PLACING THE COLLEGE.

Passage of the West Texas A. & M. college bill is a matter of congratulation to Ranger, as it is to the rest of West Texas. Passage by the substantial majority it received, despite the opposition of various local interests, indicates that the tide has turned in the matter of friendship between sections; indicates that hereafter there will be not nearly so much friction between sections as in the past.

Now the question of co-operation in and friendliness shifts to the western section of the state. The question before the house is, in what particular part of the vast territory named in the bill shall the college be placed. Obviously, it would seem, somewhere in the middle of this vast district, as nearly midway from east to west and from north to south as it is possible to put it and at the same time obtain the general average of soil and climatic conditions for the territory to be served. That way and that way only can West Texas remain united. The interests of Amarillo differ somewhat from those of Brownwood. Those of Pecos are different from those in Ranger. However all these interests must be served. Obviously, there is some town which can best do so. It is not necessarily the place where the north-south and east-west lines cross, but where the general average of soil and climatic conditions, accessibility, and other desirable factors are best met.

There is such a town, somewhere in the West. And that town should be chosen, without politics, without community rivalry based upon competition, and without the advantages which will naturally accrue to the place selected. If the choice is made with an eye to the best interest of West Texas as a whole, then will the West remain united. But if chicanery and influence have a part in the selection, then will sore spots arise which will leave scars hard to heal.

Ranger itself has not thrown its hat in the ring. It probably will not. While such an institution would be desirable to any town, yet it is on the edge of a vast territory to be served, and cannot even approximate the conditions in some parts of the west no more than those districts can approximate conditions around Ranger. Ranger wants to see the West developed and aided. It expects itself to be benefited by this college, but all it asks is a square deal for the section as a whole.

BOOSTING ROMANCE

Convention is a death blow to romance. 'Twas ever thus; perhaps 'twill ever be. Many a stalwart passes by a damsel fair with heart a-thumping; many a damsel fair feels a flutter underneath the floating ribs as some youth is seen standing palpitating in at the curb, just hoping for some such scenery as herself to come along.

But convention guides each with an iron hand. The twain pass by, to meet no more. They recover oft, but each has a glimpse into a possible paradise of affection, and then the blinds are drawn.

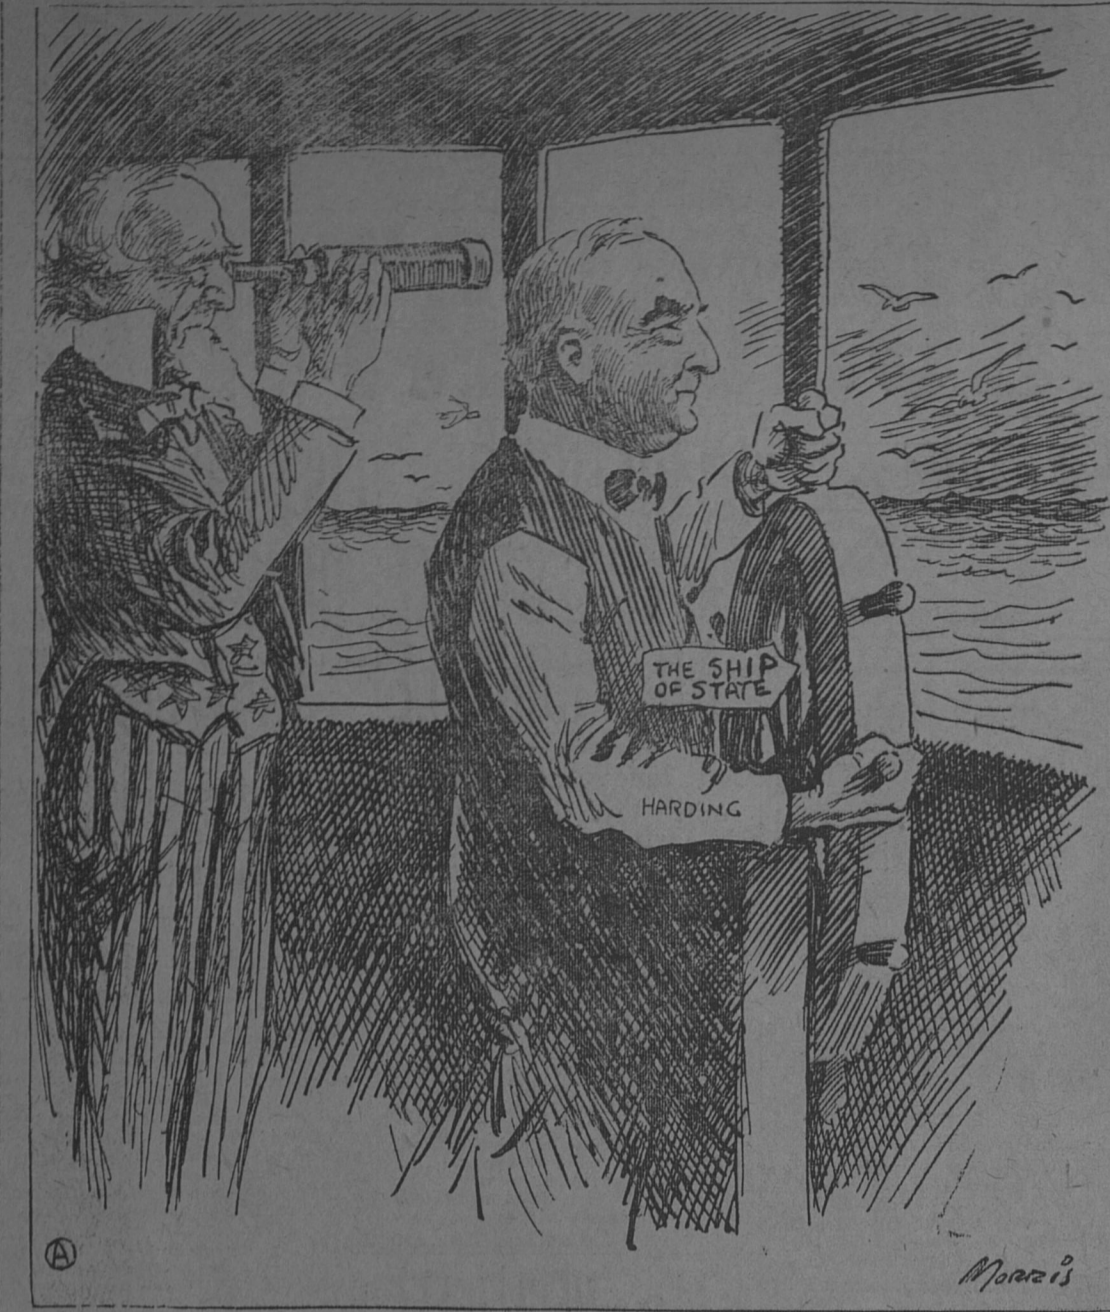

The greatest need of moderns is a shortcut to introductions. In the old days, when the country was thinly settled, and everyone knew everyone else, this was not so hard. But now, in the thriving marts which dot the country, the way is harder. As well might several drops of water strive to reunite.

It would seem, these facts being true, that society should solve this problem for itself. Make cops official introducers, or something like that. Put a bell on every corner, so that any person who desired could ding-ding for a cop, and say, "Introduce me." Which the copper could do with Chesterfieldian grace if trained to it. That endeth the formalities. No need thereafter for the man to "mush" the damsel; no need for herself to drape herself upon an arm which desired freedom, unless both so desired. Romance could then pursue an untrammelled course, in the porch swing or other proper place.

It takes lots of coca-cola to give an edge to this type of literature. The lasting-world-peace movement is ending in a war scare. So much for the uncertainty of human affairs.—Baltimore American.

Can He Steer Into the Waters of Normal Conditions?

By Morris

Rippling Rhymes by Walt Mason

DREARINESS
It is a cold and clammy day as I proceed to write these lines; the skies are desolate and gray, no sunlight on the water shines, and round my cabin by the bay a bleak wind from the ocean whines. Oh, such a day as this, I know, inspired all sad old songs of yore; on such a day poor Edgar Poe embalmed his loved and lost Lenore, and Tennyson, knee-deep in woe, bewailed his Hal-lam gone before. And all the dirges men have known were born on such a day as this, when cold winds through the chimney moan, and rain gusts at the windows hiss; and I would give a silver bone if I could think of joy and bliss. The rain gusts do not fall on me, for I am sheltered from the storm; the bleak winds blow in from the sea, but I am safe and snug and warm; why don't I chirp a song of glee and swat my lyre in proper form? "Be still, sad heart," the Poet wrote, "and cease repining, right away; the sun, you think, has lost its goat, and ne'er again will shed a ray; but back of yonder clouds remote the good old orb is baling hay." Longfellow thus, as I recall, shook off the tendency to sigh; "into all lives some rain must fall, if one's man's wet, the next one's dry, so let me have your parasol, and I'll return it next July."

"Tinker Bob" Stories by Carlyle H. Holcomb

TINKER BOB APPEARS.
"Now tell me, Lady Duck, why are you so sad?" Silky was a very tender, hearted fellow, and he never liked to see any one sad.

"Quack, quack!" It always makes me feel sad when I think of leaving the King of the Forest. He has always been so good to me and protected me every time there was danger. He has befriended me so many times that I cannot think of leaving him without feeling sad. And great tear drops rolled off the sides of Lady Duck's face.

Lady Duck wasn't the only being who hated partings, either. There was one whom they did not see and it made him feel sad also to think that Lady Duck was going to leave and travel thereafter with the flock. This other being who felt sad was none other than Tinker Bob, the King of the Forest. There were tears in his eyes, for he could not help thinking about the many pleasant times that he and Lady Duck had had when romancing through the forest.

Silky had almost a notion to say that he did not want to go with the King when he observed Lady Duck's sorrow. Yet he hesitated, for he didn't want to make a mistake. He was alone and he longed for someone to live with in order that he might be happy. He thought it all over before he said a word to Mrs. Duck.

"Quack, quack, what are you thinking about, Mr. Monkey. I am sure you don't know what it means to have a friend like the King of the Forest." Then she began to think of the flock and the joy she would have with them as they went from place to place hunting food and protection.

"I am thinking of the sadness it might bring to you, Mrs. Duck, if I take your place with the King of the Forest. I cannot make you sad, for you have been such a good friend to the King. But you see, Mrs. Duck, I am all alone in the world and have no one to shut in. You have someone to look for help, for the flock will one to take care of me when I get sick, and no one to look after me when I die, and no one to call on me when I

It's as funny as a crutch, and if he waits for me to pass him the butter he'll sit there till dooms day, sed Gladis. I shall be obliged to indulge in passwing it to myself, I sed. And I reetched over and took a hold of the edge of the butter dish with 2 fingers to make it look more sissidy, and the dish leened over to one side and the butter slid rite off into pops plate in the middle of his pee, and the new jumped every rag way especially in pops lap, and pop jumped up, saying, Come come, enuff enuff, some people never know wen to quit.

SAYS SHE MADE ALCOHOL TO BATHE SICK HUSBAND.

NEW YORK, March 13.—Federal Judge Bodine in Newark yesterday, ordered Supervising Prohibition Enforcement Agent Leo A. Crossland, Philadelphia and District Prohibition Officer George A. Demo of Newark to appear in federal court, Trenton, Monday to explain why they arrested Mrs. Julia Janofchik of Grant and C streets, Roosevelt, N. J., and seized alcohol the woman asserted she was manufacturing to give alcohol baths to her tubercular husband.

The raid was made in December. The husband has since died. Mrs. Janofchik was conducting a small grocery store in the rear of a twenty-five gallon still, a ten gallon container and three barrels containing forty-seven gallons of fig or dapple mash. Mrs. Janofchik pleaded that her husband required alcohol baths and she was unable to buy it, decided to make it.

Judge Bodine said he did not approve the actions of the agents and the facts did not warrant the action against Mrs. Janofchik. He also said her arrest seemed an injustice.

WEDDED FOURTEEN NGIRLS IN THREE YEARS, IS CHARGE AGAINST 20-YER-OLD BOY

Scattered Them From Vermont to Virginia and Doesn't Remember Names of Some of His Brides, Lawyer Says; Deserted From Army and Navy.

NEW YORK, March 14.—If that sailor who boasts of possessing wives in several ports will consider the case of Harold Hammond, 20, of Bensonhurst, now serving a term in a naval prison at Portsmouth, N. H., the chances are he will forever after hold his peace. A suit for the annulment of a marriage pending in the supreme court at White Plains yesterday revealed that Hammond deserted from the army twice, from the navy once, and had led fourteen wives scattered from Vermont to Virginia.

The court was told that in October, 1917, Hammond, then 17, a private in the 18th Cavalry at Fort Ethan Allen, Burlington, Vt., went A. W. O. L. At the Municipal building here on Oct. 5 he was married to Miss Elizabeth Murray Burks of Jersey City. They took a room in East Twelfth street, but only a few hours after the marriage Hammond was arrested and taken back to his regiment.

He was tried, served a short sentence, deserted and enlisted in the navy under his brother's name. In 1919 he deserted from the navy. At Hoboken a short time later he was married to Miss Loretta F. Fitzhenry, 20, daughter of a wealthy truckman of Rockaway. He left her when a baby was born. Joseph J. Fitzhenry, the girl's father, took her home.

Last May Mr. Fitzhenry had his daughter meet Hammond by appointment. A detective was waiting and Hammond was arrested, extradited to Jersey City and indicted for bigamy. He pleaded guilty, but sentence was suspended when the naval authorities

No Work, No Funds, Father Grieves Over Plight of 9-Year-Old, Jailed for Theft

Many an anxious mother has agonized through sleepless nights over the question: "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" In most such cases it has been boys of mature, or nearly mature age—at least old enough to take care of themselves—whose waywardness has brought to the hearts of their parents the cold chill of grief.

Yesterday to the office of Lytton R. Taylor came a man whose footsteps no longer had the springiness of youth. Deep in his eyes lay a grief, self obscured by the desire in the breasts of all men to hide their emotions from the world.

He told a story of his boy—his baby boy—9 years old, being lodged in jail in Dallas for theft. He showed Taylor a letter from the probation officer of that city stating that his boy had been arrested for stealing an article of small value. He was then released to return home, his fare having been advanced. But there the tale did not end.

The boy went to Fort Worth and then returned to Dallas, where yesterday he was placed in jail again on another charge of theft.

The recent boy is one of six children, the father said. "I am out of work and funds, and can do nothing to help the little fellow," he went on. "Fate has never been kind, and it does seem I could have spared the boy."

FEARS REFORMATORY. At the suggestion that if his son is incorrigible—if a 9-year-old boy could be sent to the reformatory school, the old man's pent-up grief burst forth. "Anything but that," he pleaded. "Isn't there something I can do? Anything? I could do anything rather than have him sent away. He is his mother's baby, and it would surely break her heart."

Taylor promised—what else could he do? that he would see that the boy is returned to his home.

SAYS QUARTER OF PEOPLE IN U. S. ARE ILLITERATE OAKLAND, Cal., March 13.—One quarter of the population of the United States is illiterate, according to a statement of Fred M. Hunter said he based his statements on the United States army reports made during the war, which showed that 24.9 per cent of the people in this country could not read or write the English language.

CAN'T GO TO SCHOOL; EARNS TOO MUCH

Only 16. Girl Is so Skillful With Needle She Gets $48 a Week.

NEW YORK, March 14.—Do you, Miss Stenographer, earn $48 a week? You with your high school or business school education? And you, quiet and unassuming librarian, with your college degree, do you know anything of such riches?

Louise Dragonetti, only 16 and a half years old, earns that much by means of her swift and nimble fingers. She is an artist of a kind, this slender, dark-eyed child, for, much as her fingers love the needle, her thoughts are far in advance with the completed dress or hat.

Louise's father, Agostino Dragonetti, has a barber shop at No. 520 Eighth avenue, and her mother does dressmaking and takes care of her six children at No. 425 West Thirty-eighth street.

Ever since she was old enough to walk, Louise loved to sew, first doll's clothes for bambino dollies, and in garments for herself and for mother.

Now she works at No. 229 West Twenty-eighth street, where the delicate sewing is given to her. It is paid by piecework, and the amount of money she earns is due to her own industry.

Louise, whose parents brought to this country when she was a old, has never been graduated from a public school. When she was in last class, with only a few months go, her eyes failed her, and she was forced to stop studying for a while. She soon got to employment, and her success was so great that her mother and father came to depend upon her. So when the truant officer insisted that Louise go back to continuation school, and stop working half the time, the Dragonettis were unhappy.

Louise cried: "Superfluous Knowledge. I learn nothing at the continuation school. They try to tell me how to make a hat—I, who can make ten such hats with my eyes shut!"

On Thursday Dragonetti was fined $2 by Magistrate Cobb for his daughter's truancy. He said: "I have six children. Business is bad, and they are raising the rent at my shop. I send Louise to a designing school where she is happy and contented. If they make her go back to continuation school, I don't know what will happen to us."

RESULTS REMARKABLE SAYS NEW YORK MAN

Prominent Rochester Citizen Tried Ten Years to Get Relief, But Tanlac Is Only Thing That Helped Him.

One of the latest to testify regarding the powers of Tanlac, the celebrated medicine which has been accomplishing such remarkable results, is James J. Beasley, 102 Elmwood avenue, Rochester, N. Y. Mr. Beasley has been chief record keeper for the Department of Water Works, city of Rochester, for thirty years and is a well known and highly respected citizen. In referring to the remarkable recovery of his health by the use of Tanlac, Mr. Beasley said:

"I have been trying for ten years to find relief from a case of dyspepsia. Nothing ever helped me to amount to anything until I got Tanlac. This is saying a great deal, for I did everything it seems that a man could do to find relief. Of course, I was hardly ever sick enough to go to bed and was most always able to keep going, but I just never felt right. At times during those ten years, my stomach would become sour like vinegar. I would have an uncomfortable bloated up feeling after eating that would last for hours. I suffered a great deal from nausea. At times my heart would flutter and palpitate and I would become alarmed over my condition. My nerves were on edge all the time, and I became irritable, nervous and restless. I had no strength or energy to do anything, in fact I wasn't like myself at all. Even a week or two ago it was an effort for me to get out of my chair and I felt as stiff and clumsy as an old work horse.

"It is really remarkable what Tanlac has accomplished in my case. It has relieved me entirely of indigestion. I never have that distressing feeling any more after eating, and I feel perfectly fine in every way. I will always feel grateful for what this wonderful medicine has done for me and I am only too glad to give it my heartiest endorsement.
