TIMES HAS EDGE ON TEE PEE GAME ENDED IN GLOOM

The Times shaded the Tee Pee, 4 to 3, in yesterday's game. The Tee Pee led off in the game when J. Mann annexed a three-sacker that was almost a homer. He went on to the plate on a wild return from the outer garden. The Tee Pee got a man as far as third in the second frame but the ball was in the baseman's hand when he arrived. Beeman, the Times' first baseman, got as far as third in the fifth on a single, a steal to second, and advanced to third when Blessing connected for one sack. The game livened up in the first section of the sixth when Badt passed Folliard to first, and Folliard stole second, coming on around the circuit on McCormick's two-base hit. Cullum was thrown out at first. Gallaway picked out a single, annexed the next station slyly, took third on Todd's single, which sent McCormick home, and then made the third tally when Beeman singled. Todd raced around from second for the final counter on Rutsen's one-base blow. The Tee Pee manager withdrew Badt and Calvert eased George a strikeout, making the necessary amount of persuaders to end the Times' slugfest.

SHOP TEAM DEFEAT IS BENEFICIAL TO MORALE OF LEAGUE

Special to The Times. After winning seven straight games, the Shop team was humbled by the Prairie Wolves in an interesting game at Humble diamond last Thursday evening. The effectiveness of Pitcher Rarey and the stonewall support given by his players, particularly Cheatham at short, had much to do with the final result of the game. The ineffectiveness of the quintet of left-handed batters which the Shop team has on its line-up against the left-handed pitching was also brought to light in that three of the four hits which were gathered off Rarey were made by right-handed batters.

The Shop team, although taking the defeat to heart, are not letting it prey on their minds and have vowed to get to Rarey if he faces them in their next meeting, Aug. 25. The defeat, however, was a welcome bit of news to managers of other clubs in the league, since some were of the opinion that the Shops could not be beaten when they were at their best. This opinion ought to be discouraged as no team is unbeatable. The Shop team does not claim to be invincible, but the opposition will have trouble in overthrowing a team where perfect harmony reigns and where every man is out fighting to win.

RATS.

Twelve thousand traps are being used in Galveston in the work of rounding up rats in that seaport. In every town along the coast, from Charleston, S. C., to Brownsville, the same work is being pushed.

The threat of plague, in the carrying of which rats have placed themselves prominently in the public eye, is the reason for the extra strenuous work in the seaport towns. True, the plague menace is not very serious, according to present indications, but anyway, rats are nasty things to have around. They damage property and give one a shivery feeling when they persist in getting underfoot.

And if there is a plague threat, the inland towns are practically as much subject to it as the seaports. Scientists who have made a study of rats say they are travelers, that they are just as much at home in one city as in another, and they ride the freights with extreme care, even if they do not carry a card which to assuage the brakeman's wrath.

It is quite probable that many rodents have joined in the prevailing excitement and hastened hither to see what the oil fields had in store for them if they were industrious. Evidently many were pleased with the opportunities presented and determined to send for their families and make this their permanent home, or at least headquarters. For one reason or another they are here a-plenty.

Oil and water do not mix. Men of different sexes do not mix. Neither do men and rats. They live in our houses and gnaw our food but they do not associate with us. In fact, one would say they do not like us. And it is certain that man has no affection for rats.

He set alone at a table in a restaurant on Broadway. The woman had been watching him for some minutes, interested in his evident preoccupation.

"Your order, sir," said a waiter, as he touched him lightly on the shoulder. The man started. "Thank you, sir—not a thing, not a thing," he answered, and again settled in his dreams. The waiter gave him a curious look, and retired from the field.

THE MEXICAN MOVIE. The Mexican movie serial is a hardy perennial. No sooner does one hero-villain retire from the cast than another bobs up and gives the diplomats something to worry about and the word-smiths something to talk about.

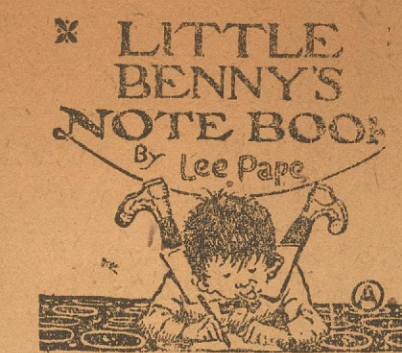

Villa winds up his rapid fire blood and thunder story with a depiction of the prodigal son returning to his father's home. He is greeted with a kiss on both cheeks and a piece of the fatted calf in the shape of a pension for life and full liberty to enjoy the fruits of his nefarious activities. Villa is getting along in years. The magnitude of his exploits has dwindled since the Columbus raid. Perhaps he takes a leaf from the books of some of our noted athletes and retires while his honors are still intact—the idea of being a bush league bandit probably would not appeal to Villa. It may be, as he announces, that he retires from active banditry because the peace and prosperity of his country are dear to his heart.

But never mind. He has a successor. General Cantu may not be a bandit, but he has been the actual dictator of Lower California for many moons, and seems to like the job. At any rate, he proposes to offer strenuous and violent objection to the overlordship of the provisional government of Mexico. General Cantu seems to have governed his principality with wisdom and moderation. There have been few, if any reports of harm to the property or persons of Americans in the territory under his jurisdiction. That, however, does not warrant him refusing to come to terms with the Oregon regime. This provisional government, which swept Mexico like wildfire in an almost bloodless revolution, seems to have rapidly restored a semblance of law and order to the war-torn republic. It has acquired the confidence of the Mexican people and those of foreign countries to an extent that proved impossible for the preceding rulers.

There is no evidence that it pursues any injustice or economic injury to Lower California. It is merely insisting upon obtaining an acknowledgment of the suzerainty which it rightfully possesses. General Cantu should see the light. Like Villa, he probably is able to retire.
