ARREST GANG IN EASTLAND ON SUSPICION

Four Men Held In Jail and Two Automobiles, Believed Stolen Are Recovered.

Two cars, a new Ford coupe and a new Ford roadster, believed to be stolen property, were recovered by Eastland county officers Saturday night as a result of the arrest by them of four men suspected of being car thieves. The recovered coupe shows to be registered in Callahan county, while the roadster is thought to be one missing from Brownwood. The four men, who were arrested and placed in jail Saturday night, were taken to a residence in the southwestern portion of Eastland, when the officers entered the building with drawn guns and demanded their surrender. Two pistols and a 30-30 rifle were taken from the men arrested. The Ford coupe was found at the residence where the arrests were made and the roadster found several miles from town at a place where the officers were directed to go to find it by parties said to have been members of a gang of auto thieves operating in this section.

Members of the Eastland county sheriff's department, and Chief of Police Elmer Lawrence, of Eastland, have been working for some time in an effort to gather evidence that would warrant conviction in the courts before making arrests of parties they have suspected of being responsible for much of the car stealing in this immediate section as well as other sections of the county. They believe they now have sufficient evidence and what they have will be turned over to the Eastland county grand jury, which is now in session.

NEW ICE BRIDGE FORMING AT NIAGARA

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Jan. 11.—The hoary breath of King Winter is fast upsetting the gloomy predictions of old rivermen that an ice bridge below the American falls could not form because the current in the river was obliterated by the abandoning of the old overflow tunnel used by one of the power companies.

Today the pulsing slush in the gorge is frozen far out from the shore line and is laying the foundation for another beautiful formation. Cold weather of the past few days has been sufficient to cement large fields of slush ice from the heavy floes that have tumbled over the falls. Reversion officials now believe that an ice bridge in the gorge will soon be a reality.

LIBERTY BONDS FOUND LODGED ON SAND BANK

Granbury Boys Recover More Than $10,000 Stolen by Bandits From Strawn Bank.

GRANBURY, Jan. 11.—A boyish dare flung from one lad to another Sunday caused the recovery of more than $10,000 worth of Liberty bonds stolen in the sensational daylight holdup of the First National bank of Strawn, Palo Pinto county, on the afternoon of Monday, Dec. 21, when bank officials and customers were locked in the vault by bandits who in true wild west style escaped with cash and bonds totaling $30,000.

Several Granbury boys were playing Sunday afternoon under a bridge that spans the Brazos on Highway No. 10, just out of the city limits. One of them noticed a towsack partly filled with four several weeks had been on a sandbank. One of the lads challenged another to swim out to the bar and bring in the sack. The dare was accepted.

When the lad reached the sandbar he curiously peered inside the sack. It he found what he thought were a lot of worthless papers and receipts, but there was also a dollar bill.

The boy took the bill and the sack, which had been emptied of part of its contents in the ransacking, and swam back to the bank. Gladfully the youngsters took their dollar bill to the boys' fund, but they wanted it changed, as they were to divvy up on the proceeds.

The garage man questioned the lads and they told him the story. With other citizens, hastily called, an adult party was formed and headed for the bridge. A busy county was notified and it was discovered that the boys had uncovered $10,000 in registered Liberty bonds, besides a number of notes, insurance policies and other papers indicating ownership by the First National bank of Strawn.

Bonds Are Identified. Following a telephone call, Sheriff Abernathy of Palo Pinto county, Vice President W. L. Stephens and other bank officials came to Granbury. They identified the bonds and other papers as part of the loot stolen on Dec. 21 and took it back with them to Strawn. There was one other dollar bill in the sack besides that which the boys found. A number of Liberty bonds floating on the water also were recovered, bringing the total to over $10,000.

The First National bank was looted at Strawn after four unmasked men had entered the institution with drawn pistols. They knocked down the president, T. B. Stuart, with the butt of a pistol, forced other officials and customers into the vault, secured $30,000 in loot and escaped in an automobile.

Granbury citizens still are aiding in the search for six bandits who robbed the First National bank of Llanon in Hood county, of $3,000 in cash or last Friday afternoon. These bandits are also understood to have headed for Granbury, and belief has been expressed that they are in hiding in wooded stretches near the city.

WOMEN URGED TO PAY THEIR POLL TAXES

So Far This Year Not a Woman Has Paid Her Poll Tax For This Year.

Are Ranger women sick of women in politics? Are they tired of a state where men are men and women are governors or have they laid aside the privilege of voting, like they would a toy that was tried and failed for something is wrong in Ranger, as up to date not a woman in Ranger has paid a poll tax. Usually it runs pretty near fifty-fifty, but this year they are conspicuous among the absent, according to C. E. Maddocks, local poll tax deputy appointed by John Hart, tax collector of Eastland county. The men are kinder lagging in the job also, as poll taxes are being dragged along and promise to end in a mad rush on the last day—for, of course, all are going to pay their poll taxes. This is election year and will include candidates for every office except for President and for the United States senate. It has a great local significance, as there will be a school trustee election in April.

In explaining the law on the payment of poll taxes, Mr. Maddocks stated to a Times reporter this morning that the poll tax has to be paid, or else it is charged against the property, and if not paid by midnight of Jan. 31, one is not allowed the privilege of voting. One can pay poll tax without paying property tax, but they can pay property taxes without showing a poll tax receipt.

Husbands and wives owning property are affected alike by the law. For the convenience of Ranger taxpayers, County Tax Collector John Hart has designated C. E. Maddocks as his deputy in Ranger and those wishing to pay poll taxes will not have to travel to the county seat to pay them, but can drop in at 207 Main street, the office of Maddocks & Son, and be saved that trouble. A poll tax, carrying with it all the privileges of the vote, can be bought for $1.75 and it worth every cent of it.

The matter will then be taken into the courts on mandamus proceedings by the book company to compel Marrs to issue the requisition. The American Book company's contract, as amended by the state textbook commission, amounts to about $1,500,000.

Houston And Miami Battling For Honors In Building Progress

Special Correspondence.
ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 11.—Building construction in sixteen southern states for the year 1925 far eclipsed any other year in the history of the section. It is forecast for the year 1926 that the total of $302,507,538, against $275,241,417 for the previous year. While Florida's gain contributed largely to that of the entire South, it is noted that other states gained more than 15 per cent during the year.

The closing month of the year showed construction going forward at the same record-breaking pace, which indicates that the huge schedules for 1925 will be carried into 1926. The month of December not only gained 40 per cent over the same month in 1924, but bettered the November record of 1925 by 25 per cent.

Miami and Houston were again battling for honors at the top of the list for the month, duplicating their feat for October, when both made high records for the year. Their exceptional month's record was sufficient to place them in first and second position for the year among cities of the farther south.

Real Live Baby Is Given To The Lord

"That's my Baby," is what the Lord must have ordained when he looked down on the large crowd gathered at the Salvation Army Hall in Ranger last night, when a real live baby was given away—given to the Lord.

The parents of Dorothy Dell E. Macabee, a nine-month old baby, like the parents of Samuel, brought her to the house of the Lord and asked that her little life be dedicated to His service.

It was an impressive ceremony. Envoy Hudson conducted the service. Holding the child in his arms, while the congregation bowed their heads in prayer, Envoy Hudson dedicated the child to the Lord.

At this service two soldiers were enlisted for service in the Salvation Army. One is a blind woman, Mrs. E. E. Rhodes of the Lackland addition, who became a senior soldier, and the other is Francis Holland, also of Lackland addition, who becomes a junior soldier, both ready to go anywhere or do anything that the Army commands. Envoy Hudson also performed the confirmation for service ceremony.

"Keeper Of The Bees" At The Liberty Theatre

"The Keeper of the Bees," recognized as the masterpiece of one of the world's greatest authors, Gene Stratton-Porter, will be told on the screen at the Liberty theatre, Ranger, this afternoon, tonight and tomorrow afternoon and night.

The story, generally accepted as the greatest of Mrs. Porter's many illustrious novels, deals with the life of a world war veteran, who has been shunted from one hospital to another in a vain endeavor to effect a cure. Told that he has only a year at most to live, he walks bravely out of the Anthonet Springs hospital and directs his faltering step toward the blue Pacific. He wants at least to reach the sea before he dies. But in a little vine-clad cottage at the head of the great cliffs that front the ocean he finds "The Keeper of the Bees," becomes a bee master himself, and undergoes many thrilling experiences, not the least of which is a marriage to an unknown "storm girl" who flashes into his life for a brief hour and departs—for the time—as hastily as she has come.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

SPINSTERHOOD by Virginia Swain

BEGIN HERE TODAY: Barbara Hawley, 25, anxious to see life, jilts Bruce Reynolds, her fiance, and gets a job on the Telegraph. Adventure begins when by means of a red scarf she connects Lydia Stacy, wealthy widow, with the suicide of a prominent man at a roadhouse.

Mrs. Stacy likes Bruce. She refuses to invest in his realty development, Vale Acres, when he refuses her advances. She goes to Andrew McDermott, managing editor of the Telegraph, and tells him Bruce's

She went into the booth again, tore off the top sheet of the pad and sat down in the squeaking chair. When she came out of the booth some time later with the pad in her hand, she met McDermott on his way to the composing room. "You look tired, Barbara," he said. "Why don't you go home?" She smiled and shook her head, but she would not speak. Wells had apparently recovered from his ill temper, for he also glanced at her face and said, "Why don't you go home?" The paper dropped from her hands

Her body grew cold, but she did not close the window. At last it was growing dark and she left. There was the paragraph still, bold and black in its column: "Reynolds—Bruce and Violetta, a son, born Monday." Barbara sank down again in the armchair and buried her face in her hands. She sat very still. Outside, the wind rose, whipping leaves against the windows and sweeping noisily down the street. A gust blew into the room where Barbara sat, and caught the newspaper on her lap, whirling it across the floor to a corner, where it lay flapping against the wall.

Barbara closed the window and began to walk about the room, her hands clenched. She opened the door and listened. The hall outside was as quiet as her own apartment. She walked into Fancy's bedroom and thence to her own, aimlessly, her hands still tightly clenched. She went into the kitchen. A faucet was dripping in the sink. She seized it nervously and turned it off. A mop in the corner of the kitchen caught her eye. She took it up and began to mop the floor. Then she took all the cans and dishes from the shelves and spread fresh paper coverings. She scrubbed the sink, cleaned the silver, washed out the ice box.

As Barbara reached her desk, Jimmy hurried up to her. "Voici, madame," he said in high school French, and with a flourish handed her a gray envelope.

firm is crooked. As though to justify her charge, Manners, Bruce's partner, absconds. Much publicity is given the affair, for which Bruce blames Barbara.

Barbara's invalid mother dies. Barbara takes an apartment with Fancy, McDermott's daughter. Fancy is in love with Jerome Ball, man about town, and when Barbara tries to cure the girl of her infatuation Fancy accuses Barbara of wanting him herself.

Bruce weds Violetta Cranby, factory girl he "met" through Barbara's "loverlorn" column. Barbara, at a national Federation of Women's Clubs convention, sees Manners and has him brought back to his home town under charges. He implicates Bruce.

Barbara confronts Mrs. Stacy with the red scarf in an effort to get the widow to help Bruce. At the last moment in Bruce's trial, Mrs. Stacy dramatically takes the stand in his defense and he is acquitted.

Fancy weds Jerome Ball. Barbara, in calling the hospitals for births and deaths, almost faints when the clerk mentions a familiar name.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY: CHAPTER XLIII.

The clerk at the other end of the wire repeated the name. Barbara clung to the receiver with her left hand. Her right hand lay idle on the pad of paper, the pencil beside it.

At last she thanked the hospital clerk and hung up. She picked up the notes she had made of the other items, and went out of the telephone booth.

"Hurry up, there, Miss Hawley," called Wells. "The hospital column ought to be up in a few minutes."

She neither answered nor looked at him, but went straight to her desk and put a sheet of paper in her typewriter. She copied the items scrawled on the pad of scratch paper—the beginnings and endings of human lives. The typewriter ground out paragraph after paragraph, dry, bloodless as a market report.

One by one, Barbara marked off the items on the pad until none was left. Then she put a fresh sheet of paper in her typewriter and began to write: "Reynolds—Bruce and Violetta, a son, born Monday."

Wells almost snatched the copy from Barbara's hands. "Have to snap into it," he said to the copy-reader. "This list is late."

The copy-reader glanced at Barbara, expecting some retort. But she was walking away, her lips tight.

Wells also looked up, and seeing her absent manner, called after her petulantly. "Will you call the civic club and the chamber of commerce now, Miss Hawley? Get their weekly announcements."

Still Barbara did not answer him.

"I will, after a while," she answered. Barbara stayed in the Telegraph office until the papers came up from the press room. A copy boy laid one of them on her desk. Barbara folded it and put it under her arm. Then she put on her hat and left the office.

The streets were beginning to fill with the afternoon rush. Barbara walked through the shopping district, glancing now and then at display windows, turning corners without heed, running into passersby. Around and around she went, encircling the same blocks many times. She entered a department store and walked through the ground floor, looking at nothing.

A last it was growing dark and she turned her steps toward home. The folded copy of the Telegraph was still under her arm.

Near her apartment Barbara met several of her neighbors, the women rushing home from shopping trips, the men striding along with packages and newspapers under their arms. Now and then a toddler met one of them and crawled up his legs into his arms, with shrill cries of "Daddy."

Near Barbara's apartment house, Tommy and his kiddy car blocked the sidewalk. His blond head was bent over the refractory wheel and he was tugging at it with strainings of his chubby arms and legs.

As Barbara approached, he looked up at her. "Do you know anything about kiddy cars?" he asked, his brows wrinkled. "This one ain't no good."

Barbara tried to smile. "No," she said, "I don't." The boy was staring at her very hard. "Say, your eyes are awful big. You look just like my picture of Alice in Wonderland when the duchess said, 'chop off her head.' Do you know about Alice?"

Barbara shook her head and went on, she laid the folded newspaper on the table and went into her bedroom.

and she turned to the window. The street was almost dark, except for long streaks of western light that fell between the buildings. The kiddy car lay abandoned on the sidewalk.

A woman came out of a door across the street and called "James Allen, James Allen!" An urchin bounded around the corner of the house and up the steps. The two passed through the door into the lighted room beyond.

Somebody began to sing in the apartment below. "You Didn't Want Me When You Had Me; So Why Do You Want Me Now?" The floors beneath Barbara's feet vibrated with the ragged rhythm of music, beaten out on a mechanical piano.

Far down the street there was the faint call, "red hot tamales, red hot!" Barbara sat at the window, the paper lying on her knees. The room was quite dark. There was no movement in it, except when the window curtains wavered gently now and then.

Lights in dining rooms went out across the street, and living room windows blazed against the blackness. Barbara leaned against the sill, her chin propped in her hands. The breeze whipped the curtains about her head, but she did not brush them away.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

Then she went into the bedroom. The place was spotless, from the efforts of the maid who had cleaned it that day. But Barbara brought a dust cloth and began to dust.

The living room came in for its share of attention. Hours passed while she went over every inch of space in the apartment, wiping away imaginary spots and sweeping imaginary dust from the rugs. She picked up the copy of the Telegraph from the corner and put it on the table.

When the living room was finished, she went to the table and spread out the newspaper. Her hands were almost too cold to grip the pages. There it was, stark:

"Reynolds—Bruce and Violetta, a son, born Monday."

It was 4 o'clock when she undressed and got into bed. The Telegraph was folded under her pillow.

When she awoke, the room was bright with sunlight. She leaped out of bed and ran to the clock on the dressing table. It was nearly 10 o'clock.

She began to dress hurriedly, slipping into the first garments that came to hand. She sat down before the dressing table mirror and unbraided her hair. The reflection in the glass was wan and hollow-eyed.

She brushed her hair and added rouge. Instead of improving her looks, it only accentuated the circles beneath her eyes. She rubbed it off again.

As she passed the kitchen, she remembered that she had had nothing to eat since noon of the day before. She glanced at her watch. It was already half past 10. She put on her

Wells was occupied with a pile of copy when she entered the editorial room. Barbara looked at him nervously, but he did not look up. She turned toward McDermott's door, which stood open. He had not yet come down.

As she reached her desk, Jimmy hurried up to her. "Voici, madame," he said in high school French. With a flourish he handed her a gray envelope. She looked at it incuriously and laid down her hat and gloves before she picked it up again.

It bore a New York postmark and there was a return address heavily embossed in blue on the flap.

Barbara tore it open. The letterhead was "Footlights Magazine, Forty-eighth street, New York City."

"My dear Miss Hawley," it ran, "would you care to accept a place on our staff?"

"Your work would be the writing of interviews with theatrical people and an occasional first night in a Broadway theatre."

"Your salary would begin at $75 a week."

"Will you let us hear from you?"

The letter was signed by a name already glamorously familiar to Barbara. It was the name of a famous theatrical writer.

(To be continued.)

Friday was named after Freya, the Norse goddess of love and beauty. She was thus honored as it was believed that the gloom of the long Northern night was dispelled by her sword, whose flashing gave forth the beams of light, heralding the approach of day.

FRENCHMAN FORSEES GIANT PLANES SPEEDING ACROSS SEAS WITH FREIGHT AND PASSENGERS

The airplane of the day after tomorrow, according to the predictions of M. Louis Breguet.

By NEA Service.
PARIS, Jan. 11.—Huge, three-bodied birds, soaring in one gigantic 20-hour leap across the Atlantic—

Carrying passengers, their luggage and freight, with as great ease, comfort and security as the finest ocean liner.

Costing only one-third as much as trans-Atlantic travel costs at present—

This is the prospect outlined by one of the foremost aviation authorities in the world, Louis Breguet, president of the French chamber of industrial aeronautics and himself a leader in airplane invention.

The huge metal abutment that he depicts for the future is an invention of his own imaginative mind, but he asserts that it is merely an idea of what the large airplane manufacturers and inventors are actually contemplating. It may be years before this revolution in world air travel is realized, but Breguet asserts the far-sighted men of today.

Present Plans "Crude."
In comparison with the airplane of the "day after tomorrow" the plane of today is a crude, plodding instrument, unsafe, untrustworthy, merely experimental.

Even the airplane of "tomorrow," according to Breguet's prophecy, will be slow and insecure in comparison with that to come. But it will be a marvelous improvement over present-day flying.

While airplanes now take jumps that average only about 100 miles, the bird of tomorrow will, only a few years hence, take hops of almost 1,000 miles, at an average speed of 110 miles an hour.

That's the commercial, heavier type of plane, designed for comfortable passenger travel.

"The characteristic of the airplane of the day after tomorrow will be their lengthened hop from 1,000 miles to an average of 2,500 miles," says Breguet.

Here is his description of this huge bird:

"The machine will appear like a vast bird containing many motors, tanks, equipment, passengers and freight. That is to say that this bird will be sufficiently spacious to permit the liberal circulation of passengers and their baggage within it."

"This huge bird will have three bodies—the central body containing navigation equipment and room for pilot and commander, and the lateral bodies containing lobbies, dining halls, saloons and first-class cabins."

"The freight compartments could be set at the rear of the machine and the propellers would be found back of the single plane. The lower-class cabins would be within the forward part of this plane."

Weight 55 Tons.
"The total weight would be about 55 tons, the dead weight of the apparatus being about 20 tons, the additional weight of essential equipment and gasoline leaving some 14 tons for the passengers and their baggage."

"The commercial speed of this machine would be about 140 miles an hour and its radius of action would be about 2,500 miles."

Thus the dream of some modern thinkers for a sort of floating island in the middle of the Atlantic, as a refueling station for future airplane transports, is surpassed by the non-stop ocean flyer of Louis Breguet.

"If it is difficult to assign a date for the arrival of the airplane of tomorrow and of after-tomorrow, or to indicate the intermediate stages, it can be affirmed, nevertheless that there is nothing in the conception of each that is beyond actual human vision, and nothing in their construction that can be considered as impossible of realization."

That is the parting assurance of Louis Breguet.

Ballet To Be Danced In Courtroom In Suit Involving Dancer's Technique

By MINOTT SAUNDERS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Jan. 9.—A profound question of legal protection for creative art must soon be decided by the Civil Tribunal of Paris as the result of a remarkable damage suit brought by Mme. Jeanne Chasles, professor of choreography at the Conservatoire, against Mlle. Olga Soutzo, star dancer of the opera. The ballet director wants 20,000 francs to soothe her temperance because she says the dancer took liberties in interpreting her work.

While both women, in their pretty way, are insisting upon art for art's sake, the suit involves many lights and shades of art. The theatrical colony, or those classically inclined, are all out of step over the delicate issue. If a painter can sign a picture, or a dramatist copyright a play, why may not a dancer control her gyrations? ask the followers of Mme. Chasles. But on the other hand, if such a state of affairs invaded art, according to the friends of Olga, who is impetuously young and charming, a composer could control his score and the inventor of the Charleston could collect damages from any flapper who lost her balance.

The dispute between the two clever women arose at a private exhibition given at the Cercle de l'Union Artistique, of one act of the "Three Sultans." The music of this piece is by Henri Busser, but the ballet was conceived, created and designed by Mme. Chasles, who undisputedly is one of the best know ballet directors of Europe.

Mlle. Soutzo was engaged to interpret the dance as conceived by Mme. Chasles. But glorified by music and art, Olga abandoned herself. Her charm, temperament and individuality came into play. The result was a beautiful exhibition of classical dancing. But, declared Mme. Chasles, horror-stricken, the interpretation was not in tune with the original conception. She felt that her reputation had been damaged.

Mlle. Soutzo modestly insisted that her interpretation improved upon the original ballet. Mme. Chasles said the interpretation ruined her work.
