

POWERS MOVE TO PUT A STOP TO SEA 'PIRACY'

U.S. MISSION PROPERTY CONFISCATED BY JAPS

WHITE WINS RACE, BUT LECHE DUE HONOR IN '39

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 7 (AP)—Governor Hugh White of Mississippi had a brand new pot for his coffee today.

It was his reward for beating six other southern governors yesterday in a yacht race sailed through a rain that wet their sails and their shirts.

Louisiana was overjoyed at the result: Its governor, Richard W. Leche, is a come-and see-a-cinch to win two years from now.

In the race last year at Biloxi, Miss., White defeated Leche by 50 seconds. Yesterday he beat Leche by 35 seconds. Next year, by these figures, White should win again by five or ten seconds. But in 1939, it seems clear to all Louisianians, their governor should win by several seconds.

The other governors yesterday finished in this order: James V. Allred of Texas, one minute behind Leche; Gordon Browning of Tennessee, Bibb Graves of Alabama, E. D. Rivers of Georgia, and A. B. "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky.

Bombardment Of Shanghai Is Renewed

Flames Mark Path Of Bitter Effort To Break Chinese Lines

SHANGHAI, Sept. 8 (Wednesday) (AP)—The Japanese army today seized the huge American Seventh Day Adventist mission property in the Yangtze district, north of Shanghai, for military purposes.

Flew U. S. Flags

The property was confiscated despite the protests of its owners and the fact that the mission flew many United States flags to identify it as American property.

Japanese warships were scattered down the Whangpoo all the way from Shanghai to Wapung about 10 miles north of the city.

They renewed their heavy bombardment of Chapel, Kiangwan and other Chinese concentrations in an effort to crack Chinese resistance and pave the way for a Japanese offensive inland.

Roaring flames across all north western Shanghai lighted the path of a fierce Japanese effort to break down the Chinese resistance that has brought their Shanghai offensive to a standstill.

Naval and heavy artillery guns roared in the Yangtze, Chapel, Kiangwan and North Station districts, laying down blankets of shell fire in advance of tremendous Japanese sunset attacks on the Chinese front lines.

Crop Damage Feared From Heavy Rains

Lower Quality Cotton Seen As Result Of Sept. Downpours

(By The Associated Press)

Farmers over a wide section of cotton-growing Texas apprehensively watched heavy rainwaters drain from their fields today. In other sections lighter showers were hailed as a boon to pasture lands and to crops other than cotton.

Most fear of cotton damage was felt in the south plains area around Lubbock and in the Central West and Sherman areas. Downpours amounting to 4.09 inches since Saturday night increased farmers' fears of damage to cotton quality. The rains increased insect infestation.

South Plains Drenched

At Lubbock blurring rain dropped more than two inches last night and observers said wind and bright sunshine were badly needed to hasten maturing of cotton. Railroad dispatchers said the entire south plains was drenched last night.

Ablene reported scattered showers overnight in Central West Texas, which brought no material benefits to crops and caused alarm over the threat of leaf worm damage. Ablene's rain was more than half an inch.

Agriculture Commissioner J. E. McDonald said the Northwest Texas rains had hurt cotton and that some damage was discernible in East Texas. Central Texas, he said, escaped material damage. Tarrant county (Fort Worth) saw some benefits to its rain last night, reporting that planting, gardens and pasture lands would be helped.

In the Houston area better than three inches of rain has fallen in two weeks. W. O. Cox of the Chamber of Commerce there estimated the rainy period caused $50,000 damage to Harris county crops, mostly to cotton. The grade of the 22,000-bale crops, he said, was lowered about two points.

Widespread Fires

Fires sprang across the whole area. The commercial press building, rebuilt after the 1932 Sino-Japanese hostilities, was reduced to ashes again after it was struck by three Japanese bombs.

With the peril to American and other foreign residents drawing steadily closer from the fighting, the international settlement, the American chamber of Commerce, the American chamber of Commerce, the American chamber of Commerce.

Holiday Deaths Total Over 400

(By The Associated Press)

At least 428 persons died violently in the United States during the Labor Day weekend.

As in previous years, motor traffic again was the chief cause of accidental deaths. Fair weather and the double holiday drew motorists to the highways by the tens of thousands.

A survey by the Associated Press showed 392 auto traffic deaths in 48 states. There were 271 during the corresponding period last year.

Fifty-five drownings were reported, and 71 persons died in various other accidents. Airplane crashes caused six deaths in the nation. Three persons were believed to have perished in a plane which fell into Lake Erie near the Canadian shore.

There were 16 violent deaths in Texas. Automobile accidents accounted for 11; drowning, an accidental shooting and an oil field accident for five more.

There were 49 deaths in California alone. Thirty-three were attributed to auto accidents. Pennsylvania counted 37 dead, 21 of them motor traffic victims. Twenty-five of Ohio's 36 dead were killed in highway traffic, as were 29 of Michigan's total of 31 deaths.

Heart Attack Is Fatal To Oil Man

J. M. Yoho Dies Here; Body Sent To Ohio For Burial

The body of Joseph M. Yoho, Sinclair Oil company official of Coahoma, who succumbed to an unexpected heart attack, today had been forwarded to his former home, Lewisville, Ohio, for burial.

Mr. Yoho, 43, died in a hospital here Sunday noon, a short time after he was stricken while on business at a company lease.

Superintendent of the Coahoma district for Sinclair, Yoho had gone to the field after his wife departed for church. He was rushed to the hospital in Big Spring and she was summoned.

The body was forwarded by train by the Eberley Funeral home, and services are scheduled at Lewisville Thursday afternoon. A private service was conducted here Sunday evening, with Rev. J. Ross, Methodist minister of Coahoma, in charge.

Yoho had resided at Coahoma for four years. He had been married since 1916.

Survivors, beside the widow, are a two-year-old son, Arthur Joe; two sisters, Mrs. Myrtle Glasco of Brushy Knob, Mo., and Mrs. Nancy Dickson of Lewisville, and a brother, Charles J. Yoho of Big Spring. Mrs. Yoho's father, H. C. Smith of Chillicothe, came here to accompany the body to Ohio. Other relatives of Mrs. Smith who were here included Mr. and Mrs. Harry Zonker of Coahoma; E. E. Smith of Chillicothe, and Mrs. W. Underwood of Kermit.

TO ATTEND CHURCH MEETINGS IN AREA

Rev. J. J. Strickland, Baptist district missionary, left here Tuesday to attend three associational meetings within his district.

The Lamesa association was in session at Midway (Dawson county) Tuesday. The Big Spring association was to convene Wednesday, and the Mitchell-Scurry association was to meet at Hermleigh on Thursday and Friday. The fall stewardship program was to be discussed in all meetings.

Two offerings will be occasioned by the completion of the No. 1 Willcox.

CONVICT CAPTURED

HUNTSVILLE, Sept. 7 (AP)—Jim Merriman, 36, of Houston, one of two convicts who escaped yesterday from Eastham prison farm, was caught several miles away and was back in the guarded barracks today.

Merriman fled with T. E. Kelley 52. Prison authorities said they expected Kelley's capture shortly. Merriman is serving a life term for Brazoria county murder and Kelley is under a 99-year term for robbery.

NAMED OFFICER IN HIGHWAY ASSN.

J. H. Greene, manager of the Big Spring chamber of commerce, has been named vice-president of the Broadway of America Highway association.

Greene, long associated with the only transcontinental highway organization, has twice before served as vice-president of the unit. H. W. Stanley, Dallas, is president.

Student Rush On Opening Day Indicates Record Enrollment

Big Spring schools opened their doors Tuesday for the 1937-38 term, receiving what promised to be another record enrollment.

Although there were no figures available at noon, it appeared that high school and elementary schools would show slight gains for the first day.

Thomas E. Pierce, director of elementary education, was checking his five (white) ward schools to ascertain if his re-districting adjusted. Alteration of the old arrangement would have to be read-

Italo-Soviet Relations Menaced

Duce Likely To Send Envoys Despite Moscow's Protest

ROME, Sept. 7. (AP)—Italy, accused by Soviet Russia of Mediterranean piracy, may attend a conference on the question in Switzerland Friday rather than "satisfy" Russia by staying away.

Political and diplomatic sources said tonight that this course might be followed because fascists believe the soviet accusation and protest—angrily rejected by Rome—was a maneuver to get Italy in bad with Great Britain, France and other powers which are to be represented.

The fascists believe Russia would like to see Italy stay away from Nyon so the conference could be made a tribunal of anti-Italian accusation.

Italian acceptance of the Anglo-French invitation to the conference however, might be made conditional upon limitation of the discussions to Mediterranean waters that would exclude Russia, which has been invited.

Flimsy Italo-Russian diplomatic relations hung by a slender thread as result of the presentation and immediate rejection of a Russian demand for redress for the sinking of two vessels in guerilla submarine warfare.

The soviet union blamed Italy for the attacks.

Various Italian fascist mouthpieces asserted Italy had been about to participate in the new non-intervention talks, aimed at ridding the Mediterranean of pirate submarines, but now would reconsider the situation in the light of the Russian move.

The belief circulated in many fascist quarters that the already amicable relations of the two powers scarcely could withstand this new blow.

Relations have not been more than a formality between the Fascist and communist states but it appeared that even the semblance of diplomatic intercourse might vanish as result of the note handed to Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano by the Russian charge d'affaires in Rome.

Italian newspapers blazed with attacks accusing Russia of "torpedoing" not only the "anti-piracy" conference, scheduled for Friday but also European peace. The controlled Italian press declared the Russian note would force Italy to draw back on the threshold of the conference.

Two Nearby Tests Get Oil Shows

Magnolia-O'Daniel, W&E-Willcox Show Production

Showing of two oil tests in the Big Spring area during the holidays brightened prospects of increased production in two widely separated pools.

Magnolia No. 1 M. H. O'Daniel, 330 feet out of the northwest corner of section 34-30-12, T&P, east of the Moore Bros. No. 1 TXL, opener of the new Snyder pool in eastern Howard county, flowed at the rate of 900 barrels an hour after a 760 quart shot Sunday with solidified nitroglycerine. In three hours 270 barrels of sweet oil went into the tanks. Operators pinched the flow to 50 barrels an hour and four and a half hours later the 500 barrels storage was filled.

Coahoma Man Found Dead

Mary Nell Edwards Wins Award In Midland Event

John L. Haynes is Victim Of Bullet Wound In Head

John L. Haynes, 53-year-old service station operator, died at his home in Coahoma at 9:50 a. m. Tuesday, victim of a bullet wound in the head.

Deputy Sheriff Bob Wolf, investigating the shooting, said that an automatic pistol was found near Haynes' body. No inquest was held in as much as W. A. Jackson, Coahoma justice of peace, and Joe Faucett, Big Spring justice, were both out of the county.

Haynes had moved to Coahoma about a year ago from Westbrook, authorities said. He had been in ill health, according to reports.

He is survived by his widow and one son and one daughter. Funeral arrangements are pending. Eberley Funeral home is in charge.

GOOD TURNOVER AT MONDAY STOCK SALE

Better than ordinary turnover was recorded in the first Monday livestock sale held here Monday afternoon.

Cows, yearlings and calves moved readily as did hogs. Market was weak for ewes and wethers, and only part of the lot of wild horses sold.

However, the sale was stronger than any to date.

Next sale will be held Oct. 4 in the Greer pens east of here.

RUDY KLING COPS AIR SPEED EVENT

CLEVELAND, Sept. 7 (AP)—A garage man who learned flying the hard way—by starting as a "grease monkey" and working up—held the most prized title in American closed course racing today, because he thought fast when a couple of other fellows ran into tough luck.

In the Thompson trophy speed contest, Rudy Kling of Lemont, Ill. divided to a plane-length Labor Day victory at a burning pace when first one and then another of the leaders wavered.

It was a camera flash for the $24,000 event, closing feature of the national air races. Approximately 200,000 persons saw it, 110,000 in the grandstands and the rest on the surrounding countryside.

MAKE PLANS FOR LIONS' SESSION

Joe Pond, governor of Lions district 2-T, which covers most of West Texas, conferred with the Lubbock Lions club Monday evening on plans for the district convention next May in that city.

Accompanying him to Lubbock were Pascal Buckner, past president of the local club, and J. H. Greene, member here and former past district deputy governor.

Britain And France Bent On Action

To Determine Future Course At Conference Friday

LONDON, Sept. 7. (AP)—Great Britain and France decided today that their navies were strong enough to stop "Mediterranean piracy" without any help, and determined to go ahead with a conference on the matter with or without Italy's participation.

The decision to go ahead with a Mediterranean "anti-piracy" conference in Switzerland Friday was disclosed authoritatively after Soviet Russia had protested to Italy—and been rebuffed—on charges that Italian "Pirate" submarines were responsible for the sinking of two Soviet freighters in the sea lanes off Spain.

Informed British sources made it plain that the Italian-Soviet troubles "does not change the situation at all." This view apparently, was communicated quickly to Italy.

The feeling here was that Italy would play into Russia's hands if she stayed away from the conference. These are designed to find a way to stop mysterious attacks, some of them by unidentified submarines, on the shipping of many nations.

Fleets Strong Enough

However, whether Italy comes to the conference or not, both British and French authorities felt that their respective fleets were powerful enough to take steps to stop the "piracy" in the Mediterranean.

Morever, they intend to do so.

In one high diplomatic quarter regret was expressed that the Soviet union, by its protest to Italy, should have "rather poisoned" the atmosphere on the eve of important discussions.

The same persons, however, said they were not surprised at Moscow's action.

One reason why Italy may decide it is worth her while to be at the conference is that England and France are reported planning behind-the-scenes talks on some form of recognition of the Italian conquest of Ethiopia. Non-recognition of that conquest has kept Italy away from Geneva for almost two years.

Friday's conference of powers affected by a long list of submarine and other naval outrages against merchant ships was the latest Anglo-French scheme to keep the nearly 14-month-old Spanish war out of the rest of Europe and the rest of Europe out of Spain.

FARMER CAPTURES DESPERADO

Third-Party Talk Is Heard In Addresses Of Labor Day

Political Realignment Mentioned In Speech By LaFollette

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7. (AP)—Labor Day oratory, hailing the American workman's economic gains, echoed today a keynote of a greater voice in government for him in the future.

Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator, told a Duluth, Minn., audience that labor was on the way to control of the government.

"Labor is on the march in America," he said. "Not to a control of the government in the interest of any one class of people, but to the control of government and industry in the interest of all the people."

Talk of a realignment of political parties in 1940 also was revived in the speech-making to labor's warring forces—greater in number than ever before.

Gov. Philip La Follette of Wisconsin, speaking at Omaha, said this realignment already has begun.

Progressive Party?

"The development will continue until reactionaries are in one camp and the progressives in another," he said. "By next year in many states, and by 1940 in the nation, the old guard of both parties will be one side and the progressives on the other."

La Follette is titular head of Wisconsin's progressive party. Some have speculated that it might be the nucleus for a national labor party in 1940, perhaps with the governor's brother, Sen. Robert M. La Follette, as its candidate for president.

John L. Lewis, stocky, militant leader of the CIO, largely avoided politics in speeches at Pittsburgh and Leechburg, Penn., but he told a cheering throng that for the welfare of the country as a whole labor must become step by step enough to "take its proper place at the council tables of industry and of the nation."

Year of Achievement

Philip Murray, leader of the CIO's campaign to organize the steel industry, estimated 250,000 heard Lewis' Pittsburgh speech. He said this was the country's largest Labor Day gathering.

Lewis hailed the past year as one of great achievement by labor and his CIO. His group claims a membership of 3,718,900 and the American Federation of Labor one of 3,600,000.

While CIO and other speakers predicted greater assertion of labor's power, William Green, A. F. of L. president, reaffirmed at Dallas his support of the Roosevelt administration.

Farm Land Is Being Checked

Measurement In Compliance With Conservation Program

Supervisors took to the field today as the measuring campaign for compliance with the federal soil conservation and building program got underway.

M. Weaver, assistant county agent, said that 30 supervisors were in the field, checking on crop divisions of farmers who signed to cooperate in the program.

The supervisors will check the measurements on aerial maps for the county, and acreage will be figured by means of a special instrument. Eighteen of the maps for the county have been held back because of slight inaccuracies discovered by the state check expert.

The supervisors are W. T. El Knott, C. T. DeVany, Coahoma Rufus Gilliam, Bisco; John G. Hamack, Jr., Fairview; Eldo Harrell, Gall road; Albert Heckler; Luther; E. B. Lawley, Knott; O. J. Miller, Center Point; Cecil Phillips, Moore; and Paul Warren, Spring.

Children Re-Appear After Man Says He Caused Their Deaths

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 7 (AP)—After a man had told police that he caused the deaths of Helen Whibley, 6, and her brother, Frank, 5, missing more than 24 hours, they were found alive today near their home by their uncle, William Dillon.

The children at first appeared unharmed but Dr. John P. Turner, police surgeon, examined them and said they had been attacked.

They told police that they had stayed with a woman who said she, too, had been attacked. They spent the night at her house and were taken by a man in an automobile to the corner where they were found.

At first the children seemed unconcerned, but when they saw their parents both started to cry.

When the children were reported missing last night police picked up a man. He was questioned throughout the night and today Mayor S. Davis Wilson announced that the man had told him and police officers that he caused their death in Fairmount Park. Mayor Wilson said the man had told officers different stories as to what he did with the children's bodies.

An extensive search was started and while this was in progress the children were found.

The children seemed unconcerned when their uncle saw them. They told him they had been left on the corner by some one who brought them there in an automobile.

Mayor Wilson took a personal interest in the case after the body of Nancy Glenn, 5, was found in a mud hole in North Philadelphia last night. The cause of her death had not yet been determined, but on the theory that she had been murdered Mayor Wilson offered a reward of $500 for the apprehension and conviction of any person who may have been involved in her death.

READING AND WRITING

By JOHN SELBY

Four Light novels for the Labor Day week end—

For Mother there is a nice new chronium plated fiction job by Sylvia Thompson, the story of a group of young moderns who have been robbed by circumstance of their idealism, and who recapture it as they mature. The setting is England and France, the sophisticated side of those lands, that is. There are two or three people of real charm in the book—Peter, for example, and Charmain. There are some others who are put in so that Miss Thompson can make them whirl like Catherine wheels; she usually has a few like that.

The title is "Recapture the Moon" (Little, Brown; $2.50). Please do not read the dedication, which is too utterly clever.

For Sisiter is a short novel by a new writer, Catharine Macadam, called "They Never Get Tired" (Stokes; $2). Miss Macadam is said to be only 20, and her novel proves to be a few pages. Nevertheless she is truly a talent, and some day will probably prove that too. Meanwhile this piece about a family which has convinced itself of its artistic ability and uses this as a cloak for anything, has its excellent moments. And Miss Macadam has a sense of humor.

For Brother we have picked a novel by Hion Bercevic called "For Immediate Release" (Sheridan; $2.50). If Brother ever has "had newspaper experience" he will recognize that line; it comes at the head of most of the copy from the publicity men, and is the brisk expression of a hope that somebody will be fool enough to use the story.

Mr. Bercevic tells with gusto and due appreciation of his own cleverness how a press agent feeds his clients and others his slick nonsense so efficiently that eventually he believes it himself. Then a "big man," he becomes the eater, not the feeder, and absorbs large quantities of his own tripe.

We have assumed that Father is both a business man and a waver. For him there will be Ernest Haycox's "Deep West" (Little, Brown; $2) which is a Western that is a good deal beyond the usual run of them. This will do for reading on a quite nice beach.

School Day Theme Is Arrangement For Party

STANTON, Sept. 7.—"School days, dear old school days" was the theme dominating arrangements for the party and off-to-college shower with which Mrs. W. C. Glazener celebrated Miss George Bullock Friday afternoon at the Baptist church annex. The honoree, who is to enter school at Denton Teachers college soon, has been pianist for the Stanton school and the Stanton Baptist church for several years.

Guests came dressed as "school kids" with appropriate lunch buckets and flowers for "teacher." Geography and spelling games and a Friday afternoon school program with "speeches" and debates, furnished additional fun. The hostess was school principal and Miss Emma Jean Bassett was teacher for the group.

Miss Bullock was presented with a miniature red school house which was found to contain gifts of handkerchiefs and articles for a college girl's room.

Refreshments took the form of individual school lunches distributed to the guests. Present were the honoree, Emma Jean Bassett, Lorene Jones, Annie Marie Bullock, Marguerite Brothers, Mildred Eubanks, Margaret Straub, Eula Wright, Sammy Laws, Pauline Cox, Louise Whitson, Corinne Wilson, Miss Lela McPherson, Mrs. Eubanks, Mrs. Guy El-land, Mrs. Calvin Jones, Mrs. B. Nine-Cent Cotton Loan

Southern congressmen and cotton growers did not get what they wanted in the way of cotton loans from the government, but they can console themselves with the thought that half a loaf is better than no bread. They had asked for loans of not less than ten cents a pound. What they got was a nine-cent loan plus a subsidy to growers who comply with crop control regulations, the subsidy to be scaled in relation to market price so as to insure the grower a price of 12 cents, including loan and subsidy.

The market price of cotton is likely to depend in large measure on the extent to which the staple is withheld from the market. If farmers in general accept the nine-cent loan and stack their cotton in warehouses, it will create an artificial shortage which may send the price considerably higher than it possibly could have gone on an uncontrolled market.

In the face of heavy overproduction, it was clear that something had to be done to peg the price at a level within shooting distance of production costs. The loan plan answers that problem and at the same time provides for a form of crop control which may result, next year, in fewer bales and better prices.

It is obvious that any price-pegging must be hooked up with production control, otherwise the cotton market would be like a steam engine without a governor. And it has been pretty clearly demonstrated that voluntary acreage control is out of the question. It is necessary to make it worthwhile for a farmer to hold down his acreage. The loan-subsidy plan answers the purpose very well and it has the additional advantage of probable constitutionality.

Promulgation of the plan removes an element of uncertainty that had been none too healthy for the cotton market.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK.—Among the more entertaining young men who have been around New York in recent weeks is Count Rossi, the Italian speed boat and vermuth king.

The slim, hollow-waisted visitor is a cheery chap with a near Oxford accent, although he never attended Oxford, his education having been obtained wholly in his homeland.

"Someone else asked me about that," he smiled pleasantly. "I suppose I speak this way because I have been fortunate in knowing so many delightful Americans and Englishmen."

"What about those two fast boats you brought over?" "They are very fast," he admitted, "though I can't say which of the two I prefer. One has a shade more speed but the other sets better in the water. . . . The temperature of the water and the day always determine which I shall drive."

These craft, by the way, use identical motors, although one boat is about a foot longer. He has, he says, three motors, one being a spare.

Fought In Ethiopia

The count's full name is Theo Rossi di Montelera, a family name that goes back to the days when Italy was largely feudal and dominated by robber barons. His boats are the Aradam and the Alagi, named for two mountains captured during the recent Ethiopian campaign. Count Rossi himself was all through the campaign and took part in the assaults on Mounts Aradam and Alagi.

When we talked with him he was leaning against the rail of a "patio" some 25 stories above the sidewalks, balancing a plate of pate de foies gras and helping it along with a dram of his own Rossi martini.

Was speed-boat racing a hair-raising business? "Yes, when you capsize. Sometimes I am driven into the water with such force that I dive down 15 or 20 feet before turning towards the surface."

Was he glad to be in America? "Oh, yes, and very proud to be the first foreigner to enter the American Gold Cup races."

Life Leaves No Marks

Formerly these have been closed affairs, but foreigners are now admitted if they are sponsored by an American concern.

"It is such pleasant diversion from the year after year rounds of racing at Stresa, Paris, and other European courses."

The count, I would say, is close to five feet eleven, weighing approximately 175 pounds.

Wars and hard campaigning with dare-devil exploits in the water and air have left no trace on this young man's serene countenance.

But there wasn't a hair ruffled. He looked like a movie star on location.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

(Miss Thompson's column is published as an informational and news feature. Her views are personal and are not to be construed as necessarily reflecting the editorial opinion of The Herald—Editor's Note.)

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

To an outsider, the struggle between the National Labor Relations Board and the American Federation of Labor over the closed shop contract between the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the National Electric Products corporation is confusing to say the least.

The National Electric Products corporation, which is located at Amherst, Pa., signed a contract with the A. F. L. affiliate. It established the "closed shop," which means that any one working in that plant has to join the union.

The National Labor Relations board intervened with the opinion that the company had discriminated against the C. I. O. which has been trying to organize the same plant; that it signed the contract with the A. F. L. union before an election had been held to determine whether the union really represents a majority. All this after a United States supreme court had upheld the contract between the company and the A. F. L. There is, therefore, a conflicting opinion between a Federal court and the National Labor Relations Board.

It is not surprising to read that the judge who rendered the first decision upholding the A. F. L. has allowed an appeal from his ruling. Our guess is that he would like to know himself what another and higher judge thinks that the Wagner labor relations act means. Certainly a lot of the rest of us would like to know what it means.

Because Senator Wagner's labor relations act does not stipulate that an election must be called to determine a majority before a trade union can sign a contract for a closed shop, or before it can be recognized as the sole collective bargaining agency for the workers. The act says that an election may be held. It does not make it clear whether a majority means a majority of those voting or a majority of those eligible. It doesn't provide either when the election must be held. The present technique is for a trade union to call a strike and hold off an election until such a point when they think they can win it, through the desire of the workers to get back and earn a living for their families. This whole technique makes the charges of "closed shop" against the company seem hypocritical. There has been plenty of anti-union coercion by the companies, but this is also coercion.

In this case the Labor Relations Board demanded that both competing trade unions have a chance to be heard. That's reasonable. But whether the grounds of challenging the first decision are quite so reasonable is a question. The newspaper reports seem to indicate that the A. F. L. decision is suspiciously largely because the company seems to be satisfied with it, or to prefer to a contract with the C. I. O. The National Labor Relations Board apparently is of the opinion that if the company likes a union that is ipso facto sufficient reason to believe that the workers have been coerced into joining it. On the other hand, any closed shop agreement means a coercion of the workers—the majority.

Contracts have been signed with the C. I. O. in which no elections have been held. Contracts have been decreed in favor of the C. I. O. when a majority of employees have refrained from voting at all. The point is that every decision is arbitrary. The law lays down no procedure to determine what is what. It leaves it up to the board. The law makes no provision whatsoever for minority representation. It makes no provision for regular elections, provides no mechanism whereby employees, once the die is cast, can retract their action. And they are not satisfied. And the result is that even the courts don't know what the law really means.

This gives altogether too much power into the hands of the board whose function is not judicial but legislative. If the board happens to be prejudiced in favor of the A. F. L. they can rig things in its favor. If it happens to be prejudiced in favor of the C. I. O. it can make things hard for the A. F. L. With so ambiguous a law, any kind of labor organization could be put over on the workers of this country with the connivance of the Labor Relations Board.

I am not suggesting that this is being done. I am suggesting that it could be done, as long as the law is as unclear as it now is. The fact that it could be done ought to be enough for any one who believes in government by law and not by arbitrary rulings.

Life's Darkest Moment

Hollywood

Sights and Sounds
By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Lull Deste is one of the most charming and different morsels to cross the waters for American films in many a year. With a name like that and a Viennese background you'd expect she would certainly go in for some of that Dietrich glamor. She would be aloof, elusive, exclusive, and generally unmanageable. But no she acts like an American girl, and a very nice American girl at that.

Henry Cohn's boys tried the glamorizing act on Lull when she came seven months ago, and she submitted meekly. She let them try out the hair dresses and the exotic make-ups, and after they were done she went straight back to her own manner of dressing and acting.

She's No Coquet "Glamour," she says in a slightly agitated voice. "Is something a woman has or hasn't. You can't give it to her, and I don't want to be an imitation of Marlyn. I don't like the word 'glamorous.' I wish I could be different enough that another would have to be found for me. A word that would express joy of life, exhilaration—anything but 'glamorous' or 'exotic.'"

Lull is lively and that might be the word. She acts as if she enjoys the day-to-day madness of picture making.

"It is what you call the nut house, isn't it?" she said. "Orders come, and five minutes later other orders contradicting the first ones and we all go around doing very silly things. I'm sure one has to be a little crazy to work in pictures—that's why I love it!"

Lull, now being seen in the English-made film, "Thunder in the City," is bowing to Hollywood in "I Married An Artist," with John Boles opposite. She is flattered when people say she resembles Merle Oberon or Myrna Loy. And she breaks other rates for foreign importations. First thing she did on arrival was buy a house and 180 acres. Next she applied for American citizenship. She really intends to stay.

As for "temperament," she says "I am being very meek now. But if I became established in films—then watch me make demands!" But she says it with a twinkle in her gray-blue eyes. The only demand she made in my presence was of the prop man. She wanted a hot water bottle. As a special favor Columbia put her picture on the air-cooled stage—and I Lull suffers from cold feet!

Nearly 400 Report For Classes At Stanton Schools

STANTON, Sept. 7.—With a total enrollment of 396, Stanton city schools opened the new school year Monday. A high school enrollment of 119 showed an increase over initial enrollment last year, while 277 in grade school was about the same number as for last year. No figures for Mexican war veterans are included.

CHAPTER XI
A week went by.
Charlie stood in the rear compartment of his trailer, painting. As he painted, he whistled. He was a pretty good whistler. He whistled the Pilgrims Chorus, and then he tried "We Won't Get Home Until Morning." After that he sang. He was also a good singer. He had a mellow voice and he put his heart in this selection: "The Voice Ours Me a Living." From time to time he stopped back from his easel to admire his handiwork. Sometimes he spoke aloud, saying, "Not bad," or "Pretty good," or even, "Well!"

Outside all was harmony and spring time. Not the quiet harmony of a rustic spring—although a few seeds were trying to sprout in the parking lot—but the thundering harmony of a great metropolitan city. A great city of subway cars and elevated that formed a symphonic foundation for the obligate of newspaper boys' voices. There was a knock on the door.

Charlie came in. In fact, she smiled in. She was wearing one of her own new spring creations. Her hat which included a jade green hat with a long feather that pointed toward Polaris or Arcturus. Her face was determined and composed. "You look great," Charlie said. "What's that you've got on your head?"

"A hat." "Looks more like a surveying instrument." Margit obeyed. She stared from the stuffed swordfish to the Malay kris, to the plaque from the Malay sultan-embassy in Rome—an item that suggested suffering and struggling. She said, "I didn't know you had easy chairs in these things."

He nodded. "You'll find almost anything in the world in trailers. Paupers, millionaires, Russian crown jewels." Her eye came to rest on his picture. She stared. It was a portrait of herself. Involuntarily she stood up. It was herself—and yet not herself. It was herself without in tensify, without tenuity, without the costume of a modern business woman—herself in a very laborious and imaginary negligee—relaxed voluptuous, lips parted, eyes languid. The girl started back. It was like an assault. It was like losing some of her garments in public. And yet it was very beautiful—so beautiful that instead of turning on him furiously, which had been her first impulse, she was struck dumb.

"Like it?" he asked. His question disrupted her astonishment. "No! It's despicable! You have no right to do that to people!" "I have a right to paint anything I see any way I please."

"On the contrary, I have. I was thinking I would exhibit this in a store window on Fifth Avenue. I was going to paint a background of desks and telephones and secretaries' typewriters and call it 'Business Woman.' My idea being that woman's place is in the home. I mean—she glanced at her out of the corner of his eye. "To see this lovely female surrounded by dictaphones and filing cabinets would be obviously fantastic. Waste of beauty. Waste of what Spike calls zingo."

"If you exhibit that picture," Margit said hotly, "half the people in New York would recognize it." Her voice grew angry. "I'd sue you!" "Well! Artists need publicity. But if it really upsets you—" he picked up a brush. Rapidly over the two luminous desiring eyes of the portrait, he painted black circles. With another brush stroke Margit's portrait abruptly wore smoked glasses.

She gasped. "You spoiled it!" Charlie stepped back and sighed. He dropped his brush. "No. You did." Suddenly he grinned again. He was looking at her. He had painted her hair undone—a heavy dark lock fallen over her forehead—but now he picked up his tools and in a minute he had placed upon the head of the lady in the negligee the lady who now wore smoked glasses—a somewhat exaggerated replica of the hat which Margit was wearing.

She had forgotten her first reaction. She watched the description with outrage. Finally she said "You're pretty cruel, aren't you?"

Charlie went on painting—making the feather too long and the angle of the hat absurd. "No, I'm kind. I painted you the way a woman ought to want to be. But you didn't like that. So, I'm trying to please my customer." "Finally Margit said, "Anyhow—I came here to talk about Irene. "Excellent! I love to talk about Irene! I love to talk about Irene! In fact, we might say that I love Irene."

Hardin-Simmons U. Opens Sept. 15

ABILENE, Sept. 7.—Registration for the 46th session of Hardin-Simmons university will begin Wednesday, Sept. 15. Classes will start meeting the following Friday. Officials are enthusiastic in their predictions of a record enrollment. "I think we will have at least 100 more students than were enrolled last year, and last year's total was only a few short of the all-time high registration," Dr. R. A. Collins, dean of students, said. Reports from the registrar's office show that more rooms have been reserved in campus dormitories than ever before at this date. In addition to the regular rooming facilities, two brick apartment houses, adjoining the campus, have been purchased and remodeled to accommodate women students. Approximately 500 courses in 35 different fields will be offered by Hardin-Simmons in the 1937-38 session. These include business administration, biology, Bible, botany, hygiene, zoology, chemistry, economics, education, English, French, German, Greek, Latin, government, history, home economics, journalism, mathematics, mechanical drawing, physical education, philosophy, psychology, physics, sociology, Spanish, speech, fine and applied art, band, piano, public school music, theory, violin and voice.

Court Due To Decide Govt. Power Policy

Rulings Expected On Important Cases At Next Term

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 (AP)—Attorneys for the T.V.A., PWA and the power commission predicted today that the supreme court will settle two major points of President Roosevelt's power program in the term beginning October 4.

Rulings Expected On Important Cases At Next Term

The questions, which have been fought back and forth between the federal government and private utilities for four years, are:

1. May the Tennessee Valley Authority sell power in unrestricted competition with private companies?
2. May the government help municipalities finance power plants to operate in competition with private companies?

Rulings Expected On Important Cases At Next Term

Government victories in the supreme court, some federal officials said, would clear the way basically for any activity in the power field the federal or state governments should desire. After that, they said, it would just be a question of how far the governments chose to go.

Rulings Expected On Important Cases At Next Term

The legal warfare may be renewed today in Philadelphia, where the federal power commission has been ordered to establish the worth of its investigation of service charges made by subsidiaries of the Associated Gas group.

Rulings Expected On Important Cases At Next Term

Rulings Expected On Important Cases At Next Term

Murals depicting the life of the late humorist are to be painted on the walls along the steps which lead to the top of the tower, where a sodium vapor flare, planned to be kept afire perpetually, was lighted yesterday.

Rulings Expected On Important Cases At Next Term

Randall Davey, Santa Fe, N. M., artist, has decorated one of the shrine rooms with murals showing the development of this region first as an Indian hunting ground, then through the mining development period in which Penrose's and other large fortunes were founded, and as a present-day vacation center.

Rulings Expected On Important Cases At Next Term

Dr. Thurston J. Davies, delivering the dedicatory address, pointed out the shrine would become "a memorial to the man who built it as much as to the man whose name it bears."
