MADMAN KIDNAPS 11-YEAR-OLD GIRL

Harding Sworn in as President

SIMPLICITY IS KEYNOTE OF CEREMONIAL

Inaugural Speech Defines No Definite Policy for New Administration.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Solemnly reminding of the great responsibilities that will be his for the next four years and expressing a prayer for divine guidance in the solution of the momentous problems facing him, Warren Gamaliel Harding of Ohio, became the twenty-ninth President of the United States shortly after noon today, after an inaugural ceremony in which simplicity and lack of ostentation replaced the usual pomp and display.

Before a great standing crowd of thousands, which completely filled the broad plaza and eddied for blocks around the Capitol itself, the new President accepted the supreme gift of the republic in a short inaugural address—an address in which he did not attempt to outline in other than general terms the program of international and domestic problems to be followed by his administration.

Join Wilsons.

President-elect and Mrs. Harding and members of the inaugural committee left the Willard hotel at 10:12 o'clock for the White House, where they met President and Mrs. Wilson. At 10:26 o'clock, President Wilson, President-elect Harding and Mrs. Harding left the White House at 10:56 for the capital.

From the President's hotel the automobile proceeded the few blocks to the White House and drew up before the great veranda that confronts the building. From the door emerged for the last time, Woodrow Wilson, bent, broken in health, leaning on a cane, his face furrowed and lined, and his hair silvered from his eight tumultuous years as chief executive. A curious crowd stood outside the barred fence surrounding the White House grounds to view the final passing of Woodrow Wilson from the great white mansion from which he has at times swayed the world. They saw him slowly and with difficulty enter the first car in the procession, which already were seated his successor, President-elect Harding, Senator Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania, and Representative Joseph G. Cannon, of Illinois.

In the second car, bearing Mrs. Harding, Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota and Representative Wm. Ruckers, of Missouri, accompanied Mrs. Wilson. The third automobile bore Vice-president Marshall, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and Senator Lee Overman, of North Carolina.

In the fourth car were Vice-President Coolidge and Mrs. Marshall and Representative Frank Reavis, of Nebraska. The senators and representatives of the party were all members of the congressional inaugural committee acting as escort to the presidential figures.

Guidance.

"For my part," said President-elect Harding, in his address, "I accept with singlemindedness of purpose and humility of spirit and implore the favor and guidance of God in his heaven, with these, I am unafraid and I confidently face the future."

TEXAS MARKETING LAW IS EXAMPLE TO SOUTH

Special to the Times.

DALLAS, Texas, March 4.—The Co-operative Marketing bill, known as House Bill No. 227, written by Aaron Sapiro, California marketing expert, and signed by Governor Neff, is the most comprehensive marketing law ever passed in the southern states, according to Walton Petzet, director of marketing organizations in the Texas Farm Bureau, who was in Austin last week in the interest of the bill. This bill makes possible the co-operative marketing of farm products under the California plan and was written by Mr. Sapiro for the Texas Farm Bureau federation.

"This law represents the last word in rural co-operative laws in the United States and leading members of the legislature told me that they regard it as the most important law passed by the present legislature," Mr. Petzet said.

PLANS DRAWN OF CITY-COUNTY'S HOSPITAL HERE

Plans for the county and municipal hospital that is to be built in Ranger have been accepted by both the city commission and the commissioners' court of Eastland county. The drafts were made by Thomas Washburn of Eastland, and were passed upon by two local physicians. To get construction under way, it is now necessary to advertise for bids and select a site. However, with the city election so near at hand it is thought that these details will be left for the incoming administration.

The hospital will be erected jointly by the city and county at a cost of $60,000, half the funds to come from each. The county has said that it has the cash for its share and the city has agreed to issue $30,000 in warrants and be redeemed at some future date.

Under the plans accepted, the institution will be three stories high. In the basement will be the colored wards, the morgue, and the X-ray rooms. Each floor will contain closets, bathrooms and other such essentials. On the upper story will be two operating rooms with a sterilizing room in between them. There will be men's wards, women's wards and private rooms.

EASTLAND, March 4.—There is an epidemic of chicken pox and measles going the rounds of the younger generation in Eastland, and quite a few young Americans are reported confined to their homes, and out of school.

WILSON NOT ABLE TO ATTEND CEREMONY

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The terrific strain imposed by the inaugural program proved too great today for Woodrow Wilson and he retired to his new home on S street without witnessing the inauguration of his successor, Warren G. Harding.

ODD FELLOWS COUNTY ROADS HERE TOMORROW INCONVENTION

Big Delegations Expected From All Oil Belt Lodges for Ceremony.

Between 300 and 500 Odd Fellows will assemble in Ranger tomorrow night in district joint meeting. The call is made by District Deputy J. W. Jennings under orders from Grand Master W. T. Savage of Dallas. Lodges in a body will come for the convention from Eastland, Cisco, Sherman, Gorman, Dardenoma, Breckenridge, Rising Star, Straw and Thurber.

The Rebekah organization, a sister society, also will be present in force and a lodge will be formed here.

The Ranger meeting will be the largest Odd Fellow convocation ever held in the oil fields, and a splendid program of ritual work is planned, under the direction of S. M. Shell, noble grand of the Ranger lodge. Grand Master Savage and Grand Secretary E. O. Vestal of Dallas, arrived today to be present for the ceremonies.

The men's ceremonial will be held at the Methodist church with the Italian degree team of Thurber giving the first degree and the Ranger team putting on the initiatory.

Saturday afternoon, District Deputy Stephens of Thurber, with a team of twenty-five women, will institute the Rebekah lodge here, and the men members will be taken at night.

After the Odd Fellows' degree work is completed, both bodies will assemble at the church for refreshments and entertainment.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A child's "six year molars" are not the "last of the first teeth," but the first of the last, and once gone, cannot be replaced, a public health bulletin declares. Poor health goes hand in hand with poor chewing it adds, urging parents to look after children's chawers in time.

COMING FAST, ECCLES SAYS

Special to the Times.

EASTLAND, March 4.—County Engineer Eccles announced today that he had just completed the survey of all the roads under construction in Eastland county, and reports work progressing rapidly. His trip took him from Cisco to the Callahan county line, Romney, Rising Star, to the Comanche county line, as well as the work in the vicinity of Ranger.

Mr. Eccles is responsible for the statement that asphalt pouring will probably be started within six weeks' time, and that the first work of this kind will be done on the road north out of Ranger.

About twelve steel bridges ranging in length from fifty to eighty feet will be built in the county, and plans for these have been made up and sent to the steel manufacturers, and all but two actually fabricated. Work on these has been started but not finished.

Stakes on the road north out of Cisco have been set, and work will be started as soon as the contractor can finish up a small amount of work in the immediate vicinity of Cisco.

Seventy-two miles of road in the county has been cleared, grubbed and graded, and is now ready for the rock ballast, and many of the concrete bridges and culverts are in place.

Rock crushers have been located at least in two places in the county, industrial trackage is being laid, to transport the rock to the road economically, and soon the work of actually topping the part of the road already graded on the cut-offs, will actually begin. It is pointed out that most of the new work is on these so-called cut-offs or new road, hence cannot be seen by the traveling public from the old roads.

MEXICO PLEASED.

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—Today's newspaper editorials here express bitterness against President Wilson and hope that the Harding administration will see the end of antagonism between the United States and Mexico.

Another bill by Senator Witt seeks to make it unlawful for any person to show or exhibit any motion picture depicting any person committing a crime.

CLARK'S DEATH HANGS PALL ON MERRYMAKING

Special to the Times.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Hanging like a pall over the jollity and merry-making of the inaugural visitors today was the death of Champ Clark, the great Democratic leader, who almost was President. In Congress Hall hotel, under the shadow of his beloved capitol, where he labored so diligently for more than a quarter of a century and within a stone's throw of where today's ceremonies took place, the great Missourian's body lay in state, mourned by thousands.

The cheers and noises with which the crowd welcomed a new President of the United States drifted down through the budding trees in the capitol grounds and penetrated faintly into the dim room where death had claimed a great man.

Special to the Times.

EASTLAND, March 4.—Judge J. R. Frost has announced that he will be a candidate for representative from this county in the event that Representative Joe Burkett enters the race for senator. Judge Frost served this district in the lower house at one time several years ago.

FORCED TO DRESS IN BOYS' CLOTHING AND DRAGGED INTO HILLS

Little Irene White of Leeray Wanders Thirty-six Hours at Whim of Madman; Released Near Ranger.

Stolen from her home at Leeray, gagged with a handkerchief for a time; then tied to the arm of a madman and forced to walk and walk for two days and one night through the still hills that offered no succor and through the blackness of a night that held greater terrors than the thoughts of the crazy man at her side; without food; slapped and cuffed at intermittent intervals by her capturer; then released to struggle for another long night alone in search of some haven of safety, is a part of the harrowing tale told officers by little Irene White, 11 years old, after she had found refuge at the Suddenth farm, four miles from Ranger, yesterday morning.

She told with clear distinctness for detail how the man, 50 years old or more, captured her within 200 yards of her home, Tuesday morning, carried her into the brush and there through force and fear disguised her as a boy. He cut her long auburn hair close to her head. By intimidation he made her don a pair of overalls and with scissors cut the tail from her long coat until it had the appearance of being a boy's garment.

Released Near Ranger.

It was near Ranger Wednesday afternoon late that he released her. They came in sight of the rock crusher on the Hamon railroad and she told him that she would go no further; that she was going home—she was going to her mamma. The man then told her, she declared, "If you want to go home, all right! Go up that railroad and you will reach home."

That was Wednesday night, and all through its long hours—exhausted with three days of walking without food—alone in the dark, wild hills, the child struggled up that railroad. When morning came she had reached the Suddenth farm. From Tuesday until Thursday morning she was without food and very little rest.

During those days her parents at Leeray were scouring the country for her—when she did not come home from school Tuesday they knew something was amiss. Police departments were notified everywhere to be on the watch and automobile parties were formed to scour the country.

During the horrors of those days and nights the little child never fought. Instinct seemed to have told that perhaps submission was the price of her life. She went at will, only she would not eat such food as was offered her. "I thought it might be poisoned," she told officers.

The happening began the day before she was kidnapped. The little girl gave the following version of it:

Little Girl's Story.

"The man passed me in a car Monday afternoon when I was going home from school. He winked at me and I made a face back at him. A little later he came to our house and asked my mother if I had found a purse with money in it. Mother told him that I had not. He then went away.

"The next morning I started to school and when about 200 yards from home he came out of the woods and caught me and tied a handkerchief around my mouth and dragged me into the woods. He threw my books away and made me look like a boy. He then tied my left arm to his right arm with a stout string and made me walk. All that day we walked and walked. That night we stumbled on and on through the next day. At times he would slap me and beat me.

square on the principles of the republic as laid down by its founders. He promised his administration will work unceasingly for the furtherance of America's greatness in world affairs and for the expansion of her commerce and influence—all without deviating from Washington's policy of "no entangling alliances" with foreign powers.

The supreme task facing the new administration, President Harding said, is the resumption "of our normal way—reconstruction, readjustment, restoration." To the hastening of these he pledged himself but he warned at the same time that there is no instant step from disorder to order, that the recovery from war must be natural and unimpeded by any "wild experiments."

League Not Mentioned. The League of Nations, paramount issue of the campaign was not mentioned specifically by the new president, but concerning the policy of his administration, he had this to say:

"We seek no part in directing the destinies of the old world. We do not mean to be entangled. America can be a party to no prominent military alliances; it can enter into no political commitments, nor assume any economic obligations which will subject our decisions to any other than our own authority; a world super-government is contrary to everything we cherish and can have no sanction by our republic."

The mandate of the people on Nov. 2, in this respect was plain, it was asserted by the new president.

The senate gallery and floor were packed before the hour of adjournment came. The diplomatic gallery was filled, many of those present wearing their resplendent regalia of senate occasions. As the hour approached noon, the senate clock was turned back fifteen minutes and then again ten minutes, making twenty-five minutes altogether.

Charles E. Hughes, the new secretary of state, entered the chamber and took a seat on the floor. He was soon joined by Herbert Hoover, the new secretary of commerce.

Harding Enters. President-elect Harding entered the senate chamber at 12:15. He was greeted with a round of tumultuous applause from the floor and galleries.

Vice President Coolidge was sworn in at 12:20, the oath being administered by Vice President Marshall, who, immediately thereafter, delivered his speech. A wave of applause swept the floor and galleries as "Silent Cal" with right hand uplifted, became vice president.

When Marshall had finished his address, he turned and bowed to his successor and the new Vice President faced the crowded floor and delivered a short, terse speech. When it had ended, Marshall signified his official closure of the sixty-sixth congress. The new senate was sworn in and convened, following the delivery of Vice President Coolidge's speech.

When Harding reached the inaugural stand there was a vast crowd which ascended as far as an eye could reach, stretching out before him. Great bunches of roses banked the small stand. Immediately under the stands, bearing standards, stood a small group of marines and splendor boys. Some of the old-time splendor of an inaugural was provided by a band resplendent in brilliant scarlet uniforms, which played patriotic airs. The great crowd waited patiently for Harding to emerge from the canopy, stood around watching its feet to ward off the chill of the nipping March day.

War-Wrecked Vets. Occupying points of vantage in front and a little to the left of the inaugural stand were a group of the blinded and wounded veterans of the world war. Their crutches and artificial limbs adding a sad note to the restless glow of the great throng. A minute after Harding's arrival, Chief Justice Edward Douglass White came slowly down the aisle and stood at the rail. On Harding's immediate left stood Will Hayes, the new postmaster general. President Harding took the oath of office at 1:17. In his address he said in part:

"My Countrymen, "When one surveys the whole world about him after the great storm, noting the marks of destruction and yet rejoicing in the ruggedness of the things which withstood it, he is an American, he breathes the clarified atmosphere with a strange mingling of regret and new hope. We have seen a world passion spend its fury, but we contemplate our republic unshaken, and hold our civilization secure. Liberty—liberty within the law and civilization are inseparable, and though both are threatened, we find them now secure; and there comes to Americans the profound assurance that our representative government is the highest expression and surest guaranty of both.

"The recorded progress of our republic, materially and spiritually, in itself proves the wisdom of the inherited policy of non-involvement in old-world affairs. Confident of our ability to work out our own destiny, and jealously guarding our right to do so, we seek no part in directing the destinies of the old world. We do not mean to be entangled. We will accept no responsibility except as our own conscience and judgment, in each instance, may determine.

"We crave friendship and harbor no hate. But America, our America, the America builded on the foundation laid by the inspired fathers, can be a party to no permanent military alliance. It can enter into no political commitments, nor assume any economic obligation which will subject our decisions to any other than our own authority.

"We have no thought to impede the paths to closer relationship. We wish to promote understanding. We want to do our part in making offensive warfare so hateful that governments and the peoples who resort to it must prove the righteousness of their cause or stand as outlaws before the bar of civilization.

Association, But No League.

"We are ready to associate ourselves with the nations of the world, great and small, for conference, for counsel; to seek the expressed views of world opinion; to recommend a way to approximate disarmament and relieve the crushing burdens of military and naval establishments. We elect to participate in suggesting plans for mediation, conciliation and arbitration and would join in that expressed conscience of progress, which seeks to clarify and write the laws of international relationship, and establish a world court for the disposition of such justiciable questions as nations are agreed to submit thereto. But every commitment must be made in the exercise of our national sovereignty. Since freedom, independence and independence inspired, and nationality exalted, a world super-government is contrary to everything we cherish and can have no sanction by our republic. This is not selfishness; it is sanctity. It is not aloofness; it is security. It is not suspicion of others; it is patriotic adherence to the things which made us what we are.

"While the world's embittered travail did not leave us devastated lands, it desolated cities, left no gaping wounds, no breast with hate, it did involve us in the delirium of expenditure, in expanded currency and credits in unbalanced industry, in unpayable waste and undisturbed relations. While it uncovered an enormity of hateful selfishness at home, it also revealed the heart of America as sound and fearless and beating in confidence unflinching.

"Amid it all, we have riveted the gaze of all civilization to the unselfishness and the righteousness of representative democracy, where our freedom never has made offensive warfare, never has sought territorial aggrandizement through force, never has turned to the arbitrament of arms until reason has been exhausted. When the governments of the earth shall have established a freedom like our own and shall have sanctioned the pursuit as we have practiced it, I believe we shall have a final and final of international warfare will have been written.

Universal Service. "If, despite this attitude, war is again forced upon us, I earnestly hope a way may be found, which will give our individual and collective strength and consecrate all America mentally and physically, body and soul, to national defense. I can envision the ideal republic, where every man and woman is called under the flag, for assignment to duty, for whatever service, military or civic, the individual is best fitted; where we may call to universal service every plant, agency or facility, all in the sublime sacrifice for country, and not one penny of war profit shall inure to the benefit of private individual, corporation or combination, but all above the normal shall flow into the defense chest of the nation. There is something inherently wrong, something at variance with the ideals of representative democracy, when one portion of our citizenship turns its activities to private gain and defensive war while another is fighting, sacrificing or dying for national preservation.

Lowest War Taxes. "A regret for the mistakes of yesterday must not, however, blind us to the tasks of today. War never left such an aftermath. There has been staggering loss of life, and measureless waste of materials. Nations stand in grief, and return to stable ways. Discouraging indebtedness confronts us like all the war-torn nations, and these obligations must be provided for. No civilization can survive repudiation.

Is For Tariff. "It has been proved again and again we cannot, while throwing our markets open to the world, maintain American standards of living and opportunity and hold our industrial eminence in such unequal competition. There is a lurking fallacy in the theory of banished barriers of trade, but preserved American standards require our higher production costs to be reflected in our tariffs on imports. Today, as never before, when peoples are seeking trade expansion, we must seek our tariffs to the new order. We seek participation in the world's change, because therein lies our way to widen influence and the triumph of peace. We know full well we cannot sell where we do not buy, and we cannot sell successfully where we do not carry.

WEST TEXAS CHAMBER TALKS TRIP TO MEXICO. Who wants a trade trip to Mexico? The Chamber of Commerce is advised that one of the subjects to be taken up at the meeting of the West Texas chamber's board of directors, to be held in Abilene on March 13, is the question of sending a West Texas special to the Mexican Federation of Chambers of Commerce convention at Mexico City. Ranger will be represented at the meeting, probably by Manager Peters of the local chamber, and E. J. Barnes, who is a director of the West Texas organization, and anyone who would wish to participate in such a trip is requested to notify the chamber.

ELKS WILL ELECT OFFICERS TONIGHT. At a luncheon to be served tonight by the local order of Elks to its members, officers will be elected to serve for the coming year. The meeting will be held at the Elks' home on West Main street.

RECEIVER APPOINTED FOR FIRST NATIONAL

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane yesterday named David Murphy, federal bank examiner, temporary receiver of the First National bank of Ranger, which was placed in charge of the department on Feb. 18 at the request of the bank directors.

The comptroller has received no detailed report of the bank's condition, but stated that it would require time to get the assets in shape for a determination of whether the bank can be reopened. The appointment of a temporary receiver gives the official wider powers than that of a bank examiner. The department will determine later whether a permanent receiver is to be placed in charge of the institution.

DESDEMONA BANK CLOSES.

DESDEMONA, March 4.—The First National bank of Desdemona closed its doors at 10 o'clock Thursday morning and posted a notice stating that its doors were closed because of heavy withdrawals which had depleted the reserve fund. The bank was capitalized at $25,000 and opened for business in September 1919. It has recently moved into a new fireproof brick building on Main street. A statement was given out from the bank that there was more money on hand than usual this morning, but that a run on it had forced them to close and that a bank examiner had been notified.

WHAT WILSON'S CABINET WILL DO IN CIVIL LIFE

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Most of the cabinet officers who retired today will resume the work they gave up to become members of Woodrow Wilson's official family. One or two of them, however, have not yet made definite plans for the future.

Lawyers predominated in the outgoing cabinet, numbering six. There also were two publishers and one college professor.

Bainbridge Colby, who retires after one year's service as secretary of state, will return to the practice of law in New York City, but before he settles down to that work he may visit Scotland.

Newton D. Baker will turn from the direction of the war department, to the practice of law in his home town of Cleveland. He has had five years' service as secretary of war and also has served as chairman of the federal power commission and the council of national defense.

Palmer Sorensen Out. A. Mitchell Palmer, retiring attorney general, will resume his law practice with offices in his home city of Stroudsburg, Pa., and also in Washington. He will retain his home in Pennsylvania, but will reside in Washington a considerable portion of each year and will have as his law partners three lawyers who have been closely associated with him in his public work; Frank Davis, Jr., formerly assistant attorney general; Robert R. Scott and Seiforde M. Stellanor.

Daniels, one of the four Wilson cabinet officers who remained on the job the full eight years, will leave tomorrow for Raleigh, N. C., to resume his duties as editor and publisher of the Raleigh News and Observer. He will arrive home Sunday morning and says his first act "will be to go to church Sunday morning and repent of all my sins." He announces as his motto "charity to all and malice toward none."

David F. Houston, former secretary of the treasury, has not made definite plans for the future, but has several offers under consideration. He was a university professor before entering the cabinet in 1913 as secretary of agriculture but has not decided whether he will return to educational work or enter the commercial field. He has been head of the treasury for a year and also a member of the federal reserve board, chairman of the board for vocational education and a member of the council of national defense.

John Barton Payne, who has been secretary of the interior for a year, plans to make his home in Washington, but will devote some of his time to the Chicago park project in which he was a moving spirit before he was called to Washington early in the war as general counsel for the Shipping Board Emergency Fleet corporation. He also has been a member of the federal power commission and director general of railroads.

Burleson to Austin. Albert Sydney Burleson will go back to Austin, Texas, to practice law and to look after his private interests there after eight years as postmaster general.

Edwin T. Meredith, who succeeded Mr. Houston as secretary of agriculture a year ago, will return to Des Moines to look after his farm magazine and other interests. He also has been a member of the federal power commission.

William B. Wilson, another of the original Wilson cabinet officers, will return to his farm near Blossburg, Pa., for a rest before finally making a decision with regard to several business offers which have been tendered him.

WILSON LAUDED IN TELEGRAM FROM NEFF

International News Service. AUSTIN, March 4.—A message of greeting was wired President-elect Harding today by Governor Pat M. Neff.

The Texas governor also sent a message to President Wilson, in which he wished the retiring executive many years of health and happiness, saying that "your name will remain sweet in the memories of men wherever liberty abides long after those who have sought to defame you, sleep in forgotten dust."

Two resolutions were introduced in the Texas legislature paying respect to the retiring president. The house adopted a concurrent resolution by Representative John Davis of Dallas, which was wired to the president as an expression of the legislature's appreciation of Wilson's eight years of service.

Senator Richards, Fairchild and Cousins introduced a resolution in the senate honoring President Wilson, a copy of which was forwarded to the retiring executive.

A house resolution congratulated the people of the United States on the inauguration of Harding and Coolidge.

Barton Must Admit Constantinople Is Worse Than Ranger

By Associated Press
CONSTANTINOPLE, March 4.—The American sailors on board the vessels of the United States naval detachment in Turkish waters are publishing regularly a newspaper of their own to chronicle their social and sporting events and to keep up the spirit of comradeship and enliven life in and about Constantinople. The paper is called the "Far Seas." Its price is five piasters, and it is creditably illustrated with half-tone cuts and comics.

Although the men generally vote Constantinople rather a dull place, all things said, one of the recent numbers of the "Far Seas" shows that the American bluejackets are able to provide their own entertainment.

Another Wickedest in World.
 One of the contributors to the "Far East" paid his tribute to the city of Constantinople by describing it as the "costliest, wickedest city in the world." Since the armistice, he wrote, the city had been filled with the soldiers of all nations, spies, thieves, murderers, politicians, Russian refugees, Bolshevik agents and opium eaters.

"In spite of all this, life in Constantinople is dull and there is little in the way of entertainment," he added. "If one is diligent a few good restaurants may be discovered, but except for the moving picture houses, no first-class theaters can be found. In fact at 10 o'clock in the evening the place is as quiet as Annapolis on Sunday."

Beer Hall Jazz.
 However, inside the beer halls, cabarets and coffee houses, habits of these places attempt a fallacious gaiety. It is here that the bejeweled, richly adorned and painted women of the Occident and Orient brazenly stare at the motley throng drinking a low quality of refreshment served them at robbers' prices.

"At the one good hotel the spies of the whole Orient carry on their intrigues. The whole atmosphere of the city is one of feverish and artificial excitement. A real American, unless he takes interest in and feels this atmosphere, finds life dull in this, the wickedest city of the world."

'FLU THROUGH.
 By Associated Press
WASHINGTON, March 4.—"Don't worry about the 'flu' this year; it is unlikely to return," the public health service asserts in a bulletin just issued. "Worry about diphtheria; worry enough, anyway, to have you determine by a simple test whether you and your children are immune. If they are not, protect them by the new method of immunization."
 The report says 5,000 cases of diphtheria were reported in October and more in November.

Barney Strives to Please

AMERICAN RELIEF WORKER ONLY POPULAR GUY IN UPPER SILESIA

International News Service.
KATTOWITZ, Upper Silesia, Mar. 4.—Captain James A. Stadler of Joplin, Mo., in the employ of the American Relief Administration here, is the only man in this strife-torn country who has received a token of joint approval of the German and Polish residents.

After eighteen months of hard work and adventuring, in which he has been the common target for the machine gun fire of Poles and Germans, faced mobs, fed hungry, administered to the dying, saved prisoners slated for execution, and acted as the arbiter of revolution and strikes, he is preparing to go home to show the folks a big silver cup which his friends presented him when they learned he was about to leave.

Fifty-Fifty.
 There was some rivalry about the cup for the Poles and Germans each wanted to give it, and they only wanted him to have one, but at last they agreed upon a common course, for the first time in 800 years, some of them asserted. They all chipped in equal amounts, bought the cup, had it beautifully worked and engraved and presented it with much formality and many nice words in two languages.

As representative of an American organization, Captain Stadler's position has demanded the most careful observance of every rule of neutrality, exercise of considerable ingenuity and, now and then, an extraordinary fleetness of foot.

He established himself with Poles and Germans alike during the uprising last August. He had been to the Polish prison camp at Cracow to ask for the release of nearly 200 Germans who had been spirited over the border. On his return trip he got between the Polish and German lines and machine guns began to volley at him. He ran to a ditch and crawling along this reached the German side, where he was immediately made prisoner, but later was released. He thinks his footwork saved his life that day.

There were a number of women in the camp at Cracow and conditions were very bad. Some of the women were confined in hospital huts with the men. They wore only blankets and the men were clad in gunny sacks, one sack to each man.
 When the captain secured permission to return these prisoners he discovered in the camp nearly 100 Germans who had been in Russian pris-son sketches, a few of which have been tucked away by mother, who cherishes them very much.

I should like most of all to be able to paint a portrait of my little niece and namesake, Mary Charlotte Pickford. She is rapidly growing out of babyhood and before any of us realize it she will be a little girl—and a few years later a grown-up lady. If I could only register upon canvas that elusive charm of childhood—that thing which is now here and which a few years hence will be gone!

As I look back upon my own childhood it seems that my very first ambition was to be an artist. Then after that I wanted to be an interior decorator—to design and arrange beautiful homes and those yearnings have never left me. Even now I seldom go into a home without wishing I could have had a hand in arranging it. This does not mean that I do not approve of the arrangement, it merely means that I would have enjoyed helping to create the elegance and beauty that I see manifested there.

NOTE—Miss Pickford's latest United Artists' production, "The Love Light," will be at the Lamb theatre beginning today.

AUTO VISITS.

There is one place in the oil fields that Ranger is perhaps overlooking a bet in the way of establishing trade relations. That is the Rising Star territory. Reports are that activity over in that section is increasing and that quite sizable development is to be expected.

That statement may still be true and Ranger be wasting an opportunity. If it is necessary to come here, that fact should be made known to all, and the best way to come, and all other information. By friendliness and co-operation and advertising, Ranger will not only get the trade that MUST come here, but a part of that which could more easily go elsewhere.

Why shouldn't Ranger have a series of auto trade trips this summer, with Rising Star as one of the first objectives. There is nothing like friendship to promote business relations.

HARDING'S WIFE IS REAL 'POWER BEHIND THRONE'

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Florence Kling Harding, the new First Lady of the Land, possesses an unusual degree of pluck and outspokenness. She has ideas of her own on many subjects and she does not hesitate to speak her opinions straight out from the shoulder. These who work for her count her kindly and delightful mistress, but they know that any delinquency will call down a reprimand they will not soon forget. On occasions she has been seen shaking a forefinger at her husband—but of course nobody knows what that all is about.

All her life Mrs. Harding has been a determined and tireless worker, not only in the details of her household, but in the broader field of business and community welfare. She comes of fighting blood, her father, Amos Kling, having been a rugged and successful pioneer days of Marion. She was born there, and although in her girlhood her parents attained to moderate means they were not the sort who lean to extravagance.

Eye on Finances. When she married Mr. Harding in 1891, his newspaper, the Star, was not yet out of the woods financially and she went to work in its business department. She applied herself to advertising and circulation problems with an eye for efficiency all along the line. She watched the original printing of print paper and materials and she had at the press and gave instructions to the newsboys daily before they started on their rounds with the finished product.

It is said of her in Marion that when she became the wife of the struggling young editor she told her friends she expected to make him President some day, and it is known that at some of the most discouraging stages of the pre-convention campaign last year it was she who insisted most vigorously that the fight be continued.

During the strenuous days when thousands were marching to the front porch of the Harding residence on Mt. Vernon avenue she was the most active figure about her husband's headquarters. She was beside him every time he spoke at home or away; she shook hands with as many men and women as he did; and she was in and out of his offices from morning until night, rounding up details and giving him advice on all serious questions before him.

Late on the night of the last front porch meeting a newspaperman passing the Harding home saw someone moving about the dark recesses of the big veranda. It was Mrs. Harding, drawing the porch chairs back against the wall for the night and softly whistling a quiet little air of contentment. "You seem happy enough," he called across to her.

"I surely am," she replied, "and why shouldn't I be? Isn't it wonderful?" Mrs. Harding is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and the Hardings alternate attendance between that and the Baptist church, of which the new President is a member. She loves children and chooses horses and dogs for her pets. Cruel treatment of dumb animals arouses her to militant protest, and on more than one occasion she has stopped on the streets of Marion and Washington to reprimand a drayman or a cabbie for abusing his horse. In her young days she was a skilled horsewoman, and of medium height, the new First Lady carries herself erect and with a charming dignity. Pictures seldom do her justice, for although her hair is streaked with silver her eyes are as bright and her glances and smiles as radiant as when she was sixteen.

Us fellows was going to start up a game of something, and we went around to look for Puds Simkins, and he was setting on his front steps with his hand up to his face and a sad expression on it, saying, "O boy, maybe I aint got a heck of a car ake. Which us fellows started to say things to make him feel better, Sam Cross saying, You awt to be glad it aint in both ears, Puds, it must be farse in both ears.

Its farse in one, sed Puds. Aw G, Puds, think of something cheerfil and forget it, jest suppose you had a broken leg in 3 places, think how much more warse that would be, I sed.

Nothing could be any more warse, wats the use of thinking, sed Puds. It will all be the same in a million years, Puds, theres no use worryng, sed Sid Hunt.

I don't expect to be heer in a million years, sed Puds. Well, cheer up, Puds, you ran ody die once so it mite as well be now, sed Skippy Martin.

Id like to see you cheer up with a tooth ake, you long legged proon, sed Puds. Being a heck of a way to insult somebody trying to make him feel better, and Skippy sed, Whose a long legged proon, jest for that I got a good mind jest to leave you suffer.

And us other fellows sed, Gosh Puds, its a wonder you woulnt use a little gratitude wot people try to sympathize with you, heck Puds, if thats the way youre going to tawly you deserve to have a tooth ake and its a wonder you didnt get one long ago; G Puds, gosh, holey smokes, Puds. And we went and started a game set of Cops and Robbers and left him there to sympathize with himself if he wanted to.

Goodbye—And Howdy!

There had been a shooting back in the mountains and several men had been killed. One or two were finally arrested and the case came to trial in the little court house at the county seat. An old woman was brought in as a witness, and upon the judge questioning her, she pushed back her hat and sun-bonnet, disclosing a wrinkled, toothless face with keen black eyes.

"Tinker Bob" Stories by Carlisle H. Holcomb

QUACK, QUACK, HE CANNOT TALK. Tinker Bob, King of the Forest, had something on his mind that was quite as peculiar as the stranger whom Silky the Monkey, was hugging so tightly. I don't believe you can guess it either. Well this is the thing that he was thinking about.

It occurred to him when he first saw Silky. Said he to himself: "Supposing that Lady Duck, by the power of this Wonderful Spring is healed so that she can fly, she will not care to be carried about in the Magic Basket with the King of the Forest.

"I will have to have some one with me on the journey back to the Great Forest of the North, and it would be better to take some one who could not fly. Why not ask this fellow who seems so friendly to all the creatures, I would like to have him go with me to the Forest."

Now that would be a delightful thing to do if it was satisfactory to Silky the Monkey. Tinker had decided in his own mind to ask this friendly fellow as soon as he could get a chance. You see he was such an active creature that Tinker could not get him to be still very long at one time. Just now he was interested in the long nosed and long tailed creature who had been taking a bath in the spring.

"What is your name?" asked Tinker of this peculiar creature. "This fellow is a friend of mine," said Silky, "I like him because he never gets angry. He's just a little afraid of you before." Silky sat there beside the spring with his arms about the poor fellow's neck. He couldn't get away if he wanted to.

"Well what is your friend's name?" asked Tinker more anxious than ever to know who this creature might be, and what kind of a life he lived. "Can you tell the King of the Forest what your name is?" Silky hugged him tighter than ever. His little sharp eyes rolled about looking first at Lady Duck, then at Tinker Bob, and then at Silky. It seemed as if he wanted to answer but was a little bit afraid. "Quack, quack," said Lady Duck, "I don't think he can talk. His mouth is not large enough to let any noise out." But Lady Duck was mistaken. There are no creatures in the Forest who cannot speak in one way or another. She was surprised when he said: "My Name is Ant-Bear, Mr. Snake bit me on the foot and I came here to get healed." He had a squeaky voice but they knew what he said. "What makes your nose so long?" asked Tinker Bob. "My nose is long so I can find the Ants. You see they stick to my nose and then I lick them off with my tongue. Tins was a very interesting fellow but Lady D. ck was anxious to get into the spring.

Tomorrow—Lady Duck Gets Into the Spring. or Seventh avenue—for he was over-clothes. But the O. M. was alluringly disporting a vivid, checkered, great-coat with velvet trimmings, and the buttons! Like tigers' eyes they were, gleaming in the early sun. "But, Boss, Ah tells yuh, Ah isn't got dat much jack," said the customer.

The Overcoat Man looked despairingly at a group of small boys playing marbles, a distant hurdy-gurdy man, and finally at his victim. "How much money have you got?" he questioned angrily. "Twelve dollahs an' two bits. Fact Boss. An' las' night was mah lucky night, too Oh, dem gallin' bones," shortened the black lily, as he and the Overcoat Man disappeared into the emporium.

In Darkest Kentucky. The Woman had an invitation recently to dine with some friends who were entertaining their Southern kin. She accepted joyfully for there is always a charm about people from the South—they seem to meet Lowell's test of a gentleman, "One who meets a duke without being overwhelmed and a coal-heaver without overwhelming him."

One of the guests was a judge from that part of the country where feuds and moonshine flourish and "shoot-ins" are featured Saturday nights. He was beguiled into telling us stories of his long experience, and this one pleased the party particularly.

KRUPPS WILL BUILD BIG PLANT IN CHILE

BUENOS AIRES, March 4.—Confirmation of Berlin reports that the concession granted German industrial interests in the Province of Llanquihue by the Chilean government are held by the Krupps is given in the Herald of this city. The newspaper says the Krupps will build the largest steel and munitions plants in South America, and that the work of construction will begin immediately.

There is rich timber land on the territory covered by the concession, and water rights, including irrigation projects and power plants, have been granted. It is said the Krupps plan to utilize the iron ore in the region for making machinery for ships and also to manufacture equipment for the Chilean army, and possibly other military forces in South America.

PAPAL APPOINTMENT. International News Service. ROME, March 4.—Pope Benedict XV. has appointed the Rev. Joseph McMahon of New York, a domestic prelate of the papal entourage.

And He Did! NEW YORK, March 4.—"Have you ever seen a man jump overboard?" This question was addressed in a loud voice to a group of passengers aboard the steamship Carmania, arriving here today, by a coal passer who suddenly appeared among them when the ship was a day out of Queens-town. Receiving astonished shakes of the head, the man leaped to the rail of the upper deck, shouted, "Then, here goes," and then dived. Attempts to rescue failed.

SIXTY-SECOND CONGRESS HAD STORMY CAREER

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Rejection of the Treaty of Versailles, a sharp fight on President Wilson by Republican leaders, adoption of the woman suffrage constitutional amendment and passage of the prohibition enforcement act were outstanding features of the sessions of the Sixty-sixth congress which passed out today to make way for the Sixty-second congress, soon to be called in extra session by President Harding.

Sweet into control of both the senate and house near the end of the war after President Wilson had appealed to the country in 1918 to return a democratic majority to congress, the Republicans organized all committees at the opening session in 1919 and immediately launched an attack on the administration. This centered around the Treaty of Versailles, which was taken up in the senate before it was signed at Paris.

Vigorous Panning. Other acts of the administration which came in for criticism included the sending of troops to Russia, the handling of deportation cases and the winding up of war contracts. Investigations of many phases of war activities also were undertaken and continued through most of the nearly two years of the life of this, the first Republican congress in eight years.

Four vetoes of important measures by the president also were overridden by the Sixty-sixth congress. The measures renounced after their disapproval by Mr. Wilson included the prohibition enforcement act and joint resolutions reducing the size of the regular army to 175,000 men, repealing the daylight savings law and reviving the war finance corporation. In the case of one important matter, the Knox resolution to declare the state of war with Germany at an end, the presidential veto stood.

Besides the war inquiries many others were conducted, including those into the 1919 steel strike, the spread of radical propaganda, the coal and housing situations, the controversy between Secretary Daniels and Rear Admiral Sims over naval medal awards, campaign expenditures, Shippin-g Board operations, the Ford-Newberry election, radical deportation cases, and the escape to Germany of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, Philadelphia draft evader.

International disarmament was a subject occupying much attention at the closing session, inquiries being conducted by both house and senate committees. Final action was deferred on the whole question left over to the Harding administration. The senate naval committee recommended, however, that there be no halting of American naval construction at this time.

Important measures passed by the Sixty-sixth congress besides the prohibition enforcement law, the suffrage amendment, and the resolution to revive the war finance corporation included: The transportation act. The merchant marine act. The Edge bill for foreign finance corporations. The oil and gas leasing laws. The army reorganization act. The waterpower development bill. A bill abolishing the United States Housing corporations.

In addition the usual annual supply measures were put through and preliminary ground work was laid by the house in ways and means committee to revise both the tariff and tax laws.

RIPLING RHYMES By Walt Mason. INCONSISTENT. Things are most inconsistent here, in this world, sad and dun; you cannot buy a stein of beer, but you can buy a gun. The stein of beer's a wicked thing, there is no doubt of that! it sets a million bats a wing beneath the drinker's hat. And yet me thinks the gun is worse, when placed in sinful hands; it boosts the business of the hearse and crape and mourners' bands. It boosts the carnival of crime which in the cities thrives, where men are shot down in their prime, and yield up useful lives. The youthful toughs whose wolfish souls are not worth twenty cents, at night leave their haunts and holes and shoot down worthy gents. You cannot walk into a store and buy a slug of gin; the merchant and his clerks would roar, and call the sheriff in; and this is very well, indeed; 'tis well such traffic stops; for seldom do frail mortals need so much as forty drops. But you can walk into a store to buy a deadly gun; the clerk will try to sell you four, if you're supplied with mon. It's worse to buy a demijohn than 'tis to buy a gat, and so the wave of crime goes on, and coroners wax fat. Along the road the hearsees roll with slain men by the ton; you cannot buy a flowing bowl, but you may buy a gun.

Cheerful, Efficient Service An Advertising Accompaniment

Advertising has a decidedly beneficial influence upon salespeople.

As shoppers, you have doubtless noted that where advertising calls attention to particular goods, the salespeople of a store are more than ordinarily attentive to your wants.

Indeed, it is the experience of nearly everyone who directs the selling of goods that wherever salespeople are interested in advertising it is easier to secure their co-operation in making the store service just as attractive as its merchandise and prices.

Advertising lightens a salesman's labors. It creates interest in articles before the customer enters the store, and by enlarging the volume of business it creates optimism and cheerfulness, which influence customers and salespeople alike.

MURDER OF GIRL REVEALS STORY

CHICAGO, March 4.—A romance of the Kentucky mountains and of a 16-year-old girl's fight to keep from marrying the man of her step-mother's choice was revealed a few days ago in the murder of Mrs. Katherine Sumenok, whose body, with hands and feet tied with towels, was found in her basement apartment in West Fourteenth street.

The woman had been strangled and the police are seeking two unidentified men, who were seen hurrying away a few minutes before the crime was disclosed.

Mrs. Sumenok was a bride of four months, having married Theodore Sumenok in November, 1920. A month ago when she moved to the Fourteenth street address she told Mrs. Jeanette Wehr, a neighbor, of her life in Kentucky and of how she had run away because her step-mother wanted her to marry a man she didn't love. She came to Chicago, where she met Sunday two strange men appeared in the neighborhood and made inquiries about Mrs. Sumenok. Yesterday they returned and were seen by Mrs. Wehr and Mrs. Mary Mooha, neighbors, to enter the apartment. The women told the police they were suspicious and when they saw the men hurry away they investigated and found the body lying on a bed.

Police found the room to be in disorder. Two empty pocketbooks at first led them to believe that robbery was the motive of the crime, but later when they had learned of the girl's flight from Kentucky, they admitted that revenge might have prompted the murder.

DEADLY GAS IS LATEST BANK SAFETY DEVICE

OMAHA, March 4.—As a protection against burglars, banks in Nebraska have begun installation in their vaults of metallic cylinders containing deadly gas which will be released if the vaults are blown open by safe blowers.

The Citizens State bank of Ralston, a suburb of Omaha, which has been visited by robbers three times within the past two years is one of the institutions that have installed the new system of protection. Two of the attempts to rob this bank were frustrated, but one was successful. A bank at Fremont has also installed one of the cylinders in its vault. Notices are posted in the banks warning robbers as to the deadly contents of the cylinders within the vaults.

Fatal accidents in London, due to motor traffic, increased from 359 in 1917 to 584 in 1919, while non-fatal accidents increased from 7,107 to 13,197.

YOUTHFUL BANK CLERK WHO STOLE $771,500 IN LIBERTY BONDS

William Dalton

Dalton told the authorities he was tempted when he saw so many negotiable bonds within reach and that he had gathered them up on the impulse of the moment, put them in a small satchel and walked out of the bank building as though going to lunch.

WILL 'EDUCATE' IRISH IN FAVOR OF HOME RULE

DUBLIN, March 4.—An intensive campaign of publicity to convince the people of the south of Ireland that it would be to their advantage to accept the new home rule act will be launched shortly.

Opposition to the measure, centering in the south, is believed in official circles to be due largely to ignorance of the powers conferred by its provisions. Sir Hamar Greenwood, the chief secretary, is said to be determined that everyone the length and breadth of the island shall have full opportunity to study the law.

Thousands of copies of the act have been printed for gratuitous circulation. The country will be flooded with these circulars accompanied by a memorandum explaining the effect of the measure. Particular efforts will be made to see that the publicity reaches persons in position to influence public opinion. Copies will be mailed to school teachers, priests and others prominent in community life. It is planned to make the campaign effective weapon directly aimed at the Sinn Fein movement.

Irish Oppose.

No important section of Irish opinion has shown any willingness thus far to regard the act as even a basis for peace negotiations with the British officials.

All southern parties object to partition, and while willing to accord separate treatment of Northeast Ulster, object to a separate and equal parliament for that section. The Northeast Ulster men are equally determined in their position and declare they will oppose such extension of the powers of Southern Ireland as would enable it to set up a tariff against either England or Ulster.

The publicity campaign is expected by the British authorities to clear up many of the sectional differences by giving the people a thorough explanation of the exact powers and requirements for which the act provides.

OVER the COFFEE CUP

"I have just had a good, noney chat with one of the finest women of our community, about coffee."

"Since I've been selling Gold Plume Coffee, have been trying to get a line on what notion women have about coffee, any way."

"I asked her this:—Are the women you know, poor coffee makers, or don't they take an interest in trying to make good coffee?"

"No, sir, it isn't that," she told me. "The women I know are good coffee makers—that is when they can get a good coffee to make it from."

"No use talking, you can't make a silk dress out of calico, and you can't make good coffee out of an inferior brand. And that's been the trouble with so many women right here."

"Give the average woman a good brand of coffee—like the Gold Plume and she'll set you out the best cup of coffee you ever drank."

"That's the way I've figured it, I told her, and that's the reason I've stocked up with this Gold Plume Coffee. It's the best coffee I know of."

"You are right, there," she said. "And say, don't forget to send 3 pounds over to the church Thursday—I'm going to make the coffee and I want to feel sure before hand that its going to be good."

MYSTERY STILL SURROUNDS WASHINGTON'S PERSONAL SPY

James Rivington, Close Friend of First President, Died in Want and Ignomy; Held Chief's Confidence, but Was Hated by Populace.

The name of Nathan Hale, spy-hero of the revolution, is familiar to every schoolboy—his tragic fate has placed his memory high on the scroll of the patriots who "paid the last full measure of devotion to the cause of American freedom. But who now remembers that of James Rivington, the personal spy of George Washington, but for whose secret services, skillfully and courageously rendered to his chief during the most trying period of the war, there might have been another tale to tell?

His career was one of the long unsolved mysteries of the revolution. The character of Milt Shanks, in Gus Thomas' play, "The Copperhead," is a late reproduction in fiction of a part that Rivington played in fact. What Milt Shanks is pictured to have been to Lincoln—a secret emissary whose lot it was to be misunderstood, hated and despised by the men whose cause he was serving—that James Rivington actually was to Washington and his secret was so closely guarded that even the members of Washington's military staff were not aware of the relations between the two. Robert Morris was probably the only one of Washington's close friends to whom he disclosed it and he was the confidential agent chosen to negotiate the deal for Rivington's secret services. The story is told in Lossing's "Field Book of the Revolution."

Rivington was a native of London, highly educated, of pleasing personal appearance, a wit, a boon companion and a man of fascinating personality. He came to America in 1760, established a book store in Philadelphia and a year later opened another one at the foot of Wall street, in New York, both of which became loyalist resorts in the days when the flames of revolt were being fanned by the men who afterwards put their names to the Declaration of Independence. In 1773 he established a newspaper, the Royal Gazette, and became "the King's Printer." No man was more bitterly hated by the ardent republicans. Wielding a caustic pen he flayed them, unmercifully in print, lampooned their leaders and abused their cause regardless of truth and fairness. At this period he was undoubtedly a sincere loyalist and though bitterly hated by the patriots and always in hot water, he was a man whose pleasing address, good nature and convivial temperament helped him out of many a tight place. After the Ticonderoga episode and while the gallant Ethan Allen was lying in the provost jail, Rivington wrote an article roundly abusing the hotheaded Allen, who swore "he would lick Rivington as soon as he got out of jail." When Allen was released he went direct to Rivington's office to make good on his promise. It was Rivington himself who in later years told the story of what happened.

"I was sitting," he said, "after a good dinner, alone with my bottle of Madeira when I heard an unusual noise in the street and a huzza from the boys. I was in the second story and stepping to the window, saw a tall figure in tarnished regimentals, with a large cocked hat and an enormous long sword, followed by a crowd of boys. He came up to my door and stopped. My heart told me it was Ethan Allen. I shut down my window and retired behind my table and bottle. I was certain the hour of reckoning had come.

"There was no retreat. "I heard him on the stairs, his long sword clanking at every step. In he stalked. Is your name James Rivington?" he blurted out. "It is, sir," I said, "and no man could be more happy than I am to see Colonel Ethan Allen." "Sir, I have come—" "Not another word, colonel," I said, "until you have taken a seat and a glass of this old Madeira." "But, sir, I don't think it proper," he stammered. "Not a word, colonel; taste this wine, sit down, I have had that old Madeira over ten years." He took the glass, swallowed the wine, smacked his lips, and sat down. We finished two bottles of Madeira, and parted as good friends as if we had no cause to be otherwise."

But the time came when there was more serious business on hand, and Rivington was treated to a course of patriotic discipline that stopped for a while his career as the "King's Printer." In 1775 he published a scurrilous article about Captain Isaac Sears, one of the most ardent and zealous of the young republicans, and a leading spirit in the society of the "Sons of Liberty." Sears, at the head of a squad of light horsemen, rode down to the printing establishment of Rivington, at the foot of Wall street, placed a guard with fixed bayonets around it, destroyed his presses, carried off his type and made bullets out of it and served notice on Rivington to leave the country. Rivington went back to England and laid low until the British took possession of New York, and in October, 1777, he returned, resumed the publication of his paper, changing the title to the Royal Gazette, resumed his title of the "King's Printer," and was soon the confidential agent again of the New York loyalists, and the timely companion of the high living British generals, Sir William Howe and Sir Henry Clinton.

Just at what time Rivington turned patriot and became Washington's secret agent, or under what circumstances the negotiations between them were begun, has never been known. It was one of the most closely guarded intrigues of the revolutionary period, and the peculiar position occupied by Rivington and the extremely hazardous nature of the services he performed required that all dealings with him should be shrouded in the utmost secrecy. It was one affair in which Washington shared his confidence with no one, unless it was Robert Morris. The very messengers that carried the secret information were unaware of the character of the services they were performing. There is some probability that Rivington's activities began as early as 1776—perhaps before his return to England—as it is known that about that period Morris borrowed 500 guineas in gold from a Quaker in Philadelphia, at Washington's request to be used by Washington personally for secret service purposes, and that intelligence of vital and vast importance was said to have been obtained from the disbursement of the "Quaker loan." It is certain that soon after Rivington's second arrival in New York from England, the campaign against the British in New York took on new vigor and Washington was able to forestall the most carefully guarded plans of the British generals, who were unable to fathom the sources of his information. The "King's Printer" was the last man they were inclined to suspect and, in fact, he never did fall under their suspicion, so adroitly did he camouflage his operations.

Wined and dined by the officers of the British army and the trusted confidante of the loyalist groups he was in a position to acquire at all times just the information that the American army needed. Rivington's method of conveying intelligence of the enemy's plans and movements to Washington was ingenious and was probably a pre-arranged plan devised by Washington. Washington was a great reader of books on agriculture and he would often send for books of this character to Rivington's book store in New York. Rivington wrote his secret communications on thin paper and bound them in the covers of these books which he always managed to sell to those spies of Washington who were constantly visiting New York, and who, he knew, would carry the volumes direct to the headquarters of the American army.

During all the time that Rivington was in the secret service as Washington's personal spy, he continued to run his "Royal Gazette," and no loyalist editor was more unscrupulous or more virulent in his abuse of the patriots and their cause than Rivington. Without regard, apparently, to truth or decency, he belabored the republican leaders and their "contemptible little army" in season and out of season. Not only did he live in hourly peril of exposure from the British side but he was most cordially despised by the patriotic-Americans and no man of the period was more scathingly scorned of more bitterly hated by the Whig orators and writers, who, even long after the war ended, continued to denounce him as a loyalist traitor and a scoundrel who had sold his country for "British gold."

When Washington entered New York in 1783 as conqueror, the loyalists fled to Nova Scotia, but Rivington remained undisturbed at his old bookstore on Wall street. One day Washington amazed his staff proposing they pay a visit with him to Rivington's store, and still more astounded when Rivington greeted them cordially and they all sat down in Rivington's back parlor to enjoy a few bottles of that old Madeira which had had such a soothing effect upon the leader of the Green Mountain Boys. Not even then, however, was the secret of their connection entirely disclosed. Rivington and Washington withdrew to a private room for a consultation and Washington had little more to say upon leaving him than to tell his officers that "Rivington was a very pleasant fellow." Perhaps there were reasons on Rivington's side why the secret should be still further kept and it remained undisclosed for many years after peace was signed.

All contemporary accounts, whether British or American, agree that, aside from his political subtleties, Rivington was, as Washington said, "a very pleasant fellow" indeed. He is described as a "fine looking, portly man, and always dressed in the extreme of fashion—curled and powdered hair, claret-colored coat, scarlet waistcoat trimmed with gold lace, buckskin breeches, and top boots, and he always kept a stock of choice wines on hand with which to regale his friends."

But, like Milt Shanks, "the Copperhead," Rivington was never able to explain himself fully to the patriots of the republic. Hated and despised by a majority of the people who knew and remembered him only as a loyalist who had "stood with the king" and fought their cause, even those to whom his services became afterward known believed that they had been bought and fully paid for. Washington remained his friend to the last. After Washington's death, Rivington's business declined, his fine clothes vanished, the last bottle of old Madeira was soon reached, and he died in extreme poverty neglected and forgotten in 1802, at the age of 78 years. His portrait was painted by Stuart, who also painted a notable portrait of Washington.—Kansas City Star.

MASTER PRESS CAJOLER BACK HOME TO ARKANSAS

Leo Henderson, who for the past fifteen months has been one of the Times' pressmen—a pressman in the vernacular being a printer without any brains at all—has resigned his position and is returning to his home in Arkansas. Whether living in that state had anything to do with him being a pressman is not known.

During those months under Henderson's guidance the Times has come out every day, with the exception of one. There have been days—and days—but Henderson looked at the press with that light in his eyes common to pressmen and the Times came out. He also talked to it in soothing tones and also in those thought to be

Arkansas Woman Is Restored to Health by Taking Tanlac

"I have pinned my faith to Tanlac ever since it restored my health two years ago, and I keep in splendid condition all the time just by taking a dose now and then," said Mrs. Mary Schepp, of 2112 South Booker st., Little Rock, Ark.

"I doubt if I would be here to tell the story if it hadn't been for this grand medicine. Indigestion an dnerousness had almost made a complete wreck of me. I don't believe anybody was ever any more miserable than I was. I finally became so weak I could scarcely drag myself around the house and was almost ready to give up."

"Tanlac suited my case exactly and benefitted me in every way. It soothed and toned up my stomach so that my digestion was perfect and then all my other troubles soon disappeared. To tell it in a few words, Tanlac made me a well and happy woman and the good results it brought two years ago have lasted to this day. It's the best and grandest medicine in the world."

SPORTS

OUT O' TOWNERS REFUSE TO MISS RANGER'S BASEBALL BALL-PARTY

The fame of the Nitros' ball to be given at the Summer Garden Monday is spreading to all the towns in the surrounding territory and delegations are preparing to be here. From Breckenridge and Eastland comes word that from those cities will come one of the most successful ever given in Ranger. At least fifty tickets have been purchased in Breckenridge by natives of that town and Ranger citizens who are there now but will be here for the dance.

For the occasion the music will be furnished by the Ranger Cafe Jazz band without cost. This they are doing for the Nitros. Mrs. E. N. Jonas has donated the use of the Summer Garden. W. R. Fleming, president of the ball club is going to give the ladies three handsome prizes. This much has been donated to the cause. Several of the local folk are going to sing and others are going to help entertain.

With these and other features the occasion can no longer be called a ball. It will be more in the nature of a family party where everlasting allegiance will be pledged to both Ned Allen and his "nine" hang the bunting over the city's gates next September.

When it is over the society editor can state that "a good time was had by all" without violating the rigid rule of this paper for truth and accuracy.

BENEFITS NET BASEBALL FUND GOOD SIZED SUM

From the receipts of the picture shows last Sunday, from the sale of concessions and from the exhibition game between the Micks and Nitros-lets, the baseball association now has $1,342.45 in its treasury for a spring training fund.

Of this amount $592.39 came from the theatres. The amounts thus derived are:

Lobby $165.59, Temple $159.55, Lamb $154, Majestic $113.25.

With the exception of the Majestic these amounts are said by the theatre owners to be their entire receipts from the picture shows. From donations given to the ball club between the hours of 1 and 6 o'clock last Sunday.

The manager of the Majestic, however, has said that he only agreed to concessions and from the exhibition game between the Micks and Nitros-lets, the baseball association now has $1,342.45 in its treasury for a spring training fund.

INJUNCTION AGAINST PICKETING IS UPHELD

The El Paso court of civil appeals has affirmed the anti-picketing injunction issued last fall by Judge George L. Davenport when the cops and waiters' strike was on.

The union appealed the decision, claiming that their action was not picketing in the true sense of the word. Frank Judkins and J. E. Ingram were attorneys for the union and M. S. Levy and L. R. Pearson represented the restaurants.

PALESTINE WILL BAR LAND PROFITEERS

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A resident of Palestine may buy 300 "doonums" of agricultural land or 30 "doonums" of urban land, provided he "shall himself cultivate or develop the land immediately," Consul Heizer at Jerusalem has reported. He added that "doonums" went 44 to the acre and that the new land transfer ordinance of the government of Palestine was designed to curb land profiteers and also to "help incoming Jewish emigrants to secure small holdings at reasonable prices." Government consent is required for all immovable property sales, only residents can buy and the value of any parcel transferred cannot exceed 3,000 English pounds.

FIRST COLUMBUS PLAYER ARRIVES

F. S. Farley, a West Virginia lad, is here for the Columbus spring training. He hopped off the Sunshine last night and promptly found the Ranger headquarters. Farley is a left-handed right hander, who last year wound up the season with the Columbus nine. He hopped straight from semi-pro ball to the Class A team.

The Senators will report here as individuals and not in a body, the advance guard says. However, he expects a number of them will meet on the road and arrive here together Sunday night.

CLEVELAND TURNS OUT MANY BALL PLAYERS

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 4.—Approximately fifty Cleveland sandlot baseball stars will go out to play professionally this year, the largest number in many a year.

Prior to the Federal league war one hundred or more local amateur stars used to go out each spring, but when the Ohio State and Ohio-Pennsylvania leagues disbanded, the number was cut about in half and the world war reduced it more, scores of players remaining here at work in munitions plants and playing Saturdays and Sundays.

Many of those who were members of factory teams, who have lost their jobs through the industrial depression and have signed up professionally this year.

Cleveland will provide the major league with twelve players, three umpires, one manager and one assistant coach. The American association gets 10, the Southern 3, the West Virginia Florida 6, with 9 others scattered among the Three-I, Pacific Coast, South Atlantic, Michigan-Ontario, Texas and Southwestern league, up to the present time.

TEN PER CENT DECREASE IN H. C. I. AT ST. LOUIS

ST. LOUIS, March 4.—A net decrease of 10.32 per cent, in the cost of living in St. Louis for the twelve months ending Dec. 1, last, is shown in answers to questionnaires sent to local business men by a joint committee of the Building Trades council and the Building Industries association.

The answers will be used as the basis for the negotiation of a new wage scale for approximately 10,000 union workmen in the building trades.

The decrease is slightly higher than that which recently was announced for St. Louis by the government, which was approximately 9.9 per cent.

The answers showed the greatest decrease was in food costs, it being 9.6 per cent. Prices of clothing declined an average of 3.75 per cent, and of furniture and home furnishings, 1.12 per cent. An increase of 15 per cent in rentals was found, the committee announced.

SIAMESE TWINS CREATE STIR AMONG NEW YORK DOCTORS

Josefa and Rosa, Here to Be Circus Exhibit, Are the Most Remarkable Case of Joined Human Beings; One Married, One Spinster.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Josefa Blazek and her widowed sister, Rosa Blazek Dvorak, are Siamese twins. They have just arrived in America from their home in Bohemia. Although they have been exhibited all over Europe, and have been studied by European doctors for many years, their meeting on Tuesday with the New York doctors was the first scientific study of them in America.

The twins are joined together from their shoulder blades almost to the knee and yet they are distinct persons. They have different tastes and desires for food. One of them, Rosa, has been married and has a healthy, good looking son of 11 years. The other is a spinster.

One of the New York doctors who saw the twins Sunday declared: "This is the most remarkable case of joined human beings that has come into American medical records. While they are more completely joined than any other Siamese twins on record, they are separate women.

"You can pinch one of them and the other does not feel it. If one were to become intoxicated the other would not unless she also drank intoxicating liquors."

When One Dies Other Will Also. "Of course if one died the other would die of necessity, not because of automatic cessation of animation, but because of septic absorption. They are joined above and below the hips where collateral circulation takes place. Death of one would cause the death of the other in from twenty-four to thirty-six hours. "Then again, one sister is a widow with a well grown child. It is a strange case. All their digestive organs are separate and function individually, but beyond that there is one unified organism, which is the great puzzle of the case.

"Withal this condition they enjoy perfect health and as far as our cursory examination has gone they are perfect organically and mentally. All organs are distinct with the exception of the one referred to."

Since P. T. Barnum exhibited his first pair of Siamese twins, many years ago, there have been numerous cases of twins joined together. Barnum's twins were Ching and Eng. One of them died and the other lived but three hours afterward.

Attempt to Separate Caused Death. The Orriss twins from Austria, the Korean twins and the Filipino twins were all males. All of them were studied by doctors the world over. Twin girls joined together were born in Boston and when they were three years old an attempt was made to separate them and they died.

The Hindoo twin girls were severed in Paris in 1902. One died soon after the operation and the other later died of tuberculosis, from which her sister suffered and on account of which the operation was attempted.

Twin girls from Brazil were severed by Paris doctors in 1900. One died at the time of the operation. The other lived for five years, but was never able to walk.

CASTELLAW'S CLOSED; NEW FIRM TAKES OVER SUIT CLUB ACCOUNTS

With the closing of Castellaw's men store, which occurred today, it is announced that the Hub Clothing company will occupy the room in the Gholson hotel that has been reserved for Castellaw. This firm, which is a new concern, will take over all suit club accounts and continue the club.

Jack Russel is the head of the new firm. The cause of Castellaw's failure is partly placed on the First National bank suspending. Harry D. Farracy has been appointed receiver for the bankrupt stock.

EASTLAND WILL EMPLOY WHITE MEN ON PUBLIC WORKS

Special to the Times. EASTLAND, March 4.—According to an agreement reached by and between Dr. John G. Anderson, chairman of the local charities bureau and the county and city contractors on public work, white men will be given preference over Mexicans. That is to say if a man is down and out and in need of work of this kind, provided he is worthy of assistance, and is willing to do the work done by the Mexican and accept the same pay, the white man will be given the preference, according to the agreement.

CLAIMS WOMEN MORE TRUTHFUL THAN MEN

BUFFALO, March 4.—A man will commit perjury with an easier conscience than a woman, is the belief of Mrs. Ogilvie, Canadian woman customs inspector. When Mrs. Ogilvie passes through trains bound for the United States she asks passengers if they have any dutiable goods. If they reply in the negative she produces a Bible and asks them to repeat their statements under oath.

A large number of the women passengers, rather than deliberately tell a falsehood under oath, then admit they have dutiable goods, said Mrs. Ogilvie, but the men don't hesitate so much in telling a lie.
