Steers Close Out Season with Win Over Springlake

Gerald Christian returned a Springlake punt 15 yards, giving the Steers possession on the Wolverine 45. Johnny Lovelace set up the touchdown with a 25-yard scamper and Larry McDorman drove over from the five for the score.

The touchdown came after Larry Pike had tallied from the six only to have the score called back due to an offside penalty. The score by Pike was one of two for the senior halfback in the second period and both were erased because of penalties.

His first touchdown came earlier in the period when he took a punt on the Wolverine 45 and returned it all the way to pay dirt. The five-yard offside penalty by the Steers gave Springlake its needed yardage for a first down and they retained possession of the ball.

After McDorman scored his touchdown, Johnny Lovelace kicked his fourth straight extra point and the Steers enjoyed a 28-0 lead at intermission.

In the second half the Steers scored only twice more, and allowed Springlake two TD's, as Coach J. D. Atwell cleared his bench.

The half opened with Farwell receiving and it took only seven plays for the winners to score again. The key play in the drive was a 30-yard pass from Johnny Lovelace to End Glyn McDorman. The touchdown was scored by Tommy Lovelace, when he went over from the six, his third tally of the night. The point after kick was the only one by Lovelace to fail, leaving the score at 34 to 0.

Taking the kickoff, Springlake got its first scoring drive under way. Two plays from their own 36 netted the Wolverines no yardage, but on a third down attempt, Doug Loudder unveiled the longest run of the night, catching the Farwell defense off guard and going 60 yards. He was hauled down from behind by Pike. Two plays later, Dean Jones, hard-driving fullback for the Wolverines, ran over for the score.

The Wolverines then kicked off and the Steers scored their last touchdown in eight plays. Larry McDorman was the work-horse in the drive as he accounted for 44 yards in four carries. It was a 31-yard pass from Quarterback Lovelace to Glyn McDorman for the touchdown. Lovelace kicked the extra point, making the score 41-6.

The Wolverines scored the final TD of the night early in the last period, when Jones went over from the one. The score came after the Wolverines recovered a Farwell fumble on the Steer 46.

The Steers amassed 276 yards rushing and all the yardage was evenly distributed among five backs. Tommy Lovelace accounted for 67 yards, Larry McDorman had 58, Pike netted 61, Berry ground out 47, and Johnny Lovelace compiled 43.

Then, when the sun became unbearable, heavy tints at the top, and now, even a sculptured overhang to shade the glass, is the latest thing.

Everyone has been made acutely aware of the desirability of acoustical walls, ceilings, and even floors in modern day business buildings, schools, churches, and homes.

But now our trade magazines are coming out warning that businessmen are making their offices and plants too quiet, and that the clatter of typewriters, machines, and murmur of voices is found to be conducive to work while complete silence is not! A person subconsciously gets the idea that others are working when he hears them, and decides he should be working too. That makes things easier to get done, even though he doesn't know it, the experts are now saying.

The advertising advisors to the designers and manufacturers and distributors have discovered the simple fact that Americans can be convinced they have too much or too little of everything, and they are making full exploitation of

Friona Girl Heads County 4-H Council

Election of officers was the first item on the agenda of the organizational meeting of the Parmer County 4-H Council Saturday at the courthouse.

Margaret Mabry, Friona, is council chairman. Co-chairmen are Richard Chitwood, Lazbuddie, and Virginia Rea, Bovina; Bonnie Cochran, Farwell; and Roy Donaldson, Farwell.

Junior and senior county-wide parties will be December 7 and 14. Both will be at the Hub Community Center.

The council sent a vote of thanks to Gene Rea of Bovina who donated a record player to the county clubs for use at their parties.

Council members present were James Stevens, Ronnie Sudderth, June Gay Douglas, Virginia Rea, Barbara Rea, and Gladys Dean from Bovina; Gary Mac Brown, Richard Chitwood, James Brown, Linda Gleason, and Patsy Chitwood of Lazbuddie; Jim Roy Wells, Margaret Mabry, Dixie Chitwood, and Joe Bob Johnson of Friona.

Farwell members are Roy Donaldson, David Watkins, Ronny Henson, Maurice Smith, Judy Billingsley, Bonnie Cochran, Sherri Austin, and Sylvia Smith. Adult leaders present were Joe Jones, county agent; Miss Jimmie Lou Waincott, home demonstration agent; and Sterling Donaldson and Gilbert Watkins.

Next council meeting will be January 18.

Man blames fate for all accidents, but feels personally responsible when he makes a hole-in-one.

growing plants is certain to improve in efficiency, both for economic and conservation reasons. There is a great and challenging field open here, which is being only partially solved by even our underground tile systems, which we now consider the epitome of application efficiency.

Wasting water by running it down the ditches in the form of "tailwater" is a visible and very noticeable sign of careless use of our water, but it isn't necessarily the biggest waste we have.

Over-irrigation and under-irrigation are both very wasteful, and it is amazing to determine, by actual measurement and figures, how much ground is saturated with our expensive water that no plant root ever gets to. Much will be learned in the category of efficient use.

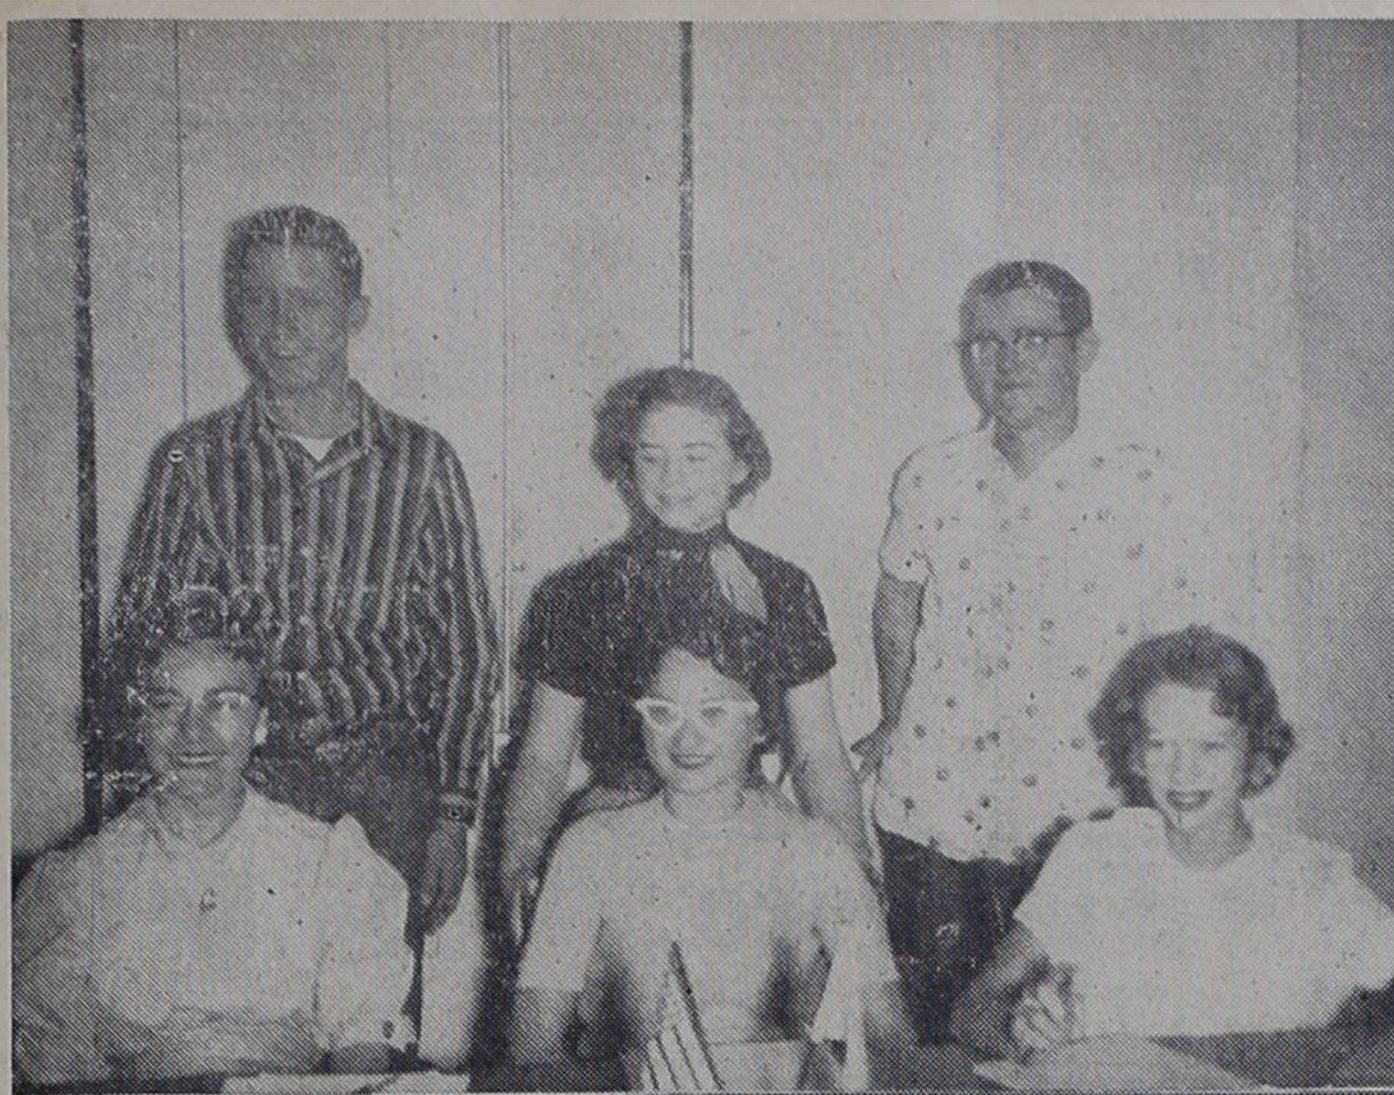

So, if we use reasonable care in using our water, and keep abreast of new techniques, the chances for extension of our irrigated economy into many more generations are not far-fetched at all.

Furthermore, just suppose that no water could ever be returned to our underground sands, and that we could precisely calculate that in 2007 our water would be gone, period. Is that such a startling outlook?

Today, we recognize the communities based on an oil economy as among the most prosperous of the Southwest. Yet the oil reserves which they sit atop of are certainly exhaustible—and, they are not renewable. At the present rates of withdrawal of crude, most of the giant fields of Texas will be greatly depleted within another 50 years. Certainly, we are no worse off than they!

And, who knows what the future will bring, anyway? Within the next 50 years, power from the atom is certain to drastically curtail the use of petroleum as a fuel. In agriculture, we certainly will have the desalting of sea water in a plentiful and inexpensive form. We may even see large scale "laboratory" farming where great amounts of food are produced in plastic containers filled with water and chemicals.

Changes are coming. We can not dodge them. Some of them

THE PARMER FARMER

W. H. GRAHAM JR.

"If you can see that your water will all be pumped out within 50 years and that the High Plains will become an 'economic graveyard,' then why do you keep pushing this as such a great place and keep making such big plans for the future?"

That's a question we have had asked us a number of times. The questioners have always been sincere, and not at all sarcastic in their queries. They just wonder where we get all our enthusiasm.

The answer isn't easy to give, but we think we have a good one, and often go to considerable lengths to explain it. In the first place, it does not necessarily follow that we will ever run out of underground water, even though our table is declining steadily, and based on average withdrawals over the past few years, the life expectancy is seen to come somewhere within the next half century.

That is true for several reasons. One is sheer economics. When pumping lifts increase and well capacities decline, the point of diminishing returns for many crops now enjoying big acreages and lots of water will be reached, and consumption will taper off proportionately, thereby lengthening the amount of time it would take to deplete our reserves.

But, happily, there are kinder forces at work which will help conserve our greatest natural resource. One is our increasing understanding and use of recharge principle that can, on an average rainfall, help to sustain moderate pumpage rates rather indefinitely, provided maximum use is made of all recharge opportunities.

The Roy Clements Family of Friona

Parmer County Farm Family of the Month

The Roy Clements family of two miles west of Friona is well deserving of the title, "Parmer County Farm Family of the Month." They and their two fine boys, Jim Roy, 16, and Don, 15, are well known for their neighborliness, for their happy family living, and their cordiality to everyone.

Taking an active interest in their community life, Mr. Clements takes time during the rush of the summer to assist in directing the summer baseball program of the Friona Pony League. Mrs. Clements is a member of the Parmer County Community Hospital Auxiliary.

Jim Roy and Don are both members of the Friona Future Farmers of America chapter. Jim plays football for the district-winning Friona Chiefs, and younger brother Don helps with managing chores for the Chiefs.

Don and Jim Roy with bulk milk tank for dairy.

Included in the enterprises on the Clements farm is a herd of quality Holstein dairy cattle. About 250 acres of the Clements farm is devoted to dairying, and the cattle of the herd maintain a production average of approximately 14,400 pounds a year.

To aid in the successful operation of the dairy, Clements depends heavily on electricity.

Electricity powers the milking machines, heats water for maintaining a sanitary operation, and maintains the milk at cool temperatures, through a large gallonage bulk milk tank. The bulk milk tank also increases the butterfat content test over can storage.

Depending so heavily on electricity, Clements has available a motor and generator to take over if power were to fail. But he is proud that service has not been interrupted since the bulk tank has been installed. The low cost power provided by electricity is the cheapest on the place, he says.

Plenty of fresh water for the sheep is the aim of this tank and trough. Here, Frank Seale, Farwell farmer, turns out some water for his large flock. Sheep are doing well on his farm.

Block salt is taken voluntarily by the sheep to keep up their requirements of this important mineral. Troughs in the background will be used for supplement feeding which is to begin soon.

★ ★ ★ Sheep Do Well On Seale Farm

Just a few short generations ago, sheep were the scourge of the range, and Parmer County, in the giant XIT ranch then, probably has a natural, though unconscious, resistance to the woolly animals, even though the plow has put the cow to rout.

But, encouraged by depressed prices for other livestock, and lower prices for cash crops, sheep are trickling back a few at a time into the Parmer County area. These lost sheep that are returning to the fold are being welcomed by a favorable government incentive program, too, that provides a guarantee of around 100 percent of parity or better for wool from their backs. That has its effect on the transition.

Last year, Charles Seale, who farms east of Farwell, had some sheep. However, that is a rather unhappy part of the story. Charles lost quite a few of his lambs to natural and unexpected causes and his venture ended up in the red. For one thing, the sheep got onto the railroad track one day, and, well, that's a sad story. Let's look at a brighter one.

Charles' brother, Frank, watched the sheep project with interest. Although its hazards were painfully apparent, he noticed that sheep held some promises, too. For one thing, "they love weeds," says Frank, "and that's the thing I noticed the most to begin with."

So, in July this year, Frank took the plunge and bought 596 head of lambs, most of them of the Rambouillet breed, that averaged about 60 pounds each. Two loads were purchased. One came from Stanton, the other from San Angelo. A sheep dealer handled the trade for Seale.

Part of the sheep were acquired at 18 cents a pound, and a later shipment went at 19½ cents. That gave Seale an initial investment of several thousand dollars. But he was off in the sheep business in great style.

Seale had the good fortune of having almost ideal pasture conditions on his farm. He did something rather unusual in turning the sheep loose in his corn patch, and discovered, happily, that they caused virtually no damage.

They would graze off the low-growing leaves as far as they could reach, and besides, would eat every weed in sight.

That went on for a good while, and the lambs did well and put on weight satisfactorily. Seale had no trouble with sickness. In fact, the vet has never visited the flock.

About October 1, the sheep were shorn, and the wool clip averaged about four pounds per head across the flock. The wool, worth about 40 cents a pound fresh clipped, is in storage in San Angelo, awaiting what Seale feels sure will be better prices.

"Wool stores easily," he says. "All you have to do is keep it dry and you're all right."

When the wool is sold clean, Seale figures it will bring about 55 cents a pound, and then he will receive the government incentive payment of 20 cents a pound on top of that. USDA has for the past year or two underwritten domestic wool production with a direct subsidy to stimulate production.

Right now, the sheep are in what probably is a sheep's "seventh heaven." They are virtually turned loose on the farm, and can choose from either the wheat or barley for fresh pasture, or can graze in a nearby field to get roughage. Seale even lets them nibble on some nearby sesame shocks which he didn't get fenced off in time to protect.

Seale says his expenses so far have been very nominal. The 25 acres of wheat and the 25 acres of barley pasture are all volunteer from this year's crop, and he wrote the cane off as a loss this year when wind toppled it.

Only slight damage was inflicted to his corn, and he feels that if he had given the grazing sheep more attention, he could have prevented that loss. He's just now making plans to begin feeding cottonseed meal as a supplement, as the natural pasture is about depleted.

Seale would have sent his sheep to market earlier, but because of favorable feed conditions on his place, he is keeping the flock long enough so that they will be ready for slaughter when he lets them go.

That will be about December 1, he figures.

They will then weigh an average of about 110 pounds, and will hit the market at what Seale hopes will be about 21 cents. The market is good right now, and should continue steady. If that pans out, it will mean that Seale will have a spread between the price he paid for the sheep and what he sold them for, plus his gain, plus his wool clip. On paper, that looks mighty good, and the gross profit could be somewhere around $6,000.

Labor, feed, death losses, transportation, and so on would have to come off that, of course.

"I'm sure sold on my sheep," says Seale, who has every intention of getting right back into the business next year. "I have always heard how hard they are to raise and how much trouble they are, but I have had better luck with them than anything I have ever raised."

The Farwell farmer refuses sheep are tender animals and often die for no reason at all. "My sheep have been as tough as anything," he maintains.

The only trouble with disease Seale has encountered has been with screw worms. Sheep love goatheads, but sometimes they get their mouth injured with the stickers, and then are open to attack by flies that carry the worms.

Seale says he has had good luck in treating and caring for his animals, though, and that he is planning on going to market with 570 head.

Most of the county allotment must, under the law, be divided among farms on which cotton was grown in 1955, 1956, and 1957. It is assumed that the county allotment will be adequate to the extent that each "old" cotton farm will receive an allotment for 1958 which is equal to or greater than the allotment established for that farm in 1957, he says.

A small reserve is set aside for "new" cotton farms, adjustment and errors.
