FROM OIL IS

Bureau of Mines Experiments Also Indicate Alcohol By-Product.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 .- The possibility of manufacturing carbon black from oils by an electrical process, which possesses advantages over present methods of making this important industrial material by incomplete combustion of natural gau, is indicated as the result of experiments conducted by the department of the interior at the Pittsburg experiment station of the bureau of mines. Carbon black is a fluffy, finely divided black pigment produced by allowing the yellow flame of natural gas burning with an insufficient supply of aid to impinge against a cool metal surface. Carbon black is used extensively in the making of printers inks, as a filter in automobile tires, and in the manufacture of stove and shoe blacking, phonograph records, black leather, typewriter ribbons, carbon-copy papers carriage cloths, oil-cloths, linoleum, black opaque photographic papers, celluloid cement, wall tints and colors, marking inks and pencils, and complete combustion of natural gau. colors, marking inks and pencils, and artificial tile.

In certain states the decreasing supply of natural gas, and drastic legislation against carbon - black plants, have precented the expansion that would be economically justified by the increasing use of carbon black in the industries and the grad all rise in price for the better grades of black. At present, the black has to be shipped comparatively long distances to the crief markets, at freight rates that are high because of the bulkiness of the black. In the course of investigations of the effects of high voltage electrical discharges on hydro-carbons, it was noted by the burear of mines chemists that, under certain conditions, show" will be presented tomorrow In certain states the decreasing noted by the burear of mines chemists that, under certain conditions, natural gas could be decomposed and carbon black produced. The effects of several types of electrical discharge on natural gas and on liquid hydro-carbons and other oils was therefore studied by J. J. Jakosky, associate engineer, in order to ascertain the fundamental factors in the reactions. In the study of natural gas, the possible influence of these factors on the recovery of a larger part of the carbon content of the gas than is now possible was investigated.

York Winter Garden, "The Passing Show" will be presented tomorrow night at the Connellee theatre in Eastland and the advance ticket sale indicates that all attendance records for the big showhouse will be shattered and that the "standing room only" sign may have to be hung out.

When one remembers that "The Passing Show" a year ago dazzled the oil belt by its brilliant lavishness and stupendous size and that the coming attraction is cast along even more gorgeous lines, it is not difficult to understand why the demand for Utilizing Cheap Power.

In the manufacture of carbon black from oils, by the arc process developed by the bureau of mines, the two main essentials are a cheap electric power and chean light-oil distillates. The process is suitable for practically all parts of the United States and in many foreign countries. Because of the abundance of cheap off-peak mearly all large industrial centers, carbon black in many places can be manufactured where it is needed, with a considerable saving in freight rates alone. Especially will this be true as to certain eastern states and as to foreign markets. Prices for second-class power differ considerably with local conditions, but enough off-peak local conditions, but enough off-peak power is available in well-scattered regions of this country at prices rang-ing from 0.01 cent to 0.05 cent per class power differ considerably with local conditions, but enough off-peak power is available in well-scattered regions of this country at prices ranging from 0.01 cent to 0.05 cent per kilowatt hour. Power in many forcing from 0.01 cent to 0.05 cent per kilowatt hour. Power in many forcing countries is considerably cheaper.

In connection with the electrical manufacture of carbon black by the bureau of mines process, it is protable that the unsaturated gases produced during the decomposition of the oil may constitute profitable by-products if utilized for the manufacture of alcohols. Noncondensable gases formed in connection with the process are suitable for domestic faels and could probably be sold in those localities where a market exists for domestic gas, thus reducing the total net cost of producing carbon black.

About 20 to 25 per cent of the present output of carbon black in the United States is used in principal growth of the automobile in dustry has created an extensive mirket for carbon black as a toughener in rubber. About 15 to 25 per cent of the carbon black made in the United States is exported for use in the same industries as in this country. Large quantities go to England, France, and Germany for rubber compounding and to Japan and China for manufacture into "India" and other inks, paints, and enemels.

Details of these experiments are described in technical paper 351, by J. J. Jakosky. copies of which may be obtained from the superintendent of documents, government printing office, Washington, D. C., at a price of 10 cents.

All the rules, regulations and laws that can be passed will be of little on a vail so long as any man or woman can buy an automobile one minute, step into the state licensing department and get a permit to drive the next minute, regardless of his familiarity with the car, its operation or road rules. No other piece of machinery in the world is operated on such a haphazard basis. The marvel is that instead of 22,000 deaths a year, there are not 200,000 deaths.

President Splawn Reviews Its Development Since Establishment in 1883

(This is one of a series of articles n the University of Texas, written by Dr. W. M. W. Splawn, president.)

By W. M. W. SPLAWN.

Many men and not a few women who have achieved notable success in the profession of law in Texas and other parts of the country were former students of the department of law of the University of Texas. This department, which is now called This department, which is now called the school of law, opened in 1883, with 52 students and two members of the faculty, Governor O. M. Roberts and Judge Robert S. Gould. The first classes met in the old temporary capitol, then on the vacant lattice from the first classes. not in front of the governor's man-sion. Later, the department was moved in the basement of the main building on the present campus of the university. In 1908 the present law building was completed. From 1883 to 1909 the entrance requirements were simply a high hool education, and the length 1903, when it was increased to three From 1909 to 1920, in addition t the high school credits required fo dmission to the university, eigh ollege courses were required for the law degree, five of which must hav been completed before entrance Since 1920, 10 college courses hav been required. The faculty has un der consideration the raising of the requirements to 15 college course and eventually to a B. A. degree. statement from Judge Gould in the catalogue of 1888 well expresses the continued belief and policy of the Freparation For Law.

"The professors of the law department would urge young men de siring to enter it, to prepare them selves for the study of law by taking the full course of academic study quired for a degree in colleges of tablished reputation," he wro "While it is not deemed advisable make this a condition of admissi as a candidate for the degree bachelor of laws, the decided opinion bachelor of laws, the decided opinion is expressed that this is the preparation best adapted to fit young men for studying law to the greatest profit. It is much to be regretted that so many seek to begin that study with so little previous mental training."

The raising of the requirements, both in law and college courses, has been governed by the increase in general educational advantages in the state, the standard being raised as good high schools, colleges and universities have multiplied, making it easier to obtain the requisite college credits. A limited number of mature students, not candidates for degrees, may enter upon individual approval, with less preparation.

DEPUTY SHERIFF TELLS HOW NEGRO WAS KILLED WHILE STEALING A HOG

Ex-Sheriff E. P. (Pack) Kilborn, who has had a long and varied experience as a peace office and who is now deputy sheriff and jailer, tells a story of how a hog that had been killed by a negro who was trying to steal it, played even with the negro and brought about his death also shortly after he had taken the life

"I was seated in the Tarrant county sheriff's office in Fort Worth one time talking to the sheriff," Mr. Kil-born said, "when a call came in for him to come out in the country a few miles and investigate the circumstances surrounding the death of a body had been found hanging on a

"When we arrived at the place, we found the dead negro as we had been told. He was hanging by the neck across a high rail fence on the other side of which hung a dead hog that looked like it might weigh about 100 pounds. An investigation revealed that the negro had slipped into the pen of one of his white neighbors and knocked one of his hogs in the head with an axe and killed it. He then took a piece of reve and the head with an axe and killed it. then took a piece of rope and, tieing the hog's fore feet together, placed his own head between the fore legs of the hog and lifted the hog to his back, starting to climb over the fence and make his get-away. But the combined weight of the hog and the negro was too much for the top rail of the fence and it broke, the hogsfalling or one side and the bogsfalling or one side and the result of the fence and it broke, the hog falling on one side and the negro on the other. In the fall the negro's neck was broken.

Mr. Kilborn said the coroner's verdict was that the negro was killed by a dead hog.
