturally make a target for the wind, rendering navigation difficult.

The country at Chipewyan (one of the oldest forts of the Hudson Bay Company) is entirely barren, the buildings inside the old stockade being located on the rolling, glacial rocks, the small gardens in which the traders and missionaries grew their potatoes and vegetables have been made by the laborious process of carrying the soil in sacks from among the crevices in the rocks. All the big trading companies have outposts here, in addition to a mission and a hospital of the Roman Catholic missionaries.

Chipewyan is very picturesque and possesses a history which reaches far back into the early days of the fur trade, it is a difficult landing place, however, being wind-swept and without a harbor, but the steamers are able to pull close ashore to deliver their freight. The most up-to-date berthing accommodation consists of a large iron ring fastened to a rock to which the steamers are attached. Leaving Chipewyan, the Slave river is entered by one of the narrow and tortuous channels which connect this river with Lake Athabasca, and passing the numerous shoals and rocks, which are everywhere, the boat finally ties up at Fort Fitzgerald, where the passengers must leave the steamer, cross the sixteen-mile portage, and on the other side again embark on another craft, which will carry them to the Arctic.

At Fitzgerald the Northern Trading company have a small pier, where the goods are unloaded, but the Hudson Bay boats tie up to the bank, the freight being hauled up the steep river side by means of a block and cable. There are many Indians and half-breeds engaged at the portage in transshipping the goods from one waterway to another, who, when the day's work is done, are wont to make merry by dancing the night through.

The boilers of the vessels are fed with wood fuel, and to obtain supplies there are stations at regular distances, stored up ready for the steamer, having been cut the previous winter by the company's natives. About six or eight cords of wood are taken on board at each station on the way down stream, but it requires from ten to twelve to force the steamer up against the current on the return journey, for the same distance. Travelers Sleep on Deck. The crew of the steamers generally consists of a captain, native pilot, purser steward, cook, two engineers and five deckhands. In addition to their ordinary duties of handling the cargo, the deckhands put in six hour shifts, passing the wood to the men in charge of the boilers, and due to their activities the boats are almost unendurably hot, with the heat from the boilers on the deck, and the Alberta sun beating down on the little craft in the trough of the river. Due to these facts the majority of the travelers sleep on deck, and of course as is the custom of the north country everyone carries his own blankets.

Four New Wells Boost South Bend Output to 5,000. Figures on Young county production show the daily average of that field, including the South Bend, Lydon and Midway pools, to be 1,645 barrels per day, dating from the completion of its first well several months ago. Present daily production will approximate 5,000 barrels. Recent completions include the Oklahoma Petroleum & Gasoline company's No. 1, Graham, 700 barrels; Chapman & Clark's No. 2, Graham, 750 barrels, and the Godley Oil company's No. 1, Graham, 300.

The North American company will drill an important test on the Ben Scott lease in the Radisson district, two miles southeast of present production.

AMERICAN OIL CONCERNS TO BE BARRED BY DUTCH

THE HAGUE, Jan. 12.-United States authorities here fear that American interests will be excluded from the great Djamba oil fields in the Dutch East Indies if a bill introduced in the Dutch parliament be adopted. This measure proposes to give the concession of these fields to a subsidiary of the Batavia Oil Co. The territory to be included in the concession is described as the most valuable petroleum ground in the Dutch East Indies.

The field has long been the scene of commercial rivalry between Dutch-English and American oil groups. Americans here say that the only way in which American interests could obtain representation to the stock of the proposed handling company to be formed to handle the concession.

In this holding company, the Dutch East India government and the Batavia company would, by provisions of the bill, be joint stockholders, the government sharing evenly in the profits. The government, however, will have a majority on the board of directors. According to the Amsterdam Handelsblad, the preferred shares, giving a right to vote as the control but not as to the direct management, which will be in the hands of the Batavia company, will be mostly under government control, but in order to placate foreigners, particularly American interests, a certain proportion of what are known as the "B" shares, may be sold to foreigners with the consent of the government.

Express Company Horses Not Hurt by 10-Foot Fall

A team belonging to the express company backed themselves and wagon off the high culvert near the Texas & Pacific station Tuesday and fell for a distance of ten feet. The only damage was a broken singletree. The driver was unloading express at a train when the team started to back and continued until the outfit was tumbled off the culvert. A block and tackle was necessary to remove the wagon. The horses struggled out on their own power.

Hobby Proposes Legion Take Over Hospital Work

AUSTIN, Jan. 13.—Governor Hobby, as president of the Texas Benevolent War Risk society, has proposed that the department of Texas, American Legion, take over all assets and functions of the former organization in relation to the hospital for tubercular ex-soldiers at Kerrville, and that the Benevolent War Risk society be dissolved. The executive board of the department of Texas, American Legion, the executive board of the Benevolent War Risk society, and the board of control of the hospital have been called by the governor to meet in Austin on Friday, Jan. 14, to consider this proposal.

In calling the meeting, the governor said in part: "You are urgently requested to attend this meeting, because it is my purpose to recommend to the Benevolent War Risk society that a complete and full delivery of all assets and responsibilities of the Benevolent War Risk society be transferred to the department of Texas, American Legion. I am further going to recommend, inasmuch as the Benevolent War Risk society has in a large measure accomplished the aims and ambitions of the gentlemen with whom I have been associated in this great work, and having in mind that the American Legion is a continuing organization and better able to continue this great benevolent enterprise in the interest of ex-service men, that we transfer to them our entire organization and the records thereof."

"I do hereby further at this time, call a general meeting of the entire membership of the Benevolent War Risk society, at the same time and place hereinabove designated, for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year, as per the constitution and by-laws of the organization, in order that they may take any action taken by the board of directors, should the same be necessary."

"I further desire to call your attention to the fact that the drought relief board authorized by resolution the donating of the cash on hand, and such other amounts as may be paid back into the drought relief fund, to the Benevolent War Risk society, or the organization which has in hand the building of the soldiers' hospital at Kerrville. This committee now has on hand approximately $43,000, and I have been advised by the board of control of the hospital that this money is urgently needed."
