PRESIDENT REBUKES EXPECTATION OF WAR

UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS ON ROAD TO BIG WEALTH

Oil May Bring it Riches Beyond Wildest Dreams of Pioneer Organizers.

Special Correspondence.

DALLAS, Oct. 6.—An era of prosperity has struck the state university, which bids fair to be well provided for in the future, due to the fact that the royalties from oil wells brought in on lands belonging to the university are piling up in the state treasury by the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

If anybody is to be praised for the happy advent of oil fields on university lands it should be the pioneers who set the lands aside for the upkeep of that institution and thus precipitated a boom for higher education in Texas that even they themselves never dreamed about.

So far the only note of discord touching the discovery of oil on university lands is the question of whether the money from royalties goes into the permanent or the available funds of the university.

The remarkable feature of the whole matter is that the discoveries and the developments continue, Texas will soon wake up to find herself the owner of a great university endowed for all time with wealth and riches beyond the wildest dreams of those who insisted on its establishment at a period in history when it was thought by many to be an extravagant venture.

SUIT TO CANCEL MARRIAGE CONTRACT IS FILED

W. M. Armstrong, for his daughter, Lois Armstrong, has brought suit in the Eighty-eighth district court to cancel and set aside a marriage contract between Lois Armstrong and Brown Smith on the ground that the girl is only 15 years of age and that misrepresentation and fraud were used in getting the county clerk to issue the marriage license.

Plaintiff's petition recites that the couple were married on Oct. 2 and that the license was obtained by the defendant through false affidavits made by himself and other parties alleged to have conspired with him for the purpose of obtaining the license.

Marriage Whirl and Fashion Whirl Will Have Their Fling Together Tonight at the Liberty Theatre

The Marriage Whirl and the Fashion Whirl will occupy the stage at the Liberty theatre this evening. Corinne Griffith will star in one and Ranger folks that are well known will star in the other.

The regular program of the Liberty will be shown, with the exception of an interlude of one hour between 8:30 and 9:30 o'clock, when Ranger's style show will take the place of pictures.

The Whirl of Fashion will show that the fitted line is favored, and that clothes that have a tendency to mold the figure, show possibilities of making one look slim. High necked models will prevail to a great extent, showing that women had rather be smart than comfortable, which also accounts in a measure for the long sleeves.

SMALL FIRE IN BASEMENT OF J. N. McFATTER HOME

Fire in the home of Judge J. N. McFatter at 545 East Main street, called out the Ranger firemen at 2:15 this afternoon. The origin of the fire is unknown. The damages are small.

COTTON CROP COMING BACK, RECORDS SHOW

1924 Gains 33 Per Cent Over 1923; 1925 Will Nearly Double 1924.

Down to Monday, Oct. 5, the total cotton ginned in Ranger during the present season aggregated 914 bales. To this may be added a considerable though not an enormous quantity which had to be taken to other gins when the volume became too large for Ranger's one gin to take care of.

The increase from 1923 to 1924 was more than 33 per cent. The number of bales ginned in 1923 was about 700. The exact figures are not available. The number in 1924 was exactly 1,056 and practically all the crop was taken care of by the Ranger gin.

The first estimate made by H. L. Stewart, manager of the Ranger Moss gin, was 1,500 bales. This has now been raised to 1,800 bales, at least, and it is admitted the crop may run to 2,000 bales.

In recent interviews with numerous cotton growers, a Times representative asked the question why Ranger's cotton crop dropped from nearly 9,000 bales in one prior year down to almost none for several years. The answers were singularly of one accord. The main reason was that oil production caused most farmers to have dreams of immediate fortune without the necessity for such hard labor as cotton growing involves.

The cross examination of Rear Admiral Moffett, navy air head, scheduled for today, will probably take place late tomorrow, and the board then will recess until Monday. Next week Major General Patrick, army air chief, will be questioned further.

MITCHELL ISSUE PRESENTED TO LEGIONNAIRES

AIR SERVICE ADVOCATE URGES ACTION TO CREATE DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL DEFENSE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—An appeal to the American Legion convention to aid in defending Col. William Mitchell in court-martial proceedings against him was made today by Representative Frank Reid, republican, of Illinois, head of Mitchell's civilian counsel. In a telegram to the convention at Omaha, Reid urged appointment of a committee of lawyers to assist Mitchell.

OMAHA, Oct. 6.—Col. William Mitchell, former assistant chief of the army air service, unable to attend the convention because of court-martial proceedings against him, today telegraphed his former buddies asking their aid in his fight for a separate air service. The message read by Captain Pizer, department commander of the District of Columbia, said:

"The time has come when we must modernize our national defense, teach our people what it means and organize it in a simple and efficient manner. This can be done by creating a department of national defense, with sub-heads for the army, the navy and the air. It is not a question of persons or party, but one that concerns the national security of the nation. The American Legion is the institution that initiated the movement to show the people this is the best organization for defense. Best regards to you all. Look up the boys from Texas. Sorry I can't be with you. (Signed) William Mitchell."

PEACE TIME BETTERMENTS URGED AS WISE

COOLIDGE ADDRESSES AMERICAN LEGION CONVENTION ON NATIONAL SECURITY.

OMAHA, Oct. 6.—amid the booming of cannon and the cheers of massed thousands, President Coolidge arrived here at 8:30 a. m. today to address the annual convention of the American Legion. The cold, drizzling rain fell from a bleak sky, but failed to dampen the enthusiasm of thousands of legionnaires who crowded the union station to greet the chief executive.

President Coolidge arrived at the auditorium at 8:50 a. m. He was greeted with cheers. The crowd filled the building and a large crowd outside also heard the speech through loud speakers.

President Coolidge declared against increased military expenditures by the United States and called on the country to practice tolerance at home and abroad as a guarantee of peace. The president said: "Our people have lived all the war, all the taxation, and all the military service that they want."

Solemnly, he warned the nation against militarism, suppression of civil liberties and religious and racial bigotry. "The results of the war will be lost and we shall only be entering a period of preparation for another conflict," the president said, "unless we can demolish the racial antagonisms, fears, hatreds and suspicions and create an attitude of tolerance in the public mind of the peoples of the earth. If our country is to have any position of leadership, I trust it may be in that direction, and I believe that the place where it should begin is at home."

Urges Economy. After praising the patriotic valor of the veterans and the military profession, Mr. Coolidge expressed strong opposition to increased military expenditures.

"In spite of all the arguments in favor of great military forces," he said, "no nation ever had an army large enough to guarantee it against attack in time of peace or to insure it victory in time of war. No nation ever will. Peace and security are more likely to result from fair and honorable dealings, and mutual agreements of great limitation of armaments among nations, than by any attempt at competition in squadrons and battalions."

At this point the president warned those who are trying to force a larger military establishment upon the country that "whenever the military power starts dictating to the civil authority, by whatever means adopted, the liberties of the country are beginning to end. Any organization of men in the military service bent on inflaming the public mind for the purpose of forcing government action through the pressure of public opinion, is an exceedingly dangerous undertaking and precedent," he said.

Spent for Improvements. Rather than spend money on unnecessary military expenditures, the president asked that it be turned to "the making of good roads, the building of better homes, the promotion of education, and all the other arts of peace."

Without mentioning the name of any specific organization, the president deplored the growing tendency of some to make racial and religious intolerance the cloak of false Americanism.

"But among some of the varying racial, religious and social groups of our people, there have been manifestations of an intolerance of opinion, a narrowness of outlook, a fixity of judgment, against which we may well be warned," he continued. This "inevitable disregard for the opinions and feeling of minorities is none the less a disturbing product of war psychology."

After reminding his hearers that the United States was founded as a refuge from religious persecution, and that patriotism does not depend upon "whether one traces his Americanism back three centuries to the Mayflower, or three years to the steamer," Mr. Coolidge said: "There should be an intellectual demobilization as well as a military demobilization. Progress depends very largely on the encouragement of variety. Whatever tends to standardize the community, to establish fixed and rigid modes of thought, tends to fossilize society. It is the ferment of ideas, the clash of disagreeing judgments, the privilege of the individual to develop his own thoughts and shape his own character that makes progress possible."

President Coolidge concluded his address by drawing together his two ideals of tolerance at home and abroad as the way to peace. "We can make little contribution to the welfare of humanity on the theory that we are a superior people and all others are an inferior people. We can only make America first in the true sense which that means by cultivating a spirit of friendship and good will, by the exercise of the virtues of patience and forbearance, by being 'plenteous in mercy,' and through progress at home and helpfulness abroad standing as an example of real service to humanity."

The young Turk offers the best illustration of the awakening of Asia. Following freedom for women, at the ballot and in dress, polygamy is now abolished, civil marriages recognized, greater freedom of press permitted. But that's not all. Any back-talk is promptly punished and no mercy is shown to antis.

During the last three years Heidelberg has erected 1,500 municipally owned houses and has provided an additional 1,000 single rooms by partitioning off garrets. The houses have been constructed almost without exception on the quadrangle plan, with the interior square made into a park and playground. Each quadrangle accommodates from 15 to 25 families.

The official axe has connected with the official neck of one Col. William Mitchell, air service critic, and he has been summarily suspended and relieved from the service for insubordination to his superiors. Somehow this smacks of monarchic methods. It certainly does not fit in with American democracy. If every man who criticizes his "superior" officers, in religion, government or industry were to be demoted or "fired" we would have a flat-tired nation. The critic is not only necessary, but is often responsible for improved conditions. He should be recognized as a man who thinks.

CROSS PLAINS YOUTH KILLED WHEN TRACTOR TURNS OVER
CROSS PLAINS, Oct. 6.—Allen Clark, 19, oil field worker employed by C. O. Moore on the Wade McDaniel shallow field lease, two miles southwest of town, was instantly killed in an accident about noon on Monday.

Young Clark, driving a tractor, had been pulling rods at a well on the lease and was returning to the lease house alone when the accident occurred. The young man had apparently attempted to pull a stump with the machine, hitching to the rear axle with a short cable and it is supposed that when the power was applied the tractor reared in front turning over backward. Clark was found pinned beneath the machine, the steering wheel having crushed his chest.

Denton Citizens and Fractious Faculty of C. I. A. Are Assertive

AUSTIN, Oct. 6.—Out of respect for Mrs. William Capps of Fort Worth, a member of the board, whose husband died at Fort Worth last night, the board of regents of the College of Industrial Arts postponed its meeting, scheduled to be held in Austin today, until Oct. 26.
Col. Alvin C. Owsley of Denton, who has been in Austin since yesterday, was to have asked the board at today's meeting for permission to appear as the representative of Denton and a majority of the C. I. A. faculty and urge the removal of Dr. Lindsey Blayney as president of the institution. Some of the regents said they considered the fight against Blayney closed, but Colonel Owsley openly said it was to be kept up until the board acted or he resigned.

W. M. U. OF FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH MEET.
The W. M. U. of the First Baptist church met yesterday afternoon at the church and report a most splendid meeting. Reports for the year were read and accepted. Ten messengers were elected to attend the Cisco Baptist association, which convenes in Breckenridge, beginning tonight. Those who will represent First Baptist church from here are: Amos, Pitcocks, Walker, Hodges, Adanson, Dunlap, Longley, Fox, Neal, Webber and Johnson. These messengers are supposed to attend the entire three days session and while it may not be possible for all of them to attend all the time, some of them will be present at every session. Plans for the coming year's work were formulated and this with other business completed the afternoon's work.

AN OUTING.
Mrs. Brookes and some of her art pupils, motored to Cisco lake Saturday afternoon, where they did some sketches of the lake at sunset, getting some very splendid results. After it was too late to do any more sketching a picnic lunch was enjoyed, after which the party returned to Ranger. Those enjoying this delightful outing were Mr. and Mrs. Brookes, Miss Virginia Brookes, Katherine Cochran, Wilma Carlisle and Mattie Ben Shipp.

RECEIVES HONORABLE MENTION.
In the list of awards for the women's work of the Oil Belt fair, just ended at Breckenridge, a floor basket filled with giant cockscomb, and entered by Mrs. A. N. Harkrider of Ranger, received honorable mention. This was a very striking display and created quite a bit of favorable comment. Owing to the fact that it was not properly classified, it did not receive an award. Mrs. Harkrider is planning a number of floral exhibits for the Eastland flower show.

BETTER BABIES CONTEST.
Mrs. W. K. Jackson, president of the Civic League of Eastland, extends a very cordial invitation to the mothers of Ranger to enter their babies in the better babies contest, to be held in Eastland, Friday and Saturday. Babies from six to 18 months are eligible to enter this contest. This contest is held in connection with their annual flower show, and any one wishing to enter flowers for the flower show is invited to do so. There are no cash awards, a blue ribbon being the high honor, but the real honor comes in knowing that you have cultivated a flower that is worthy of a blue ribbon or of special mention.

RANGER SOC WOMEN IN LEAD.
The T. E. L. and Alathan classes of the Central Baptist church are slowly in the lead, in the contest with Dr. Wei's class. Sunday Dr. Wei's class retained the fact of having the largest ever had in the Sunday school in one single class. The contest grows warmer as the members awake to the fact that the good natured rivalry means business.

PERSONALS.
Mrs. A. N. Harkrider and children spent the week-end in Breckenridge, the guests of Dr. and Mrs. King.
Robert Campbell of Olney spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. R. B. Campbell.

ERCANBRACK'S UPPERCUT IS SENSATIONAL

Arena Opening Brings Thrills to Large Crowd Who Witness Snappy Events.
If anyone imagined because the boxing bouts to be staged by the American Legion were free events and the boxers unpaid, they would lapse into tame affairs, he was disillusioned last night, provided he was there for the disillusionment. Jack Ercanbrack's uppercut, which laid Freddie Wallace on his back and left him there to study the stars while the curtain rang down on the final event and for some minutes afterwards, was sufficient proof that the fellows who box do not get a kick out of it unless they box to win. And if that was not sufficient proof, Jack Wallace's fall down before Jimmie Lewis, who took his brother's place (the latter being ill) after Jack Wallace's pepper box blows, clinched the conclusion.

Wallace hit 700 blows a minute. It was estimated when the crowd lost the count. His arms looked like the spokes of a car wheel with the car going 60 miles an hour. He hit high, hit low, hit straight, uppercut, under-cut, side swiped, punched, did about everything a man with only four limbs could do. It made one wonder how many times he could hit if he had been a centipede and all his legs had been arms. And then, all of a sudden, after letting himself be peppered over, Lewis stepped in and gave one hard punch which caused another of the fighters to study astronomy.

The bout between Dicky Green and Battling Burke was not so one-sided. Green had the edge over Burke in all but one round, the fifth, but Burke put up a game fight all the same.

The feature event of the evening—the pay event, was the wrestling match between Al Williams and Cyclone Hedrick. It was a draw, but when the referee called time it looked like only a few seconds more would be needed for the lighter man, Hedrick, to put Williams' shoulders to the mat. Still, there were many moments when things looked like things—that didn't occur.

Williams had Hedrick in more scissors, half Nelsons and the like, apparently than any man could hope to get out of. But the little man somehow managed to wiggle loose at the right moment.

Tom Stracner, legionnaire from Desdemona, refereed the wrestling match. Dick Bowers of Breckenridge presided at the boxing bouts. The crowd gave the decisions at the close of each bout and there was no question in any but two of the events, Ercanbrack and Lewis making their bouts too conclusive to question.

J. B. Heister, chairman of the Legion athletic committee, was an announcer for the evening. He announced, among other things, the coming opening of the Breckenridge arena, Oct. 23. He also announced that there will be another wrestling match with free boxing features next Monday night in Ranger, and promised a good crowd. The crowd, considering the fact that ladies paid, they having formerly been admitted free, was about up to usual standards. Very few took advantage of the free events who did not pay for the main event.

EASTLAND AND BRECKENRIDGE PLAY SATURDAY

Interest in Football Appears More Keen This Year Than Last.

Encouraged by the victory they have won in unofficial games this season, the Eastland Mavericks are looking forward to the game with Breckenridge, Saturday, which will be played at Comellee park in Eastland and will be the Maverick's first official game of the year, with confidence in their ability to defeat the Buckaroos, which, according to the "dope" handed out by some of the wise ones, is the strongest team the Mavericks will have to go up against this season to win the district championship.

The Mavericks were defeated last season by the Buckaroos, but last week Brownwood, whom the Mavericks defeated last season, held the Buckaroos to a no score game at Breckenridge, which, it is claimed, indicates that the Breckenridge team is not as strong this year as it was last year as it is not believed the Brownwood squad is any stronger, if as strong, as it was last season. Football interest in Eastland is much greater already this season than at any time last season and the town is supporting the Mavericks to the limit. The average Eastland fan seems fully confident that the Mavericks are going to give a good account of themselves if in fact they do not win the championship of their district.

MAY SEYMOUR FOOT LOOSE

by BEATRICE BURTON ©NEA

THE STORY SO FAR:

May Seymour, whose husband, Dr. John Seymour, killed himself because of her love affair with Jim Carewe, returns to her home town after a year's absence.

Heavily veiled so that no one will recognize her, May comes late one fall night to the home of her lawyer, Dick Gregory, and Gloria, his wife. She tells Gloria, who is her close friend, how the story of Dr. John's suicide has followed her everywhere, and spoiled her friendships with people she had met. And so she has made up her mind to "sell out" and go to Europe where no one will know her or her story.

Next morning she goes to see Ulysses X. Forgan, a wealthy widower, who is in the real estate business, to ask him to sell her house for her. Ulysses advises her to keep it, live in it, and face the world bravely. But May tearfully insists that she can't—that she wants to be footloose.

She begs Dick Gregory to sell her stocks and bonds for whatever they will bring. All she wants, she explains, is enough money to keep her afloat for a year while she hunts a new husband. She frankly admits that she is going to marry for money if possible.

A week later with $8,000 in cash May sets out for a rest at Atlantic City before sailing for Europe. On the train she has a shy flirtation with a handsome, middle-aged man across the aisle. And as she enters her hotel at the seaside resort, she sees him going up the steps just ahead of her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

The lobby of the hotel was flooded with the rich sunlight of late afternoon, and filled with smartly-dressed men and women. At one end of it an orchestra was playing something low and sweet and haunting.

Suddenly May remembered what it was—the old "Destiny" waltz that had been so popular in 1914, at the outbreak of the great war.

"Destiny—Fate—I wonder what mine is to be," she thought. And as if in answer to her thought, her eyes at that instant fell on the familiar

A little laugh shook in May's throat as she went forward and stood beside him. From one corner of her eye she watched him as he dashed his name across the open book—"Herbert Waterbury, Brookline, Mass."

"What a nice name!" thought May. Point by point she took him in—his sunburned skin and hair, the loose clothes he wore, the expensive pigskin pilbox he carried.

"And he certainly looks like money!" she added cheerfully to herself, as she watched him vanish into an elevator.

Then she turned to the waiting room-clerk. "I want a room that faces the ocean. And a bath of course," she said. She did not ask the rate. She didn't want to know—didn't care how much it would cost. She had $8,000, and she was going to invest it in herself, in her future.

And not one nickel of it was she going to save! "If it's all gone by the end of the year, and I haven't found the husband I want, I can always go back to typewriting," she decided comfortably a half hour later, as she stood at a window of her room. "Besides I still have my house. I do hope that Forgan man sells it soon."

Her thoughts touched lightly upon Ulysses for a moment, then settled themselves upon the handsome man she had just seen in the lobby.

"Herbert Waterbury," she repeated the name aloud. And it was with him in mind, that she sat down before the mirror, to dress for dinner.

What kind of a woman would lure such a man as he? Probably a very elegant woman who could talk well, who knew the ways of the world.

Or else a little whirlwind of a girl who could say funny things, and could laugh at nothing.

"Oh, what do I care! He's probably married, and has a 'Mrs. Herbert Waterbury' tucked away up in Brookline," May scolded herself.

But she hoped that there was no Mrs. Herbert Waterbury.

When she was dressed, she stepped back from the long glass and looked at her reflection.

"Perhaps I do need a touch of color on my cheeks," she thought, doubtfully. Then she decided against it. She had worn no rouge for months, except the brilliant paste on her sensuous mouth.

And against the ivory whiteness of her skin, her eyes, tonight, were almost black with suppressed excitement.

She went over to the window and leaned out. Far below the ocean lay in the twilight, like a floor of silver. A band of lights sparkled along the famous Boardwalk.

"After dinner, I shall go out there," May said to herself. She caught up a lace scarf from the bed as she passed through the room.

Through her mind ran a picture of herself, walking against the wind, down the Boardwalk. And beside her was a shadowy figure—the figure of a man.

The picture passed instantly, like a dream. And May found herself shivering a little, as the elevator carried her swiftly and smoothly down to the dining room.

There was a vase of yellow roses on the corner table where May sat and waited for her dinner. She leaned forward and separated one from its fragrant fellows, held it a moment against her lips.

Then suddenly, she felt as if someone were looking at her. Slowly, unwillingly, she raised her head, and looked straight into the clear, light-blue eyes of Herbert Waterbury! He was sitting not 10 feet from her.

At that moment, the orchestra broke into the first soft strains of the waltz that is called "Destiny." May dropped her eyes. She picked up the card and pretended to study it. But the hand that held it trembled ever so slightly.

The waiter set her cup of jellied consommé before her, and she began her dinner. She had been very hungry—but, suddenly she found she had no appetite.

After the meal she poured herself a small cup of black coffee. As she raised it to her lips, she lifted her eyes and looked once more at Herbert Waterbury. Deliberately she let her eyes lie in his for a long moment.

She signed her check, tipped the waiter generously, and with a certain air of defiance, walked out of the dining room feeling Waterbury's eyes upon her as she went.

Out of doors, the night was black. There was a high wind, and the ocean that had been so calm at sundown, roared. In the radiance from the lights along the Boardwalk, May could see the white foam along the edge of the breakers.

She threw her face scarf around her shoulders and walked slowly along in the direction of the Ambassador hotel, that dimly loomed in the distance.

The Boardwalk was almost deserted. Later on the gay crowds would be out again, on their way to the brilliantly-lighted theatres and movies that faced the sea.

But at this moment, the pleasure-seekers of Atlantic City were occupied with the serious business of dining and being dined.

So May had the long sweep of the famous promenade to herself—almost to herself. Behind her as she started out, she heard footsteps as slow and measured as her own.

She quickened her pace, and the footsteps behind her quickened, too. She could hear them every now and then above the roar of the surf.

Without looking back, she knew who was there. Some vague instinct—or, perhaps her own wish—told her it was the man she had just seen in the restaurant.

She paused for a moment beside the railing to let him pass.

And the wind tore the thin lace scarf she was wearing, from her shoulders. It fluttered away down onto the sand.

With her head in the air, May walked on. She was listening with every nerve in her body for the footsteps to begin again. But she could hear nothing but the dull roar of the darkened ocean.

Then suddenly, Waterbury was behind her. He held out to her the face scarf. "You dropped this," he said shortly.

"Yes," she said almost inaudibly, and walked on.

"Here, aren't you going to take it?" he asked, and thrust it into her hands. He stood for a moment looking down into her eyes, as if he wanted very much to say something more to her.

May turned her starry eyes up to his. She opened her lips to say "Thank you" but found she could make no sound.

She felt dreadfully awkward—tongue-tied. Men had often looked at her before, had even spoken to her in the street.

But this man was different. He was so serious, and so obviously a gentleman—or at least, a man of the world. Certainly not the type of man who would follow a woman unless he— Well, unless he—what?

For the life of her, May couldn't finish the thought. Utterly baffled, almost panicky, she turned away quickly and walked back toward the hotel.

Breathlessly she sank into one of the deep velvet chairs in the lobby, and leaned back with closed eyes to listen to the music.

"My, but I'm sick of jazz, aren't you?" asked a soprano voice beside her. And May opened her eyes to see a blond, plump woman with babyish blue eyes, sitting in the chair beside her.

"That isn't jazz they're playing. It's Brahms," May answered. She knew a thing or two about music—real music.

"Well, I wish the orchestra would take something for it. It sounds like a nervous breakdown they're having," the woman said peevishly. "When there are so many pretty things like 'The Indian Love Call,' I don't see why they play such stuff as that, do you?"

"I like it," May answered. She bent her head to listen to the music that seemed to sweep around her in a tide.

She looked up to see Herbert Waterbury coming down the lobby. His eyes were fixed upon her and he seemed to be coming straight toward her.

With a curious calm, May watched him come.

He paused beside her chair, and she felt sure that he was going to speak to her.

A mixed feeling of dull anger, indignation, and excitement filled her, then.

"Hello," she heard him say, and as she looked up, she felt her neck, to the roots of her hair. Then, with intense relief, that he was not addressing her, she was looking down at the babyish woman who sat beside her. "Hello, Herby," the babyish woman answered, patting the empty chair on her arm. "It's terrible, but it's nothing." She turned suddenly to May. "What did you say they were playing, dearie?" she asked. "Brahms," May said with a fort. "Something of Brahms." (To be continued.)

10th Squad Thrills To Breckenridge Game

Who saw the Breckenridge game Saturday night, say the best of the team but the play of the 10th squad made the difference. The game was a thriller from start to finish. The 10th squad, coached by Coach [Name], played a game of exceptional quality. The pitcher, [Name], pitched a gem, allowing only a few runs. The batters, however, were not to be deterred and scored several runs. The game was a close one until the final inning, when the 10th squad pulled out to win. The crowd was in a frenzy, and the game was a real treat for all who attended.

WELL IN ARCHER COUNTY WILDCAT SECTION PRODUCING

Special Correspondence.
WICHITA FALLS, Oct. 6.—What means the opening up of another new producing area in the southwest corner of Archer county is the performance of the Sun Oil company's No. 1 well located in the northeast corner of section 2425, T. E. L. survey, W. T. Richardson land.

The well, which is an absolute wildcat, a few days ago picked up a good looking sand at 1,441 feet. Casing was set and Sunday after drilling four feet into sand the well made a 15-barrel flow and the hole filled with oil to within 100 feet of the top. Later the swab was run and at present is producing between 200 and 225 barrels. The finding of the well at this point, it being but one-quarter of a mile south of the town of Megargel, has created considerable buying of leases in the vicinity and already a number of lots in the town-site have been leased at fancy prices.

OLNEY, Oct. 6.—The Sun company's W. L. Richardson No. 1, one-half mile south of Megargel and one-fourth mile southeast of the dry hole drilled by Litchfield et al., is flowing and swabbing at an estimated rate of 150 barrels or better per day from a stand at 1,436 to 1,439 feet.

WORLD SERIES HEROES

1914—Walter Kueher, Red pitcher, by his batting, and Eddie Koush, Red center fielder, by his fielding, were the big factors in most of the defeats of the White Sox.

1920—Elmer Smith, Cleveland right fielder, hit a home run with the bases full, the first time in world's series history. Bill Wambegans, Cleveland second baseman, completed a triple play unassisted.

1921—Jess Barnes, regarded as the "pallbearer" of the Giants' pitching staff, relieved Toney twice after he had been knocked out of the box and won both games.

1922—Jack Scott, released unconditionally by the Cincinnati Reds for having an incurable arm, and picked up by McGraw, turned the big hero of the series when he let the Yanks down with four hits in the third game and won for the Giants by a score of 3 to 0.

1923—Bob Meusel was the conspicuous hero of the 1923 world's series. With the bases filled in the eighth inning of the last game, Babe Ruth was fanned by Bill Ryan. Meusel then came up and rapped a single to center field, scoring Haines and Johnson. Cunningham made a wild throw into the dugout and Dugan scored and Meusel went to third. Meusel's single, it turned out, won the game and the series. Casey Stengel, winning two games with home runs, was the big Giant hero.

1924—Earl McNeely, young Washington outfielder, doubled in the

Apple Sauce Cake

Mrs. Chitwood, who was in charge of the Cooking School recently conducted by the Telegram, gives below a recipe for an unusual cake.

- | | |
|-------------------------|--------------------------|
| 1/2 cup Crisco | 1 teaspoon cinnamon, |
| 1 egg, beaten | 1/2 teaspoon each of |
| 2 1/2 cups pastry flour | cloves and nutmeg |
| 1 1/2 cups thick cold | 1 cup sugar |
| apple sauce | 4 tablespoons hot water |
| 1 teaspoon soda | 1/2 teaspoon salt |
| 1/2 cup nuts | 1 cup raisins (or dates) |

Cream the sugar and Crisco, add egg, beat well. Stir in apple sauce and hot water. Add raisins and nuts, then dry ingredients sifted together twice. Bake in a moderate oven (300 degrees F.) forty-five minutes to an hour. Makes two small loaves.

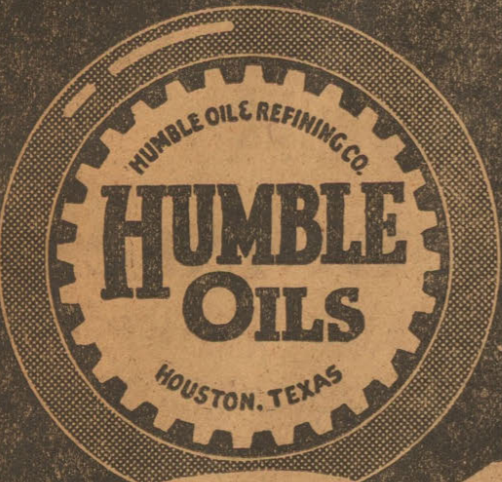

Mrs. Chitwood Says:
This is a very good cake which keeps well. Crisco makes a light delicious cake. It is more economical, too, and easier to cream with the sugar. Grease your pans with Crisco and see your cake slip out easily and whole. Not a break in it.

JAPAN EXPERIMENTING WITH RADIO TELEPHONY

TOKIO.—The Japanese government is conducting experiments to discover the feasibility of radio telephony in Japan, according to an announcement from the department of communications. The proposed plan is to link radio apparatus throughout Japan with the existing network of telephone lines to perfect communications that could serve in times of emergencies, when the ordinary land lines might be out of commission. Experiments with the service are under way between Tokio and Numadzu.

BEDFORD NEWS

Special Correspondence. BEDFORD, Oct. 6.—The farmers are enjoying the results of their crops especially cotton, as it brings a good price and the yield is fair. The B. Y. P. Among the residences entered were those of J. M. Little, Mrs. Addie Wheeler, and T. T. Cooper. Two purses taken from one of the homes were found by officers where the thieves had thrown them away. Sam Malberg of this city has received word of the death of Morris Malberg in Cincinnati, Ohio, which occurred Sunday morning. Morris Malberg came to Cisco in 1919 from the army. GOING OUT TONIGHT WITH THAT PIMPLE SHOWING

The boy or girl who has nothing to worry them about the way they look are so much more noticeable when compared to the shrinking and backwardness of the ones who are afraid to mingle in the fun because they know how unattractive they must look on account of their pimples, blotchy or rough, eczemic skin. Their one friend is Black and White Ointment, if they will just use it faithfully, because it will get rid of all those ugly bumps and make their skin soft, smooth and lovely. Then, to keep it that way, be sure to use Black and White Soap when you wish to wash. They are both economically priced in liberal packages. The 50c size Ointment contains three times as much as the 25c size. All dealers have both the Ointment and the Soap.

WOMEN WHO WERE NERVOUS WRECKS NOW MIRACLES OF RESTORED VITALITY

G. F. P. Increases the Vitality and Endurance of Girls and Women More Than a Hundred Per Cent.

Since the introduction here of the phenomenal medicine known as St. Joseph's G. F. P., it is nothing unusual to see women past 40 who have the vitality, energy and endurance of a girl of 20. In fact, G. F. P. has made girls out of them again regardless of their age and the wretched nervous and irritable condition they were in. Many women begin to just feel bad at 30 and by the time they get through trying first one thing, then another, to get back that freedom from pain, irregularity, nervousness and all-in condition, they have reached 40 and are care-worn, thin, sallow, have no appetite, no energy and really feel that there is nothing left in this life for them but misery and suffering. Now these unfortunate ones are having their hopes revived when they see so many, who were in the same shape, regaining their vitality and show it by their beaming, smiling, rosy cheeked faces, bright, snappy eyes, a well rounded-out figure, and that wonderful buoyancy which only health can give. St. Joseph's G. F. P. is actually doing this for women right here. It is not a story of something taking place a thousand miles away, where you can't find out if it is true or not.

Women Now Depend on St. Joseph's G.F.P. To Restore Their Vitality
