

BEAUTIFUL AND MYSTERIOUS JAPAN

The Dai Butsu, or Great Buddha, at Kamakura.

The Resolute

The Shiba Temple at Tokyo.

The Temple of the First Shogun at Nikko.

In the midst of the charm and enchantment of the great Oriental capital.

Pageantry and Progress In Tokyo you get the best picture of the mingling modern progress and ancient picturesque pageantry which combine to make the Japan of today. There are still the massive walls and the wide moats which kept the shoguns safe in past centuries, but many of the streets are lined by large buildings of brick and concrete, housing great commercial organizations or government departments. There are still narrow alley-like, unpaved streets, winding right into the heart of romance-land, and there are wide thoroughfares on which great department stores and shops in the native open-front fashion stand side by side. Here you may snoop and "look-see" with many an "oh" and an "ah" and with many a joy to be prolonged by some particularly pleasing purchase.

JAPAN is such a Land-of-Dreams that a visit there, even a residence of years, does not make it seem altogether a reality. Its scenic beauty and world-renowned hospitality are real enough. Its houses are paper-walled and straw-roofed just as the story-books say, and in them are people like ourselves, not so much different in color as they are of different tint. There is enough of modernness in its principal cities and leading industries to give Western visitors those touches of home which are so curiously welcomed in far lands. But the Japan of mystic moonlight streaming through grotesquely twisted old pine trees; Japan of the throbbing, booming of great bronze bells, of weirdly trilling flutes as some romantic youth pipes to the geisha of his dreams; the Japan of festivals to strange-named gods, lantern-lit among the stately trees of some ancient temple-yard—how can such things be real? An Open Sesame to Romance The door to all this romance and mysticism of Japan is opened by the "Queen of Cruising Ships," the Resolute, of the United American Lines, when "on her" two world cruises she calls into the land of the Rising Sun, stopping from port to port and permitting her tourists to see Nippon and the Nipponese as they really are. Yokohama, Kyoto, Osaka, Tokyo, Kobe, Kamakura and Nikko are on the glittering itinerary. So curiously mingled are the old and the new, things of the East and things of the West, that landing at your first Japanese port is like entering another world, a place of man-pulled vehicles and motors side by side, of every combination of native and foreign dress. If in Japan you would do as the Japanese do, you will take off your shoes at the door; when you think, if you're a man, you should take off your hat, and the women will wear no hats at all. But, being a foreigner, if you neglect to do the proper Japanese thing, you will note not a sign of irritation or amusement on the faces of your understanding hosts. Whether you approach Japan from across the broad Pacific, or over the China Sea, or from Korea across the Tsushima Strait, she will welcome you with one of the outstanding features of her proverbial beauty. From Tokyo Bay and the port of Yokohama, if the weather man is in friendly mood, you will see the matchless peak of Fujiyama towering into the sky. If you come from China or Korea you will enter the Flowery Kingdom by way of the Inland Sea surely one of the most beautiful bodies of water in the whole world. Of course, not all people are affected alike, but here is an example of the way the beauty of the Inland Sea affects some. The papers have told us how on a recent world cruise a couple got acquainted as they admired the picturesque scenery at the sea's entrance. Their engagement was announced to their fellow passengers on the ship's arrival on our Western Coast, and the marriage took place at the Little Church Around the Corner just after the tour ended at New York. Traveling Through Fairyland Sailing over the Inland Sea, or skirting its shore by train, is like a trip through a sort of fairyland in which here and there an old castle glistens white amidst the dark green of the higher hills. You pass by or through Miyajima, world-famed for its torii, or temple gate, arising from the placid sea. Kobe, at the eastern entrance to the "Inland" Sea, has neck-and-neck with pre-earthquake Yokohama in Japan's foreign trade races. As the gateway to the great industrial section of Japan, it leads in the nation's imports, while Yokohama, the chief shipping point for silk, is first in exports. Kobe, with a lovely harbor in front and a range of picturesque and lofty hills behind, is interesting both to tourist and trader. In the attractive shops of the Motomachi, the main street, you can buy Japanese curios and objects of art, or meet your needs, should such arise, for goods brought in from abroad. Temples and shrines you may see at Kobe, of course—they are everywhere in Japan—but when you are bound for Kyoto, Tokyo and Nikko, and perhaps Nara, temples and shrines can wait. Kyoto, for a thousand years the Empire's capital and cultural center, is still one of its most fascinating cities. Here you may see entrancing temples and alluring shops, with curios to fit every purse, from a few yen to several thousand, and you may see, if you like, some of Japan's most celebrated products in process of making—wonderful lacquers, porcelains and damascene ware. A short distance across the tea-fields is Nara, a still earlier capital, now chiefly noted for its great Buddha, the largest bronze casting in the world. The Pittsburgh of Japan If you would see the far-famed industrial progress of Japan, take the train for a short ride to Osaka, sometimes called the "Pittsburgh of Japan" again the "Venice of the East" by virtue of its smoking chimneys and network of canals, it is able to establish its claim to either appellation. To get a quick view of the real Japan there is no better way than the daylight trip from the old capital to the new—the 19 or 12 hour run from Kyoto to Tokyo. This is the most important line of Japan's railway system, with fast, extra-fare expresses such modern trade and travel make necessary both in West and East. As you speed along, it occurs to you that Japan has had to pay an enormous price for her proverbial beauty. About 85% of the whole area of the islands exists for ornament only. It would be hard—if not impossible—to find a spot where you would stand and not see mountains in one or more directions. The mountains are a beautiful green, their slopes appearing in the distance like great expanses of cut silk velvet. And everywhere the sea cuts into the land to meet the mountains. Only little patches and narrow strips of land are left for the thrifty Japanese farmers. Perhaps that's the reason they are so thrifty, for in order to get the necessary ground they have to lay out terraced paddy-fields far up on the hillsides and make the most of the little that nature has allotted to them. In a very literal way they are between the devil of the mountains and the deep blue sea. Charming and Considerate Hosts Japanese consideration of the stranger in a strange land is everywhere apparent. The names of the railway stations are displayed in English along with the Japanese, and each signboard also shows the name of the station next in either direction, together with the distance. A separate board conveniently erected by the Japanese Tourist Bureau lists, also in English, the principal points of interest in the neighborhood. In the region of the great earthquake you will still see many evidences of that appalling disaster, though the wreckage has been mostly removed and Yokohama and the devastated parts of Tokyo largely rebuilt. These two cities are only about 20 miles apart, and fast electric trains, running every 10 or 15 minutes, make the journey in a little more than half an hour. If you are a tourist on the Resolute you can conveniently return to your luxurious steamer-home for the night, or at the beautiful new Imperial Hotel in Tokyo, happily unharmed by the earthquake, you may get excellent accommodations

Nikko—Temple Land The Japanese will tell you not to speak of beauty until you have seen Nikko, and when you see Nikko you will find words inadequate. The gorgeously colored temples standing among the magnificent cryptomerias in the brilliance of Opusita, sunshine make a picture exquisite beyond description. Spanning a rushing mountain stream between town and temple ground, is a bridge of red lacquer sacred to the use of those of royal blood, while a little distance away is another bridge of more sombre, but more practical construction for the use of any pilgrim to the shrines of departed greatness. It is only about a four-hour ride by train from Tokyo to Nikko. Much nearer, only about an hour and a half by train or by motor, is the beautiful seaside resort, on the populous capital city, Kamakura. There is the famous Hachiman Temple where hideous images on either side guard the entrance against persons of evil intentions. There also is the great bronze Buddha, which, to gaze upon is never to forget, for somehow in its serene countenance one seems to see, but cannot comprehend, the unfathomable wisdom and mystery of the ages.

HUDSON-ESSEX CARS CONTINUE IN BIG DEMAND

June Just Another Record-Breaking Month for Both These Popular Cars.

June is another record-breaking month for Hudson and Essex cars, with business good and public demand exceedingly active, according to Mr. Gholson of the Gullahorn Motor Company, Hudson-Essex distributor. "This will prove the sixth successive month in which all previous totals of Hudson and Essex business are surpassed," said Mr. Gholson. Starting with January of this year, Hudson-Essex started in the habit of breaking records. In each month since then it has bettered all former marks. "In so doing, Hudson-Essex has become the largest and most popular line of six cylinder cars which this or any other year ever knew. The more than 100,000 cars which have been made and sold this first six months of 1925 would be in fact a most handsome output for an entire year but the public demand for the cars which has called for this volume is on the increase and still greater Hudson-Essex marks may be looked for in the last half of the year. "The reasons behind this extraordinary record are of vital interest. There is no one single feature of Hudson-Essex construction on which public interest has centered; but there is an all-around standard of well balanced value which we considered unmatched elsewhere—and apparently the public agrees with us. "The question of delivering cars is a most serious one. We are actually unhappy when business is so ac-

Secret Effort of Kaiser for Alliance With Roosevelt

Another chapter is added to the history of American secret diplomacy by O. K. Davis, veteran newspaper correspondent, who, writing in Liberty, reveals a determined intrigue on the part of the Kaiser to draw Theodore Roosevelt into German-American alliance in 1908. The intrigue, suppressed interview given by the Kaiser to an American newspaper correspondent, came to Davis' notice when he was commissioned to report the results of the interview to President Roosevelt.

"The solution to the Eastern question is about to be made by Germany and the United States," Davis quotes the Kaiser as telling the correspondent. "It has been agreed between myself and Mr. Roosevelt to divide the East against itself by becoming the recognized friends of China. In a few months a high Chinese official will visit the United States and Germany and the terms will be made known. They will guarantee the integrity of China and the Open Door." "I took the correspondent's letter reporting this interview to President Roosevelt on the morning of August 7. Mr. Roosevelt had hardly more than glanced at it when he jumped out of his chair and strode toward me, waving the letter in front of him and exclaiming:

"You must not print this! We have no intentions of printing it. Mr. President," I replied. "I have brought the letter to you merely because the editors felt that you ought to see them."

"That at once satisfied the President. He set down at his desk again and finished reading the letter. When the reading was ended he turned to me and said:

"This is the funniest thing I have ever known. That Jack of an Emperor talks just as if what he happens to want is already an accomplished fact. He has been at me for over a year to make this kind of an agreement about China, but every time I have replied that means a treaty, to which the Senate must consent. The policy (the integrity of China and the Open Door), as I have always told the Emperor, is ours. It has been our policy for seven or eight years, ever since Hay first enunciated it.

"I can't believe he talked for publication."

WHERE AND HOW AMERICA WAS GIVEN ITS NAME.

Emerson deplored the fact that "proud America must bear the name of a thief, Amerigo Vespucci, the little dealer of Seville." It now appears that Emerson was misinformed—that Vespucci had nothing at all to do with choosing the name of the western continents. A poet named America. A poet, young ardent; a student at Heidelberg and Paris; a linguist and an eager follower of geography in an age when the ports of Europe were often in gala dress for the ships of the world discoverers.

Mathias Ringmann was a native of a village in the Voges mountains. He was born just ten years before Columbus turned his prow from Palos. Mathias and a friend, Martinus Waldseemuller, after graduating from college joined a literary society that used to meet in the old town of St. Die, near Luneville and not many miles from Strasburg. In the spring of 1507, this group of men set up a print shop in St. Die, as a practical step toward the dissemination of knowledge. The first thing they decided to undertake was the printing of a map of the world and a treatise in Latin to accompany it. Ringmann enthusiastically entered into the work of translating and editing material for the explanatory booklet, called "Introductio Cosmographica," of introduction to the science of the general constitution of the universe.

Before work began on the St. Die world map, the poet had made a translation of Amerigo Vespucci's voyages and had indited a sonnet on the mysteries of the new found world and the feats of Columbus, Cabral, and Vespucci. From the first he was enchanted by the meter and

NEGRO LASSES JOIN IN ROLLING THE IVORIES

By United Press.
DALLAS, July 18.—The "high-yellow's" roll 'em up to on Indiana alley, and don't deny it. When officers broke up a game, which is no uncommon occurrence up in the black belt of East Dallas, they arrested three negro youths and two negro lasses, and the lasses weren't just watching the game either, but were down on bent knees crooning over the African dice.

Both of them frankly admitted that they were gaming but tried to save the boys from paying a fine.

CHINESE GIANT AROUSING FROM AGE-LONG SLEEP

How England Views Events of Present-Day China and Plumbs Future.

By KEITH JONES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
LONDON (By mail to the United Press.)—China, sleeping giant of the ages, is awake.

Anation of more than 40,000,000 people, founded in dim long centuries before Christ, is putting its back up against the outside world seriously for the first time in history.

The spot where gunpowder was invented many centuries before the advent of the Christian era, threatens to resort to gunpowder, at long last, to uphold its dignity internationally.

All the world is watching the awakening—Japan, in the Far East; Great Britain, in Europe; the United States, in the Western world—All are waiting— anxiously, to a degree—to see the first drowsy gestures and gropings of the yawning, personified Colossus.

"Let Him Sleep"
All the world is pondering over the portent of Napoleon's classic reference: "Yonder lies a giant sleeping; let him sleep."

Every other power in the family of nations is squarely faced with readjustment of its policy to meet the new situation. The recent wave of anti-foreign feeling in China—supplanting the long period of rivalry between north and south and the complicated series of century-old civil wars and revolutions—has removed the Chinese from the domestic to the international sphere of disturbances.

While there have been other outbursts against the foreigner in the past, none has ever assumed the scope and pregnancy of that which has been raging during the past two months. It is aimed chiefly at Britain and Japan, anti-Japanese feeling forming the spear-head of this movement, as it has of other similar agitations in China in the past.

British property and lives have been violated to such an extent that Britons at home have begun to demand official information as to what the government intends to do about it.

It is learned in authoritative quarters that Britain's policy follows almost identically that of the United States. The government plans not to urge or encourage combined international intervention unless more serious, more general events necessitate it. Britain is banking on the proposed economic conference to be held in China as a result of the 1919 nine-power treaty of Washington, to solve the problem. She believes that there the foreign conferees can use economic concessions as a lever to demand domestic stability of the Chinese.

OUT OUR WAY

BY WILLIAMS

British Aim.

Meanwhile, the British aim, like the United States, to try to be as helpful to China as possible in overcoming her difficulties. Forcible intervention will be used separately, without the aid of other powers, only in cases of necessity, in isolated instances of disorder where British interests may be jeopardized or attacked.

The government here is little disturbed by such suggestions as have been made for abolition of extra-territoriality in China. It believes all the leading powers are united in their opinions on the subject. Authoritative opinion holds that, while China may have been encouraged to demand abolition of the precedent set in Turkey and other quarters, her claims to the privilege may be effectually met with facts.

Turkey, it would be pointed out, has approached cohesion and stability of government sufficient to inspire international confidence warranting abolition of extra-territoriality, and has also provided adequate safeguards to foreigners in the treaty of Lausanne.

The recent troubles in China, it is felt here, furnish little indication of any progress the country may or may not have made toward self-government. Experts returning from the Far East have consistently held that China has for many years made virtually no headway in this direction.

Economic Conference

Thus, while the Chinese stew is simmering, there is an inclination in British official circles to see merely that there is no disastrous boiling over until the economic conference can be held. Then, it is believed, the master political chiefs of interested foreign powers can effectively administer the necessary pepper or other condiment to produce a dish satisfactorily shared by the Chinese themselves as well as others and palatable enough to suit everybody.

Considerable gratification has been expressed in circles generally here at reports indicating American, Italian, and other informal and unofficial support of the British position during the late difficulties. And it has been an especial source of relief and encouragement, it is stated, to find that Japan, too, has been a loyal supporter throughout.

INCREASE IN POWER MEANS HIGHER WAGES

Some years ago when electric devices began to take the place of so much manual labor fears were expressed that there would not be work enough for the laborers of the country and that wages would slump. But look at us now!

The horsepower used, per man, in England is about one-half that required in the United States. It is no mere accident, says the Texas Public Service Information Bureau, that the wages also are half. The horsepower consumed in Japan is about one-fourth that in the United States, and curiously enough, the wages paid also are about one-fourth.

If our standards of living are higher than those of any other country, if our labor produces more and earns more, it is because we are users of power and automatic machinery.

During the twenty years that preceded the World War, the annual national per capita earnings in the United States increased 116 per cent, those in Germany 52 per cent, France 27 per cent, and Great Britain 21 per cent. It would be no difficult matter to collate these significant percentages with our greater use of power driven labor-saving machines.

MRS. ICE CONSUMER:

You will no doubt be approached soon with some sort of a wrapping to save ice.

It will do just exactly that very thing. It will prevent the free circulation of air around your ice and retard the melting.

This will have two BAD EFFECTS upon your box: First, the temperature of the box will go up—it can't help it because the melting of the ice is what lowers the temperature; Second, the air cannot be renovated in your box unless it is permitted to circulate freely over the melting ice.

Ask your family physician if the above is not correct.

These wrappers are purported to be sold on a "money-back guarantee." We would not think of asking you not to try one, but if you do try one be sure your guarantee is a good one and signed by some one YOU know and not some one who might be "here today and gone tomorrow."

When you pay your good money for ice to protect your food and then wrap the ice up so that it cannot do the very thing you bought it for, you have wasted your money both for ice and ice blanket.

Be prudent. "The simple believeth every word but the prudent man looketh well to his going."

Baylor Girls Argue Convincingly

These are the six young women, students of Baylor College for Women, Belton, who, under the coaching of Prof. William H. Vann, won the debating championship of Texas this year. Reading left to right: Frances Rollow, Nashville, Tenn.; Cora Whitley, Dayton; Margaret Jones, Hubbard; Martha Hardy, Belton; Johnnye Guynes, Calvert; Alma Lee Joiner, Wichita Falls.

Special Correspondence.

BELTON, Texas, July 18.—By winning five victories this year in debating, with 40 defeats, Baylor College for Women has acquired a clear title to the girls' debating championship of Texas.

Baylor College representatives were: Miss Alma Lee Joiner, Wichita Falls; Miss Frances Rollow, Nashville, Tenn.; Miss Cora Whitley, Dayton; Miss Martha Hardy, Belton; Miss Johnnye Guynes, Calvert, and Miss Margaret Jones, Hubbard. Misses Hardy and Whitley won over the representatives of Louisiana College in a debate held in Alma Reeves chapel, Baylor College, March 26. Misses Hardy and Guynes at Belton and Misses Whitley and Jones at Fort Worth won a dual debate with Texas Woman's College, May 13; and Misses Joiner and Rollow were victorious in a quadrangular contest involving Baylor College, Simmons University, Howard-Payne College and Baylor University, defeating Baylor University at Waco, May 8, and Simmons University at Abilene, May 16.

Since the only other colleges and universities in Texas putting out girls' debating teams this year had only one team and one contest, and since two of these had declined a challenge from Baylor College, Baylor College thus becomes the first institution that can claim the title in girls' debates.

The subject discussed was the independence of the Philippine Islands, Baylor College winning twice on the affirmative and three times on the negative. The Baylor College teams were coached by Prof. W. H. Vann, head of the department of English, assisted by Miss Miss Mary Jane Walters, head of the department of public speaking.

Baylor college representatives have been engaging in intercollegiate debates for five years. During that time they have won 11 debates and lost four. They have won 28 and lost nine votes. In 1921 Baylor college defeated Baylor university, winning unanimously. In 1922 Baylor college representatives competed in a triangular contest with the College of Industrial Arts at Denton and Texas Woman's college at Fort Worth, winning in Belton unanimously and losing in Fort Worth by a 2-1 decision. Three debates were held in 1923. Baylor college representatives defeated Louisiana college and Texas Woman's college representatives unanimously, but lost to the College of Industrial Arts 2-1. Last year Baylor college again met representatives of Louisiana college, Texas Woman's college, and the college of Industrial Arts, winning over Louisiana and T. W. C. and losing again to C. I. A. by a 2-1 decision.

Woman Tells About Vice Ring Which Kidnaps and Abuses Girls, But Police Profess to Doubt Truth of Her Story

By United Press. Chief of Police Hardwick of Cal- CALEXICO, Cal., July 18.—Still exico, who is charged with the responsibility of disapproving her story or breaking up the greatest vice ring in history, believes the woman "had the greatest imagination in history." Mrs. Cookson vanished last week, her deserted automobile was found last Wednesday and authorities believed she had been murdered until she staggered into police headquarters with the weird tale of her adventure.
