Official Vote Gives Allred 40,000 Edge

State Democratic Committee Finds McCraw's Margin To Be 90,000

GALVESTON (AP)—Official returns canvassed by the state democratic executive committee showed James Allred defeated Tom Hunter for the gubernatorial nomination by 40,000 votes out of nearly 900,000 cast.

For attorney general, William McCraw defeated Walter Woodward by 90,000.

GALVESTON (AP)—Leaders of Texas Democracy headed by James V. Allred, the gubernatorial nominee, started assembling Monday for the biennial state Democratic convention.

Fred C. Allred, who has served four years as Attorney General, was preponderant among early arrivals and it was regarded as certain that he would control the convention Tuesday. A state executive committee friendly to James E. Ferguson, who opposed Allred's nomination, planned to retire Monday after the nomination of Allred and of other victorious candidates in the August 25 primary.

Ferguson's resignation as national committeeman for Texas was reported already in the hands of the ruling state committee. This paved the way for the selection of Vice President John N. Garner as the Lone Star State's representative on the national committee.

Probably the most controversial subject slated for discussion Tuesday is that of race track betting. Allred, during his campaign, advocated repeal of the statute permitting such betting and he is preparing to insist on a platform plank condemning wagering at the tracks.

The party's stand on the state prohibition law was the subject of considerable speculation. Allred is for submission of repeal but has announced that he will vote dry. The general opinion here was that both prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists finally would be satisfied with a platform calling for submission of the question to the electorate although extremists in the two factions might contend originally for an outright dry or an outright wet declaration.

Allred has been a vigorous opponent of federal control of the oil industry, such as was proposed to the last Congress by Harold I. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, and his friends stated that the platform probably would include a plank in accord with his ideas on the controversial matter.

Textile Strike Is Intensified By Dynamiting

By The Associated Press
Dynamiting of a road leading to a mill intensified the strike situation in North Carolina Monday.

Several dozen mills in the north and south, which the strike closed, resumed operations Monday.

At Cherryville, North Carolina a bomb destroyed some of the main highway leading to Howell mill, only one of 104 in Gaston county attempting to operate.

In Washington the textile mediation board heard George A. Sloan, president, explain Cotton Textile Institute's viewpoint on arbitration proposals by united textile workers.

WASHINGTON—Labor's proposal for an end to death and disorder in the textile strike brought a promise Sunday from the manufacturers' leaders to talk things over with the president's arbitration board.

Spurred by a deadline late Monday after which labor said its offer would be withdrawn, Chairman John C. Winant of the board telephoned George A. Sloan of the Cotton Textile Institute in New York. He agreed to come to Washington Monday.

Francis J. Gorman, national strike chairman, placed the time limitation upon his offer of arbitration—5 o'clock Monday night.

Wants All Mills Closed
Meanwhile, the great strike approached a climactic test, with both sides determined that Monday shall see, on the one hand, many closed mills reopened and on the other, that they shall remain tightly shut down.

To Gorman's offer was attached the condition that all mills throughout the industry be closed during the negotiations and that both employers and unions agree in advance to abide by the results.

Among those who have kept a close watch upon the development of the strike it was assumed that the proposal would prove emphatically unacceptable to the industry, which is not only wary of arbitration but determined to resume normal operations as quickly as possible.

Over the week-end, the strike call was extended to include hosiery workers, employees in carpet, plush, velvet and pile fabric mills. This left only the silk and rayon dyers' union unaffected by the general textile walkout. Its officers have a strike vote under consideration.

40,000 Workers Exempted
Dissatisfaction with NRA was said by hosiery union officers to be the cause of the walkout in that branch of the industry. Of the 125,000 workers involved, 40,000 working under union contracts were exempted.

The hosiery strike call was set for Wednesday night, but officials of the union predicted the walkout would begin Monday. They expected some difficulty in restraining the contract-bound employees from joining the strike.

"By the end of the week now opening we shall in all probability have every division of the great textile industry closed," Gorman said in a formal statement.

He charged that in South Manchester, Conn., and in Asheville, N. C., access to postoffices was being "checked" by armed thugs. A protest will be made to Postmaster General Farley asking an investigation.

Dallas Gets Centennial Celebration

North Texas Metropolis Bid Eliminates San Antonio, Houston

AUSTIN (AP)—Dallas was selected as the city for the main celebration of the Texas centennial in 1936 by the Texas Centennial commission.

Dallas' offer of $7,971,000 in "value" was adjudged the best of three bids offered, the commission announced at the conclusion of four hours' deliberation in executive session.

Houston and San Antonio also sought the location of the central unit of Texas' observance of its 100th anniversary of independence.

Cullen Thomas, president of the commission, announced Dallas was selected by a unanimous rising vote. He refused to reveal two previous ballots by which San Antonio and Houston were eliminated.

Details of the bids submitted by three cities also were not announced. In gross values, the commission said the bids were Houston, $6,507,000, and San Antonio, $4,500,000.

Representatives of Houston and San Antonio immediately pledged unqualified support toward making the centennial a success.

Total Dead Mounts To 116, 17 More Are Still Among Missing

NEW YORK (AP)—Chief Officer William F. Warms, acting master of the liner Morro Castle Saturday when fire brought death to more than a hundred passengers, told government inquirer Monday he suspected the blaze was started by an incendiarist.

Warms based his belief on the fact that an incendiary attempt was made on the boat on a previous voyage. He also thought significant the fact that the blaze was discovered in a ship locker, which "blew out" at the start of the fire.

"I think somebody put something in the locker that burned, a smoldered fire for a long time," Warms testified. "It smoked, then burst into flames."

Warms said the only other place fire broke out was in the lounge. He denied that lightning hit the ship.

ASBURY PARK, New Jersey (AP)—Two explosions in the flame-ravaged wreck of the Morro Castle Monday balked searchers' efforts to penetrate the pyre that until Saturday was one of the Atlantic's "luxury liners."

Officials decided not to jeopardize the lives of searchers for fear of the blast. They felt the fire should be allowed to burn itself out before resuming a survey of the wreck's interior.

Mother, Sister, And 21 Months Baby Trapped By Sudden Rise

The tragic story of a destructive wall of water sweeping down a small creek bed and bringing death to a mother, her sister, and a 21-month-old baby was unfolded Sunday with the discovery of two bodies 500 yards from a road crossing near Del Rio.

Bodies of Mrs. Zelma Koonitz, Amarillo, and her baby were found in the Cow Creek bed seven miles north of Del Rio. Body of Miss Lona Red, sister to Mrs. Koonitz, had not been found Monday morning.

Mrs. Koonitz and Miss Red were nieces of S. D. Buchanan of Howard county. They were also related to Waive Coats.

There was no intimation as to the fate which the trio met until relatives in Amarillo became uneasy Sunday when Miss Red did not appear to prepare for her teaching duties in the Amarillo school's opening Monday.

Shriff Jess Slaughter took up the case here and began investigation to ascertain if they had reached here after leaving for home from Del Rio September 4.

The three had gone only seven miles from the home of R. B. "Bob" Red, Del Rio, father of Miss Red and Mrs. Koonitz. Apparently they had started across the creek bed when a sudden rise trapped and swept them to death. The car was washed 500 yards down stream.

Britain Selling Large Amounts Of Armaments

WASHINGTON (AP)—Evidence that the British war office is disposing of surplus war stocks in such magnitude that sale of even a part of these munitions could alter the balance of power in a small country, was presented to the senate munitions committee Monday. Testimony came to light in a letter by the Solely Armament Company, Ltd., London, to the American Armament Corporation, saying it acted as agent of the British war office in disposing of small arms worth $30,000,000.

School Opens With Promise Of Big Total

Enrollment Figures Considered Sure To Be Above Last Year's

First day's enrollment in the city schools Monday showed that all of the buildings would be crowded this year.

Although no accurate check had been made on high school enrollment, officials said that on the basis of preliminary figures it appeared certain that the enrollment would exceed that of last year.

They said 597 had been enrolled in Junior high Monday. That was an increase of 111 over the number enrolled the first day last year.

The first day's enrollment in junior high by grades: low 5, 168; high 5, 66; low 6, 142; high 6, 65; low 7, 113; high 7, 43.

Some books were being issued students Monday, and classes will be started Wednesday.

Tuesday will be spent in organization work and checking enrollment.

Cantrell gave no reason for his resignation nor a statement as to his plans for the future.

Five Charged In Car Theft

Examining Trial Probably Will Be Held Tuesday For Oklahoma Group

Five boys and girls of Shawnee, Okla., were charged jointly Monday for the theft of a car belonging to Clyde Tingle Friday night.

The car was subsequently wrecked when it ploughed into a switch post at the railroad crossing seven miles west of here.

The youths gave their names as Willie Russell, Otis Demond, Harry Burk, Allene Moore and Ruby Gravelle. They said they were en route from Shawnee to California in a car that Demond says he bought in Oklahoma City Tuesday.

Demond, Russell, and Burk were being held in the county jail and Misses Moore and Gravelle in the city jail pending examining trial, probably Tuesday.

Two of the boys made statements officers said, admitting they took the Tingle car. R. Burk, who gave the alias of Jack Brown, made a statement to local officers to the effect that he had bought the car in Oklahoma City. He gave his age as 15 and said that he lived with his grandfather, A. J. Kincaid, in Shawnee.

Tingle's car was practically demolished. Miss Gravelle was injured in the crash.

News Behind The News THE NATIONAL Whirligig

WASHINGTON By George Durno
Left—Upton Sinclair got a million dollars worth of free publicity by calling on President Roosevelt and holding a radio-broadcast open forum at the National Press Club. He made an impression of political shrewdness on the Washington newsmen. Whether they agreed or not with his philosophy of ending poverty by inauguration of a cooperative party plan among the unemployed, they agreed that the Socialistic Democrat had ready answers of a vote-getting nature to almost every conceivable question about his EPIC program.

National party leaders are still weighing the consequences of his visits here and at Hyde Park. Astute Democrats who hoped he wouldn't be nominated are about convinced Sinclair will be a November winner who can sweep a state ticket with him. Republicans at first jubilant, are now worried about their own chances.

Administration financial directors privately are concerned over Sinclair's eastern sortie because they have been trying so hard to convince money circles that the New Deal is charted over a comparatively conservative course. The Californian left behind him a distinct impression that he and President Roosevelt see eye to eye—with the Presidential vision, if anything, broader over.

DEATHS MOUNT AS TEXTILE STRIKERS FIGHT TROOPS

Several deaths, scores of injuries and many arrests had been counted, as further violence broke out in several spots in the textile strike area. At top is shown the scene at Greenville, S. C., when members of a "flying squadron" of strikers tried to force their way through lines of national guardsmen. Several were injured in the fracas. Below is shown a group of pickets armed with clubs and iron bars at Trion, Ga., where two were killed in a clash between deputies and strikers. (Associated Press Photos)

AN EXAMPLE FOR AMERICA

Traffic authorities in London have issued a new rule, providing that no automobile horns may be sounded anywhere in the city at night. The period of silence will last, approximately, from 11 p. m. to 6 or 7 in the morning; during that time the sleep of Londoners will be protected and roving traffic cops will crack down on any driver who touches his klaxon button.
 Anyone who has lost sleep—and who hasn't?—because some goof of a motorist is unable to proceed two blocks without sounding his horn justly will approve of this regulation. The average motorist uses his horn far too much.
 Indeed, traffic might be a good deal safer if drivers generally made a practice of using their brakes instead of their horns when they saw some person or vehicle in the right of way ahead of them.
HIGHWAY WARNINGS
 New Jersey authorities, aroused by the rising toll of traffic deaths, are trying to impress the dangers of reckless driving on the minds of motorists by painting white crosses on the highways at spots where accidents have occurred.
 This is similar to the stunt Ohio once tried—putting up a wooden cross by the roadside at the scene of every traffic fatality. It was a sound and logical scheme, although for some reason Ohio has since given it up.

 A little reminder like that is bound to have a sobering effect on the not-too-careful driver. When you have passed three or four little warnings like that, in the course of an afternoon's drive, you automatically pay a little more attention to your driving.

Under The Dome

By GORDON K. SHEARER

AUSTIN (UP)—Unusually lies the head of the average state employe these days. Changing administrations mean hunting for new jobs. Many go to bed at nights wondering what they will do next January.

Re-elections of the state treasurer, state comptroller, land commissioner, agricultural commissioner, and state school superintendent, bring a feeling of comparative security to employes in their departments.

There will be a new attorney general and probably new heads for many other state departments. Texas politicians always have been good believers and staunch practitioners of "to the victor belongs the spoils." So there is strong likelihood that next January will see a new adjutant general, new secretary of state, new labor commissioner, and new banking commissioner. They head departments with many employes. If the department head changes, employe change, too.

Possibility of the return to Former Adjutant General W. W. (Ranger Bill) Sterling is rumored. He was ardently for Allred and a frequent visitor at Allred offices during the campaign. With him it is expected there will return to the service two other famous rangers—Former Captains Frank Hamer and Tom Hickman.

Dick Waters, Texarkana, campaign manager for General Allred, is being mentioned as likely to be the next secretary of state. The office, poorly paid, is one of the important cogs in an administration. In it Waters would receive half the pay he had as an assistant attorney general before he resigned to manage the Allred campaign.

BOY ADMITS ICE BOX DEATHS

labor commissioner, Robert Gregg, Austin printer, held the post under Governor Ross Sterling. He is a possibility. Labor men say that what they are interested in is a separation of boxing and wrestling supervision from the labor department.

Allred already is making plans to scatter into private law offices. Everett Johnson has returned to a San Antonio law firm, headed by his brother, Ralph Yarbrough, who proved to be one of the most successful land lawyers the department ever had, will return to El Paso, it is said, to join a leading law firm there. Sidney Benbow will return to Houston to practice, carrying out plans delayed for some time.

Which, if any, of Allred's law assistants will remain under the attorney generalship of Will McCraw, cannot be learned. Pat Dougherty may go back to the governor's office with Allred as a secretary. He filed that post for former Governor Dan Moody and Ross Sterling.

 Highway and institutional employes, who make up a big part of the state payroll, will be little affected by the change of administration. A new governor names one of three highway commissioners and one of three members of the state board of control. The board of control names the superintendents who in turn name the employes of institutions.
 Mr. and Mrs. P. E. McClanahan of Midland were visitors in Big Spring Sunday.

Rough Going In 2nd Game

Locals Take First Half Championship With 13-12 Victory

By HANK HART
In a brilliant display of relief twirling, Lee "Lefty" Baber led the Cosden Oilers to a 13-12 victory over the Coahoma Sinclairs Sunday to definitely settle the championship of the first half of the US 80 league after Pap Payne had strangled the Col-Tex Oilers into submission in the first game by the one-sided score of 17-0.

Lefty holds 'em
Lefty stepped to the mound after the Sinclairs had routed Pap Payne and Jake Morgan, and kept the Coahoms crew well under control.

Rud Mahoney had things much the way he pleased until the fifth, but each of the Oilers, with Baber as their leader, responded to the cause and succeeded in closing in on the Sinclairs.

The Coahoms tallied five times in the initial inning to take a big lead and added steadily to that during the first part of the game, but the Oiler offense started in the fifth with four runs and never faltered during the remainder of the game.

Rainey Hits Hard
Rainey was the big offensive man for the losers, cracking a circuit smash into left field along with a double and a triple, but Baber forced him to pop-up twice during his stay on the mound to rid them of their biggest threat.

Baber was in trouble only in the ninth frame when he issued Cramer a free pass and hit Mahoney

The Grid-graph device which will be operated by the high school this year should prove very interesting. It will be operated by two or three men on reports obtained by means of a leased wire direct from the playing field. It will show the player initiating the play, the type of play, the receiver and the final position of the ball. In the case of a triple forward pass, the grid-graph would indicate by tiny lights the three men involved in the play, the type of play and the successive stages of the pass.

Lamesa Has Good Line-Up

Cheer Ted McCollum Drilling Golden Tornadoes Strenuously

LAMESA—Lamesa High school's championship Golden Tornadoes will open their 1934 football campaign Friday, Sept. 24, with a game against the Class A Big Spring high school Steers. The game is scheduled for the Big Spring gridiron.

Cheer Ted McCollum has been drilling his charges strenuously in practice, and anticipated a fair season. Although he lost a number of 1933 letter men, enough are returning to form a nucleus for what may develop into a first class outfit. The team will play its home games on a new field this year. Lights are to be installed for night play.

Mrs. Chas. W. Gulkey, of Independence, Kan., arrived Sunday for a visit with her son, Glen D. Gulkey and Mrs. Gulkey.

with a pitched ball, but he bore down to whiff Jones, and Patton whipped the ball to Martin in time to catch Berl Cramer a step from third base.

Pap Patton, Pepper Martin and Rufe Morton were the big guns for the Cosdenites in the second game with two bingles apiece. One of Martin's smashes was a mighty home run in the sixth inning with the sacks empty, which started the Henningermen on a four run spurge.

Dutch Moxley began the first game with a triple to start the Cosdenites on a good lead. Moxley, a speedy all-around player, pulled several steals during the game to give the Col-Tex twirlers added worry. "Skeeter" West divided the base running honors with Moxley when he tallied five times during the day, most of them with the aid of his stolen bases.

Miller Harris and Pap Payne look hitting honors for the first game when both smashed out a home run and two singles in four trips to the plate.

Sam Sain and "Mileaway" Baker were forced to leave the game, when both players were hit by pitched balls. Sain failed to jump from one of Henderson's zippers and "received an injury on the wrist while "Mileaway" pitched his finger in front on a foul tip and reopened an old wound.

Of all the Moores who have cluttered up major league box scores since whippersnappers went out of style in baseball, the double order of merit belongs to Joseph Gregg Moore, leadoff man for the world champ-on Giants and who will do as our candidate for the National league's most valuable player honor for 1934 under any and all circumstances.

Moore's to the oft-asked question: "What holds those Giants up, outside of their pitching?" Moore is, of course, only one of the outstanding causes for the sustained supremacy of New York for the second successive year.

Moore hasn't scored as many runs as Terry or Ott. Naturally he hasn't driven in as many markers, because he is in the pace-setting and not the cleanup position. He isn't the home run king or the champion base stealer, but he combines two sterling habits, viz (1) a penchant for banging the first opposing pitch for a basehit and (2) the knack of rising to the emergency with potent attacking gestures.

"IN THE CLUTCH"

Two recent examples will suffice to show how useful Moore can be in what baseball players know as the "clutch." The first was during the opening game of the last crucial series the Giants played in St. Louis. The Cardinals had battered the great Hubbell for a substantial lead while Paul Dean appeared to have the visitors subdued. Trailing 2-3, in the ninth, the Giants had two men on base when Moore came through with a home run. Against the Phillies in the second game of a double-header, Moore duplicated the stunt, giving the Giants a sweep of the day's play and increasing their lead to seven full games over the faltering Cardinals and Cubs.

Moore belongs to the unobtrusive type whose ability doesn't get real recognition until he has been around for some time. The late Ross Youngie, John McGraw's favorite outfielder, was the same sort and he, too, came from Texas. Moore's hitting and all-around play formed one of the few bright spots, outside of the pitching, during the recent slump of the world

CHAPTER 11 GETTING SETTLED.

He turned his smiling face to Miss Green. "The cabins are pretty good," he said. "You can have mine if you prefer it, but it's no better. Mostly, I sleep on a mattress outside the wireless-room. It's lots cooler on deck than below."

"Personally," said Bowers, "I am going to use my cabin or cabins as dressing-rooms and parcel-rooms. I understand that you are a part owner. It's therefore with regret that I must report that your ship seems to have been built for the wrong."

"We do the best we can," said Flint. "Every now and then we close all the ports, batten down all the hatches and do a great extermination act with sulphur or formaldehyde. The only trouble is we don't exterminate. They seem to like it."

"The bathroom," said Bowers, "ought to have been a de luxe cabin. It is only a shower, but it has two portholes and an open transom over the door. The bolt, with which the door was formerly fastened, has been removed and the key to the lock is doubtless in the collection of some souvenir hunter."

"The bath is airy in more ways than this. The curtain, which formerly may have contained a percentage of rubber, now resembles that material which, in the best dressmaking establishments, goes by the name of 'Peekaboo.'"

"The best way," said Flint, "to bathe on this ship is to come on deck and have some of the crew douse you with buckets of seawater."

"I think," said Miss Green, "that I'll have to give the shower a fair trial first."

"I had an idea," said Bowers, "that the sleeping accommodations on the Boldero might not be as represented in the company's recent world-wide advertising campaign, so I bought two mattresses at a trading-store. They may be a little hard and a little thin, but they are clean. I bought also some pillows, pillow-shams and sheets. I thought Miss Green would probably wish to sleep on deck."

"I ought to sleep somewhere near the animals," said she.

"You pick the place," said Bowers, "and we'll do the rest."

"There is no place like this place," said she. "What do you call it?"

"The forecastle-head," said Flint. "If there is any breeze, you'll get it, and if there is, as sometimes, a strong jungle smell, it will be carried aft."

"What will I do if it rains?" she asked.

"You will go below," said Bowers, "in a drowning condition; but it is not apt to rain. It shouldn't rain for several weeks, and the sea ought to be like glass."

The sun had long since gone down behind the mountains which were back of Sinbao and the short tropic twilight was coming to an end.

"We dine early," said Flint. "Does anyone mind?"

"Do we dress?" asked Mrs. Green.

"Not the first night out," said Flint. "We borrow our manners and customs from the best English liners. In about two minutes, the 'Get Ready' gong will be sounded and twenty minutes later the 'Come eat' gong."

"And where," asked Bowers, "is the dining saloon?"

"Nobody knows," said Flint. "It was abandoned years and years ago. Captain Wong Bo has asked you to sit at his table. Except in bad weather he is always seated on deck, usually just aft of the bridge-structure; but you can always locate his table by ear."

"Is it one of those tables that rattle?" asked the girl.

"No," said Flint. "The table itself is unusually quiet. It has been very nicely brought up. The sound that I refer to is made by a cork coming out of a champagne bottle. At luncheon and dinner, instead of soup, we serve a glass of champagne. At breakfast, of course, this is optional. Captain Wong Bo has some cases of excellent champagne. We have, as you know, a refrigerating plant, and so our champagne comes to the table in a bucket of ice."

"I have an awful feeling," said Bowers, "that this voyage is not going to last long enough."

"By the way," said Flint, "do either of you play bridge?"

"That will be good news for the skipper," said Flint. "I play a little when I get a chance, but it is his particular madness. When he can't get a game, he is always dealing experimental hands and working out end-plays."

It was extraordinarily still. The ship's progress was hardly fast enough to create a ripple. The burred thudding and clattering of the engine seemed rather to accent than to disturb the stillness. You might have thought, so still they were, that the birds and the animals were all dead.

Then suddenly the air began to throb with a soft musical and continuous vibration. It seemed to draw nearer and nearer and to swell and swell and then to recede and to wane.

The "Get Ready" gong had sounded and Ivy Green announced that although she was not going to dress for dinner, she was going to change Bowers showed her where the cabins were, her luggage and the showers.

While she was changing, he located the cabin steward, tipped him handsomely and told him to carry the mattresses to the forecastle-head and make up two beds.

Later that night he succeeded in overruling Miss Green's objections to the arrangement which he had

DETROIT GREET'S ITS TIGER HERO

"Except for Flint and me," he said, "there is nobody on this ship but Chinamen. A Chinese sailor can be one of the most unpleasant things in the world. Your bed is right up in the butts. Mine is well aft and cross-wise to the ship."

"I don't snore and I don't annoy young women who dislike me. Aren't you perhaps flattering yourself a little too much? The facts are these: you're in my employ, therefore you're under my protection and I am responsible for you. I am going to protect you whether you like it or not."

"You're a pretty girl on a ship full of men, mostly young and mostly bad characters. No one is going to annoy you or molest you in anyway, and that goes for me too."

People in the tropics who make a habit of going to bed late are people who can get along with a minimum of sleep. Daylight itself is the universal alarm clock.

That first night out, Ivy turned in at 9 o'clock. She had changed in her superheated cabin to a suit of men's pajamas and a wrapper. It was a black night, and it was not without difficulty that she found the way to her reservation between the captain and the extreme bows of the ship.

She shed her wrapper and tucked up. The sea was glass smooth, but there was a long slow majestic ground-swell. The black triangle of the Boldero's bows was a long time in completing each slow rise and fall. There is nothing that could be called a breeze except that created by the Boldero's four knots an hour.

Ivy lay on her back and looked up at the stars. A sheet covered her lightly and was perhaps too much covering; but toward morning the temperature in those seas nearly always dropped a little, and the thin blanket which Bowers had provided would come in handy.

She was reconciled to the sleeping arrangements. Bowers' bed was made up aft of the captain and she admitted to herself that she would have been nervous to lie out on the deck with no one near.

The Chinese crew on the Boldero had not made a favorable impression on her. It takes all kinds of Chinamen to make the race and among the Boldero crew some of the lowest types could be recognized at a glance. Unrestrained and without fear of consequences, they were the kind of men who would stop at nothing.

If Bowers had not been an animal murderer she would have liked him from the start. She could not but believe that he was honorable, and that his promise to protect her was valid. Presently she heard the sound of his slippers and feet. One of the tigers growled warningly rather than menacingly as he passed and one of the long-legged birds said something to the others about his passing.

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) clear has fair cause to claim relationship to the New Deal. Federal Emergency Relief Administration Harry Hopkins has been attempting to put into effect piece-meal over the whole country the same general plan which won Sinclair his California nomination. Substantive-homestead projects — which Hopkins prefers to call "home farms"—already are under way in many localities. Canning and manufacture of mattresses and furniture by the unemployed for the unemployed is under way. Shoe manufacture is in the offing. A cooperative unemployed community plan is under way in the District of Columbia. Hopkins has given complaining private industrialists the same answer that Sinclair makes—that the unemployed no longer furnish them a market and that the manufacturers should rejoice over any more which makes the out-of-lucks self-sustaining, thus lightening the tax burden. Soldiers— When Congress meets next January there are prospects of a scrap between the Army General Staff and the men directing the CCC camps. The national legislature is going to be asked to make the CCC a permanent proposition which will take care of about 300,000 boys annually who otherwise would be jobless. Generally speaking, our military leaders applaud this idea. In a sense it gives the country a semi-military reserve upon which to draw instantly in time of trouble. But the Generals are going to make a counter-proposition. They are set to suggest a Civilian Conservation Corps with a strength of 250,000 men. Then, they would like to see the regular army increased by 50,000. The staff theory is that the CCC boys get physical conditioning and discipline but they don't learn "squads east" and how to handle a machine gun. This would have to be taught them before they could be battle. Therefore, it would be just as cheap—probably cheaper—to enlist 50,000 of the unemployed youngsters in the Army and teach them the tricks of war. The pacifists will be on hand to squawk long and loud. Politics— Politics of Rep. Joe Byrnes of Ten-

Begins Third Year

Melvin J. Wise, minister of the Church of Christ, commenced his third year of service in Big Spring Sunday, being called by the church to act as minister for the ensuing year. During his ministry the church has conducted several mission meetings and held six revival meetings, two of which he conducted himself. Two more are being planned, one of them to have as speaker, Horace W. Busby, foremost evangelist of the Church of Christ, who conducted a revival here this summer. During Mr. Wise's ministry more than 150 people have been added to the church roll. Of these 74 were added by baptism and the remainder by restoration and placing their membership with the local church.

nessee say he already has over 30 per cent of the old Democratic House membership pledged to support him for the Speakership. At this stage of the game, if this figure is accurate, it would appear the Democratic Floor Leader is an odds-on bet to succeed the late Henry T. Rainey. Byrnes' campaign managers would like to see him elected Speaker without being forced to do any trading. In common with most candidates for political office, however, Byrnes probably will be forced into deals involving the Democratic Leadership and the chairmanship of the House Rules Committee.

Rep. William B. Bankhead of Alabama on the surface appears to be Byrnes' chief opponent for the Speaker's chair. Oldtimers around Congress don't think it would be hard for Byrnes to make an arrangement with Bankhead whereby they would pool their support and win on a ticket that would elevate Byrnes to the rostrum and make Bankhead majority leader. This, of course, would give the South both top jobs—something which couldn't happen very often. As a sop to the North and West the Rules Chairmanship would have to go to one of these regions. Rep. John J. O'Connor, of New York, brother of the former law partner of President Roosevelt, is a likely prospect in such a combination.

Kilkenny— Today you'll get the answer from Hyde Park as to the future of NRA. The explosive General Johnson is calling on the President to find out whether he or Donald Richberg wins in the matter of reorganization—or whether there will be a diplomatic compromise saving faces all around.

The business of revamping NRA has given FDR one of his most delicate problems. Just when he thought everything was set to put Richberg in to carry on, Johnson kicked over the traces. Smiling blandly in public, these two straitlaced bosom friends have utilized every available indirect publicity source to fight like two Kilkenny cats. The man who loses has friends who'll not let him take it with a song.

Elba— Is Hoover aiming at the presidency in 1936? His intimates insist that about 15,000,000 votes were cast for him personally in 1932—that any other opponent of FDR would have received 15,000,000 votes less than Hoover received. They say that this represents Hoover's strength. He is titular head of the G. O. P. and will remain so until the national convention nominates a candidate. His friends assert that he controls a majority of the National Committee.

So they sum up the situation by saying, "If Hoover doesn't get the nomination he will name the man who will." NEW YORK By James McMullin

Flames— The battle plan of the anti-New Deal generals in New York is just about set for the pre-election campaign. Big business and financial circles feel that the make-up of the next Congress is a matter of life and death to them and they're set to fight as never before to put over a conservative victory regardless of party labels. They are convinced that the President's plans to convert recovery measures into permanent reforms must be blocked in 1935 or their place in the sun is lost forever.

This last ditch mood is comparatively recent. Up to a month ago many New York leaders still felt that Mr. Roosevelt would eventually shift his course to the right and give them a chance to go places in their accustomed manner. They were heartened by the selection of Joe Kennedy as SEC chairman and by the relaxation of NRA enforcement. They wanted a conservative Congress this Fall but they weren't terribly hot up about it. They figured they could exert successful pressure from within the administration via such agencies as the Industrial Advisory Board and conservative Democratic leaders in the Senate. A number of them shrugged off the President's ideals as a mere matter of political expediency to be eased overboard when the time was ripe.

The Green Bay speech shocked them out of their dreams like an icy shower. Determination to smash the New Deal for keeps has been the backstage watchword ever since. Dozens of influential recruits—passive up to then—have rallied to the cause. The Douglas and Stark resignations have also helped mightily to fan flames of conservative rebellion.

Subtle— Wall Street realizes its unpopularity and will remain as deep in the dugout as possible. But don't think its offensive will be confined to such obvious measures as promoting the American Liberty League and contributing to Republican campaign chests.

Its most significant and probably most telling weapon is far more subtle. It involves painting a psychological picture of the New Deal as a complete flop—to answer every New Deal claim of improved conditions with evidence to the contrary—not merely by political speeches but by the more impersonal and effective method of letting poor corporation reports, and markets and greater unemployment speak for themselves.

Here are a few shots from the anti-Roosevelt locker. Some have already been fired and others will be between now and November. Watch for them.

1. The New Deal is supposed to have increased employment and purchasing power. But U. S. Steel and Republic have reduced white collar wages and several railroads have fired a number of employees. Other large corporations will follow suit on the ground that poor business prospects demand rigid economy.

2. The stock market is weak and thin and likely to remain so for a while—largely because of an unofficial buyers' strike among large traders. As a barometer of business it will register stormy weather.

3. Depression talk is the keynote of business conversations. One authority privately remarks that the talk exaggerates actual conditions by two-thirds. The more it's spread the more stagnant business will remain for the next two months.

4. The government will get nowhere in its efforts to promote credit expansion. Nor will there be any important flotations under the Securities Act before November.

5. Government bonds are likely to soften some more from slackened demand—not dangerously, but enough to arouse uneasiness about the soundness of Federal credit. The Treasury has had more trouble arranging the terms of its current financing than at any time since Roosevelt took office.

6. Third quarter earnings statements—issued in October—will be discouraging. Many will show up badly against the same quarter a year ago as well as against the second quarter. In some cases—if necessary—earnings will be hidden in higher depreciation charges and such.

Face— Don't get the idea from this that a group of big bankers and business men have solemnly sat and decided on these things as a matter of united action. Key brains don't work that way and much of the stagnation is due to authentic fear. But that fear is being skillfully stimulated by the super-cautious attitude—easy to assume—of financial bellwethers.

The anti-New Dealers want a blue October and the administration who have to step lively to counteract their influence. A leading Wall Street—asked if tactics designed to lower earnings and weaken security prices wasn't a case of cutting off the nose to spite the face—replied "If we don't kill off the New Deal now we won't have any face left to spite."

Background— Here's the inside of the Washington vs. Wall Street maneuvering-part of the picture just described—on the terms of the Treasury's new offerings. The New York Clearing House banks got together and firmly agreed they wouldn't care to buy new government bonds that ran longer than three years. The Treasury—first having decided to cover September and October requirements ($1,725,000,000) all at once to avoid a financing controversy in the heat of the political campaign and also to clear the track for inflationary measures if needed—wanted a small part of the issue in two year notes and the bulk in five year bonds.

The tug of war has been strenuous. Earl Balle-Seligman partner who served as Morgenthau's aide for a while—has been asked to return to the Treasury presumably to offset the Douglas retirement.

BAYONETS FLASH IN NEW TEXTILE STRIKE OUTBREAK

As deaths increased in clashes between troops, strikers and workers in the textile strike area, marauders were called into action at strategic points. At top guards are shown breaking up an incipient battle in which five were injured at Greenville, S. C. Below strikers at Macon, Ga., are shown ducking bullets fired after they had overturned an automobile bearing office workers to the Bibb Manufacturing company. (Associated Press Photos)

With reference to capital and labor he said, "We must keep the wheels of industry moving and at the same time give due consideration to our employees for one can not get along without the other. We are ever moving forward, even under present conditions."

Certain employees will receive a raise in salary. Each employee in his turn arose and gave his impression of the corporation and its officials, expressing himself without reservation and at the same time giving feeling of complete understanding so necessary to efficient work was displayed. Plant A Bed Of Hyacinths This Fall

Hyacinths are the most neglected bulb in the garden of all the wealth of spring blooming bulbs and one of the showiest and most satisfactory. They are perfectly hardy and long lived in the open ground, but because of their common use as house or greenhouse plants, a widespread belief that they are not hardy prevails. They are perfectly hardy and grow as easily as tulips or daffodils outdoors.

By their stiff and formal heavy spikes of bloom, they are ideally fitted for formal beds, as they grow remarkably even in stature and size from newly planted bulbs. After their first year of bloom they take on a different character outdoors and produce smaller and more numerous spikes of much more grace and fewer flowers to a spike. The reason for this is that they are assuming their natural habit. They do not make huge blooms after the first year, but are big enough to satisfy anybody. The Holland bulb growers raise their bulbs for sale and to develop the largest possible flower production. Buds of tulips and hyacinths are pinched out as soon as they appear, so that the whole strength of the plant may be thrown into the bulb. In this manner the bulb when imported produces its maximum bloom. The hyacinth in its looser spikes is much more graceful than in its heavy spiked form, but is not so formal. The smaller spikes of old planted bulbs are beautiful material for cutting, for which purpose the heavy formal spikes are not at all adapted.

The hyacinth requires the same soil conditions as the tulip. It should be planted six inches deep from the shoulder of the bulb and not closer than six inches apart in the bed. Eight or ten inches is better. Hyacinths need a mulch of some light material, as they come through the soil very early in the spring and if unprotected the opening blunt-nosed spike sometimes catches rain and a sudden freeze may damage the spike. A light mulch which can be readily removed and replaced obviates any such difficulty. Hyacinths should not be given any manure in the soil. They ripen their foliage much earlier than either tulips or daffodils, and therefore are more conveniently handled garden subjects, as annuals may be planted over the beds or the bulbs may be dug in time to use the beds in regular garden operations. The named varieties will give fine bloom outdoors, but unnamed varieties purchased either to color or in mixture are the best for bedding. Catalogues list the bedding grade, which is more practical than the named types.

It's time to take down the screens

MOST of us hate to see Summer go. We miss the freedom that comes from being out-of-doors. We dread being bottled up in heated houses—wearing heavy clothes—fighting colds and all the impositions of Winter.

Since we have to live indoors, let's be gay and make indoors attractive. A new rug will brighten the living-room and the one it displaces can go upstairs to cheer up a bedroom. Some colored curtains will accentuate the pale winter sun. A new kitchen range or sink will take the gloom out of that much-used workshop. Some comfortable chairs will help you relax during the long evenings.

A little money will go a long way today in renovizing your home. Just watch the advertisements in this newspaper—there are amazing bargains in furniture, lamps, curtains, rugs and kitchen equipment. You're always more certain to get full value for your money when you buy products advertised by dependable merchants and manufacturers.

ter, Miss Christine Brown. The groom's brother, Grady Acuff was the best man.

Mrs. Acuff wore a green silk crepe frock with green accessories. For flowers she wore an orchid-colored corsage on her shoulder. Her going-away suit was a blue wool swaggar outfit with matching accessories.

Only intimate friends and relatives were present for the wedding, which was held in Mrs. McMillan's home because the bride had stayed there through two years of her attendance at high school.

Due to illness Mrs. Brown was unable to attend and immediately after the ceremony the couple left for the Brown farm to visit with the bride's mother before their departure for Carlsbad Caverns.

The bride and groom were both graduated from the Big Spring High School. She is in charge of the Ready-to-Wear department at Montgomery Ward & Co., and he is employed by Piggly-Wiggly Grocery.

They plan to make their home with the groom's mother, Mrs. Marie Acuff, temporarily.

Niagara Falls Suicide Record Is Equalled

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., (UP)—Niagara Falls "suicide record" for a single day was equalled when two men leaped to their deaths within an hour of each other Sunday. The first man was believed to have been Joseph H. McGregor, a Canadian war veteran. Hundreds of persons witnessed the suicide of the second man, who was not identified.

Throughout the year, wives are separated from their mates. They continue to live in the homes in which they were born. Year after year even until death, perhaps, if Kuan Ying, Chinese equivalent of the stroke, be unkind, they live on with their parents, the husband with his.

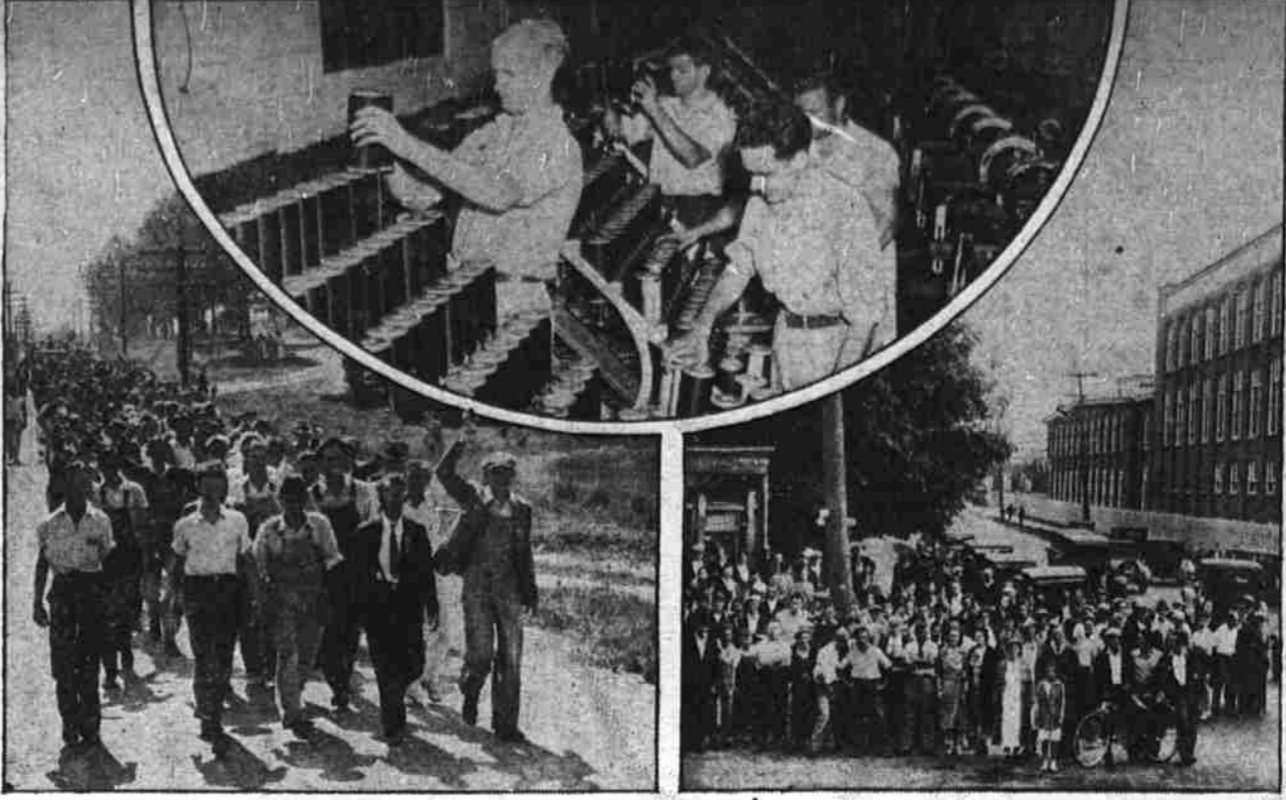

The suicide pact in which these nine girls sought release from the bondage of this wierd tradition was the first in 15 years, but it was nothing new to the Hweianese.

For centuries the youth of Hweian has rebelled periodically against the custom. But age, in China, is power and every revolt has been sternly suppressed.

The last similar suicide pact was several decades ago. According to one of the oldest residents of Hweian, 16 girls brides filed this ultimate protest against this unnatural custom by diving together in a leap from the same wall to the same spot of the sea-washed rocks. Of the nine girls who died together in this last tragedy, seven were blood sisters and cousins. They made elaborate preparations for carrying out the fateful pact. Each made herself a new dress, all of the same material, the same cut, the same color. Stealing furtively out of their homes at night, they met in the moon-thrown shadows of the city's North Gate. There they donned their death robes. Climbing to the top of the deserted city wall, the nine bound themselves together with rope. They looped the line about their waists. They lashed their wrists one to the other and bound their ankles together with a chain.

The next morning their battered bodies, pounded by the surf, were discovered on the jagged rocks be-

TEXTILE STRIKERS PUSH CAMPAIGN TO CLOSE MORE EASTERN MILLS

In some sections of the textile strike area, strikers went on the march to force fellow employees to leave their looms. At left is a throng of workers marching to a thread mill at Gastonia, N. C., to shut it down. Such a roving band as this was responsible for workers in the thread mill (center, above) putting away spools on their machines as the mill found itself unable to operate in the absence of "key" workers. New Bedford, Mass., one of New-England's most important textile centers, was crippled as mill workers (right) stood idly in the streets. (Associated Press Photos)

Childless Chinese Brides Who Plunged Into Sea Died Martyrs To Fantastic Marriage Custom

HWEIAN, (UP)—Nine young Chinese girls, who roped themselves together and leapt into the sea from the wall of Hweian, died as martyrs to one of the world's most fantastic marriage customs. It is enforced only in this Fukien coastal city, where brides for centuries have been forbidden permanent residence with their husbands until after the birth of a child.

Only on the "Festival of Tath Chao" on the seventh day of the Seventh Moon, when two legendary Chinese lovers cross the Milky Way for their annual reunion, are childless wives permitted reunion with their husbands.

Mrs. Allen Hodges returned Saturday evening from Mexico, Missouri, where she was called by the death of her mother, Mrs. Alonzo Pearson.

$10,000 Prize-Winning Novel Among Others To Be On Public Library Shelves; Fall Books Beginning To Come In

If a sparrow is the sign of spring, a book is the sign of fall. School books for the youngsters; new fiction or biography for the grown-ups.

All of which is to say that the Public Library is taking on a new lease on life, now that the dog days (and were they doggy?) of summer are past and one becomes really again interested in the world round about.

Mrs. B. T. Cardwell, librarian of the Public Library at the corner of 4th and Scurry streets, announces that the first shipment of new fall books will be on the shelves Wednesday afternoon.

Among these will be the new Atlantic Monthly $10,000 prize-winning novel "Dusk at the Grove," by Samuel Rogers, first American to win the honor of winning this prize. "The Foundry" by Albert Halper, one of those novels on the subject of economics now sweeping the country; Hugh Walpole's "Captain Nicholas" and Caroline Miller's popular "Lamb in His Bosom."

New reprints will include a western by Edison Marshall, "Green Pack"; "Shifting Sands" by Sara Ware Bassett; "Three Roads from Paradise" by Larry Barretto, and "The Barrels of Wimpole Street" by C. Lenanton.

Mrs. Cardwell announces that all children's summer cards are now due and that 2 cents a day will be charged on books kept out. Parents are urged to look into this matter and save themselves the cost of fines.

Another change effective the first of September is that membership cards can not be transferred from one person to another. The library dues of 50 cents for six months or one dollar for a year are reasonable enough, said the librarian, for any book-loving person and there is no excuse for lending cards. It is seldom done in other libraries and the practice has been so greatly abused in Big Spring that it has been discontinued.

The library is open every afternoon from 3 until 5.

Mrs. Homer Robinson plans to leave Tuesday for El Paso to meet her daughters, Mary Frances and Stella Monte, who have spent the summer in Los Angeles. They will return to Big Spring Wednesday.

Real Book Store Established In City

Big Spring has a book store at last.

E. L. Gibson of the Gibson Office Supply Co. has added adult and juvenile books to his stock and already the books are showing that a healthy demand for reading exists in this community, he says.

The books for adults run to historical and western fiction. Most of the books are reprints selling at 50 and 75 cents with one shelf devoted to dollar books. The dollar books include reference books. Elbert Hubbard's scrap books are among these.

The juvenile's shelves are well filled with series of books, from Louisa Alcott for girls to western and adventure stories for boys. Stamp albums and books regarding stamp collections are on these shelves.

Mr. Gibson does not have a circulating library, as some have reported. The books are for sale only. Mr. Gibson says that he may put in a circulating library later, if he decides it will pay him to do so; at present he is carrying books to meet purchasing demands of his customers.

Mr. Gibson is now jobbing school supplies at points as far from Big Spring as Post and McCamey. He also sells school supplies at retail prices.

His regular stock includes greeting cards with as much of an assortment as one could find in Fort Worth and Dallas, a good selection of party tables and prizes, also an unusually large line of framed mottoes such as "Trees," "My Friend," "If," "The House by the Side of the Road" and "Mother."

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Amos went to Carlsbad Sunday to visit their two children, Violen and E. M. who are in the Sanitarium there and found them wonderfully improved, they said. E. M. has gained 8 pounds and Violen, 7 pounds. Both looked so well that their parents hardly knew them.

A Brand New SEASON

SEPTEMBER marks the opening of a brand-new season in this business of running one's life. Back home—back to work—back to school. Time to take stock of most everything, isn't it? What's needed for the house, for the children, for yourself? . . . At least a dozen spending decisions to be made very soon.

How about choosing a school for the youngsters? (It's not too late even now.) And school equipment, too—pen-and-pencil set, typewriter? Then don't forget new linens and towels for the house—and bathroom supplies, of course. Perhaps the pantry wants restocking. And you are going to redecorate at least one room, aren't you?

Whatever your needs, the advertising pages of this newspaper will help you decide wisely and spend wisely. You can depend on advertised goods and services . . . for if they didn't represent pretty worth-while values, the sponsors couldn't keep on advertising and selling! Read all the sales messages in this newspaper. They have something worth-while to say to you.
