All eight of the snake-like arms encircled him and the monster began shooting his ink to blur the vision of his opponent. Feeling the skin and flesh being torn from his arms, the diver managed to free one arm, and gravoing a syring filled with nitric acid, began shooting the fluid into the fish and then pulled a signal rope. On being drawn to the surface the devilfish was still hanging on. The story of the capture, also the big fish, were brought to Houston by W. D.
