WAR HEROES ON FARMS IN EAST MAKE PROGRESS

By Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 9.—A number of modest little farms operated by veterans of the world war who have recovered from shell shock, gas or wounds, now dot the states of New Jersey, Connecticut and New York. The owners of these farms, most of them graduates of the New York State School of Agriculture at Farmingdale, L. I., have been "rehabilitated" and are now making good as food producers with the same enthusiasm that took them "over the top" in France.

The transformation of most of these former soldiers who selected farming from among the subjects offered by the federal board of vocational training in many cases has been a complete metamorphosis of railroad brakemen, plumbers, policemen, mechanics and laborers. One recent graduate of the school was a bartender before the war and today he owns a thoroughly up-to-date place near Toms River, N. J.

According to A. A. Johnson, director of the school, there were seventy-six federal board men enrolled in June and a number of these have since graduated. Director Johnson was lavish in his praise of what the soldier farmers are accomplishing, declaring that not only were they doing their share in the economic program of their country but "in a good many cases, considerably more than others less handicapped by wounds." He said they were about equally divided as farm tractor mechanics, general farmers, poultry raisers and hog breeders.

Archie A. Stone, former member of the Minnesota legislature, who is in charge of the work for the government, and has studied the results of the farm vocational training plan, said that it is producing results of a definite and permanent character. The students may have both theory and practice at Farmingdale 365 days in the year.

Michael Lecky, who lost an arm at Chateau Thierry, is specializing in tractor work and with one hand and a steel hook, drives as straight a furrow, it is said, as any two-handed farm boy.

A year ago, Charles Kupinski, another crippled soldier, had never even ridden in a motor car. Recently, according to Director Johnson, he repaired a cracked cylinder in a heavy farm tractor at a saving of nearly $200 to the school.

Other soldier graduates of Farmingdale who are operating farms are Harry F. Cruise at Holbrook, L. I.; Edison S. Smith, New Canaan, Conn.; Elmer E. Sturtz, Wellersburg, Pa.; Austin A. Sullivan, Ronkonkoma, L. I., and a number of others within fifty miles of New York.

MEDICAL PLANT FOR SCHOOL IN CHINA PREPARED

NEW YORK, July 9.—The entire plant of the Peking Union Medical College, established through the China Medical Board of the Rockefeller Foundation, probably will be completed by Jan. 1, 1921, George E. Vincent, president of the foundation, stated today in a partial review of the work of the foundation during 1919. Three of the teaching buildings of the college were occupied in October, 1919.

The completed plant will include the following buildings, the review stated: Laboratories for anatomy, physiology and chemistry; pathology building, a 250-bed hospital with provisions for about thirty private rooms; a large out-patient department, a hospital administration unit with quarters for resident physicians and internes; a nurses' home; plants which will supply water, heat, light, power and gas, and faculty residences.

"The China medical board of the Rockefeller foundation seeks to aid the agencies which represent western medicine in China to make steady progress toward higher standards and more efficient service," Mr. Vincent's review stated.

Appropriations were made during the year to nineteen hospitals conducted under the auspices of missionary societies, the review said. In December, 1919, a revised policy was adopted which provides for concentration upon a small number of hospitals which, by reason of location, staff and equipment are in a position directly to promote the cause of medical education.

Mr. Vincent's review said, concerning the anti-tuberculosis work of the foundation: "Only in France—and there as a war measure—has the international health board undertaken to aid in combating tuberculosis." A campaign, started there in 1917, aimed to demonstrate systematic control methods, train public health nurses, educate the public to fight tuberculosis and turn the work over to the French. This transfer of responsibility to French communities and agencies has gone forward steadily, the review added.

"The personnel in charge of the dispensaries is now almost wholly French."

The hospital and sanitarium facilities for the tuberculous, provided by the American Red Cross during the war, have been taken over and extended by municipalities and departments. The central government, Mr. Vincent's report explained, has passed a law under which each department will be compelled within five years either to build a sanitarium of its own or to send its patients to that of another department. The cost is to be shared by the central and departmental governments.

FAKE REPORTER LURES HER AFTER MISSING MATE

NEW YORK.—In the belief that Mrs. Mabel Hellquist, 23, of 312 Forty-sixth street, Brooklyn, had been kidnaped, the police sent out a general alarm for her and also for a man calling himself Stewart Lithgow, and falsely representing himself as a reporter, who induced her to leave her home.

The case is decidedly out of the ordinary, for the young woman's husband, Fred, mysteriously vanished Jan. 6, and it was in the hope of finding him that the wife agreed to accompany the bogus reporter. Some connection between the two disappearances may be found, the police believe.

When Fred Hellquist, three years happily married and a young machinist of steady, regular habits, failed to come home on the night of Jan. 6, or the next day, his wife investigated at his place of employment, the American Machine & Foundry company, Second avenue and Fifty-sixth street, Brooklyn. She learned that he had quit two days previously, without giving a reason or saying where he was going.

His disappearance was reported to the police, and his wife's mother, Mrs. Annie Wahlberg, with whom the young couple made their home, asked an evening paper to print a story about him, which was done.

A man, apparently 45, visited the Forty-sixth street house and handed Mrs. Wahlberg a card inscribed "Stewart Lithgow, Reporter, Evening World." (There is no employe of that name in either of the departments of the World, either Evening or Morning.) He displayed also a badge and said he was a private detective.

"You can't beat that combination of reporter and detective," he said. "I'll find the missing man. I don't want any money, but just a first hand story for my paper."

The next morning the bogus reporter returned at 10 o'clock, when the young wife was alone. He was obliged to talk so loudly to her that a neighbor, Mrs. Buckley, heard the conversation.

"I have located your husband," he said. "He is in a hospital in Yonkers, where he was struck by a trolley car. If you'll go up there with me you can see him and arrange to get him home. I will see that you get back here by 5 o'clock."

Mrs. Buckley saw the two leave the house together, and later told what she heard to Mrs. Wahlberg and another daughter, Mrs. Nellie Hart. When the young wife had not returned home that night, Mrs. Hart telephoned the World and learned that Lithgow's claim to be a reporter was false.

APOLOGY RECEIVED FOR "RANGER BOOZE" ARTICLE EASTLAND

A recent issue of a contemporary of the Times, published in an adjacent town, made much of the raid of a place in Ranger in which was discovered a barrel of whisky, and thirty-five barrels of mash. No still was found and the place was deserted. The liquor was poured out in front of the justice of the peace's office and according to the officers, some attempts were made to salvage the price-less fluid as it ran down the gutter.

This was glib for the mill of the contemporary paper. It was made the banner of the story, to the amusement of Rangerites who read.

An unexpected aftermath, however, was a long distance call received at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday from the office of the Chamber of Commerce at Eastland. An apology was offered for the article, though no harm had been done. The explanation was accepted, laughingly, though the Eastland Chamber was assured that none was necessary. Perhaps it was intended as an apology for the medium which contained the story, so, it also was accepted.

WINDOW CLEANERS GILDED PLUTOCRATS

NEW YORK.—July 12.—Don't insult the fellow who washes the windows of your office by giving him a few nickels as a tip, as chances are he drives limousine.

That, at least, was the inference drawn from the testimony offered by Harry Weiss, a waiter, charged with maintaining a gambling house.

and a score of widow cleaners playing cards with a considerable amount of money in front of them.

Weiss' attorney admitted airily that thousands of dollars passed in the game, but maintained that they did not constitute the "necessary elements" to invade a violation of the state statutes.

"Well," remarked a Deputy Assistant District Attorney, "if a window cleaner can drop a couple of thousand a night at poker I want to be a window cleaner, that's all."

Weiss and several of his window-cleaning millionaire friends who had been charged with disorderly conduct were discharged.

SPECIFIC FOR BOLL WEEVIL.

Farmers of the great cotton belt of Central Texas are pessimistic over the ravages of the boll weevil. Several farmers in Tarrant county are reported to have plowed up their cotton recently and planted feedstuff, believing that the weevil will ruin the crop. The extension department of the Agricultural and Mechanical college has issued a warning to farmers telling them of the seriousness of the situation and suggesting that concerted action be taken in all communities where the pest has appeared to pick up and burn all squares which drop from the plant.

Farmers are following the experiments being conducted with calcium arsenate very closely and many believe that the remedy will prove of great value. It has been tried extensively in Louisiana, where the idea originated, and results indicate that it is very successful there. Experiments carried out at A. & M. College of Texas have been gratifying, but the authorities conducting the experiments have counseled cotton raisers not to try the new remedy too extensively until further tests determine its value. The mixture is sifted on the cotton at night. It is most effective on still, damp nights and for that reason will probably prove of greatest success in regions of great humidity and little wind.

HANDICAPPED FIREMEN.

That his department is continually handicapped by general non-observance of ordinances giving fire trucks right of way and easy access to hydrants, is the statement made by Fire Chief Buttomer. Under city ordinances it is a misdemeanor punishable by fine to park an automobile or other vehicle within ten feet of a hydrant. Another ordinance provides that when a fire alarm is sounded all vehicles shall be drawn up parallel to the curb and stand motionless until the fire trucks have passed. Instead of obeying this rule, the chief says, many fire fans jump into their cars and race the department to the blaze.

The chief has issued a warning that unless these practices are stopped he will be bound to invoke the law. But he should not be forced to take drastic steps in order to obtain the co-operation of Ranger citizens. The fire peril is ever present here, and Ranger's firemen have shown praiseworthy efficiency when they get on the job. The fact that they generally get a delayed start to a fire because of the poor telephone equipment and lack of an alarm system is no fault of theirs. It is, however, a tremendously big reason why vehicle owners should take pains to stay out of the department's way.

ADVERTISING AND HUSH MONEY.

Every so often it is intimated to the management of the Times that the paper's course in this matter or that matter is hurtful to its financial interests—that it is not "good business" to call attention to the subrosa or camouflaged activities of those who may, in their more legitimate methods of seeking a competence, have business relations with it. Persons who make money by any means, no matter how crude or illegitimate, seem to think that they are entitled to buy immunity from the spotlight of publicity. As their minds conceive it, conditions which cry to heaven for remedy should be passed by in silence, provided someone is making money because of them, and passing some across the Times counter in advertising fees.

In answer to such critics, who would cure an ill by passing it by unnoticed, it might not be untimely to point out that the Times editorial columns are not for sale.

Its advertising columns are. If any person has anything legitimate to sell, or for other reasons thinks the publicity this paper can furnish will be remunerative to him, he is welcome to buy it at space rates in the advertising columns and expect his pay in value received. But to demand that the Times, because of this patronage, shall remain silent on matters which do not flourish through publicity, is an attempt at bribery. It is as logical as offering to buy a hat from a merchant provided he will help burn the church. The Times will at all times encourage and assist all constructive business that may operate in our midst. It will use its utmost powers to develop and improve the city of Ranger. But fear of losing a few dollars in revenue will not drive it to ignoring matters upon which the people need to be informed. If there is a condition in this city which we believe respectable citizens would condemn, we expect to tell them of it. If activities are going on which are harmful to Ranger's civic development, it is the citizens' privilege to be informed of them, and the Times proposes to inform them. Times' privilege to be informed of them, them.

A newspaper's duty to its readers is to give them the news—to inform them as to what is going on. When a newspaper suppresses news at the instance of an advertiser who prospers on ignorance, it is robbing Peter to pay Paul. When it comes so far under the sway of the great god Mammon that business comes first, it is no longer a real newspaper. True, advertising is necessary. A paper cannot exist on its income from subscriptions alone. Advertising is essential in order to meet the expenses of publication. But the more advertising a paper has the better it can cater to its readers, the more it can improve in size and quality. A paper that has money to spend on its wire service, its correspondents, its features and other news items has more subscribers than one that is pinched by lack of patronage. This increased number of subscribers is in turn beneficial to the advertisers.

Therefore the Times is glad to welcome legitimate advertising—it enables it to be of greater service to the Ranger community. But it will not be thwarted in any move it may make for civic improvement by the boycott of any persons who may lose unearned dollars through the action of an informed and aroused community.

It is not "good business" unless it is good business.

THE SEVENTH EVIL

In a world of all changing fashion and furbelows, it is amazing to feel how little human nature varies. The human figure alters a bit to accommodate itself to the prevailing mode. Our waists go up or down. Our backs are straight or drooping. Our arms and necks become used to feeling warm with no covering or cool with a good deal of it. Our feet shuffle in tight skirts or our legs prance, emancipated in short ones. Our heads—which we might have mentioned first, but forgot—are wound about with bands and bundles of hair, or cropped till they resemble a chrysothemum shaking in the wind. But our souls remain very much the same. We are no more vain than our grandmothers, really and our brothers' friends admire us no less than their brothers' friends did them.

Each generation changes its manners a little, with a tendency to drop the forms and ceremonies of the last more than the last approves. Perhaps one may say, even, that in the bubbling up to the top of the social top-of-a younger set that is unfortunately without tradition, the forms and ceremonies have been too much abandoned! But our hearts are where they always were. We play the oldest game on earth just as happily as ever it was played. The light that lies in woman's eyes has not dimmed.

Intercourse between the young may be less trammelled, but whether boys of girls flirt like gods and goddesses, pursuing and pursued in the leazy seclusion of moonlight allies, or tumble about like young puppies on the sunny sea-sands, Nature is not abandoning any of her ancient methods for new ones! What does she care whether we guess that youth has just plighted its truth because we see Orlando kiss Rosalind's hand under the moving green roof of forest trees, or because we watch Croesus, junior, in millionaire's ocean paradise, take Miss Mitas by the ankles and throw her off a raft? Both call our attention to the fact that the two "understand each other." Distinction of behavior belongs to the first and boisterous good fellowship to the last, but the eternal result is the same. They marry.

Perhaps, however it would be well to call attention to the danger of dropping too much mystery in the playing of the great game. To warn little ladies that a shoulder can be no more delectable seen through a mist of gauze; an ankle moving in a cloud of lace; an eye glancing through downcast lashes; a soul holding itself a little crisply aloof; a heart no less honestly in love for being worn in a more romantic place than on the sleeve. We have heard where the young man's fancy lightly turns in the springtime, and we think the charm that holds it longest is the charm that hides the obvious and keeps a little soft screen of guesswork about person and personality. It is not well to be too well known. Barriers are easy to break and difficult to build up again. The seventh veil is a good thing to keep.—Vogue.

T. P. TOPICS

Mrs. H. G. Parker is spending the week with her parents in Stamford, Texas. Mr. C. A. Brewster left last evening for a two weeks' vacation. Mrs. Murray C. Grayson entertained the "500 club" at her home Friday afternoon. High score prize went to Mrs. Shouse, while Mrs. Armitage won the consolation. After the game, an ice course was served to the following: Mesdames Durst, Bishop, Learned, Shouse, Wick, Lener, Neurse, Whitbeck, Armitage and Misses Pauline and Edna Dutton.

PERSONAL

Darwin Chastain of the C. & A. stores, and H. D. Durst, local attorney, left this afternoon for Shreveport, Homer and other points in the Louisiana field. They are making the trip in a car. Mrs. A. H. Bowers and little son, Jack, are on a several weeks visit to Los Angeles and other California cities. Later they will be joined by Mr. Bowers who will return to Ranger with them. J. T. Killingsworth of Jones-Cox and company, left Saturday afternoon for Fort Worth on a business trip. Berger Justvig of San Antonio is visiting the family of Salvation Army Captain B. S. Comer. He expects to be in Ranger for two weeks. Mr. Justvig's father operates a Salvation Army hotel for soldiers and sailors in San Antonio.

TO THE DEMOCRATIC VOTERS OF EASTLAND COUNTY:

I am a candidate for the nomination at the Democratic primary to be held in this county on July 24th, 1920, to the office of county attorney of Eastland county. The office of county attorney is the pivotal office in the administration of the criminal laws of the state. Its proper administration means justice to the accused and the protection of society. Its incumbent should know neither friend nor foe, fear, favor nor reward. The power of the state to take away the liberty, and even forfeit the life, of the malefactor, lies, in its first expression, in his hands. He must then, be just, yet relentless where guilt is shown. The safety of society is involved, and he must be vigilant. The dignity of the law, its controlling force, must be maintained; hence impartiality enters into his performance of his duties. Every law upon the statute book, whether to his thought wise or unwise, just or unjust, is for him to enforce. Just and wise laws, capably enforced, will affirm their justice and wisdom; while unjust and unwise laws, fully enforced, will prove their own undoing and force repeal or amendment. If elected I shall exert my full strength to make the law supreme in Eastland county. More, no man can offer; less, no man should tender. Respectfully,

SCOTT'S CAFE CHANGES HANDS; $25,000 DEAL

Scott's cafe on Main street sold yesterday through the Craven Realty company by its owner, A. H. Bowers, to Pete Vasclendes & company for a consideration of $25,000. Possession was given to the new owners last night at 12 o'clock. Vasclendes, who formerly had an interest in and managed the Metropolitan cafe, will have the management of the cafe. The new manager stated last night that his company is planning several improvements which will be installed shortly. Scott's cafe was the first high-class cafe to be put into operation since the oil boom struck Ranger. It has been sold several times since being put into operation by its original owner but has continued under the same name with each change.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION IMPRESSIVE

delegation voted against the Bryan amendment with a view to voting for the Hobson amendment, which was less drastic. The Bryan amendment lost by something like about 150 votes for to 400 against. It was a crushing defeat and was a direct result of Bryan's antagonism to the administration on the League of Nations and the wet element. To my mind, it was a great mistake for the Texas delegation to vote against any plank, and I believe that the convention made a mistake in not incorporating a dry plank in the platform. The Hobson amendment was defeated overwhelmingly without a roll-call, no record vote having been demanded. But the Texas delegation voted for the Hobson amendment without a dissenting voice.

Then the Balloting.
"After this came the balloting. McAdoo led on the first ballot and Cox was in third place. The supporters of McAdoo expected to win on the fifth ballot and in any event not later than the tenth ballot. Cox gradually increased his vote until on the sixteenth ballot on Saturday night, he had McAdoo by 437 to 331. On the fifteenth ballot I tried to get the Texas delegation to break the deadlock by going to Cox, as it was apparent to me that McAdoo could never be nominated, and I thought that Texas might as well have credit for the nomination as any other state. But the leaders of our delegation were obstinate. They said they won at Baltimore by laughing on and they were going to win this time, and were going to stay with Mr. McAdoo to the last ditch. The leaders of the Texas delegation thought that Palmer's vote would go to McAdoo, but I told them they were wrong in my opinion, because Pennsylvania joined Ohio and was composed of large business interests and considerable elements, both of which were not opposed to a wet candidate. Indiana also joins Ohio and the leading men of that state were well acquainted and closely associated with Governor Cox. New York and New Jersey had already gone to Cox, and by reason of the wine industry in California it seemed apparent that on the final test that California would be more favorable to Cox than McAdoo. Of course, I did not know the political game and our leaders did, or they thought they did, and they paid no attention to what I said about the matter, and they stayed with Mr. McAdoo until the last ballot, just as they said they were going to do."

Was Representative.
"It was a truly Democratic convention. United States senators, governors, congressmen, state senators, representatives, business men and laborers mixed and

"Hard Boiled" Printer and Others Bring Happiness to Sick Child

Clyde George is a printer and a "hard boiled" printer at that. He says none of this "ol sob stuff" gets over with him. A few days ago the Times ran a story setting forth the fact that a little girl was in the hospital under the care of the Red Cross and was badly in need of clothing and perhaps funds. Because he is "hard boiled" and this "ol sob stuff" makes no hit with him it is to be doubted if Clyde would have read the story had it not been forced upon him in the line of duty. However he had to read it as it was passed along to the machines to be placed into type and when he had finished he came out of the composing rooms and handed the managing editor $2 with the request that he "pass the two bucks along to the little sick kid". Yeh!

In addition several other people donated money to the little sick girl after the story ran in the Times and quite a number of people sent clothing to the Red Cross rooms for her use. One lady sent a complete white middie suit together with a hat and underclothing. It was of this that the little girl was the proudest. Attendant nurses say that when presented with it her face and eyes shone with such happiness as only little children can experience. In addition to the thanks of the little recipient of the gifts the Red Cross extends thanks to everyone who helped.

The little child was in the hospital just recovering from a serious case of typhoid fever. She was under the care of the Red Cross and was badly in need of clothing. Her mother who is a widow was in Breckenridge also suffering from typhoid fever.

Through the columns of the Times the Red Cross made an appeal for help for the child. Since that time she has been discharged from the hospital and has been sent to join her mother.

NEW RULING ON WAR COMPENSATION TO BE EXPLAINED

The war department has issued a new ruling concerning war compensation which is being paid or will be paid to soldiers wounded during the war. This ruling is in the hands of Mrs. Phillip Pettit, executive secretary of the American Red Cross for Eastland county.

Mrs. Pettit will be in room 209 of the Marston building Monday and she asks that all ex-soldiers drawing compensation and all those who were wounded during the war come to that room Monday, and she will explain the new ruling to them. No charge will be made for the service.

ACCUSED WOMAN RELEASED ON BOND

Tom and Dell Vales, who were arrested yesterday on a charge of theft made by E. Maples, were each admitted to bond in the amount of $2,000, which they made.

There's a lot of talk going 'round about Lower Prices

—Candidly we wish it were so

—But as a matter of truth and fact, not fiction, you're going to pay more for your Clothes this Fall than you're paying now. Here's the dope as we get it:

—Garment workers were granted a 15 per cent increase in pay.

—The prices on cotton and wool materials haven't dropped a penny, and probably won't.

—The mills are not promising shipments for any specified time. We take them when we can get them.

—You see the answer.

—Frankly, we'd make just as much profit by selling you a suit at $30.00 as we do at $50.00. But it can't be done.

—We're selling Clothing now at lower prices than we'll be able to sell them again for some time. We honestly urge you to BUY NOW.

here's a straw hat special

—That reminds you of the days "before-the-war."

—It's awfully early to cut the price of Straws—with part of July and all August and September in which to wear one.

—Nevertheless we're doing it and they're rapidly melting away.

—These are the same Sailors you see advertised elsewhere at from $6.00 to $10.00. We're selling them while they last at the unheard of price of $5.00, and they're real Straws, too.

—We are also showing the largest stock of Stetson Hats in the city.

NEXT TIME YOU BUY SHOES BUY NETTLETONS

Most every man knows the Nettleton shoe. It's the best that's made. That's why the C. & A. Stores handle them. We're showing some classy new Nettleton Oxfords, calf skin, English models, all widths and sizes, that we know are sure to meet your approval.

They Are Priced at $16.60

STEIN-BLOCH SUITS AT OUR PRICES

ARE A REAL INVESTMENT THESE DAYS

It isn't necessary to go into detail concerning the styles and fabrics. You know the high class of merchandise the C. & A. carries. We simply state that we can save you a generous amount of money by having you buy that new Suit now.

SENATORS REED AND LA FOLLETTE, F. P. WALSH AND HEARST AMONG THOSE MENTIONED AS NOMINEE OF THIRD PARTY

There are indications that a third party movement will develop as a result of the fusion of half a dozen political organizations that are dissatisfied with the two major parties. Each of these bodies will hold a convention in Chicago at the same time, July 10, 11, 12 and 13. Among the men prominently mentioned as the nominee of the third party are Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, who, though a Democrat, was not allowed to sit in the Democratic national convention; William R. Hearst, newspaper publisher, who recently formed the American Constitutional party; Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, and Frank P. Walsh of Missouri, a prominent figure in the "Committee of 48,"

NEGRO MAY BE SERVING SENTENCE FOR ANOTHER'S ACT

AUSTIN, July 10.—The Board of Pardons has taken up the case of Ben Perry, negro, serving the eighth year of a life sentence for assault upon a white girl at Bryan in 1912 which James Brown, a negro hanged here yesterday, said he committed. The board asked the prison for Perry's record and also asked the District Judge and attorney who tried Perry, their opinion and if any motive prompted Brown to shoulder the crime laid on Perry. Until this information is received no action will be taken the board said.

NO PAPERS FOR ALIENS

By International News Service (GUTHRIE, Okla., July 10.—Alien slackers are had in this county. In United States District Court here Judge Cotteral refused to grant citizenship papers to G. A. Schlemmer and Samuel Dogan, who claimed exemption during the war and registered as alien enemies.

According to Judge Cotteral, a man who refuses to aid the country in which he lives and thrives, when that country needs help, should be returned whence he came.

DU PONT SUES HERCULES CO. FOR PATENT RIGHTS

International News Service WASHINGTON, Del.—A suit based on alleged infringement of patents has been instituted against the Hercules Powder Company in the Federal District Court at Trenton, N. J., by the E. I. DuPont de Nemours and Company, of this city. The patents upon which the action was brought it is claimed by the Du Pont company protect the use of a mixture of ethyl acetate and benzol, with or without the addition of ethyl acetate as a solvent for nitro cotton. As proxylon solutions of dopes used in the manufacture of split and artificial leathers, lacquers, cements, celluloid articles and hundreds of other commodities are frequently made by dissolving nitro cotton in these solvents, and the two companies are among the leading competitors in the business, this will assume a high proportion of interest to many throughout the country.

BRICK SHORTAGE HOLDS UP LUBBOCK PAVING PROGRAM

LUBBOCK, Texas, July 10.—Approximately 225 cars of paving brick for the city's new paving program and badly needed here at present have not moved from Thurber, so that now the West Texas Chamber of Commerce has been asked to secure movement of at least three cars a day.

It is reported that the Texas & Pacific railroad is moving a great number of empty cars through Thurber for the Panhandle section, most of the cars having been displaced for wheat loading. The West Texas Chamber of Commerce contends that three of these cars can be loaded daily at Thurber and sent to Lubbock for a return shipment of wheat, thereby giving the roads a double-way haul instead of the present empty movement to the plains.

NOT CRABAPPLES, EITHER.

HILLSDALE, Wyo., July 10.—All hailstone records in this state were smashed the other day, when hailstones as large as apples played havoc with roofs and plate-glass windows here. Heavy damage among livestock, especially young calves, was reported and outbuildings also suffered heavily from the hail.

CLERGY IN PENNSYLVANIA GET ONLY $8.64 A YEAR

NEW YORK, July 10.—Stating that Lutheran ministers in Pennsylvania receive salaries of only $8.64 a year at present exchange rates and that a suit of clothes there costs six months' pay, Rev. Berthold Buckolia, special representative of the Lutheran church in Pennsylvania, appealed for aid to the executive committee of the national Lutheran council.

Rev. Buckolia said the church in Pennsylvania is 800 years old, includes 230,000 parishioners and maintains 300 common schools, nine colleges, eighteen technical seminaries, fourteen orphan's homes and two hospitals. He said the church's financial condition was critical.

MODISTE ASKS COURT RECORD BE RE-OPENED

International News Service.
 NEW YORK, July 10.—Georgette de la Plante, modiste, whose shop has been frequented by the wealthiest women of fashion, has asked the supreme court here to reopen the Daniel Reid divorce case, which resulted last February in a decree for Mrs. Margaret Carrier Reid and in testimony made Mme. de la Plante the co-respondent in a sensational manner.

Mme. de la Plante claims that she never had a chance during the trial to enter an objection or denial to any of the charges which involved her good name and reputation, and asks that the case be reopened that she might do so.

Mme. de la Plante was said, in testimony given by the eid servants, to have had relations with Mr. Reid. These statements now are emphatically denied by the modiste.

The Frenchwoman—a brunette, slight and vivacious—talked with a reporter in the office of her counsel, Mme. de la Plante said.

"The first I knew that I had been so shamefully aspersed was when I read in the newspapers of February 26 that Mrs. Reid's servants had testified against me. I was never named as co-respondent in the divorce suit and so, of course, I had no notice that I had any interest in it. Otherwise, you may be sure I would have been represented in court."

"I am absolutely innocent of any wrongdoing and I want the court to give me a chance to set myself right before the world. I have no words to tell you how I suffered when I read the newspapers and saw that I had been accused. The damage to my good name and reputation seems irreparable."

On the trial Tillie Olsen, Amanda Gunnison, Mrs. Reid's personal maid, and Vivi Sandstrom, a waitress in the Reid household, testified that Mme. de la Plante assumed Mrs. Reid's place in the household during the Christmas week in 1918. Mrs. Reid had gone to Atlantic City. Miss Olsen said Mme. de la Plante entered Mrs. Reid's suite and ordered water drawn for a bath. Then she told Amanda Gunnison to bring her some of Mrs. Reid's lingerie, according to testimony. Vivi Sandstrom said Mme. de la Plante slept in Mrs. Reid's bed.

Mrs. Reid's maid testified that one day Mme. de la Plante complained of feeling ill. When a physician was suggested Mme. de la Plante said, so the witness testified:

"No, call Mr. Reid."
 When Mr. Reid came in wearing a dressing gown, the witness said, Mme. de la Plante began laughing and later sat in his lap.

Mme. de la Plante mentioned this testimony and denounced the servants. She said the household employees all hated her because Mrs. Reid had asked her to institute some discipline below stairs.

She said she found the servants wearing low-necked gowns and coquettish hosiery and footwear and she recommended black taffeta gowns buttoned up to the chin. The uniform gowns were ordered, but the servants said they wouldn't wear them. Then developed the violent antipathy to "that Frenchwoman," as they called her, according to Mme. de la Plante.

In an affidavit Mme. de la Plante said she was a frequent guest for luncheon and dinner with the Reids. She was always treated as a friend, she declared. She had no intimation that any charges were to be made against her because of the visit of Christmas week, 1918. As late as October, 1919, Mme. de la Plante said she visited Mrs. Reid at the Hotel Vanderbilt, taking models with her. Mrs. Reid was most cordial and made a large purchase of gowns and other articles.

Mme. de la Plante said a prominent society woman first brought Mrs. Reid into her shop in September, 1918. She made some purchases and thereafter became a constant visitor and regular patron. She manifested a friendship for the modiste and made her many small gifts. Mrs. Reid gave her frequent invitations to visit the Fifth avenue home, and one day brought in her husband, Daniel G. Reid, and introduced him. After that Mme. de la Plante says, she often lunched and dined at the house with the Reids.

Mrs. Reid told her, she said, that nothing would please her more than to have Mme. de la Plante with her constantly as a companion, to help her run the house and aid in entertaining guests. A few weeks before Christmas, 1918, she says, Mrs. Reid told her she had planned a vacation to Atlantic City and besought her to run the Fifth avenue household for the week. Mme. de la Plante said she had intended to take a trip to France, but postponed it and obliged Mrs. Reid.

A woman's post of the American Legion is being organized in New York City and the membership will be restricted to enlisted nurses of the late war.

MAY LIVE IN THE WHITE HOUSE

Miss Ellen McAdoo and her little sister Mary Faith.

Despite their father's apparent disinclination to run for the presidency, these little daughters of William G. McAdoo still have a chance to live in the White House after next March, keen observers say. Should they have this good fortune the place will not seem strange to them, as they have already visited there. President Wilson is their grandfather.

SWEETWATER REFINERY NOW IN OPERATION

SWEETWATER, July 10.—The second unit of the new oil refinery here will be erected as soon as the new equipment arrives. Thirteen men are now employed at the plant and the demand for the products exceeds the output. Sweetwater expects to be ready for the oil at Colorado and Big Spring when it is furnished in commercial volume.

AMERICANS RID GUAYAQUIL OF YELLOW FEVER PLAGUE

International News Service.
 NEW YORK, July 10.—Yellow fever experiments conducted at Guayaquil, Ecuador, by the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research have rid that notorious seed-bed of the disease for the past thirteen months. Guayaquil had not been free of the menace since 1842. The technique developed in handling the scourge in Ecuador will be of world-wide benefit in reducing mortality. Dr. Hideo Noguchi, institute bacteriologist, conducted the research at Guayaquil.

Before the war Serbia had 937 women to each 1,000 men. Today she has 1,333 women to each 1,000 men.

FOLLOW RULES AND RID CITY OF RAT NESTS

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Methods of destroying and proofing against rats are outlined in literature prepared by the United States Public Health Service for use by State and Municipal Health Officers over the country in the campaign which they have been asked by Surgeon General Cummings to inaugurate in order to protect the nation against bubonic plague.

The activity of the health service results from the appearance of the plague in Mexican and American gulf ports and at points in the Mediterranean.

"Rat destruction," says the Health Service Bulletin, "can be accomplished by individual effort to a limited degree, but to be successful in a large city there must be rat-proofing of buildings. No spasmodic or individual efforts will result in the desired end."

"Rats can be destroyed by trapping, by poisoning and by using natural enemies, such as certain breeds of cats and dogs. To insure the success of these measures it is necessary to curtail the rat food supply by properly disposing of garbage and table refuse and by preventing rats from gaining access to such foods as is contained in pantries, groceries, markets, stables and the like."

"Success in trapping is proportional to the attention land industry" the trapper devotes to his traps and protection of other food supplies. Two kinds of traps are generally used—the wire cage trap and the snap trap or dead-fall. The trap should be placed wherever rats have been accustomed to come for feeding purposes and should be more or less concealed, the snap trap by scattering dust, corn-meal or flour about them and the cage trap by pieces of sacking, straw or rubbish, leaving only the opening free.

"Highly savored articles, such as cheese, and toasted bacon, will more quickly attract rats than will food without odor; but the idea that a rat can be enticed into a trap by the employment of bait more appetizing to him than the surrounding food supply is fallacious. To the rat, food supply is a question of availability and preference is a secondary consideration."

"The destruction of rats by poison has always been more or less in favor. A preparation of arsenious acid or phosphorus, ten per cent and suitable base, as cheese, meat or glucose, are the most popular poisons. Poisons undoubtedly have a certain efficiency in ridding a place of rats, but whether by causing their migration or their actual destruction is somewhat difficult of determination."

"Rat proofing excludes rats from the food supply and deprives them of harborage. Without this procedure it is almost impossible to reduce the rodent population."

"In rat-proofing any building, the following parts have to be considered: ground area, walls, ceilings, garret, roof, bed spaces in general, ventilators, abandoned sewers, doors, windows, outside piping, water and sewerage pipes, down spouts, wiring and air or light shafts. By the omission of some small detail an otherwise rat-proof structure may become badly rat-infested."

"The rat-proofing of floors of buildings is secured either by elevation of the structure with the under-binning opening free or by masonry walls of concrete, stone or brick laid in cement mortar sunk two feet in the ground, fitting flush with the floor above. The wall must fit tightly to the flooring."

"Food deposits are the greater importance in rat-proofing because they furnish both sustenance and shelter for rats. In this class of buildings are stables, meat markets, retail and wholesale groceries, bakeries, warehouses, docks and wharves. These places are best rat-proofed to the ground areas by the construction of concrete floors and foundation walls. Unattended as they are at night time rats might well enter doorways or windows carelessly left open or be introduced concealed in the merchandise and gnawing through plans-floors obtain well protected hiding and breeding places.

"Double walls with dead space between should be avoided or if used should be rat-proofed at top and bottom with heavy wooden timbers, four by four joists or by a concrete fill. Attics should be well covered and kept free of damage or other rat food supplies."

"Double ceiling should be avoided especially in basements. Boxed in stencils, such as uprights and roughly finished steel joists, kitchen sinks and the like should be removed. Miscellaneous openings as light shafts, ventilators and windows should be screened preferably by twelve-gauge wire screen with mesh not exceeding one-half inch. The grounds about the buildings are to be devoid of rat harborage and premises are to be kept clean and free of rubbish."

"In seacoast cities, where the rare species of the brown rat and 'Alexandrian' rat prevail, health officials are asked to make surveys to determine the presence or absence of rats in a plague."

"How to eliminate the more common species, including the 'Norway' rat, barn rat, sewer rat, gray rat, or wharf rat, is described as follows:

By starving him through the use of rat-proof receptacles for food, and covered metal garbage cans.

By depriving him of breeding places, through the abolition of plankled yards and passageways.

By refusing him admission to the comfort of your buildings, through rat-proof construction, and screened basement openings.

By killing him at every opportunity.

By demanding city anti-rat ordinances and state anti-rat laws.

TRANSPORTATION WOULD OPEN COAL AREA IN STEPHENS

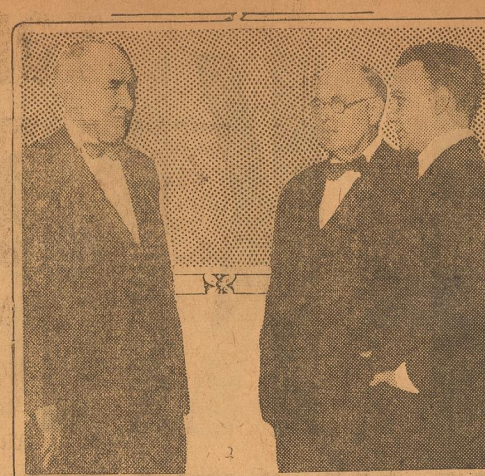

ELIASVILLE, Tex., July 10.—The advent of the new railroad through this section will open up an entirely new coal producing territory, relieving the strain upon other Texas mines. It is believed that almost all of this country is underlaid with thick deposits of coal, much of which crops out in the Crystal Falls and Eliasville region. Coal in more or less quantities is to be found from Turner and Ranger almost into Wichita Falls at Newcastle and near Bridgeport. The mines at Newcastle are furnishing considerable quantities of coal for railroads and manufacturing enterprises and used in homes for warmth during winter. The present supply of oil in the territories where oil is found decreases the demand and almost all of the mined material is shipped to other towns not so favorably located with reference to oil.

HOTEL GAME IS GOOD ONE SAYS THIS VIENNA PORTER

FRANKFORT-ON-MAINE, July 10.—Hotel porter and hotel waiter rank as the highest paid "professions" in Vienna, according to the Frankforter Zeitung. Hotel porters and waiters have an average yearly income of 100,000 kronen; carpenters 48,000 kronen; university professors, with more than 20 years' experience, 40,000 kronen. The municipal director of Vienna is paid 37,000 kronen annually. Higher court officials and laborers in the gas works are paid 25,000 kronen; canal droggers receive 22,000 kronen. "What is the result?" demands the Frankforter Zeitung. "Among the applicants for the position of porter in one large Vienna hotel were one major-general, three colonels and many lieutenant-colonels. And this isn't in Soviet Russia, A. license to practice, is the first woman certified public accountant in California.

LAND IS THE BASIS OF ALL WEALTH

OWN YOUR OWN FARM

HE WHO HESITATES PAYS RENT

Cotton, Corn, Maize, Fruit and Garden Spot of Texas—Be Happy and Prosperous.

BE INDEPENDENT
Are you working for yourself, or are you day after day heaping up riches for someone else. Are you getting out of life what you put in it. That which you deserve. Do you have to toil, scrimp and save to make ends meet. WHY tramp along making half a living when you can be INDEPENDENT. WHY work for someone else on a small salary, on shares or under the handicap of high rents when you can put all your efforts toward your own account and toward the loved ones who depend up n you. It is up to you to LIMB or to continue to crawl.

LOOK TO NO MAN
BE YOUR OWN BOSS
The chance is here today for any man to be his own boss. No man in the world depends less on another than the FARMER. The farmer is independent and as the days go by—as the world settles down to a workaday common sense basis—the farmer is coming to the front. He calls no man boss. He looks to no man for his weekly or monthly pay check. He pays no greedy landlord all his profits. Every dollar's worth of rent you pay today is wasted. Every cent paid on your farm is money saved. Every improvement—money in the bank. Stop paying rent. Stop working poor soil. OWN YOUR OWN FARM, COME TO LAMESA.

DAWSON COUNTY, TEXAS, THE LAND OF TRUE OPPORTUNITY
Dawson County, Texas, located on the Great Plains Country of Texas. A virgin soil, a wonderful climate. SOIL adapted to any sort of crop, fruit, vegetable or heavy that can be grown in this climate, from the red to the lighter sandy soil, underlaid with a clay sub-soil.

CLIMATE—Free from excessive heat in summer, fanned by the cool breezes of the plains. Winters reasonably mild. You need not lose a day out of the year from cold. Storms practically unknown.

WATER—Good pure water may be had at 80 to 120 feet.

MARKET—Lamesa is located on a terminal of the Santa Fe railroad. These tracts are all from two to seven miles from Lamesa.

CROPS—A GREAT COTTON SOIL AND CLIMATE—Peanuts, maize, cane corn, melons, vegetables of all kinds.

Statistics show that the population of the world is doubling itself every twenty-seven years. There is a baby born in the United States every minute, and immigrants are pouring in on us by thousands every year. Our cities are crowded to suffocation. "Back to the Land" has become the slogan everywhere. All eyes are turned toward Texas and the great South Plains, and no section of this Land of Promise offers more inducements or is attracting greater attention than does the South Plains Country—often styled the "Staked Plains of Texas."

When it has been shown in scores of instances, a man can clear from $50 to $75 per acre in cotton alone, which can be grown with ONE-HALF THE LABOR that it can back East, it can readily be seen that the value of this land will increase enormously. A good cotton crop such as grown in the county should pay for your farm in one year.

LESS LABOR
160 acres can be farmed here with less cost than you can farm 40 acres in the black lands further east. LABOR is the most important thing in our lives today. Stop and think what this one item alone means to the farm owner here.

COME TODAY
There is an inherent desire in the breast of every intelligent human being to make money. True, each one of us has his own ideas as to the best way to accomplish this, and how to do it in the shortest time, with the expenditure of the least amount of labor. But, after all, the sure and inexhaustible source of profit is LAND. From the days of Adam until the present the soil has been the basis of all wealth, and never has this fact been more clearly demonstrated than at this moment.

Multitudes are swarming into the state from every quarter, and while the population is growing by leaps and bounds there is not another foot of land more today than there was when Texas was a wilderness. What does all this signify? Why, it simply means that land of such value will never be any cheaper in price or easier to obtain than it is right at this moment and is offered here.

TERMS
160-acre tracts at $2.00 per acre down, balance nineteen equal yearly payments at 8 per cent interest, with the privilege of paying all or any part of the principle and interest at the expiration of any five-year period, by giving 60 days' notice. $25 to $60 per acre. Depending on location and character of tracts. Remember there are only forty-three tracts of 160 acres left for sale. Write today. Come to Lamesa. Be there between July 15 and September 1.

CRUEL LAWS PREVENT GIRLS FROM DRESSING ON BEACHES AS NATURALLY AS THEY WISH

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 10.—Pity the poor bathing girl of the great seashore resort who needs must keep her dimpled knees covered and her legs incased from the glare of the sun, and men, or go to the "hoose-gow."

What's the use of seashoring and bathing and boardwalking if one cannot dress as she sees fit? "Down with the leagues against bare legs and one-piece suits," they cry.

"Bolsheviks of dress," retort the persons who are shocked at what they call "indecent dress."

An organized protest against the Atlantic City rule prohibiting one-piece bathing suits and bare legs was heard at the famous resort when a delegation of beauties, encumbered with the "within the law" bathing suits called on the beach enforcement officer and "kicked."

They rebelled against the law, quoting the "free country" stuff, scored the rule that defines the length of skirts and sneered at that one which prohibits bare legs.

The delegation's spokesman, a pretty miss of twenty, whose bathing costume was beautiful despite its proper length skirt and tights, declared the one-piece suit as not so much of an issue as the bare-legged stuff. "Maybe we'd like to get our legs sunburned once in a while," she said.

The "law" listened patiently and then replied: "I am only enforcing the law, obey or take the consequences."

"Smarty!" chorused the delegation and swished out of the office muttering something about "What's happened to the men; seems the sight of a bare leg is becoming disputing to them?"

And every day some rebellious maiden troops merrily down the beach in defiance of the law and is brought into court and fined.

ACTORS UNABLE TO NAME ROLES BEST ADAPTED

Although the analysis and classification of the work of screen directors is still a matter of study for the future, Cecil B. DeMille director general of Famous Players-Lasky corporation and producer of motion pictures which are admittedly individual in treatment, has voiced the opinion that the direction of motion pictures they are the "imitative" and the "creative."

"By the imitative method," he stated recently, "I mean the process whereby the director personally acts out each role before the start of the scene and then permits the actors to follow the trail which he has blazed, simply an imitator of the director and the term 'creative' which I have applied to the other school of screen direction is somewhat of a misnomer. By 'creative' I mean permitting the actor or actress to work out their own interpretation of the scene, subject to the criticism of the director."

It is that it makes the actor or actress around the sharp hairpin turns, even if the effort fails, why, a poor characterization will result on the screen.

That further well recognized systems of directing will be developed in the future, Mr. DeMille confidently avers.

Mr. DeMille contends that the "imitative" directors are at present in the majority but that the "creative" directors are those who have achieved fame or are destined to achieve it. His objection to the imitative system

IRISH PREFER PRISON TO RESCUE BY POLICE

International News Service. DUBLIN, July 12.—Public offenders exiled by Sinn Fein don't wish to be rescued by British policemen.

Mutton Island, off the west coast of Clare, has frequently been used by Sinn Fein courts as a place of detention for culprits.

Some days ago three men living on the Clare seaboard were arrested by Irish volunteers on a charge of demolishing a wall on a local farm. The Sinn Fein court fined each of them thirty shillings and ordered them to rebuild the wall. One prisoner signified his disobedience. In consequence the two were sentenced to three weeks' detention on the island.

The Royal Irish (British) Constabulary a week later learned of the incident and put out a skiff to rescue the men. As the policemen approached the island they were stoned by the prisoners who declared they were citizens of the Irish Republic and vehemently declined to be rescued.

The police, abashed, withdrew.

WORLD'S DEAREST NEWSPAPER

International News Service. PARIS, July 10.—The Near East News, a four-page daily costing ten Georgian rubles, is the only up-to-date English newspaper available for American relief workers south of the Caucasus. American Red Cross officers who are establishing scholarship privileges for Armenian students in the colleges of Constantinople and Jerusalem, find it their only means of contact with the outside world.

ANOTHER RIP?

FORT SMITH, Ark., July 10.—In the case of Herbert Wright, ex-service man physician of this state are being given food for much thought and experiment. Wright, a victim of sleeping sickness, has been in an unconscious stupor since last March and shows no signs of awakening.

Attending doctors who claim they have made every test known to science, declare that Wright is absolutely without a sense of feeling.

HIGH SCHOOLS MAY BE FACED WITH PROBLEM

International News Service. WASHINGTON, July 10.—Public high schools will be short by 15,000 teachers when the fall term opens, according to estimates by A. O. Neal, of the bureau of education. The bureau recently conducted an extensive inquiry among more than 7,000 high schools in the country.

These schools now employ 65,857 teachers and will require 17,275 new teachers in the fall to provide for the normal increase in enrollment and to take the places of those who are leaving the schools for other work. Mr. Neal considers that this proportion fairly represents the general condition in high schools throughout the country, and he estimates that a total of 25,978 places must be filled before the next school term begins.

The visible supply at present does not approach that number by far. A canvass of colleges and universities to ascertain what number of graduates would take up teaching show that of those who will adopt this calling 1,630 men and 4,742 women will choose high school teaching.

On this basis it is estimated only 16,020 members of this year's graduates from higher institutions will teach in high schools. The difference, 15,858 places, must be filled from sources which are not now apparent, or that number of classes will be without instruction.

The threatened shortage is twice as great as the total number of teachers in New England and greater than the number in New York and Pennsylvania combined.

School boards everywhere are being advised to strengthen their forces in every possible way, by raising salaries and improving conditions as in other ways.

Oldham County Has Great Future as Farm Region

VEGA, July 10.—All kinds of fruits and vegetables have been and are being tested out in Oldham county with very satisfactory results. Apples from this county have been on exhibit under many entries in the past four years, not only at the Dallas State Fair, but at international fairs, and almost universally have taken blue ribbons against all competitors. Ever-bearing strawberries have been thoroughly tested and are constant bearers from spring until late autumn freezes them out. Pears grow to perfection and practically all fruits known to the orchardist do well when properly cared for. This does not include, of course, the acidulated fruits. Sometimes fruit growers must resort to the smudge against late spring frosts.

A considerable part of the county commonly called "breaks" lies along the Canadian river which flows through the north part of the county east and west. These breaks are fine grazing lands, but the day will come when they will be one huge orchard, as this is where fruit does best. Wild grapes and wild plums grow abundantly in all these "breaks." Just a few years ago the stockman of Oldham and surrounding country proclaimed to the oncoming hordes of farmers that they could not "desecrate" the land with growing vegetation. And for a time their threats stuck. But in 1919, more than 225,000 bushels of wheat and more of other grains and agricultural products came from Oldham county soil. This year the wheat crop is even larger. The country is being gradually broken up for the thrifty farmers who are coming in.

EX-MANICURE SUED TO REGAIN MONEY LAVISHED ON HER

NEW YORK, July 10.—How Mlle. Tatianna Adell, beautiful 16-year-old Russian girl, rose from the humble ranks of the manicures to a position of luxury came out yesterday in the New York Supreme Court.

A portion of the girl's story is contained in a $200,000 suit brought against her by Samuel Hershenshtein, trustee in bankruptcy of Walter H. Stiner, surviving partner of the firm of William H. Stiner & Son, custom house brokers, also of the firm of William H. Stiner & Son, bankrupts.

An affidavit that Mlle. Adell had provided to serve with papers, Justice Dinnely signed an order permitting the documents to be served on her by mailing them to the door of her apartment. Trustee Hershenshtein declares that between 1912 and his death, Dec. 22, last, Martin E. Stiner received more than $200,000 of funds belonging to the firm and instead of turning the money over to the concern lavished it on Mlle. Adell.

ONLY ONE IN 20 FORGOT BRITISH POSTAL RAISE

LONDON.—Comparatively few people were caught napping, a London editor boasts, by the recent raise of the letter postage from one and one-half to two pence (three to four cents). With a view to surcharging unlucky recipients of letters from the forgetful one penny, Post Office officials made close scrutiny of all correspondence but the bag was not a heavy one. "Not more than 7 per cent of letters have been found to be insufficiently stamped," an official at the General Post Office said after twenty-four hours.

One hundred and fifty telephone girls of Hutchinson, Kan., have agreed to wear gingham aprons and gowns until the prices of other dress materials are decreased.

GINGHAM COMBINES WITH ORGANDY IN BEWITCHING FROCK

Here is just the kind of frock which makes you say, "Why didn't I think of that?" It is made of red and white checked gingham with a fetching overdress of sheerest white organdy. The overdress is all scalloped and piped with the gingham and drowsy red poppies adorn the girdle and skirt.

FORCES SERVICE MAN TO BACK TO DEATH IN RIVER

NEW YORK.—How a man armed with a knife forced Michael Dragnev, twenty-eight years old, an honorably discharged soldier, to back into the Passaic river was told to police by Fred Kocowitz fourteen years old, after the river had been dragged for nearly two hours in an effort to recover the young man's body.

Dragnev, according to the story of the boy, was sitting in a park when another man walked up to the bench and sat down beside him. Words were passed between the men, the boy said, and the stranger pulled a knife. Dragnev jumped to his feet and started to back toward the river, the man with the knife menacing him all the while. He walked into the water until breast deep and then hurled a stone at the man on shore, daring the latter to come after him.

The man with the knife waded into the water, the boy declared, and Dragnev who had continued to back out into the stream, suddenly threw up his hands and cried for help. The stranger ran back to the river bank as the former soldier disappeared.

WAR HERO DIES IN CITY STREET

NEW YORK.—"Lady," a four-legged heroine of the world war, twice wounded in action, met death here under the wheels of an automobile.

Mascot of the Twenty-third Infantry, Second division, "Lady," a Belgian police dog, was over the top with the famous regiment in the advance between Soissons and Chateau-Thierry, and was wounded. She recovered. Later in another engagement, "Lady" received a battle scar.

After the victory the little canine heroine was brought home by the company's bugler, Robert Fash.

An idol of the children of the neighborhood, "Lady" was "out" every day. She was pressed into service by mothers who wanted babies watched while they went in stores, and carried parcels for all the kiddies.

Last Decoration day with her master "Lady" visited thirty-nine cemeteries where soldiers of the world war are buried and took part in the exercises. Fash sounded "taps." The little pet was buried with military honors.

STARTING WITH CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS, BRECKENRIDGE PUTS OVER C-C IN TWO DAYS

January 1, 1920, the Breckenridge chamber of commerce had a constitution and a set of by-laws. A few days later, it had a budget ample to the needs of the year, every business man and resident who had been approached was wearing a hat ticket which told "the world, 'I have joined'" and in the offices about Breckenridge were displayed little certificates of honor, which set forth that Mr. So-and-so was enrolled as a "Public Spirited Citizen." Capital letters, please.

That road until it was in passable shape. Clergymen and brewers. A rumor became prevalent that unless money was forthcoming immediately, that the schools of the town would have to close. Taxes based on old valuations were not sufficient to meet the demands brought about by a speedy increase in the scholastic population. It was decided to call a mass meeting. A committee of two was appointed. The members were the Rev. A. J. Morgan, pastor of the Baptist church, and E. P. Shaw, former California brewer. In one day they raised the necessary $7,000 to keep the schools open.

There were no census enumerators for Stephens county, was one of the first problems faced. On January 2, $1,000 was raised in Breckenridge to help defray the expenses of census workers in the county, seventeen men were placed in the field, seven of them imported from Houston examinations were given those who had taken them, and mounts were provided for those who worked the rural districts.

At the head of the chamber of commerce as its president is C. O. Hamilton, young attorney associated with the firm of Beale, Caldwell, Bateman & Evans. He came from Springfield, Mo., to Dallas, and from Dallas to Breckenridge. He is secretary of the Stephens county bar association. As vice-president, the chamber has Fred M. Bortoff, formerly county judge in Denton county. He is associated with Major Nelson Post, in law practice, and is a member of the city commission.

GOOD ROADS BOOSTER NOW C. C. SECRETARY

Judge W. C. Veale, formerly county judge of Stephens county, is the senior member of the firm of Beale, Caldwell, Bateman & Evans, moved to Breckenridge from Stephenville about a year and a half ago. With the creation of the Ninetieth judicial district of Texas at the last called session of the legislature, he was appointed the first judge of the new court. He is now a candidate for election to that office. Judge W. C. By LARRY SMITHS

Some twenty or thirty Chicagoans, all hungry or would you say thirsty, visited Breckenridge in the days just after the railroad began operations and just before the super-celebration started. Passing through St. Louis in their route to the wonder fields, they had taken on some of the spirit said to be inherent in the natives of that state. They wanted to be shown. They were.

In a party which included Breck Walker, Cliff Caldwell and several others whose names loom large in Breckenridge current history, they were given a personally conducted trip, brief but crowded and convincing.

They visited near C. Goodwin tract, just on the edge of the corporate limits of Breckenridge on the north and there listened to the ramble of Goodwin No. 1, a Walker-Parkins operation, saw it fill one thousand barrel storage tank and overflow in a cascade of golden spray and for a few moments saw what 6,000 barrels daily production look like when turned loose in a powerful shimmering stream finely divided particles of green gold, coating trees and shrubbery with its fragrant sheen and disappearing in clouds on the breeze.

Perfume of Araby Outdone. "Fragrant?" you say. "A tone of mingled horror, surprise and incredulity. Well, that's what one of the visiting Chicago women claimed, when it was urged that she stay to the windward of the golden mist for fear of being covered with its stain and aroma."

"I like its odor," she stoutly declared. "She is not the first to whom it has been perfumed. Ask any rose who has 'stomped' the lee of the spray from his own well. Otter of roses are not in it."

The Goodwin well, born Sunday, June 27, was a strong baby, at 1,200 barrels. At the time the party arrived, they were expecting a 4,400 barrel well, for such had been its growth in strength in the first two days of its history. The gauge figures for the twenty-four hours ending at noon of their visit showed 6,000 barrels.

The trip to the lease was made in automobiles and vehicles of a similar nature. Carlton Walker, nephew of the man whose middle name gave the county its title, or the other way 'round, was the pilot of a party of two, made in the latter mentioned sort of conveyance.

It may be said hurried passing, for that's the way he nessed all scenery and competing cars, that Carlton Walker's high opinion of speed varies inversely with his valuation on human life. He aims to get there.

"Sit forward on the seat," he advised, missing a truck by the wide margin of several inches and opening up the Johnny over a stretch of fairly smooth ruts. "Then it won't get you so well."

"This was good advice, it proved. Whenever his passenger struck the seat, he tried to strike it as far forward as possible. Less damage, that way."

After the visitors had seen the well and listened to the flow tank and seen 6,000 barrels daily production at play while the well was cleaned out, the well owner, the Rev. C. Goodwin, gave the party a swing around the horizon from northwest to north to northeast.

"There were four derricks here January 1, 1920," he said.

Now they stare the sky on every side. "For five miles in every direction from Breckenridge, there is not a dry hole," he continued. "Development does not go that far in every direction and much farther in others. But a duster is yet to be drilled."

A little later, the party looked down the Crystal Wells road and away in the clouds that hugged the sky line saw the edge of the northern proven territory, nine miles away.

The Goodwin lease had rather an interesting history, as Breck Walker told it. It is a 170-acre tract, part of a 3,300-acre block, Ten years ago, when Mr. Walker, with a hunch that oil underlay that ground, bought a lease on it and paid $750 for the privilege of drilling an acre, but $5 consideration for the lease.

On the block of 3,300 acres, 10 cents an acre rental was charged, after the first two years. This quarterly payment of $250, according to C. Goodwin, ranchman from whom the lease was purchased, was "easy money." When it was due, he took occasion to kid Mr. Walker about it.

"Four years ago," so Mr. Walker's bit of intimate history ran, "J. J. Perkins, a friend of mine, offered to take over half interest in the property and pay half of the lease rental and as I was not very flush at that time, I accepted his offer."

"As you can see, it is a rather valuable property now."

A Gift to Mrs. Walker. There was a gift to Mrs. Walker did not tell. The Goodwin lease, before the completion of the well, was a gift to Mrs. Walker. The first well completed on it paid the biggest producer in the Walker name. Breck Walker is reputed to be worth ten million and to have that much more available backing, should he wish to use it.

The discovery well of that territory was the W. H. Acres No. 1, which preceded shortly the Gulf Production company's J. M. Ward, the Ward well, starting at 400 barrels in August, 1913, now is reported to be making 1,000 barrels a day and is only ten barrels between flush and steady production.

The visitors in Mr. Walker's party included: Mr. and Mrs. James Burton Caldwell, J. W. Witzel, Mr. and Mrs. Bertina; James Burton Glenn Jr., Dr. C. H. Searle, C. W. Keane, F. J. Keane, George A. Kennedy, Frank Matthews, W. H. Scofield, R. S. Becklin, David Tilt, William Glenn, Theodore Elworth, Charles H. Buckett, W. E. Richard, W. H. Rollo, W. H. Craig, Harvey Hales, D. R. Innis, George A. Adcock, J. W. Witzel, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Crawford, the Misses May C. Schnobles, Anna G. McGrath, Bell Woodridge, Milton M. Lory, the latter of the Fort Worth Oil Ledger.

They learned that oil looks like and smells like oil, the Breckenridge oil territory's jump in a year from less than 20,000 barrels to 51,400 barrels daily production, of Breckenridge's wonder growth from 700 to 12,000 barrels a day and returned to Chicago "shown" and ready to tell about it.

"The field has attracted the highest class young men in the country," said Curtis M. Hancock, secretary of the Breckenridge Chamber of Commerce. "The boys in O. D. are here. They are inured to the hardships of an oil field by the struggles of fighting thru the Argonne forest and Belleau wood to rest at Metz beyond the Rhine."

There is a difference in the tone of Breckenridge that is quickly apparent to the visitor. It has none of the earmarks of a new made city of the oil field of those traits that have come to be regarded as typical to those familiar with the fields. The cabaret, with its cheap and tawdry amusement at New Amsterdam Cico and Eastland, as to which would the dubious "soft drink parlors" are lacking.

"We have discouraged the idea of the open town, the public dance hall, gambling rooms and cabarets which have been the plaudits of the people to welcome their new means of transportation which will mean so much to the upbuilding of this section.

Stephens County Sells $700,000 Of $3,500,000 Good Roads Bonds And Work Starts Within 40 Days

Roads in Stephens county have had a troubled history, full of grief for the frames of vehicles and of their passengers. They are now coming "out of the woods." Parallel with the development of the prolific oil field will come the building of the roads so essential to the section. Bonds had a stormy history. An issue of $500,000 submitted in 1918, was defeated overwhelmingly, by a vote of about seven to one. Of course, it was a period that was not propitious for a road bond election, with the government discouraging sale of all bonds except government securities. The county's oil backing then was not proportionately as great for that half million dollar issue as it is for the $3,500,000 series of bonds which last fall gained the approval of the county almost as overwhelmingly as that first bond issue met defeat.

There were those who had that war time bond project in mind when the $3,500,000 issue was first contemplated. They claimed that it stood as little chance of passing as the first bond project. With that in mind, Cliff Caldwell, meeting Curt Hancock in Dallas, asked what he would take to put on a good roads campaign in Stephens county. He named his figure $1,000. It was accepted.

Despite the feeling that seemed general at first that the bonds would not meet with success at the polls, the campaign was a winner. Curt Hancock predicted that twenty-five votes would be lost in Breckenridge. He missed it just on. There were twenty-six votes polled against good roads. The bonds were passed September 15, 1919. Actual work is due to start by the last of July, according to Judge J. W. Darden, who was appointed to that position October 15, 1919, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge W. C. Veale, who found the demands of his law practice and business interests too great. Associated with Judge Darden in the good roads work are Commissioners R. J. Hodges, of Weyland, H. L. Brown, of Harpersville, H. W. Whitman, of Ivan and John McMillan of Breckenridge. Already, thru the First National bank of Breckenridge, more bonds of this issue has been disposed of than the total amount of the proposed issue of 1918. There has been $700,000 in bonds sold. This amount may be used in grading all roads of the county, so that benefit may be derived at once by all the residents and all interests, or to complete the highway from Breckenridge to Caddo and the Palo Pinto county line, a distance of twenty miles, the north loop of the Bank-

PEACE OFFICERS AND CITY'S MAYOR MAKE GOOD TEAM

Co-operation of the city administration with the peace officers is largely responsible for the enviable reputation in which Breckenridge bears as a law-abiding town. G. H. Deasin, city marshal, is diligent in the work of searching out and arresting violators of the law and the result is a town free from crime. Sunday laws are strictly enforced. Mayor H. W. Sayle is a former sheriff himself and still is an active peace officer in practice. He gives the marshal and his deputies good support from his experiences and is not loath to go out and make an arrest himself, when the need arises. Sheriff C. B. Sears is the head of the Stephens county law enforcement organization. Breckenridge offers no haven to the bootlegger, common gambler and "easy money" class. The criminal element is not wanted and is invited to stay away. They will find, should they visit the Stephens county seat that they will have hard sledding. City commissioners working with Mayor Sayle in the commission form of government which the town now has are Judge Fred M. Bortoff and B. Miller, a grocery merchant of the town. He is owner of the new Miller hotel which is just being completed.

Spiritual Needs Met By Churches Of Breckenridge

In keeping with its spirit of civic cleanliness and the slogan that "a town is better moral than immoral," is its church life, which is thriving with the growth of the town. There are four denominations represented in Breckenridge. The Methodist church, of which the Rev. C. E. Lindsay is pastor, is still using the building erected in the old days but plans a modern church, to cost between $75,000 and $100,000. It has already started its subscription lists. The Rev. A. J. Morgan, chaplain of the Breckenridge post of the American Legion, is pastor of the Baptist church. The church has dismantled its old building and pending the erection of a $100,000 building on Rose avenue, is using a tabernacle. Since the destruction of the Presbyterian church in the storm early this year, the members of that congregation have been using the American theatre for worship. A new building soon will replace the one destroyed. The church has a new site at Williams street and Ross avenue. The Rev. H. H. Hovers is pastor of the First Christian church, of which G. A. Hutton is pastor, has completed an elaborate building, which already is in use. The remarkable beauty of the women-folk in Austria is claimed to be due to the constant eating of arsenic which they take in large doses without any injurious results.

Once Greatest Inland Town, Would Be Rail Center

Breckenridge, losing one distinction it has enjoyed for months, is eager to gain another which is diametrically different. Looming from the time the Indians left it until the advent of oil, for the last two years it has been the "largest inland town in the United States."

But the Wichita, Ranger & Fort Worth railroad ended that, when it made formal entry into the Stephens county seat June 27. Now Breckenridge is after the opposite distinction of being a rail center. With two more steam lines building into it from Cisco and Enslin, an interurban from Mineral Wells already assured by Breckenridge capital alone and the vision of three more rail connections, the time seems imminent that the "inland" appellation will be misty memory though only recently past.

Breckenridge's possibilities are apparent to the casual visitor. The man who comes to study what the Stephens county center has been and will be is not slow to be impressed. But to gain the most glowing enthusiasm for the city, in the quickest way, talk to Curtis M. Hancock, former chairman of the state highway commission, good roads worker from where the original chunk made a need for good roads, and at present secretary of the Breckenridge Chamber of Commerce.

"Living" Breckenridge. He knows Breckenridge. And that's not half. He believes Breckenridge, thinks Breckenridge, breathes it, talks it. This never has been proved, it is not probable that his sleep is diffused with talk of the city of his belief. Certainly his dreams are of it.

Let him tell something of it, not un-mixed with the creed for which he battled as highway commissioner and since. "Breckenridge is a truck-built town, good roads tax and bad roads tax—the first assessment on the property value in an assessment on the property valuation of a section, the section levy on the tonnage that passes over the roads and more on the good disposition of the people who have to travel them.

"If I had the bad roads tax that has been spent in Stephens county, in the development of its wonderful oil fields and the building of its towns, I could take up the $3,500,000 bond issue which has been passed for road improvement and complete the proposed road system."

There must be something in good roads that gets into the blood of their advocates. It must tend to the development of an enthusiasm such as builds cities, wins wars, constructs empires. For in the last few years, in the time that Mr. Hancock has assisted in the passing of $100,000,000 in good roads bonds and has done more, according to Governor Hobby, than any 100 men in the state for better highways, his enthusiasm has always been undimmed, at this same pitch. "Breckenridge has been made and is going forward, by good people," continues this foremost enemy of the chug-hole.

Bad Roads, Good People
"There are no bad people here. They had all of the badness bumped out of them coming over the roads they had to travel to reach here.

"Now they gently shimmy into Breckenridge over the first of its railroads." A man-sized, hearty laugh interrupted the account. He lighted a cigaret and was serious again.

"Greatest thing since the discovery of oil—the advent of the railroad.

"Up to the time the Texas Company drilled the first well, Parks No. 1, seven miles south of Breckenridge, a year before the completion of the McCleskey discovery well, these folks had lived an uneventful life since the Indians left.

"Didn't know that the discovery of oil in Stephens county antedated the discovery at Ranger, did you?" No, his hearer didn't.

It was easier to understand why Breckenridge and the Stephens county field was not before the oil world sooner when it was explained that the first well was not a producer because the hole was jammed. It made 200 barrels for a time, then stopped.

Stephens county had had a quiet and disappointing time, up until then. It was a county before the war between the states—Buchanan county—but it lost its identity at that time, because of the difficulties besetting life here. There were not enough people to maintain a county.

The Indians moved out in 1876, the peaceful Tonkawas. At that time, the county was reorganized, named Stephens in honor of Alexander H. Stephens and the county seat called Breckenridge in honor of the Kentucky statesman. The first child to be born in the new county seat was the son of the first county judge and this boy was named Breckenridge Stephens Walker. He is one of the city-builders, one of the chief heirs of the field's bounteous oil estate and counselor and co-worker on every project for Breckenridge's improvement.

Men to Build Towns.
"After all, it takes men to build a town," quoting again from Curtis Hancock: "This city and county may be full of opportunities and may offer every encouragement, but without men, big men, broad minded liberal men, not narrow selfish, mean and low, you cannot hope to build a city, for after all, it takes men to build a town."

Breckenridge discourages shacks and the boom business man who comes on the height of a hectic trade era, "gets his" and goes. These are the flotsam and jetsam of the oil fields and Breckenridge makes no appeal to them.

"There is $4,000,000 in Breckenridge banks—all working, but that isn't enough," says Mr. Hancock. "We need four times that amount. We want outside capital.

"This town and county are contributing $200,000 a day to the wealth of the nation—more than $75,000,000 a year, on one item alone, its oil. It doesn't matter how many meetings are held in the financial centers or in the directors' rooms of the federal reserve banks, or how Wall street regards the possibility of a panic, it can't hurt this place.

Breckenridge Fails In Vital Respect As Boom Oil City

It is difficult to imagine the proprietor of a hotel in a new oil town saying, courteously, "We can give your party two rooms adjoining as soon as they are vacated, or, if you wish, there is a large room available right now," and this in a hotel that nightly is jammed to capacity, with cots made up in the halls.

It seems, from experience in new oil towns, that the chap was not informed as to the proper way to greet arrivals. "An exception" was the mental note made of him.

But when inquiry was made in a bustling drug store as to the location of a business establishment that it was necessary to visit, the answer was, "You'll find it directly back of our store, in the corresponding block of the next street. The nearest way is right thru the back of our store, Jim, show them."

"It began to look suspiciously recurring.

And when, on a visit to one of Breckenridge's busiest bankers, we found him surrounded by men waiting for an audience and were told, "I will be pleased to make that trip with you as soon as I can get away; just about fifteen minutes, please." Then the truth was driven home.

Breckenridge is courteous. The city may not have recovered from food and drink prices made necessary by the lack of rail transportation just remedies. The most attractive homes in the city still may be surrounded by metal fences of the early Spanish-American war period.

But there's one step in the city's development that Breckenridge has never made; she has never been too busy and too prosperous to be polite.

COLOR WAVES MAY BE USED IN CURE OF MANY DISEASES

NEW YORK.—A theory of the treatment of disease by color waves was advanced at the session of the Allied Medical Associations of America, in the Hotel Pennsylvania, by Dr. Diushah B. Ghadiali of New York.

"Light is as much a necessity of life as food," Dr. Ghadiali said. "The light of the sun is composed of seven colors, and every element in the world exhibits a preponderance of one or more of these colors.

"The potency of an element depends upon the potency of its color waves," he added. "Foods and medicines are composed of specific elements and act in conformity with such color wave potencies. The human body is built of these elements of colors. It contains about 9.1 per cent. hydrogen, 13.4 per cent. carbon, 2.5 per cent. nitrogen and 72 per cent. oxygen. The preponderating color waves of these four elements are respectively red, yellow, green and blue. Thus 97 per cent. of the body is built of the above four elements and is, therefore, responsive to their four color wave potencies.

"In health, the body colors are proportionately balanced. Disturbance of this color balance produces disease. Establishment of the color balance by administering of the lacking colors or reducing the increased ones restores health."

Dr. Ghadiali said drugs could be reduced to their color potentialities and disease could be prescribed for in that way.

He asserted that the primary colors of the spectrum are not red, yellow and blue, as has been held, but are red, green and violet, as has been proved by the fact that only their combination will produce white.

A chart showing the colors and their combinations, with which the lecture was illustrated, pointed out the colors responsible for all human tendencies and emotions. Red was anger; yellow, mental; green, humility; blue, intuition; violet, spirituality; magenta, love; lemon, pride; orange, jealousy; turquoise, dignity; indigo, benevolence; purple, veneration and secret, lust, he said.

He explained the effect of quinine on fever as the blue waves, of which quinine is composed, driving the fever away. Never use red in quantity, he said, for it is too great a stimulant.

HENRY FORD ASKED TO HEAD TICKET OF NEW THIRD PARTY

CHICAGO, July 9.—Henry Ford is being urged to run as a presidential candidate on the proposed third party ticket, as was stated at committee headquarters here today.

A. W. Ricker, member of the executive committee of the Committee of 48, declared Charles Hoffman of Lansing, Michigan, a member of the executive committee, is back of the Ford movement.

...neciation which expects to confer with Ford at Detroit today, will consist of former Bull Mooseers in Michigan and supporters of the proposed third party.

Stottmann, it was stated here, has mailed letters to all members of the Committee of 48 urging their support for Ford.

Contradict Reports of Marriage—An Emotional Actress—Thrills and Romance—Japanese Star.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE is now making "Good References," as her next First National picture to follow "The Perfect Woman," but the popular screen comedienne says she'll never be able to go on with her work if the newspapers don't stop printing stories about her reported intentions of marrying somebody.

First it was a series of stories to the effect that she was engaged to Irving Berlin, the composer, known as "the king of ragtime." Next it was the widely heralded report following her visit to Havana that she was to wed A. Ferdinand Apuncroploos, a multimillionaire, of Cuba, followed by spontaneous and intermittent reports of other matrimonial plans. And now the Los Angeles Times in a recent June issue speaks up and says that the queen of screen comedienness and the factime king were secretly married several weeks ago. This was the proverbial "last straw" for Constance.

"Why, the very idea!" she exclaimed when asked if the report were true. "It's bad enough having the newspapers print a lot of rot about me being engaged to someone, but they're going just a bit too far when they say I'm married. It looks as though there was a conspiracy on foot to make me marry some one. No, I'm not married—not even engaged."

William Farnum
William Farnum is one of the most versatile actors on the screen. He declares that his success is due to being natural and entering into the spirit of his role.

"Feel in your heart the emotion called for," he advises. "Then having that you will find yourself wrought up to the proper pitch and will be natural. In the great run of situation you will find that nearly every ordinary man and woman too, will perform according to rule in moments of stress. Repress your simulation, therefore, in acting, and tame down the false emotion. Get the spirit of the thing, and your emotion will be all the more natural."

Pauline Frederick
Pauline Frederick, the superb emotional actress of the screen, is now at work on her first picture for Robertson-Cole.

Miss Frederick is possessed of the most perfect assets necessary to become a successful screen-actress—sincerity in the expression of her role, and personality. The latter grips you as you watch her work on the screen.

Antonio Moreno not only plays the part of a world adventurer in his serials, "The Invisible Hand" and "The Velled Mystery," but he actually is an adventurer, like his Spanish ancestors. Tony came to this country from Spain at the age of fifteen to seek his fame and fortune—and found both. One of the stunts in "The Invisible Hand" was that of reaching out from a subterranean passage, tripping an opponent and hauling him through the trap door while the antagonist put up a frenzied fight. Moreno recently was injured when he drove his car through a rope barricade, which tore off the top of the machine, causing it to fall on the star. His shoulders were bruised and his wrists badly cut.

NEWS NOTES FROM MOVIELAND

By Daisy

Gilbert Miller's production of the operetta "Monsieur Beaucaire," is to be sent on tour next season with the same cast that appeared in it during its New York run.

Roi Cooper Megrue has written a new play which has the euphonious and alliterative title "Pickle Phyllis."

A big new revue that is to be put on at the Pavilion in London is called "London, Paris and New York." There is to be three acts, one scene in each city.

Flora Zabelle is to be a leading member of the cast of "The Rose Girl," a new musical comedy.

Bert Williams has been engaged to appear in "Broadway Brevities." This is a revue that is to be produced by George LeMaire of "The Follies" and still later of vaudeville.

"The Winged God," a new play by Crane Wilbur, is to be presented at Atlantic City Monday night and all week—maybe.

The New "Hitchy-Koo 1920" is to have three stars instead of one. It will be produced by C. B. Dillingham. The stars will be Raymond Hitchcock, Julia Sanderson and George P. Huntley.

Margaret Mayo's latest plan hasn't a bed in it! This writer started the bedroom farce epidemic with her "Baby Mine." She also did "Twin Beds" but now she has reformed and has written "Seeing Things," which is funny without the aid of so much counterpane.

"The Meanest Man in the World" is the title of a play by Augustus McHugh which is keeping George M. Cohan very busy at present. It is to open in Atlantic City on July 25.

Augustin Duncan, who was the stage director of "John Ferguson," has been engaged to produce a number of shows for Thomas Dixon.

Roland and Young Juliette Day are to have the leading roles in "Scrambled Wives" when that play is opened this fall. It was played for a few weeks this spring and found to be highly approved by the "dog towns."

Florence Reed, playing "The Green Jade," is to have the honor of giving the first performance in one of the new Selwyn theaters in New York. It is expected to be ready for the opening in September.

Arthur Hammerstein finds it difficult to decide on the title for the new Frank Tinney piece. At first it was "Tickle Me," then it was changed to "The Love Bath," but that did not seem to be a clean up so it has been changed back to "Tickle Me."

Julia Dean and Carl Anthony are to be with George Arliss next season when he will take his play, "Folliekin," by Booth Tarkington, into New York.

Alan Dale just simply cannot get over the idea of writing a play and has turned out another. This is "Nobody's Fool," in which May Robson is to star.

June Elvidge, of screen fame, is to have an important role in the Lederer production of Victor Herbert's latest musical comedy, "The Miracle Maid."

In "Don't Be Afraid," the Avery Hopwood play, Ernest Truex appears first as a boy of 14 then as a youth of 20 and at the finish as a man of 25.

"Aphrodite" is to open for a run in Chicago in September.

The latest Guy Bolton and George Middleton play is "The Cave Girl" which is being produced by Comstock and Gest. These men, wrote among others, "Polly With a Past."

Walker Whiteside is to play New York next season in "The Master of Ballantrae."

Irene Fenwick is the featured player in the Woods production of "As the Clouds Roll By," which is now in rehearsal.

TO THE THEATRE GOERS OF RANGER

Here is a photo-drama that will open the hearts of all of you who live and love and glorify things beautiful. "Romance" has been one of the sensational stage successes of recent years and Doris Keane, beautiful, talented, richly gifted, has carried "Romance" to international fame. It is, indeed, a rare privilege to present this splendid artiste in her exquisite film creation of what has been hailed as the "most beautiful love story of the stage."

The Triumph of Love Photodramas

In "Romance" Doris Keane scores a great triumph in the role of the Italian prima donna. The part is capitably written, with an infinite variety of moods, the moods of a spoiled Italian woman, beautiful, gay, wayward, successful, worshipped, a woman of whims and infantile fancies, but deep below it all, a woman whose character has survived, to rise to the height of self-sacrifice for the first man she ever really loved.

Corinne Griffith has a splendid supporting company for "Bab's Candidate" which will be shown at the Opera House today. George Fawcett, a star on the legitimate stage and who directed Miss Griffith in "Deadline at Eleven", has returned to the screen to assume the role of Senator Marvin, one of the leading characters. Another important role is played by Charles Abbe, also well known on the stage, but somewhat of a new comer to the screen, and still another character is played by Harry A. Fisher, for more than 30 years associated with Harrigan & Hart. Webster Campbell plays opposite Miss Griffith. Others in the cast include William Holden, Roy Applegate, Blanche Davenport and Walter Morton. In addition there are a score or more quaint country characters, only bits, but which add greatly to the charm of the picture.

"Yes or No?"
Kipling said, "The Colonel's lady and Julia O'Grady are sisters under their skins." If you know fully what that means, you have the theme of one of the greatest photodramas of the year. It is "Yes or No?" starring Norma Talmadge, and in the dual role of the "Yes" girl, Miss Talmadge has scored the greatest emotional hit of her entire career.

"Yes or No?" is the attraction at the Temple theatre for three days, and while movie fans have learned to expect great things when Miss Talmadge's name graces the boards, still they have a treat in store for them in this picture. The appeal is to one and all alike; man and woman, rich and poor, and from the very first flash to the last fade-out, you will lose yourself in the wonderful art of the star as well as the delightful story.

It is the old, old story of the neglected wife, a story that is ever in the telling. It may be the story of the woman across the street, your dearest friend, or even yourself and because it may be you or your dearest friend is the thing that makes the story intensely interesting.

Briefly, the "No" girl is the wife of a hard working but honest mechanic who unconsciously neglects his wife for the sake of building a home for her and the little ones. There comes a time in life when the greatest question arises—whether she will forsake the love of her husband or continue on the job. She answers with an emphatic "No" and fights to make that "no" more emphatic. The "Yes" girl is the wife of the idle rich man, a man who has amassed a fortune and worn himself out in doing so. No pep, no love, no ambition. Then a fine, handsome man whose veins are rife with manhood's ardent blood came into her life.

He was a dandy, a darling, a double-crosser and dangerous. He set a trap baited with sympathy, attention and beautiful compliments, and like the vain thing she was, she fell for them—and just for the moral effect, he let her lay where she fell. She said "yes" and then backed up that "yes" with all the love materials at her command.

The novelty part of the program at the Temple for the coming week is one that will please everyone. A lot of laughs that have originated because of keyholes, and "Through the Keyhole" is the title of one of the funniest Sunshine comedies of the season. Every scene is a snicker, a girl a beauty; and what you see through the keyhole is immensely interesting.

At present the women police service is only a semi-official organization, working in London and other large English cities, but an attempt is being made to have it incorporated into the regular police force, under the home secretary's office.

which makes one forget that it is acting. One forgets that she is Doris Keane the motion picture star and sees her only as the Italian singer, forgetful of self, thinking only of her lover, striving to regenerate her life, finding only for the strength of renunciation. One sees her lover, the curate, falling more passionately in love with her every day—revolted at last by the dramatic revelation of her relation with another man in days past and gone—and the other man his best friend.

Even the other man plays a new role—he is striving to shield his friend and also the girl. He is a strange mixture of selfishness and wanton decency.

All whose hearts responds to the thrill of romance, all who are interested in viewing the reactions of passion on the lives of men and women will find the story more than worth while. Not since Falstaff's "Resurrection" was played on the screen has there been as strong a story on the same subject.

W. W. BROMBERG GOES TO CHICAGO

W. W. Bromberg, who for the past nine months has been publicity and house manager for the Lone Star and Lamb theatres for Cole Bros., is leaving tomorrow for Chicago, where he will visit with friends several weeks before engaging again in publicity work.

Mr. Bromberg came to Ranger last October and has established a reputation for himself as being a live wire publicity man and movie house manager. He put into effect many large publicity ideas while connected with Cole Bros. It was the exploitation of Mr. Bromberg's ideas that paved the way for Ranger to become the leading theatre center of Western Texas.

Before coming to Ranger Mr. Bromberg was associated with one of the leading firms of moving picture producers of the Pacific Coast. At one time he was a moving picture actor.

School Teaching Anna Q. Nilsson's First Profession

A dozen years ago Penryhn Stanlavs, the noted artist, searched New York to find a model with a "personality" face—one that would register soul as well as beauty. He finally discovered it as belonging to a demure young Swedish girl who was studying to be a school teacher.

She had full, red lips, gold-of-olive hair and wonderful lake-blue eyes that regarded the world pensively. Stanlavs engaged her to pose for his pictures, and even today, although Anna Q. Nilsson is a famed scene star, and Stanlavs employs countless other models, one is apt ever so often to see the Nilsson face with its spiritual expression painted onto the shoulders of a Stanlavs magazine cover model.

The reason? Personality—the stuff picture producers are on the constant lookout for; that quality which causes a girl to be picked out of a mob and literally shoved out before the camera.

Women and Men Alike Are Strong For Her.

Anna Q. is the sort of person to whom women take kindly, and about whom men rave. She has a mezzo voice, and speaks with a clear-out, unaffected British accent; her eyes are unusually light blue, and even before her lips part, they smile.

On snap judgment she might be termed "amateurish," but not after you've chatted with her for five minutes. When she is being interviewed, she does not pose nor look bored. Neither does she primp.

Ambitions, she says, are too elusive to be at all tangible. Hers, at least, have been. Originally, for instance, she felt herself destined to be a school teacher. Acting in the movies would never have interested her at that time of her life.

Later, when Stanlavs engaged her to pose, Miss Nilsson craved to be the most sought-after model in New York.

Her entrance into picture-making was blurted out an indistinct—a mere suggestion that she visit the old Kalem studio in New York because a certain director there happened to want a model wearing lady for a one-reeler.

Nor has Anna Q. ever had any of the many heartaches nor disappointments gone through with by most of the screen and stage stars of today. Things have always gone smoothly for her. She got onto the screen by chance, and the Goddess of Luck has been her mentor ever since. Just more luck.

And when Allan Dwan called her for the part of the troubled, sorrowful school teacher in his production, "The Luck of the Irish," it was another streak of fortune for her, she declares.

"Strange enough," she remarks, "the role combines everything I've ever really wanted to do. I've always enjoyed children and thought of teaching them in school. Also, I've dreamed for the day when I'd have a chance to take a world tour—and lo, I got both chances in "The Luck."

Even though the genial Anna Q. has her own particular hairdresser to attend to her blonde coiffure, and the fact that she buys all of her clothes in New York notwithstanding, she refuses to permit anyone to keep house for her Hollywood bungalow. She cooks her own meals, drives her own car, puts her house in order to suit herself, and at the end of a day before the camera retires gracefully into her shell with her books and her sewing. A sort of bachelor girl existence, whose meaning monotonous is broken by a deal of exercise and hiking through the acreage hill.

Red News For the Men Folks.
Most film stars have their pet hobbies. Anna Q. prefers, she says, to do things her own way. She doesn't care for golf (it's too strenuous) nor for swimming (it's too much time from work; therefore she ignores them). Her work with her; and in the past year she's successfully made seven pictures—"The Luck of Fortune," "The Luck of the Irish," "In the Heart of a Fool," "The Fighting Chance," and the Hampton mystery play, "Behind the Red Curtain." The Figure-head" with Eugene O'Brien, and "Back to God's Country" with Robert Bosworth.

"ROMANCE" AT THE LAMB CLASSED WITH YEহার'S BEST PLAYS

Edward Sheldon's justly famed play, "Romance," was exhibited at the Lamb yesterday and forms the principal attraction again today. Doris Keane adds new laurels to her art as the leading lady.

"Romance" should be classed as the most beautiful, poignant and appealing love story of the year and one of the strongest plays ever put on the screen. It is impressively sad and touchingly beautiful. Moreover, it is remarkable for its power to portray every phase of the master passion, all the instincts, good and bad, which are brought to the surface by the development of a great passion between a minister who has been raised in the shadow of the church and its conventions and a beautiful Italian opera singer who has fought her way up from poverty and obscurity to a position of fame and fortune.

"Romance" is one of the few motion picture portrayals which deal only with the deep currents of life. The interest is sustained and increased with a tenacity which is remarkable and almost brutal. The acting of Doris Keane is of a type

Watch the Brakes For Auto's Safety Is Good Warning

One of the most annoying things to the man who drives a car is the way his brakes seem to lose their interest in life, lose their grip, whine and carry on generally as if they were trying to imitate a cat with its tail in a door. As one of the bright boys of the row has it, there's a way you can fix it.

Very likely the brake lining has become coated with oil or grease which acts as a lubricant. This condition is dangerous, for it may cause the brakes to slip when applied. At the earliest opportunity the lining and the brake drums should be wiped clean with kerosene.

Or the brake lining may have become worn so that insufficient pressure is brought to bear against the revolving metal drum, and the car cannot be stopped quickly. A few adjustments, which any mechanic can make while you wait, will often compensate for the reduced thickness of the worn lining.

If the lining has become worn beyond the margin of safety, it is best to take no chances with safety, but to have the brakes relined. In the selection of new brake lining, the motorist should be guided by the experience of the leading automotive engineers who have made numerous analyses and tests of various kinds of brake lining material.

The wise motorist is satisfied not alone in being able to drive a car, but thankful that he can stop it. He values a smooth, short stop no less than he appreciates a quick, easy getaway. Watch the brakes—enjoy greater comfort and safety.

AUTO DEMANDS REMAIN GREATER THAN SUPPLIES

"Prospective motor car purchasers who are postponing the buying of a car because they imagine a casual cancellation now and then will cause any let-up in the demand for passenger cars are due for a rude awakening," says a prominent distributor.

"The real facts of the situation are that every time an order for a car is canceled there are no less than five people waiting to take that car immediately, and sometimes the cancellations have helped out dealers who have been endeavoring to satisfy the demands of their clientele.

"Such cancellations as do come through are as a rule from people already owning two or three cars, who suddenly get a spasm of conservatism, and as they already have some machines, feel they do not require any more. Orders are not being cancelled by persons not enjoying the ownership of a car, although some already possessing machines may find it expedient to do without a new one. However, this helps the manufacturers to meet the demands of the new crop of buyers—the great middle class—people who heretofore have not possessed a machine because they could afford only a cheap one, but who now find themselves financially able to purchase a medium priced car, providing it will not tax their purse too heavily to operate it."

MOTORS, LIKE HUMANS, GREATLY DEPENDENT ON RESPIRATORY SYSTEMS

The automobile engine is much like a human being in one particular, its functional well being is largely dependent on a respiratory system. By this expression we mean that part of its mechanism that has to do with breathing in of the fuel vapor and the expelling of the burned gases after combustion has taken place.

The respiratory function of the engine is controlled by the valves. If the valves which permit the fuel to enter the combustion chamber do not perform their work properly, much of the power of the motor will obviously be lost. Again, it is just as important to get the burned gases out of the way after combustion, for their continued presence in the combustion chamber will contaminate the fresh fuel. Granting then the importance of the valve system, a brief study of the unit, its common failings and how to remedy them may be interesting.

The next type is the valve-in-head, which means that the valves are located in the heads of the cylinders, and helpful.

Five Definite Types of Valve Gears.

To begin with, there are five definite types of valve gears. The most popular type consists of a single cam shaft operating push rods, which directly control the valves. This is the operation being achieved by means of vertical rods and rocker arms. These rocker arms are merely pivoted levers, operated from vertical rods, which extend up from a push rod, driven by an ordinary cam shaft. The next valve type is known as the T head, which operates on the same principle as the L head, but has two cam shafts, one for intake and the other for exhaust valves. The fourth type also has valves in the heads of the cylinders, but the cam shaft is placed on top of the cylinder, instead of being in the crank case. The final type is the sleeve valve, which are simply ports in sliding sleeves which are actuated by eccentric shafts corresponding to the cam shaft of ordinary practice.

Ways in Which Valves Operate.

Most car owners understand something of the way in which valves are operated, but we shall describe the operation briefly. The camshaft is geared to the crankshaft, and as it revolves the cams are brought into contact with the valve lifter, which is a cylindrical bit of steel, moving up and down within a guide. As the lifter is forced upward it pushes the valve open against the resistance of a spring. When it reaches its limit of upward movement it sinks down again and the spring closes the valve.

Obviously the position and size of the cams and other parts of the valve gear must be accurately determined to keep the valve open for just the proper length of time. Also the valves must open at exactly the right instant in relation to the position of the piston. It will be evident that wear in certain parts of this valve system will cause derangement of the entire operation of the respiratory system of the engine.

Tendency Toward Crossed Valves.

The modern tendency in engine design is to keep the entire valve mechanism exposed to a perpetual spray of oil. In some designs pipes are provided, but in others the valve system is located inside the crank case, where it gets splash lubrication from the connecting rods. As a result of this tendency the wear and consequent noisy operation of the valve system, which used to be almost universal, has been largely eliminated. Nevertheless, the average car owner does not give his valve system the care, or rather watching, that it needs, and small things often develop into big failures for lack of a small attention in time.

Leakage Down Sides Is Common

For instance, it is not uncommon to find an excessive leakage of oil down the sides of the valves. This is caused by wear of the valve stem or stem guide, usually brought about by insufficient lubrication. Something may have prevented oil from getting to the mechanism, and the result has been excessive and rapid wear.

Or the condition may be caused by the fact that the valve is pushed sideways whenever it is raised because of a bent stem, a worn tappet or stem bottom. It frequently happens that the stem will be struck at one point only, inducing excessive side thrust, wearing the valve stem guide. When the guides have been worn in this way it is possible to ream out and fit valves with oversize stems. An alternative repair is to fit bronze bushings in the guides if these are ### not already used. Should Be Examined For Bent Stems.

Whenever the valves are taken out for any reason they should be examined for bent stems and for play in their guides. In inspecting the stems it is best to use a steel square, as the eye often fails to detect a slight bend.

Another valve trouble is wear of the tappets, which causes a slapping in their guides, a very annoying condition, the existence of which may be detected by shaking the tappet with the fingers after the spring pressure has been removed. The methods of overcoming this slapping are almost as many as the number of tappet assemblies, and in some cases a new unit is necessary.

NATION HAS OUTGROWN ITS RAILROAD SYSTEMS, SAYS WM. G. M'ADOO

The increasing complications and difficulties of the transportation jam, in the throes of which the nation has been gripped since the war, has brought forth drastic comment from leaders of industry throughout the country who are becoming more and more concerned over the need of a practical solution to the vexing and appalling problem with which the commerce of the United States is confronted.

A consequent result of discussion by these representative business men is a greater realization than ever of the interdependence of railways and truck transport. It has come more forcefully apparent to industry that fulfillment of the demand for additional transportation facilities is imperative.

Within the last few weeks scores of business executives who are in close touch with the situation have made such ardent appeals for wider utilization of the motor truck as a means of relieving the railroads of unprofitable and wasteful short haul shipments that the question has been taken up on every side.

One of the strongest appeals was contained in a statement of William G. McAdoo, who declared that "the country has outgrown our railroad facilities and it will be a long time before the railroads can be brought up to the needs of the country. The most practicable as well as the most immediate relief that can be provided is through good roads and the motor truck."

The opinion of business men generally is that the truck is deserving of unqualified support from every branch of industry.

E. A. Williams Jr., president of the Garford Motor Truck company, at Lima, Ohio, says there are not enough trucks in use to bring relief to the situation, which, as he puts it, "has become acute and which should be of the greatest concern to us all."

"Although the production has been greatly increased and a vast number of trucks are seen in daily use everywhere," Williams said, "there are still not half enough."

Mr. Williams pointed out that trucks already are hauling a large part of the country's short haul freight and doing it economically.

They have solved the problem in switching yards and freight terminals of the big cities. The railroads, he cites, are saved delays and expense caused by congestion from this class of business.

"Long haul freight, rightfully belongs to the railways," Mr. Williams said. "It's swift and sure delivery must not be clogged or hampered."

Williams is pleased with the sentiment that is being fostered for support of the truck. "Manufacturers, merchants, wholesalers, jobbers, with the hauling of the country's bankers, and other men connected transportation business are beginning to see the vital necessity of such support," he said.

more than a truck; that he is selling transportation. He has equipped himself with a wealth of information of great value to the prospective truck user.

"If you think there is the remotest possibility of your being able to use trucks to advantage, talk the matter over with a competent truck salesman. Such a man can be properly called a truck transportation engineer.

"Do not labor under the misapprehension that if you permit an interview to a truck salesman you will thereafter be indefinitely 'hounded.' No truck salesman will waste time on you unless he knows you can use his truck to your advantage. Armed with his knowledge of truck transportation problems and complete data on your proposition, he can easily determine whether you can use his truck to advantage or not. If not, he will waste no time on you. If, however, you ought to motorize, he can very readily and conclusively prove that fact to you. In either event, there is no occasion for innumerable calls and indefinite argument. Any man who attempts to sell you a truck on any other than a scientific proof of the profits it will make for you, is not a salesman at all. He is merely a walking catalog, and as such can be shut up and put aside.

"Send for a real truck salesman—a man who can solve your problems."

Famous Italian Quarries now use Motor Tractors

With her quarries at Seravezza, not far from Pisa, Italy possesses the finest supply of marble in the world, and is the greatest European exporter of this stone. The Seravezza marble quarries have been in active operation since 1517, when Pope Leon X instructed Michael Angelo to exploit these regions, and since then they have furnished material for the finest palaces and churches in Rome, Florence and other Italian cities.

From the outset transportation was the greatest difficulty to be overcome in connection with the working of these quarries. The marble is quarried out of the mountainside, to an altitude of 4,000 feet, and roads have to be made as work proceeds. The gradients are high, running up to 40 per cent in many places; in addition the turns are very sharp, and except on the main approaches all the roads are thickly strewn with loose stone.

The blocks of marble, weighing fifteen to twenty tons each, have to be handled with the greatest caution and call for an infinite amount of hand labor. Until quite recently ox teams have been made use of almost exclusively for the transportation of blocks of marble in these quarries. The work with these animals is naturally slow, for even on good roads they do not travel at more than two miles an hour. For the biggest loads it is necessary to use sixteen to eighteen pairs of oxen, which cover a total length of not less than 200 feet. This length is most disadvantageous, for it not only necessitates the presence of twenty or more drivers, but on the steep, winding portions of the mountain only a small number of animals can do really useful work.

In an attempt to solve the transportation problem, steam locomotives were adopted and proved fairly successful on the good roads, notwithstanding the high cost of fuel and maintenance. These locomotives were not found suitable, however, for bringing stone from the mouth of the quarry or for traveling over the roughest surfaces and climbing the steepest gradients.

The most recent adoption, and one which has been entirely successful, is that of the Fiat seventy-horsepower petrol tractor. This has been tried in competition with both locomotives and ox teams, and has given such good results that it is now driving out both. Its greatest advantages are speed and lower operating costs. The maximum useful load handled may be taken at thirty tons. This would entail the presence of eighteen drivers (one for each pair of oxen, and at least six men to be in attendance for applying the brakes and for assistance when on the difficult turns). With the tractor only one driver is required and four men are quite sufficient to accompany the load over the difficult portions of the road. This means a saving of the labor of nineteen men.

The overall length of the tractor being only sixteen feet, no great difficulty is experienced in getting around the sharp hairpin turns, even when they are on a gradient of 20 per cent. If the trailer, on which the greatest load is carried, cannot be taken around by direct haulage, the tractor first makes the turn and then pulls its trailer or trailers around by means of its engine-operated winch. In this way, it is possible to get big blocks of marble from positions which would be altogether inaccessible to ox teams, or which would entail the building of special roads at very considerable expense.

The petrol tractor employed for this work is a type produced before the war by the Fiat company and employed very extensively during the war for the haulage of big guns.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

Davis six-cylinder motor cars are to be distributed in the Cincinnati territory by the Cincinnati Davis Motor company, according to an announcement just made. One car of the new Davis series has arrived and is now on the floor of the company's salesroom. Amos Chevrax, C. A. Herick and Edward Gratch form the new company.

The Davis company is specializing on one chassis and is putting into it standard units.

Samuel Breedon, owner of the St. Louis National league baseball team, is the Pierce-Arrow distributor in the Mound City. Mr. Breedon is here with the Cardinals and during his stay in this city he is being entertained by H. E. Holmes of the Cunningham-Holmes company, Pierce-Arrow distributors for this section. Mr. Holmes is a man of retirement and quite courteous in his treatment of visitors, but

Are You Run Down?

PEPSINOL Will Make You Feel Strong and Healthy

You cannot afford to lose strength. Your muscular and nervous system must be kept in good order so you can do your daily work. That weary, "all tired out" feeling usually is due to digestive troubles. They are sending poisons throughout your system, overloading your kidneys, making your liver torpid. Pepsinol will overcome these troubles, for it is a splendid stomachic stimulant, a creator of pure, nourishing blood. Thus it repairs weakened nerve tissue and keeps you in perfect health.

The new Holmes air-cooled cars beginning to show up in large numbers. C. E. Bishop went up to the Holmes factory in Canton last week and succeeded in getting five cars, including a four-passenger roadster. The roadster is dubbed the Bolshewiki special along Automobile Row for the reason that it is finished in Russian khaki, which to the untrained eye might just as well be called yellow or tan. This model is a smart appearing job and is mounted on the same chassis as the touring car.

Economies heaped upon the Cincinnati Automobile club because of the success of its outing for the orphans of Hamilton, Kenton and Campbell counties last Thursday more than repaid the organization for the efforts this event required.

Expressive of the joy the outing brought to the thousands of children is the following letter:

The Good Shepherd Convent,
Cincinnati, Ohio, June 24, 1920.

The Automobile Club:

Gentlemen: On behalf of the little girls of the St. Mary's Industrial school, located in this convent, I wish to thank your members for the outing given them yesterday at Chester Park.

It means so much to these children whose opportunities are necessarily limited, something to look forward to, something to enshrine in memory as one of the real joys of life.

If the spirit of kindness and consideration for the weak and the less fortunately situated were to become as universal in our country as it is in the Automobile club, I verily believe there would be less unrest in the body politics and fewer social problems to solve.

You have shown that a new asset has been added to your cars—one, perhaps, which the dealers have overlooked, the power to bring happiness into the lives of the weak and helpless.

Thanking you for your generous provision and thoughtful care of the children in every detail, I am, Yours sincerely,
Win. D. Hickey, chaplain.

"Grease every 500 miles."
"Oil every 200 miles."

These are statements typical of the ordinary automobile instruction book. And the automobile owner, if he would prevent nerve-racking squeaks and save his car from damage, must do his jumpers and "get out and get under" every two or three weeks and search for a variety of places to oil and grease.

But the greaseless car has arrived. It is the Lexington Minute Man Six. There is only one grease cup on the car and that is on the water pump, where it is very accessible when the hood is raised. Lexington uses self-oiling bushings. This bushing has small corrugations, a sixteenth of an inch apart. In these grooves dry compound is forced, when the bushing is made. The bushing is of bronze, and through it an ordinary hard steel bolt is inserted.

The compound furnishes the lubricant. The bushings are used on springs, steering knuckles, spindle bolts and other working parts of the chassis. As a result there is no "getting out and getting under" and getting covered with grease for Lexington owners.

Legal barriers against advertising a nationally known article at cut rate prices for the purpose of selling competition were raised last week when the "Fynac" Manufacturing company of Rockford was granted a permanent injunction against the Graves Cycle and Auto Supply company of Bay City, Mich., forbidding the latter from using the Rockford firm's name in cut rate advertising.

The Louis Geyer company, Chicago Dort distributors, are out in front in a campaign for the announcement in automobile advertising of a price on cars covering the actual salesroom cost, rather than the f. o. b. price at the factory.

Studebaker employees, 7,000 of them, enjoyed a holiday yesterday in celebration of the opening of new $20,000,000 company plants at South Bend, Ind.

Another transcontinental road record was broken last week, when a Packard truck pulled into New York from Los Angeles after thirteen days and ten hours on the road. Pneumatic tires were used on the trip, which brought the truck's mileage to 150,000.

Distributors representing the Nash Motors company in every section of the country attended a three days' conference last week in Kenosha. It was announced that distributors' contracts call for $79,000,000 worth of business in the next twelve months.

For instance, it is not uncommon to find an excessive leakage of oil down the sides of the valves. This is caused by wear of the valve stem or stem guide, usually brought about by insufficient lubrication. Something may have prevented oil from getting to the mechanism, and the result has been excessive and rapid wear. Or the condition may be caused by the fact that the valve is pushed sideways whenever it is raised because of a bent stem, a worn tappet or stem bottom. It frequently happens that the stem will be struck at one point only, inducing excessive side thrust, wearing the valve stem guide. When the guides have been worn in this way it is possible to ream them out and fit valves with oversized stems. An alternative repair is to fit bronze bushings in the guides if these are not already used. Whenever valves are taken out for any reason and for play in their guides. In inspecting the stems it is best to use a steel square, as the eye often fails to detect a slight bend.

Another valve trouble is wear of the tappets, which causes a slapping in their guides, a very annoying condition, the existence of which may be detected by shaking the tappet with the fingers after the spring pressure has been removed. The methods of overcoming this slapping are almost as many as the number of tappets should be examined for bent stems and assemblies, and in some cases a new unit is necessary.

METHODIST WOMEN EXTEND THANKS TO BUSINESS MEN

Cooper Addition Circle No. 3 of the Ladies Missionary Society wishes to extend its thanks to the wholesale and retail merchants of the city for their liberal donations to the supper and fish pond that was given Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. V. V. Cooper, and also wish to thank the truck foreman of the Prairie Oil & Gas Co. for the use of trucks. The proceeds, which were $71, will go for the benefit of the new Methodist church.

Girl stenographers in New York City earn on an average of from $19 to $25 per week.

Systematic Inspection Pays

It certainly pays to have your car inspected at regular intervals. Then if a slight trouble develops it can be repaired before causing serious damage.

Our mechanics are very conscientious in this work, recommending repairs only when, in their judgment, it will save you money and trouble if the work is done at once. Then, too, you feel an added confidence in your car when you know that it is always ready to go any time, any where.

Ask us what the charges will be for your car—it depends upon the service you wish rendered.

ON INDIA TIRES AND TUBES FOR

TEN DAYS

What the motorist wants in a tire is mileage, comfort, plus satisfaction.

India Tires are built for such service.

Time and experience have demonstrated the wisdom of the manufacturer in making India Tires. They have met every test, on every type of road and under every condition of climate.

The great demand everywhere for India Tires for Automobile and Truck proves their merit.

Josh Billings said he never argued "agin" a success. A wise saying and a wise man.

The fact that India Tires have proven to be best in Tire Manufacture should convince the dealer and user that the popularity of these tires is founded on sound principles.

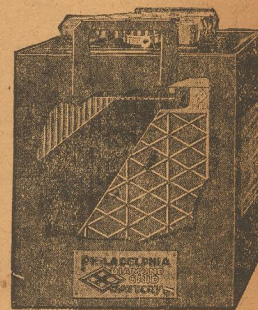

Their appearance is attractive, their merit unquestioned, "they do as a minimum what other tires do as a maximum." Live dealers in order to secure good territory must act promptly.
