Have All Good—The young lions do lack, and suffer hunger; but they that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing.—Psalm 34: 10.

ON THE RANGE AT RANGER
By THE FENCE RIDER
(Items for this department must be phoned in to the Fence Rider, by 12 o'clock daily in order to insure their insertion. Don't be haphazard. Jingle the telephone bell.)

Now's the time to show how good a sport you are. The Ranger team will play its first conference game in Breckenridge one week from tomorrow and the pep squad, 100 strong, wants to go and shout and yell and root and cut dices and show the real Ranger spirit. Railroad service can't be had, although efforts have been made to arrange it. So it's a matter of cars to haul a hundred. All that any real Rangerites with a car, some gas and the Ranger spirit has to do to get in on the hoisting is to call on the Chamber of Commerce or tell one of the pep squad leaders, Clyde Alworth, Ida Mae Lonsdale or Katherine Hall, he wants to hook in on the occasion. But don't wait till next Saturday to make that call. Do it now—then they'll know what to count on.

One of the Fence Rider's earliest recollections was when his father told him how, when but a lad, he got all sorts of thrills from seeing Walter Johnson pitch the Washington team to victory. I'm going to tell that to my great grandchildren and ask them how they think Walter's pitching compares with the brand he put up when my dad was a boy.

Joe Manicchia is back from his vacation all rested up and almost recovered from the illness incurred from grief over Atlanta's defeat in the Dixie series. Joe was the only fireman at the station who boosted for the Crackers, his old home town team, during the late disaster.

PERSONALS.
Iver Johnson and family left today for St. Louis, where Mr. Johnson has recently been employed as auditor on the Frisco railroad. Mr. Johnson was with the Hamon Kell line for three years.
Mrs. Billy Gaunce and son, Billy Joe, of the Carter Apartments, spent last week with her husband at Cross Plains. Mr. Gaunce is drilling a wildcat well near there.
Mrs. A. N. Harkrider left today for Rochester, Minn., where she will enter Mayo Brothers sanitarium.
Mrs. J. M. White is attending the Cisco Baptist convention at Breckenridge today.
H. E. Brown of Independence Kan., superintendent of the telegraph department of the Prairie Pipe Line, is in the city today.

DELPHIANS' PLAN CIVIC WORK.
At the first meeting of the Delphian club, yesterday afternoon at the Gholson Hotel, plans were made to take up some line of civic work during this fall and winter. While the full scope of their work is not ready for publication, it is understood that they will lend their aid where most needed. Civic committee appointed was Mrs. George Bohning, D. L. Jameson and Tom Valliant. This very wide awake club has heretofore followed strictly its line of study, but it feels that, like an individual, cannot be selfish and must stand ready to lend a helping hand to its community. Practically every member of the Delphian club is connected with one or more local organizations and gives freely of their time and money, but still, as a club, they want to reach out and do more and become a factor in Ranger's civic life. The first meeting was an enthusiastic one. The attendance was good, the program splendid and each and every one present seemed glad to be back on the job again, as it were, and anxious to forge ahead in their regular work and in their new field of labor. Since their year book shows that the Delphians will major in art during 1925-26, it is very obvious that their civic work will follow along that line, for art is but an appreciation of beauty and beauty is "the quality resulting from the harmonious combination of diverse elements in unity," which suggests that whether they work for "order, fitness, harmony yards or in parks, on school grounds or various other places, they will work by "order, fitness, harmony and rhythm."

A LITTLE GIRL.
Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Stence are rejoicing over the arrival of a little baby girl, who arrived this morning at the City-County hospital.

EASTLAND AND BRECKENRIDGE PLAY TOMORROW
Gridiron Teams Ready for Contest at Connellee Park, Eastland.

The weather permitting, the Eastland Mavericks will be ready for the game tomorrow afternoon at Connellee park with the Breckenridge Buckaroos. Coach Adams has been putting his men through some pretty severe training during the past few days and they are said to be in excellent condition.
The fact that the game with the Buckaroos is the opening official game of the season, has caused an increased interest in it in Eastland and the further fact that the average Eastland fan believes that the Mavericks are going to be winners of the district championship this season has also helped to stimulate enthusiasm. Word from Breckenridge states that the Buckaroos have been training hard and that a large delegation of fans from that city expect to accompany the Buckaroos to Eastland tomorrow. A grand rally of Breckenridge supporters of the Buckaroos is planned for tonight in Breckenridge, it is stated.

It was stated yesterday that the pep squad of the Eastland High school and a large number of Eastland fans would have a rally somewhere in the downtown district late this evening, but it is not known this morning just what the plans are, owing to the rain, which if it keeps up, will doubtless alter them.
Many tickets have already been sold to the game Saturday and every Eastland citizen who can possibly attend the game, is urged to be on hand early Saturday. The game will start at 3:30 o'clock.

TEA AND TALK SEASON COMES

By BARBARA BROOKS.
Home Economics Department, Kellogg Co., Battle Creek, Mich.
This is the time of the year when our thoughts turn from picnics, motor drives and golf to the cozy informal teas in our own homes. One young woman said the other day: "I am going to specialize this fall in tea and talk—these are so much more fun than bridge parties."
The most charming afternoon tea is the very informal one at which intimate friends drop in for as long or short a time as they desire. The refreshments should be simple, but are enjoyed more if they have the charm of the unusual. Such home fare as hot gingercake, tiny muffins, bacon biscuits or toasted cheese sandwiches are always good.

Do you know that gingercake can be mixed and put into pans but not baked for several hours? Get it ready in the morning, but slip it in the oven just in time to be done for tea. It may be baked in a loaf, a square pan or in individual molds. The recipe given below may be varied by adding one-half cup of bran, or one-half cup of dates. It can be baked, split, and marshmallows put between the layers. Put it back in the oven long enough to soften the marshmallows.
They bear muffins with dates are delicious with tea. Small baking powder biscuits may be split, spread with bacon fat and put back in the oven for a few minutes so that the bacon flavor will get through the biscuit.
Cheese always makes an appeal to the appetite. Grated cheese may be put into the biscuit dough. Cheese sandwiches should be small, the cheese seasoned well with a mixture of salt, paprika and mustard. The sandwich can be toasted on the electric grill at the tea table.
Gingercake: One-fourth cup shortening, one-half cup brown sugar,

1 egg, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup sour milk, 1 and three-fourths cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon ginger, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, one-half teaspoon salt.
CHILDRESS.—The new high tension electric transmission line between Clarendon and Childress and other points that is being built by the Texas Central Power company is expected to be finished by November 1.

NEW SENSATIONS ARE NOW ENJOYED BY MANY GIRLS

Women Who Formerly Lacked Energy on Account of Physical Imperfections Now Rejoicing.

Only those who realize now through the use of St. Joseph's G. F. P. the pleasures and happiness, with freedom from pain and melancholy which they missed in earlier life, can fully appreciate the wonderful transformations which are taking place among our girlhood and womanhood since this wonderful medicine has been introduced in this country. It is actually making fully developed, strong, beautiful and attractive women out of girls who long ago gave up the thought of such pleasures and happiness, on account of imperfections in their delicate organs which rendered them weak, sal-low, despondent, in pain, with headaches and a languid, depressing feeling during periods of organic functioning.

Girls who never had the glow of healthy, robust youth; girls who never could see the fun and the thrills which would cause riotous mirth and laughter among their chums are now enjoying these sensations which they have long despaired of indulging, and are proving a revelation to their friends by their cheery, happy, vivacious appearance and robust vitality. On account of these wonderful, almost miraculous changes, St. Joseph's G. F. P. is enjoying unprecedented popularity, and nearly every dealer everywhere is recommending it highly.

Women Now Depend on St. Joseph's G. F. P. To Restore Their Vitality

MAY SEYMOUR FOOTLOOSE

BY BEATRICE BURTON

THE STORY SO FAR:

May Seymour, whose husband, Dr. John Seymour, killed himself because of her love affair with Jim Carewe, returns to her home town after a year's absence.

Heavily veiled, she comes late one night to the home of her lawyer, Dick Gregory, and Gloria, his wife. She tells them how the ugly story of her past has followed her everywhere. And so she has made up her mind to go to Europe where no one will know her.

She asks Ulysses X. Forgan, a widower who is in the real estate business, to sell her house for her. When Ulysses sensibly urges her to live in it, and live down her reputation among her townspeople, May bursts into tears and insists that she wants to be footloose.

She tells Dick to sell her stocks and bonds for whatever they will bring. All she wants is enough money to cross the part of a wealthy widow and "land" a rich husband.

A week later, with $8,000 in her handbag, she goes down to Atlantic City for a short rest before sailing for Europe. There she meets Mrs. Carlotta Frolking, a grass widow, and her friends, Herbert Waterbury and Dan Sprague.

They all go to Adoree's little supper club, and are joined by Francis Lee, one of Adoree's hostesses. Waterbury explains that such woman as Francis earn their living by dancing with unattached men in these places.

May accidentally drops her bag, and her $8,000 falls out. On the way home Waterbury tells her it's dangerous for her to carry the money around with her; and then offers to take care of it for her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

May's eyes widened as she looked up at him.

"Turn my money over to you?" she repeated. "Why, Mr. Waterbury, I wouldn't think of doing such a thing! After all, you're an utter stranger to me. And for all I know, you may be the biggest crook in Christendom."

She laughed nervously and went on. "Don't misunderstand me—I know you aren't, of course. I really think you're a very nice person. But even so.

Waterbury pressed her arm with his strong fingers.

"So you do think I'm nice, even if you're sure I'm dishonest?" he asked. In her role of the Wistful Widow, May bent her head and nodded. "Of course, I think you're nice," she breathed. "And what do you think about me, Mr. Waterbury?"

He didn't answer for a minute or two. "I don't know just what I do think of you," he blurted out finally. "But I know I've done nothing but think about you ever since I saw you on the train today!"

May looked up at him and smiled. At that moment the girdle of lights along the Boardwalk went out, leaving it in gray darkness. Beyond the dim band of the sand, the breakers rolled in edged with white foam. "Oh, isn't it beautiful!" May cried.

Lady Says She Took Cardui and Never Saw Such Improvement—Was So Weak Couldn't Stand.

Weathersby, Miss.—Mrs. James M. Hall, of this place, writes that she was "getting weaker all the time" when Cardui, the woman's tonic, was first brought to her attention. After she had taken Cardui a while, she writes that she "never did see such an improvement."

"I suffered all the time and had pains all over," says Mrs. Hall. "I was so weak I could not stand. My skin was cold and flabby. I did not have any color. I had always been a very active woman—used to outdoor exercise, walking and going where I pleased, and to get down, not able to get myself a drink, was indeed a hardship."

"Nothing seemed to help me, till I began on Cardui. The first bottle seemed to strengthen me, and I sent for five more. By the time I had taken these, I was on my feet, going around, doing my work, gained in health and strength. I took two more bottles, and I am well and strong. Can work my garden. I haven't had any more sickness." Ask your druggist. NC-165 face to the cold fresh rush of it as it came in, smelling of the sea.

Then, suddenly, she felt Waterbury's arms around her. They drew her against him, and his mouth came down upon hers in a short harsh contact.

Then, as suddenly, he let her go.

May stepped back, breathless. "Oh, you—" she began. And was in his arms again.

He kissed her again and again—not roughly, this time, but as if he would never have done. And this time May did not resist him, but lay in his arms, with a curious sense of contentment in her heart.

In all of her life she had never been kissed this way before—passionately, and at the same time tenderly, almost comforting.

"I'm sorry if you're angry with me. I couldn't help myself," Waterbury said, when he released her. And they stood, holding each other's hands in the windy darkness.

"I'm—not angry," May almost whispered. "But—don't do it again. Please."

"FOOTLOOSE"
 She turned and with her head bent down against the wind, she started back toward the hotel. In silence Waterbury followed her.
 "About that money," he said in a matter of fact tone as they entered the lobby. "Please, won't you put it into the hotel safe, if you don't want to trust me with it? I'm afraid you'll lose it, or be robbed."
 "Perhaps I will," May answered, ringing the bell for the elevator, "tomorrow."
 "Tomorrow," Waterbury echoed. "I shall see you, tomorrow?"
 May looked deep into his eyes, and held out her hand. "Yes," she said softly. "Good night."

 Upstairs in her room, she stood before her mirror, searching her face in the glass. The eyes were brilliant and there was vivid, unaccustomed color in her cheeks. Here lips smiled. May addressed the radiant image in the glass, aloud.
 "Old girl," she said, "upon my soul, I believe we've fallen in love with this Waterbury man!"
 It was the first time she had ever admitted such a thing to herself, in all the 27 years of her life.
 She lay down, and was asleep almost the second her head touched the pillow.
 Like nine women out of 10, the first thing May Seymour did upon awakening each morning, was to look at herself in the glass.
 This morning as she leaned across the littered top of her dressing table, and studied her reflection, she frowned. All the glow and color that had been in her face the night before was gone. There were violet shadows beneath her eyes.

 May tried to rub them out with cold cream. Neither the cold cream nor a cold shower that made her tingle all over, erased them.
 "Stayed up too late!" she scolded herself. "What I need is a face massage. That'll fix me up."
 A half hour later she lay in a long chair in the little beauty salon of the hotel.
 While she waited for the operator to bring hot water and a jar of cleansing cream, May idly watched the woman in the curtained alcove next to her's.
 There was something familiar about the woman's face.
 "Where have I seen her before?" May asked herself.
 Suddenly she remembered. The woman was the "hostess" from Adore's supper club—the woman whom Dan Sprague had called "Francie."

 She had evidently just had her hair washed, and it hung in dark, dank strings around her neck and shoulders. And her eyes looked small and sleepy above wrinkled pockets of flesh.
 She caught May's frank gaze in the mirror before her, and flashed her a smile that illumined her whole face.
 "She has a certain queer charm at that," May thought an hour later as she walked down the Boardwalk hunting for a place to breakfast.
 "Hello, there!" called a gay voice behind her. May turned, and waited for Carlotta Frolking to catch up with her.
 "Where have you been so early in the morning?" Carlotta asked, panting a little.

 "Early?" May asked, consulting her wrist watch. "It's 11. I've been buying a facial massage and a shampoo and marcel!"
 "Well, for crying out loud!" Carlotta exclaimed, "all that! Aren't you the early bird! Where are you going now?"
 "To breakfast," May answered. "Oh, look here! Do you suppose these are real diamonds?"
 They paused before the window of a smart little shop that faced the sea. Within was a collection of diamond rings sparkling on a bed of white velvet.
 "Of course they're real. They don't sell imitations at La Gallier's, let me tell you," Carlotta answered. "Do you see that black pearl there in the center—the one set in diamonds?"

May gasped as she followed Carlotta's eyes. The black pearl was her neck at that very moment. At the precise size and color of the im- tation ones she was wearing around

FOLKS DON'T THINK BLOTCHES ARE PRETTY

You can't expect people to say you are "good-looking" as long as your appearance shows you are careless about keeping your skin free from blotches, pimples, rash, "breaking out" and eczema.

You may feel like you have no hope of getting rid of these things, but you should not give up because Black and White Ointment, and Soap, are proving to thousands of people every day that they can depend on them to keep their skin clear, smooth and lovely.

Black and White Ointment and Soap are nominally priced, in liberal packages. The 50c size Ointment contains three times as much as the 25c size. All dealers have both the Ointment and Soap.—Adv.

sive luxury to her mourning.
"Oh, wouldn't I love to have it!" she cried. "It would just match my necklace."
"Let's go in and price it," Carlotta urged, and they went into the little shop.
Five minutes later they emerged. Six hundred of May's $8,000 was gone. But the ring gleamed on her ungloved hand—coldly like winter twilight.
"It is lovely, isn't it?" she said to Carlotta.
The plump little woman looked at her with envy in her round blue eyes. "I'll tell the street it's lovely," she said. "But what's lovelier than that is having the money to dash it off hand and buy things like that! I wish I had your money, sweetie."
She sighed. "Well, she said, 'I'd like to go to have breakfast with you, but I've a date with the beauty specialist myself. Oh, dearie, if only I had your youth!'"
There was a sort of comical tragedy in her face as she spoke. And under the brilliant sun, May saw that her skin was puckered into fine lines.

What a dreadful thing it must be to be middle-aged and footloose like Carlotta! To be in love with a man of the Dan Sprague type who flirted with check room girls, dance-club hostesses, or anybody else, so long as it was a woman!
After all, the only safe and comfortable life was the married woman's existence. Even if she hadn't much of anything else, she still had the law on her side, May figured.

She left Carlotta and walked along, hunting for a little restaurant called the Blue Rose. She had noticed its cleanliness and its fresh white curtains the night before when she had passed it with Waterbury.
