THE STATE LINE

IRIBUNE

"OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF PARMER COUNTY"

SIXTY-THIRD YEAR

It has been said that the good a person does is oft interred with their bones and that the evil they do lives long after. Of course the question is: what is good and what is evil? In our opinion anything that will take away the hard won freedoms of the American Republic is ultimately evil. However good the aim, if the result is less personal freedom for our citizenry, then it is not Using this line of thinking we will comment on Governor Dolph Briscoe's remarks to the State Legislature as he presented his proposal for restructuring the State's system of public schools. Mind you, we consider Briscoe's proposal the lesser of a number of evils that have been put forward by various pressure groups, but wish to point out how we consider the pursuit of good ultimately living long after as an evil. To quote from Briscoe's published statement: ... "It is a proposal to raise the floor of educational excellence in this State. It is a proposal to guarantee quality education to every child in Texas, regardless of the income of his parents or the wealth of his community.

"...It should be obvious to everyone interested in school finance that Texas has an inequitable school finance system that has been described appropriately as a 'tax high-spend low' system for school districts poor in property wealth per pupil, and a 'tax high-spend low' system for school districts rich in proper-ty values per pupil. Within this framework, it should be apparent to all that the provision of quality educational opportunities is directly and indisputably linked to the ad valorem tax base of local communities.

"It should also be evident that a solution to our school finance problem has two dimensions: (1) the equitable distribution of state aid in relationship to identified pupil needs and (2) the distribution of state aid to local school districts in relationship to the ability to raise local revenue through ad valorem taxation."

Let us now substitute "Federal Government" for "State" and "Community" and we have the blueprint for Washington ultimately pre-empting ALL school taxation and doling same back to the states and local districts as the Washington Wizards deem proper. There is no argument that with the Federals' small contribution now, they are calling the tune to both the state and the community. Think how much under the Federal big brother control we would be if ALL school monies flowed from Washington.

Of a necessity, this program would be a significant factor in the eventual demise of local school control. The founding fathers in the Constitutional Convention of 1788 tried to set a balance between the power of a Federal government and a government similar to the Articles of Confederation. The result was the American Republic in which the power of the Federal government was supreme in some areas and the States and the local communities were paramount in others. This was embodied in our "Constitution" and eventually produced a country that maintained individual liberty at the same time it was providing the world's standard of living. Now while we agree that the AIMS of quality education are laudable, we think it would be better to be slightly undereducated in a Republic, as many of our forefathers were, than be the smartest puppet in a regimented society. In theory if you are looking for perfect equality in all matters then the socialistic systems are alluring. However, history has written loud and clear that socialism DOES NOT produce this perfect equality and that only the American Republic has come as close to this ideal as has ever been achieved in mankind's recorded history. You see, the regimented socialistic societies have all foundered on the human factor. It was only the American dream that gave free reign to the human individualism within each person that produced a

Registration Scheduled For Texico Kindergarten

Jim Rogers, principal of Texico Elementary School, this week announced that dates have been scheduled for registration for the Texico Municipal School Kindergarten.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. MDT Monday, April 14. Classes will continue through May 23.

Only children who will be in the first grade in August, 1975, and live in the Texico district will be accepted. Parents are urged to bring their child's birth certificate to registration. Children being registered must be six years of age before November 1, 1975.

"I would suggest, if you do not have the necessary immunizations," commented Rogers, "that you begin them as soon as possible. Your child must have the immunizations before the start of school next year anyway.'

Kindergarten children will be permitted to ride the bus to school provided the space is available. Parents will need to pick up their children because the kindergarten classes will dismiss at 12 noon. Kindergarten hours will begin at 8:30 a.m. and classes will be conducted in the southwest room of the south gymnasium.

The school will furnish some of the supplies to be used by kindergarten students. Parents must furnish the following: beginner pencil, crayons (eight colors), tablet (wide line), scissors (blunt point), white paste (not liquid), Kleenex (small box), and small box for

by Herb Evans Soil Conservationist

Charles Hough of the Hub community was the outstanding conservation farmer of Parmer County in 1974. Charles grew up in a conservation-oriented family. His father, Spencer Hough, became a cooperator with the Parmer County SWCD in 1950. This was at the time irrigation was first being developed seriously in the county. The Houghs depended heavily on the district for assistance in developing an irrigation system.

Charles, who is now 34, learned at an early age that the district could be trusted and depended upon to give sound and valuable assistance.

The outstanding farmer took over the entire operation of the farm in 1962. It is now genuinely a family operation. With the able help of his wife, Luann, 9-year-old son, David, and 12-year-old daughter, Dor-

This helped reduce water wastage, but the soil erosion was not helped and water was still begin lost through percolation. Coupled with this, Charles ed these results of his convertwas making in excess of 15 tractor trips across his land per year. These were his standard operating procedures. No matter how inefficient they were, they were the best the technological community had to offer. At least one full time farm employee had to be hired to help Charles perform the work in a timely manner. This was the ultimate compliment. They expensive because experienced are starting to copy him. employees demand premium wages and fringe benefits in Parmer County.

Late in 1971, Charles lost his employee and was unable to obtain additional hired help. He managed to survive that year and the 1972 crop year with the help of a neighbor. In the fall of 1972, bad weather began and continued until planting time in the spring 1973. There was no chance for seedbed preparation before planting. As a result the crop was planted directly in heavy residues. Charles had no opportunity to farm the "normal way," the way he was used to.

When the crops were harvested he was in for a shock. The yields were not significantly different from previous years and his operating expenses were very significantly different. Net profits soared.

The only problem he encountered was how to irrigate in the furrows through the heavy residues. However, he kept thinking of the other expenses that were alleviated.

He took his problem to the district. After an intensive and comprehensive study he was given several alternative solutions. Charles decided a series of center pivot automatic sprinkler systems would reduce his irrigation water wastage and would permit him to have a minimum number of tillage operations with no water application problems.

The heavy residues would also serve a double purpose. Soil erosion from both wind and water would be minimal and the shading effect of the residues would reduce soil water evaporation.

He has not kept his success a secret. He has shown his neighbors what can be done and kept other interested parties informed.

The conversion of Saul of Tarsus was an amazing event. Saul loathed the very name of Christ. He blasphemed Him and caused others to be tortured so as to compel them to blaspheme that holy name. He led his nation and the world in rebellion against the resurrected Christ - the world which had already disowned and crucified the lowly Jesus.

But as Saul went to Damascus, still "breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord," (Acts 9:1) God did a wonderful thing.

Rather than crush the leader of the world's rebellion, He saved him. Christ broke through the heavens, as it were, to speak words of love and pity to His greatest enemy on earth. As a result Saul's rebellious spirit was broken and in one moment the pitiless persecutor became the docile, indeed the devoted follower of Christ.

More than that. Saul of Tarsus, the persecutor, became Paul the Apostle. To him the glorified Lord committed "the dispensation of the grace of God" (Eph. 3:2) and "the gospel of the grace of God" (Acts 20:24). Now, he went everywhere proclaiming grace, telling men how God loved them, how Christ had come into the world and gone to Calvary to pay for man's sins so that believing sinners might be saved. The gospel of the grace of God, found in Paul's epistles, does not blame anyone for the death of Christ. Rather it presents the cross as good news. It declares that "we have redemption through His blood, THE FORGIVE-NESS OF SINS ACCORDING TO THE RICHES OF HIS GRACE" (Eph. 1:7). It says that "God hath concluded all in unbelief THAT HE MIGHT HAVE MERCY UPON ALL" (Rom. 11:32) and that "WHERE SIN ABOUNDED, GRACE DID MUCH MORE ABOUND" (Rom. 5:21).

How wonderful! By grace and through Christ's all-sufficient work of redemption, the vilest sinner may believe and rejoice in the consciousness of sins forgiven. As Paul said to the trembling jailor at Philippi: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31).

Down On The Farm

The Big Nose-Count Begins

Whether you're a Main Street merchant counting needles and pins or a conscientious individual readying New Year's resolutions, January's the traditional time for taking inventory.

This year, the National Cotton Council notes, one of the biggest and most important nose-counting operations in all the land will be undertaken by America's farmers in cooperation with Uncle Sam. The occasion: the 20th agricultural census in the nation's history.

While farmers won't be asked to tot up the exact number of needles in every haystack on their farms, they will be asked to do some extensive nosecounting that stops just short of the haystack.

Questions on the census form - which incorporates suggestions from farmers themselves - range all the way from the age and sex of hogs and sheep on the farm to the number of acres on which chemicals were

The census doesn't reflect any undue nosiness on the part of Uncle Sam, but it does indicate the continuing importance of agriculture to the nation's well-being. Agriculturists say it's an essential apparatus for gauging the present condition of U.S. farming and determining the prognosis for its future. Data collected in the census form the basis for USDA programs, federal and state legislation, farm organization policies, and numerous services provided by colleges, business firms, manufacturers, and oth-

Farming was the major occupation of the day, with 15 million of the nation's 17 million citizens living in rural

No one bothered to count the number of farms in existence back then - probably because they were the rule rather than the exception. Another reason may have been that farm folks that year were too busy harvesting crops - all of them by

Judging from 1840 statistics, apparently quite a few Americans were cotton-picking in those days. They plucked some 791 million pounds of the fluffy fiber that was the mainstay of America's economy and the source of a thriving export business. Pound-wise, Indian corn was the biggest crop of all. It amounted to about 21.2 billion pounds or 378 million bushels. Also looming large in the nation's harvest picture were 219 million pounds of tobacco, 155 million pounds of sugar, 123 million bushels of oats, 108 million bushels of potatoes, 85 million bushels of wheat, and 36 million pounds of wool.

The first census - conducted by federal marshals and their assistants — didn't go over too well in some sections of the country. It seemed a lot of folks thought the census results were going to be used as a basis for raising taxes.

By the second go-round in 1850, questions were extended to cover the size and value of some 32 crops or farm products. Also of interest to the government was the value of homemade manufactures down on the farm. As America's agriculture expanded, so did the number of census questions. The 1880 census asked 108 questions and in 1890 the number climbed to

By 1900, the farm census had documented sweeping changes in the nation's social and economic structure. Figures showed production of major farm commodities had outpaced population growth. Between 1840 and 1870, production of wheat, corn and cotton had quintupled. Between 1850 and 1900, tobacco yields more than doubled and wine production increased sevenfold.

American cheese and Indian corn had begun to be exported all over the world, and Europe had become dependent on U.S. grains. No other country was equal to the U.S. in wool production — and only Australia and Argentina offered any significant competition.

Farm statistics also noted breakthroughs in irrigation and drainage, progress in the invention and manufacture of threshers, and even the introduction of such new domestic animals as camels and cashmere goats.

They also turned up valuable information about livestock diseases and insect damage, and better knowledge of weather conditions' effect on

The 20th century brought so many changes in American farming that before long a census had to be taken every five years just to keep pace with agricultural growth. By 1960, for example, the U.S. had one-third fewer farmers than it did in 1940 - but farm output was up 50 percent. Today, real-life counterparts of Marshal Dillon no longer take the farm census. Now it's done by mail and every farmer's report is kept confidential by law. Laborious tabulations are no longer done by clerks but now are fed into electronic computers.

Despite modern devices for speeding up the gigantic inventory-taking of American farms, the job is still time-consuming. But it remains a reliable indicator of where the nation stands and where it seems to be going.

The 1975 Annual Meeting was one of the largest ever in attendance, according to Cooperative officials. A record 1,074 people were served at the meeting. The Hereford Rotary Club catered the barbecue dinner. The club will use proceeds from the dinner in community service projects.

In addition to the meal served during the meeting, $152,000.00 in capital credits were paid to REC members.

This year's record attendance could be attributed to optimum weather and the 38member Planning Committee. This committee, headed by proven to be an asset to future committee. annual meetings.

Eldred Brown and Raymond Annen were re-elected over Danny Smith and Vincent Braddock for new three-year terms. Brown is a representative from Deaf Smith County. Annen is from Castro County.

resource." He did point out that electric bills are increasing, primarily due to the "fuel adjustment charge." Although this is a term not common in the past, it has been included in the wholesale contract for some time. Anthony stated that the increase of this charge has resulted in passing it on to consumers, and would probably account for about 15 to 20 percent of their total bills. However, Anthony reminded members that this charge amounted to no gain for the Cooperative, nor the power supplier. He did report that in spite of rising fuel costs, local REC members are still buying electricity at almost 25 percent below the state average. Anthony concluded, stating that record revenues of more than $3.7 million were reported in

At the conclusion of the meeting, manager Hull said, "It is by far the best year the Cooperative has ever experienced. We had record sales and margins, served many new loads, and had better service. We are looking forward to another good year with your support."
