What will Jackson do?

Well, folks, since I have been on a political bent recently (I think I've lost my sense of humor), I might as well continue.

Let's take a look at the campaign for the presidency. First, to sum up my view, I believe George Bush will win the November election over Michael Dukakis.

Why, you ask? Don't recent polls show Dukakis far ahead, you say? Dukakis has that Kennedy charisma while Bush looks asleep most of the time, you feel?

Good points... But it doesn't matter how good it looks for the Democratic nominee in the spring when that ol' bugaboo - the Democratic National Convention - looms ahead. And the question being asked this year is: what does Jesse Jackson want?

Surely, after all that campaigning, Jackson deserves a political plum for finishing second, many Democrats feel. On the other hand, many Democrats feel that second is only good in horseshoes. Thus, to my way of thinking, it looks like the Demo's convention will be a real barnburner.

What does Jesse want? Well, he wants to be president, of course. But since that is not in the cards in '88, latest indications are that he would take the No. 2 spot, the vice presidency.

Oops, a problem there. Polls show that if Jackson is on the ticket, Bush pulls way ahead. The Democrats can't allow that, can they? One thing history sure shows us, and that is the Democrats have a knack for self-destruction. (where are you, George McGovern, when we need you?)

Jackson has a strong following, including many whites who identify with his message. But a lot of folks will automatically vote against a ticket with Jackson on it, either because of prejudice, a low opinion of his prior actions or the folks he has hung around with, such as the leader of the Black Muslims.

No problem, you say. Offer Jackson something else. Well, what's out there? A cabinet post is no big thing anymore. He wouldn't be the first black cabinet secretary. I put that near the bottom of his wish list.

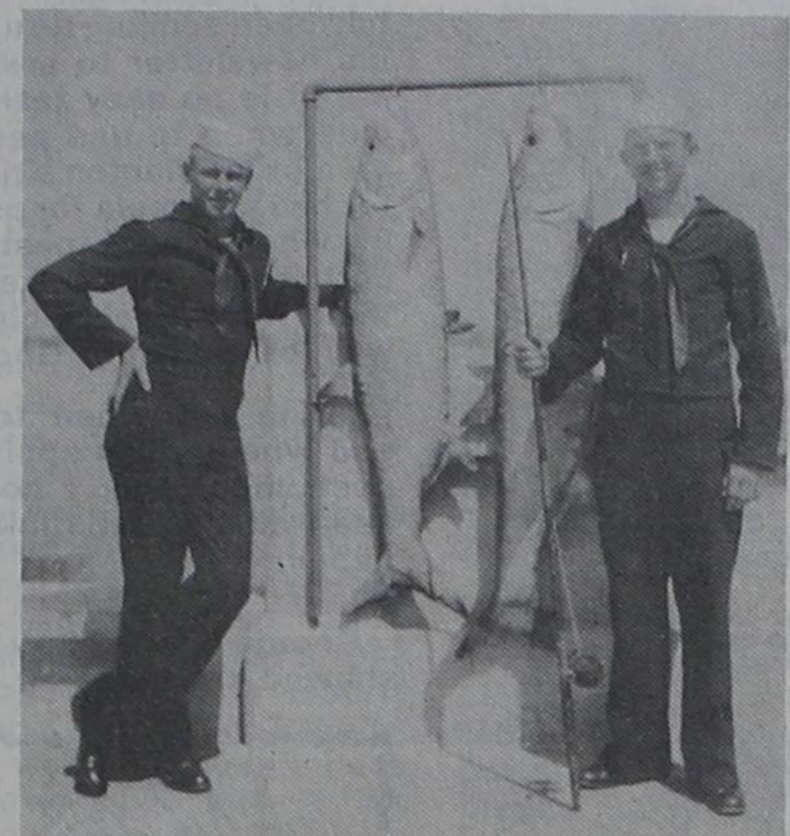

I think Jackson enjoys global hopping. I think he enjoys going head to head with heads of state. I think he wants an important position in foreign affairs, such as Ambassador to the United Nations, or Secretary of State, or some kind of Special Envoy Extraordinary.

Whichever post he is promised, you can bet your bottom dollar that the GOP will make political hay with it. Some folks haven't forgotten about Jackson hob-knobbing with Castro, for example. Knowing how Castro tortures human beings on a daily basis because - wow! - they believe in democracy doesn't make him one of my heroes. And Jackson praised Castro.

I wouldn't be surprised if Jackson becomes a sub-current to the campaign that eventually overwhelms the major questions and differences between Bush and Dukakis.

But, you say, Dukakis doesn't have to promise Jackson anything. He can wait until after winning in November to announce his choices for the Navy was full up, so Moseley joined Merchant Marine

When I first asked Hugh Moseley if I could interview him for our series on World War II, he answered:

"Some of the veterans might not like it. I was a Merchant Marine, and they don't consider us REAL veterans."

But I found out that a federal judge ruled in January 1988 that Merchant Marines who served in combat zones were veterans. When I showed the article to Moseley, he consented to the interview.

Hugh Moseley was an eighth grade student in Friona when World War II started. On the afternoon of Dec. 7, 1941, Moseley's father looked across the dinner table at him and his brother and said, "I'll bet this war will go on long enough to catch both you boys."

The next morning all of the students expectantly listened to President Roosevelt's address to Congress on the radio. Congress returned its nearly unanimous declaration of war.

Moseley and his brother continued their schooling. They were too young to enlist.

In December, 1944 17 year old Hugh Moseley and his friend, David Johnson, decided to take matters into their own hands. They decided to quit school and enlist. They boarded a train for Dallas where they intended to join the U.S. Navy.

"When we got to the recruiting office they said that the Navy was full up that week, and we should come back some other time."

"People just didn't get on a train to Dallas every week. We couldn't go home without enlisting after traveling all that way. When we walked down the street we noticed a sign advertising the Merchant Marines, so we went in and talked to the man there. He signed us up for a class starting Jan. 5 in St. Petersburg, Fla. He told us to go home and spend Christmas with our parents, and report Jan. 3."

The Merchant Marines had been used extensively before the war to deliver lend lease supplies to our allies. Because we wanted to maintain the appearance of neutrality, our government called the Merchant Marines civilians. When we finally entered the war, Merchant Marines were kept under the Wartime Shipping Administration, not under the Department of War.

Moseley reported for basic training. Recruits wore uniforms that looked like Navy uniforms, and they received training like other recruits.

The recruits slept on old wooden sailing ships which were moored near the training installation so that they would get used to the rocking of a ship from the start. The two sailing ships used were the Tusitalia and the Joseph Conrad.

Moseley remembers the start of basic training - he and his classmates were lectured for over an hour by an officer. Moseley kept thinking, "What have I gotten myself into now?" After their indoctrination, the cadets spent four months learning how to be sailors.

In April 1945 Moseley flew to Panama on an amphibious seaplane. "When we got to the Canal Zone, we landed in the water. Then we motored up the beach and pulled up on the dock so that we stepped

Welcome rains fall

As the rest of the nation has struggled with drought, the Twin Cities are actually ahead of normal precipitation. Weekend and early week showers added to the totals.

Fred Chandler, manager of Sherley Anderson Pitman in Farwell, reported that we had gotten 3 1/2" of moisture this weekend.

Lonnie McFarland reported that more than 2" of rain fell at the Sherley Anderson Grain elevator in Lariat this weekend and .01" fell on Tuesday morning. Scott Brown, manager of the Sherley Grain elevator called the weekend rain "beautiful. He reported 1.3" fell in Lazbuddie Sunday night, and .4" fell on Saturday evening. An additional .8" fell Monday night.

The following chart was compiled by Lonnie McFarland of Lariat showing the total rainfall here at the end of June of each year, and at the end of the year. He said that 16-17" of rainfall is normal for a year here.

1986	10.8"	22.68"

Conservation technique explained

The High Plains Under-ground Water Conservation District No. 1 reports that timing irrigations for maximum pounds of yield per inch of water is a good business practice and also a good water conservation technique.

Research indicates that a full soil moisture profile at planting plus replenishment of used or lost moisture prior to first bloom, will result in yields equal to 80 percent of a full-season irrigation program.

This is further illustrated by the cotton yield history of the Texas South Plains which shows above average yields three out of every four years when substantial rains were received in late June or early July.

Cotton which suffers stress from insect damage or lack of early season moisture or fertility will abort early-set fruit. Later-set fruit will result in lower yields or poorer quality cotton.

Installing furrow dikes to hold early-season precipitation, plus an early-season irrigation in needed, will help ensure maximum cotton yields.

various posts.

I don't think that will fly very well at the national convention. I think that if Dukakis makes a statement to that effect, the Jackson constituency - which is quite large - won't take it sitting down. Let the fight begin! Personally, I think the right thing is for Dukakis to offer the vice presidential nomination to Jackson. He earned it, period. But as we know, the "right thing" doesn't always mix well with politics.

If I were a Democratic kingpin, here is the scenario I would like to see: Dukakis offer the nomination, and Jackson declines it. Then Jackson praises Dukakis and says he will work his butt off in his behalf. And Jackson says he doesn't want to be promised anything but will work it out with Dukakis after the Democratic victory in November.

What are the odds that will occur?

We'll know soon when the curtain rises on the Democratic National Convention. It's showtime, folks!

out on dry land." He was then assigned to the SS William E. Borah, a Liberty ship. After crossing the Panama Canal, the Borah made way for the Philippines. Unlike naval ships of the time, the Merchant Marine ships like the Borah did not travel in convoys through enemy waters. They traveled alone. They zig zagged from place to place because they were told that it usually took an enemy submarine two minutes to calculate torpedo range. By moving in an irregular pattern, they hoped to avoid enemy fire. The Borah was armed with one 3" gun and one 5" gun and some machine guns. But, it was greatly underarmed in comparison with naval ships of the same size. The guns on the Borah were manned by U.S. Navy personnel. The passage to the Philippines was slow due to the zig zag course. As they neared the Philippines, there were many signs of combat. On June 6, there was an airplane alert. The crew saw a P-38 dive into an aircraft carrier. They never found out why.

On June 10 there was a submarine alert. Tension began to grow. "I sure enjoyed the sailing life except for those times when I was frightened to death," says Moseley. When they finally arrived in Manila, there were still Japanese bodies floating in the harbor.

They used a 100 ton crane to unload the cargo. "A Liberty Ship would hold about as much cargo as a freight train. They used to joke that it took five days to build a Liberty Ship, and six days to load it." "We went ashore in a duck - it was built like a life boat with wheels. The prop kept turning, and so did the wheels. It just ran right up onto the launching ramp and onto the dock. The only place I ever saw a duck was in the Philippines."

Moseley was assigned to the ship's steward. He helped prepare and serve the meals on board the ship. He also helped clean and prepare the officers' quarters.

One of his chores in port was to see that the ship's linens were all washed and ironed. The dirty laundry was stuffed into laundry bags that weighed 80- 90 lbs., and it was sent to a laundry on shore.

"Our personal laundry was easy to wash. We'd just tie a line on to our dungarees, and throw it overboard while we were at sea. After about five minutes of being pulled behind the ship the salt water would have the clothes nice and clean. We'd hang it over the engine room to dry."

Moseley spent July 4, 1945 in Leyte Harbor in the Philippines. "It was the best Fourth of July in my life - we got word that we were heading back to the U.S. We celebrated with fireworks."

At the time, Germany had surrendered but the invasion of Japan was expected to start soon. Word that one was going home was great news.

They prepared for their voyage home. About a week later, the Borah was nearly rammed by another ship. In those days, merchant ships were not equipped with radar or any fancy navigating devices.

The war ended while Moseley was on his way home. After a short leave with his family, Moseley went to New Orleans for his next assignment. Even though the war was over, there was still work to be done. He signed onto the Marguerite Le Hand, a brand new ship named after President Roosevelt's secretary.

Moseley's second voyage took him to the Philippines again. While in Manila one day, Moseley heard someone say, "Hugh Moseley, what are you doing in Manila?" It was C.L. Vestal who grew up on a farm that adjoined the Moseley farm near Friona. Vestal was serving in the U.S. Navy.

Moseley took Vestal back to the Le Hand for a meal of leftovers. Vestal said "Man, this is the best food I've had since I left Ma's table."

According to Moseley, "We had much nicer living conditions than military ships did; it was almost like living in a hotel. On a military ship things were more crowded. Most of the men slept below the main deck. On our ship, we all had cabins above the deck, and the space below the deck was used to carry cargo.

"Our officers ate in the salon. There were white table cloths and silver for the table. They could open the portholes and get a nice breeze while they ate. We slept two to a cabin. We each had our own bed and desk. They weren't big rooms, but they were better than military ships."

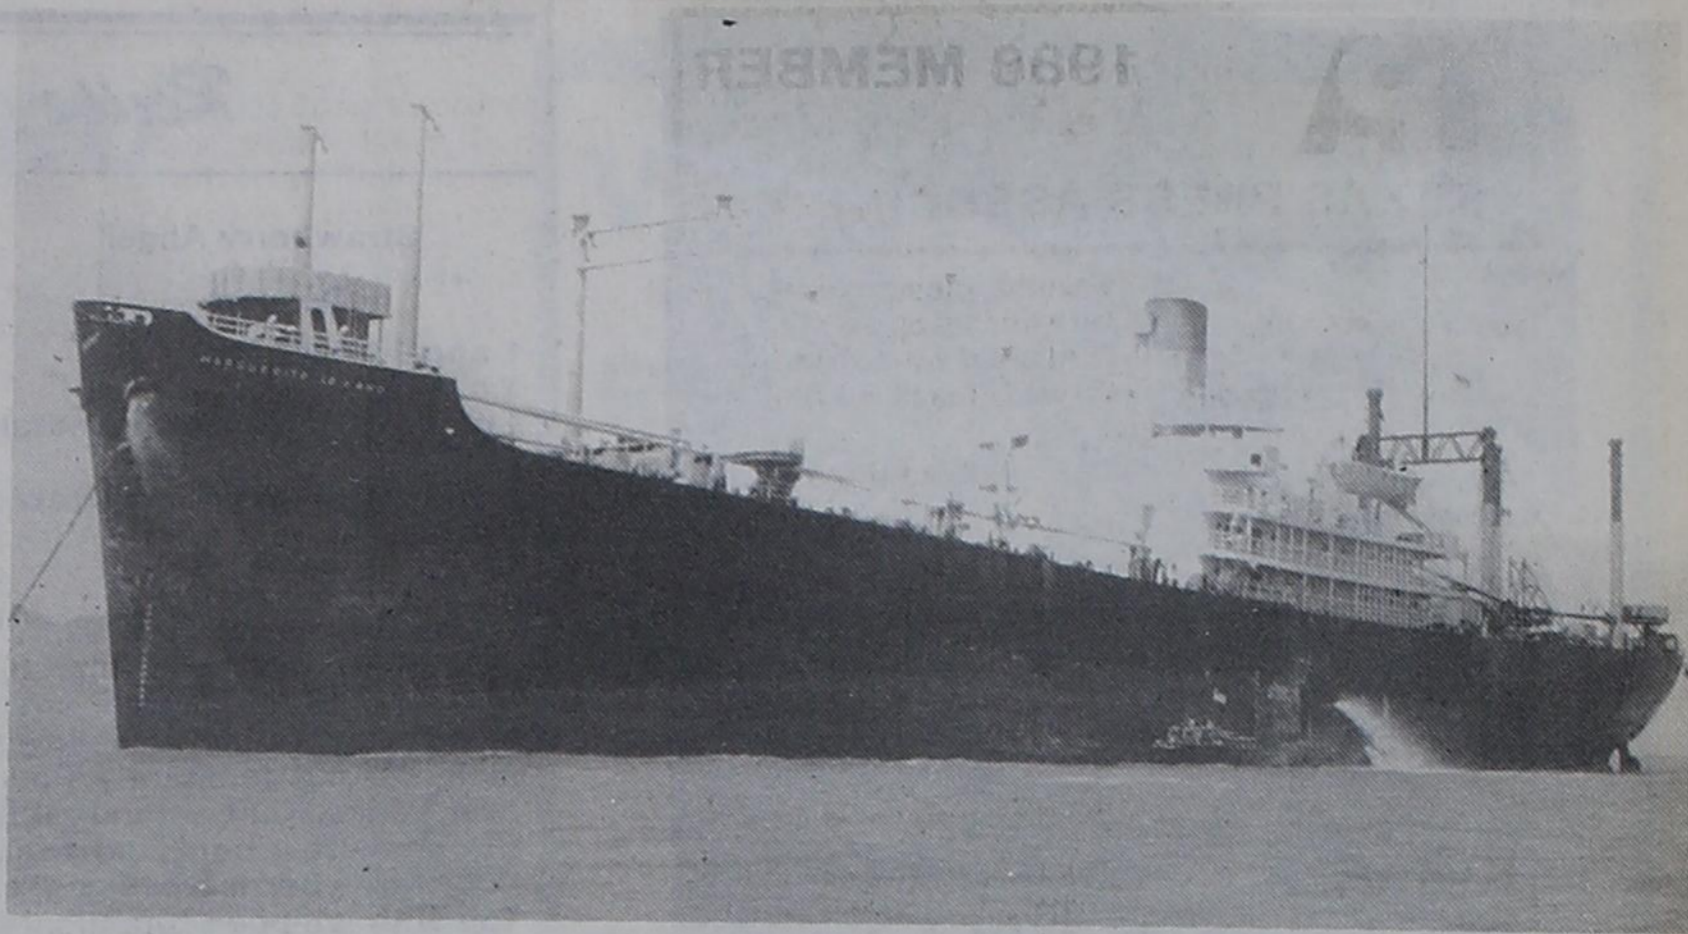

Moseley's second voyage took him to China, India, Africa, the Caribbean, and back to New York.

On the way into New York Harbor they passed the Queen Elizabeth. With field glasses they could see Mrs. Roosevelt on deck. Although she was no longer the First Lady, the crew of the Le Hand was still excited to see her.

Moseley could have left the ship at that point, but he signed on for another voyage instead. The third voyage took him to Philadelphia, New York, the Azores, Gibraltar, and Sicily.

The war was over, but there were still mine fields around some of the harbors. The Le Hand went through a mine field near Sicily.

From there they went to Alexandria, Egypt, Port Said,

Mrs. Clift undecided

Traci Clift, who operated a day care center in Clovis for two years, ran an ad in last week's Tribune to find out if people in the Twin Cities would be interested in having a day care center here in Farwell.

At this time she does not know what to do about the response.

Very few people have returned the ad. She has been given a petition with about 60 names on it of people who support the idea of having a day care center. The problem is that she does not have know if the people who signed the petition have children who might need the services of a day care facility.

She has been approached by people from the Farwell Baptist Church, and by people from the hospital board who are interested in having a day care facility, but she does not know how much real interest anyone has in the facility.

Mrs. Clift and her husband are currently living in a rural area near Farwell. She is in the process of getting all of the licensing necessary to open a day care facility in Farwell.

Church slates lay renewal weekend

The First Baptist Church of Farwell will hold a Lay Renewal Weekend July 8, 9, and 10.

Everyone in the community is invited to attend, adults and youth alike.

The Lay Renewal Weekend will begin with a covered dish supper at the church at 6:30 p.m. on July 8. There will be a general session featuring songs, and witnessing to Christ following the dinner.

In the course of the weekend, the participants will engage in a variety of activities ranging from worship services to sack lunches, and from small, personal group discussions to coffee hours. It is designed to be a people-to-people experience, rather than a pulpit-to-pew experience.

The nursery will be in operation during the entire weekend.

Then Pastor Bearss and his daughter, Kim, attended a retreat for youth considering fulltime church work in Austin. After the retreat they drove to Pueblo, Colo., where the rest of the family had gathered to celebrate Mrs. Bearss' mother's 80th birthday. Kim and her brother Greg spent an extra week in Colorado.

Dunsworth, Cannaday wed

On May 21, Tonya Dunsworth and Vance Cannaday were married in a candlelight ceremony at the First Baptist Church of Texico.

The bride's great uncle, Rev. Rondel Stovall, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Deming, performed the double-ring ceremony.

Tonya is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Dunsworth of Texico. Vance is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Cannaday of Clovis.

The bride was escorted down the aisle by her father, Eddie Dunsworth. Tonya wore a white matte taffeta wedding gown fashioned with an off-the-shoulder bodice that was beaded with Venise lace and had shirred elbow-length sleeves. The bridal gown featured a ruffled lace skirt with a chapel train. The bridal hat was covered with beaded chantilly lace with a ruffled trim and attached veil. The bride carried a silk bridal bouquet of roses, gladioli, and carnations in various shades of blue. For something borrowed, Tonya wore a pearl necklace belonging to her mother-in-law; something old was a class ring of her grandmother's; something blue was her blue garter, and her wedding gown was something new.

Maid-of-honor Stacey Rogers, the bride's cousin, wore a long dress of light blue taffeta featuring shirred sleeves with an attached bow in the back. Bridesmaid Valerie Trujillo wore an identical dress in royal blue taffeta. The bride's attendants carried bouquets of blue and white carnations.

The groom was attired in a black tuxedo with tails and a royal blue cummerbund and bowtie. Best man Shane Allen and groomsman Tom Dobson, the groom's friends, wore double breasted black tuxedos. Ring bearer Jacob Rogers, the bride's cousin, was attired in a white tuxedo with a blue cummerbund and bowtie.

The couple exchanged vows beneath an archway decorated with silk blue flowers, greenery and tall blue candles on the top of the archway. On each side of the archway was a heart-shaped candelabra decorated with silk blue flowers, greenery and a royal blue bow. The church pews were decorated with royal blue bows.

Candlelighters Chad Dunsworth, the bride's brother, and Richard Broome, the groom's cousin, wore black pants with white pleated shirts featuring light blue cummerbunds and bowties. While the candles were being lit, Randy Egan and Rhonda Hill sang "Flesh of my Flesh" accompanied by Kim Peterson on the piano. As the young couple lit the unity candle, Rhonda and Randy sang "Just You and I" and during the wedding ceremony they sang "We've Only Just Begun."

Ushers for the wedding party were Gary Cannaday, the groom's brother, and Ronnie Dunsworth, the bride's brother. The ushers wore black tuxedos with royal blue cummerbunds and bowties. The bride's mother chose a street-length dress of aqua green silk while the groom's mother wore a light blue street-length silk dress. The mothers wore corsages of blue and white carnations. Jana Willingham registered the guests.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall after the ceremony. A three-tiered white wedding cake decorated with blue roses and a crystal caketop was in the center of the bride's table. Dena Rogers and Julie Stovall, the bride's cousins, and D'rhonda Jacobs served the blue punch and wedding cake to the guests. The groom's table featured a gold coffee urn and a German chocolate cake. Serving at the groom's table were Mrs. Leora Conditt, the groom's aunt, Patricia Conditt and Pam Broome, the groom's cousins. Floating hostesses were young cousins of the bride, Heather and Jenny Rogers and Ana and Lisa Stovall.

For her going away attire, the bride changed into a blue jumpsuit. The couple is living in Albuquerque. Vance is employed at Hacienda Home Center for the summer and will attend the University of New Mexico in the fall, pursuing a degree in engineering. The bride is employed at Andrews, Asbury and Robert Engineering firm in Albuquerque.

Out-of-town guests included Jeff Dunsworth of Socorro; Danny Stovall, Julie, Eric and Rick from San Diego; Mr. and Mrs. Dean Stovall and family of Deming; Rev. Rondel and Leola Stovall of Deming; Rosie Wyatt of Fort Worth; Mrs.

Joye Latarski of El Paso; Doris and Sue Martin of Amarillo; Mr. and Mrs. Michael Rogers and family of Artesia; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Yarbough and family of Morton, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. B.E. Dunsworth of Joshua, Texas; Clint Rogers, Stacy and Justin of Floyd, N.M.; Gary and Troy Cannaday of Albuquerque; Mrs. Grace Cannaday; Mr. and Mrs. Basel Richardson; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Thomas of Lubbock; Mr. and Mrs. Guy Britnell of Lubbock, and Ricky Cannaday of Phoenix.

Gallman praises sprinkler systems

The High Plains Underground Water Conservation District, No. 1 reports that reduced labor costs, better water distribution efficiency and increased yields are just a few of the reasons for Robert Gallman's enthusiasm over center pivot sprinkler systems.

"The center sprinkler has the greatest influence on a farmer's net return and is the most important management tool farmers can use today. I'm sold on these systems, and I'm just tickled that our people are using last year's profits to purchase more sprinklers," he says.

Gallman serves as a Parmer County Committeeman for the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, and water conservation is of vital interest to him.

"Lynn County had only one observation well with water level decline last year," Gallman said, pointing to an article in the April edition of the Water District's monthly newsletter, The Cross Section. "However, Parmer County had 10 to 15 percent of its observation wells showing declines. We have to look at it and say 80 to 85 percent of those wells had positive readings. These positive readings show that we are doing our part to conserve water with these pivots, and I feel that the county will have a continued rise in the water levels next year as a result," he says.

"I could count the number of center pivot systems in the county on the fingers of one hand 15 years ago. Now, there are more than 675 pivot systems operating in the county. You would see one or two sprinkler systems go up in a particular area, and then the systems would blossom out from there," he says.

"These sprinklers have been a salvation to me since they have helped put me back into a profitable farming situation," Gallman estimates a 20 percent return on his net investment.

"I can now graze cattle and double crop with the labor savings from center pivots. I couldn't do that with row watering," he says.

Gallman uses six center pivot sprinklers on his 840 acre operation. His starter system is located atop a hill, and he credits the sprinkler with making the land tract farmable.

"This pivot really sold me on these sprinkler systems. When we row watered, the water would breakout at a certain point on the hill, go around the sides of the hill and then run down the turnrow. You can just imagine the erosion this caused. Two large tailwater return pits were located at the bottom of the hill to catch the runoff. Another problem in farming this land was the irrigation ditches we had zig-zagging down the hill.

"The center pivot has eliminated all these problems and turned this hill into a farmable piece of land. As a matter of fact, we yielded about 35 tons of ensilage per acre last year from this land. Our county average last year was about 25 tons of ensilage per acre," he says.

Gallman was so impressed with the center pivot systems' benefits that he turned back the furrow-irrigated land he had been farming. "No one wants to rent a farm without a sprinkler. After I turned back the land, I tried to convince the owner to install a center pivot system—but he refused," he says.

Center pivot systems have helped Gallman reduce his labor costs as well. "With eight irrigation wells, it was thought to furrow irrigate and do anything else. The center pivot has helped eliminate a lot of the labor associated with irrigation. I know that's difficult on the farm hands, but it helps the producers, and that's the bottom line. If the farmers go out of business, then a lot of other folks will go down the tubes as well," he says.

The Parmer County producer adds, "The fuel costs saved with a center pivot sprinkler can equal a $5,000 to $6,000 annual payment on a system. A system will pay for itself in fuel cost savings alone."

Soil moisture monitoring devices are also a vital part of Gallman's center pivot system management plan, since it gives him an idea of the soil moisture conditions before irrigating.

"There is no reason not to use soil moisture monitoring devices, but less than 10 percent of the farmers do. Gypsum blocks and tensiometers are inexpensive and easy to install. They give producers data on moisture availability, water amounts pulled out by the crop and the exact time when the moisture needs to be replenished through irrigation," he says. With corn prices slowly edging back up, Gallman remains optimistic about the future of center pivots in Parmer County.

"The years from 1979 to 1986 were the toughest economic times for area farmers. They kept on going and finally got these sprinkler systems up and running. The sprinklers aren't what got them into trouble, but they are sure going to help get them out of it," he says.

Man pleads guilty to murdering Mary Martin

David Peterson, 30, Albuquerque, has pled guilty to first degree murder, willful and deliberate, of Mary McDaniel Martin.

Mrs. Martin spent her girlhood in Texico, and many of her family members still live here. She was shot twice on or about May 11, according to assistant district attorney Chuck Barth.

Peterson also pled guilty to one count of fraud over $20,000, and one count of forgery.

Peterson came to attention when he claimed that Mrs. Martin had signed over ownership of her home to him just before she disappeared. Her family went to the police because they did not believe this to be true.

He was taken into custody by Albuquerque police, and he confessed to the crimes. In return for his cooperation in showing police where Mrs. Martin was buried, the court did not press for the death penalty.

Mrs. Martin's body was buried in a remote area on the San Philippe Indian Reservation about 30 miles north of Albuquerque and about 4 miles east of Interstate 25.

"There is no reason why anyone would have gone there," said Barth. "Had he not taken us there, we would never have found her body."

Peterson will be sentenced by Judge W.C. (Woody) Smith after he receives a presentencing report. The murder charge carries a maximum sentence of 30 years. The fraud charge carries a maximum sentence of 9 years, and the forgery sentence carries a maximum of 3 years. Peterson may not receive the maximum sentence because he has had no prior felony convictions.

Cotton fights off challenge

Cotton has fought off the challenge of man-made fibers, and the U.S. hopes to take advantage of the natural fiber's popularity by continuing to aggressively expand its export markets.

That was National Cotton Council economist Dean Ethridge's message to Far East textile executives attending the U.S. Cotton Seminar in South Korea.

Ethridge said the U.S. cotton industry will take bold measures to help assure that the world cotton market is at least 91 million bales by the year 2000. He pointed to expanded demand and efficiency in cotton production as tangible evidence that the U.S. is trying to better serve its export customers.

"These objectives are clearly feasible, but achieving them will not be easy," said Ethridge. "It will require meeting the diverse requirements of textile manufacturers all over the world."

While world cotton consumption is increasing at the rate of 1.1 million bales a year, Ethridge said world cotton trade has not kept pace with growth, and is projected to rise at the rate of only 200,000 bales per year. Ethridge said the U.S. can't drastically affect the amount of cotton traded internationally, but a basic objective is to increase its share of exported cotton. He said an export volume of 9 million bales is possible by the year 2000 even if world trade continues to decline.

If the U.S. share of cotton trade increases, Ethridge said its share of world production would simultaneously increase. The U.S. share of world production stood at 30 and has fallen to 16% in recent years, although it will increase to about 18.5% this year. If the U.S. share can be maintained at 17 to 18%, Ethridge projects an annual production of nearly 17 million bales by the year 2000.

The greatest contributor to market instability, Ethridge pointed out, is China, which went from deficit of cotton before 1983 to an exportable supply of 16.6 million bales in 1984. China's exportable supply fell to 3 million bales for the current season, giving it only 10% of the world's exportable supply while the U.S. holds about 32%.

Maintaining a balance between U.S. textile markets and export markets is the key to production plans, according to Ethridge. For the U.S. to achieve its future objectives, he said it is critical that a healthy textile industry be maintained at home.

"Efforts to preserve balanced U.S. textile markets do not signal a lack of appreciation for export markets," Ethridge concluded. "The intention is to maintain a foundation suitable for a complete cotton industry—one that will set the standard for the world in the year 2000."

Our cherry tree was absolutely filled with cherries. They looked so beautiful and colorful, it seemed a shame to pick them.

Mary Kay, Linda, Phyllis, Jim, Jeremy and Monica picked several large bowls to the amount of 3 1/2 gallons of pitted cherries. I must say they make heavenly cherry cobbler. Our thanks to everyone from all of us!

Jim has trimmed our trees' limbs that were hanging too low. We can now go out and enjoy ourselves without ducking or getting banged in the head.

We've painted our bird feeder and bird house. Jim is going to put the bird house up for us in the patio tree so we can watch. The bird feeder we hope to put up front by the entrance. We hope to have them up by next week.

Our birthday people for this month are: Althea Donahey, 07 - 1889; Maggie London, 15 - 1902; Joe Love, 22 - 1926; Nany Baker, 23-1909, and Alice Edwards, 27 - 1907. Happy Birthday!

Get-tough policy backed

Senator Sarpalius Reports

AUSTIN — As we watch the drop-out problem continue to plague Texas' schools, more and more people have begun to advocate a "get-tough" policy toward those students who chose to leave school early.

Some of the suggestions have been fairly conventional, such as raising the truancy age and toughening penalties for parents who don't force their children to attend school. Other ideas have been more novel, such as one that would prevent drop-outs from obtaining their Texas driver's license.

Rep. Bill Hammond of Dallas says he will introduce a bill next session that would prevent those who drop out of school before graduation from receiving their driver's license until they turn 18. Texas youths currently are eligible to receive their licenses at 16 (15 in hardship cases) if they have completed a state-approved driver's education course.

Hammond and those who support his proposal argue that existing efforts to prevent students from dropping out have failed. He says drop-outs rarely listen to reason. They are unimpressed by arguments that dropping out will harm their long-term earning potential.

Proponents of the driver's license plan go on to argue that the majority of today's drop-outs essentially are spoiled. These students live for the "here and now" to the exclusion of any long-range thinking or planning. Denying these drop-outs their driving privileges will hit them where they live.

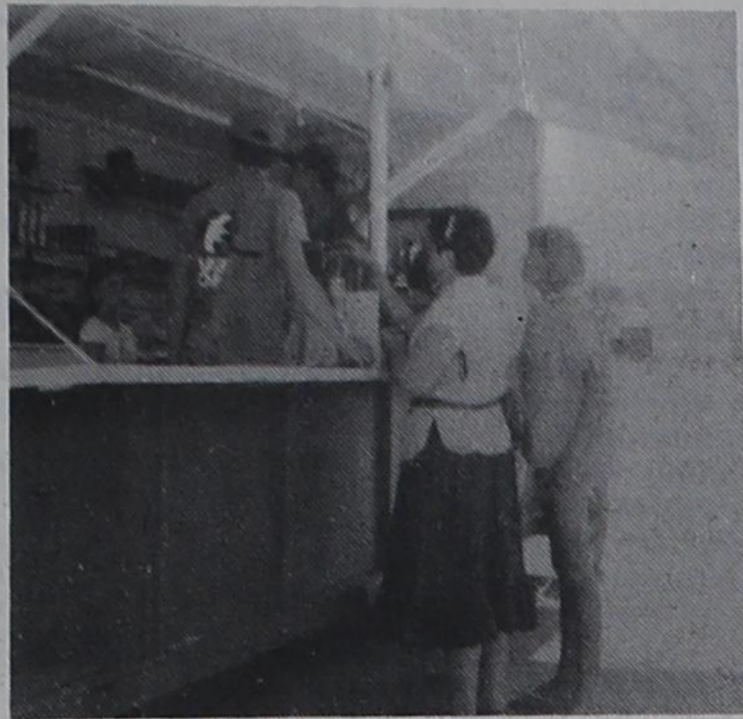

The argument is not without merit. A certain percentage of drop-outs leave school simply for a lack of motivation and for laziness. Taking these drop-outs licenses away might get their session. We co-sponsored a bill last session that helped create a better tracking system for identifying students who are dropping out or who are at risk of dropping out. It was a start, but we must do more.

Now, we are serving on a special interim committee that is trying to come up with a comprehensive approach to dealing with drop-outs. The sentiment on the committee seems to be that there is no single solution to the drop-out problem just as there is no single cause.

In that respect, maybe the driver's license proposal is not a cure-all. But it has served to focus more attention on the growing number of drop-outs in our public schools, and that all by itself is a major accomplishment.

If you have additional questions about the drop-out problem, or other issues, please contact us at P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas, 78711.

Aphids hurt Panhandle

Wheat producers in the Panhandle bread basket of Texas are being hit hard by the Russian Wheat aphid as the crop approaches harvest.

Losses in Texas from the insect pest will exceed last year's figure of $10 million, entomologists with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service predict. Nationwide, losses are expected to exceed last year's estimate of $50 million.

The Amarillo area, which annually produces half of the state's 187 million bushels of wheat, is suffering its worst onslaught since the aphid was first identified near Muleshoe three seasons ago.

Counties NE and SE of Amarillo have widespread economic infestations, with considerable number of fields receiving at least one pesticide application, and some more than one.

Tips given on water usage

Water use efficiency in soils low in nitrogen can be increased 20 to 30 percent with the addition of proper amounts of nitrogen. Increased water use efficiency equals increased yields.

Nitrogen moves with water in the soil. A full-season nitrogen application put down at pre-plant is sometimes lost when heavy rains occur following an irrigation. This rainfall leaches the nitrogen below the root zone where it is no longer available to your crop.

Spacing nitrogen applications throughout the growing season ensures that nitrogen will be available to your crops when it is needed. A good rule of thumb is to apply five pounds of nitrogen per inch of water received either from irrigation or precipitation.

Properly timed irrigations with adequate fertilization maximizes crop yield potentials.

For more information on increased water use efficiency by soil fertility management, contact the High Plains underground Water Conservation District No. 1 (806) 762-0181.

LET FREEDOM RING!

Bearing the inscription, "Proclaim Liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof!"; the Liberty Bell summoned the people of Philadelphia to the first public reading of the Declaration of Independence. Although it has not been rung since it was cracked in 1835, the ringing tone of Liberty's first call to Freedom still echoes from our highest mountain tops, across our plains and rolling hills to the shores of the oceans; and is heard by every nation on Earth. May we continue to stand as a strong and united democracy, proclaiming Freedom and Liberty to the World. Long may the bell of Freedom ring!

Patton - Rudd

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Patton of Brownfield, Texas, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, D'Lynn, to Kenneth Rudd on Aug. 6 at 7 p.m. at the First Baptist Church of Brownfield.

It will be a double ring ceremony. The prospective groom is the son of Freida Allison of Brownfield and grandson of Mrs. G.C. (Mae) Meeks. Invitations will be sent.

There's still time to test your soil

A proper balance of water and soil nutrients increases water use efficiency and improves your opportunity for maximum crop yields. district-wide pre-plant soil fertility tests by the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 indicate low levels of nitrate-nitrogen in unfertilized fields.

If you have not soil tested or applied fertilizer, it is not too late. An accepted method to calculate the amount of nitrogen to apply after the cotton crop is established is to side-dress five pounds of nitrogen for each inch of available water in the top two feet of the soil at planting time. If the top two feet of the soil are wet, 15 to 25 pounds of nitrogen per acre should get your crop off to a good start.

Then, add five pounds of nitrogen for each inch of water applied to the crop either by irrigation or in the form of precipitation until mid-August. Chisel the nitrogen into the center of the furrow during the growing season.

For more information on fertility and water use efficiency, contact your local Soil Conservation Office or the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 at 762-0181.

What Is A Lay Renewal Weekend?

The purpose of the Lay Renewal Weekend is to share in a visitation of the very presence of the Spirit of the Lord Jesus with the ordinary people who make up the Body of Christ, His church. Our eyes are upon Him.

It is a demonstration of dynamic faith that works in the real world - in the good times and tough times, in our triumphs and tragedies. It will bind the church together in a stronger fellowship.

You will experience more love between members of the redeemed family than ever before. You'll get to know people as never before. Some of the most beautiful testimonies of God's grace, mercy and guiding love will be shared.

The presence and power of the Lord that is available to meet any need, any hurt and any heartache will be more abundantly clear than you can imagine. It is entirely possible that God will become more real to you than ever.

During the Lay Renewal Weekend, these experiences will be ours in large group meetings, small groups, and coffee meetings - and all you need to do is be there. You don't have to say anything unless you want to do so.

I know what I'm talking about. I've just returned from such an experience.

- Murray Ashwill

City Hall cost given: $414,815

Architect Warren Pendleton presented the Texico City Council Tuesday night with a cost estimate for the proposed City Hall: $414,815, plus the cost of landscaping and architect/engineer fees.

The cost came as a surprise to the councilmen, who had been seeking a much lower estimate.

After Pendleton left, the council discussed the estimate.

"I was expecting half that total," said Doyal LaRue.

Steve Chancey said that the council originally was looking at a cost of around $100,000 to remodel the present building and that the council thought for about $25,000 more they might be able to get a new building.

Chancey and Bryan Kube both felt the estimated cost for the present plans were too expensive for the city to handle.

Of course, plans can be changed. And Pendleton could be asked to re-submit new plans that would be less expensive.

Meanwhile, the council voted to give the current proposal to Eastern Plains Council of Governments so that agency could advise Texico on whether state grants might be available to fund a new City Hall.

"We have to see what's available," said Chancey. "The Legislature has appropriated up to $250,000 for projects like this."

Pendleton's plans include $13,513 for site work, including clearing and grading property, concrete, sidewalks, concrete curbs and gutters, asphalt parking and painting of lines for parking.

The building construction was put at $401,302. This included a masonry building, with concrete foundation. There would be ceramic tile in the lobbies and toilets, with carpet in the remainder of the building. The ceilings would feature acoustic panels in metal suspension system.

Pendleton stressed that the actual cost of construction wouldn't be known until bids were received. He estimated the bids would be between $400,000 and $425,000.

"Construction costs in this area, for the past few years, have been increasing at the rate of from 5 percent to 7 percent per year. This rate of increase is expected to continue and should be considered if the project construction is delayed," he said.

Kube noted that the time between when the city's new fire house was discussed until the building's completion spanned six years.

Pendleton also said that if the council favors a metal building, it would save $40,000 or more.

In other business, the council discussed whether to implement a 911 emergency call-in phone number for the city. Chancey estimated the cost of one line would be about $100 a month, that the city would pay. This would allow Texico residents to dial 911 for police or fire department assistance and get the Clovis dispatcher.

If Texico goes ahead, it would take up to 90 days to install. There also is a $180 installation fee.

The councilmen expressed support and asked Chancey to further check on the cost and report back.

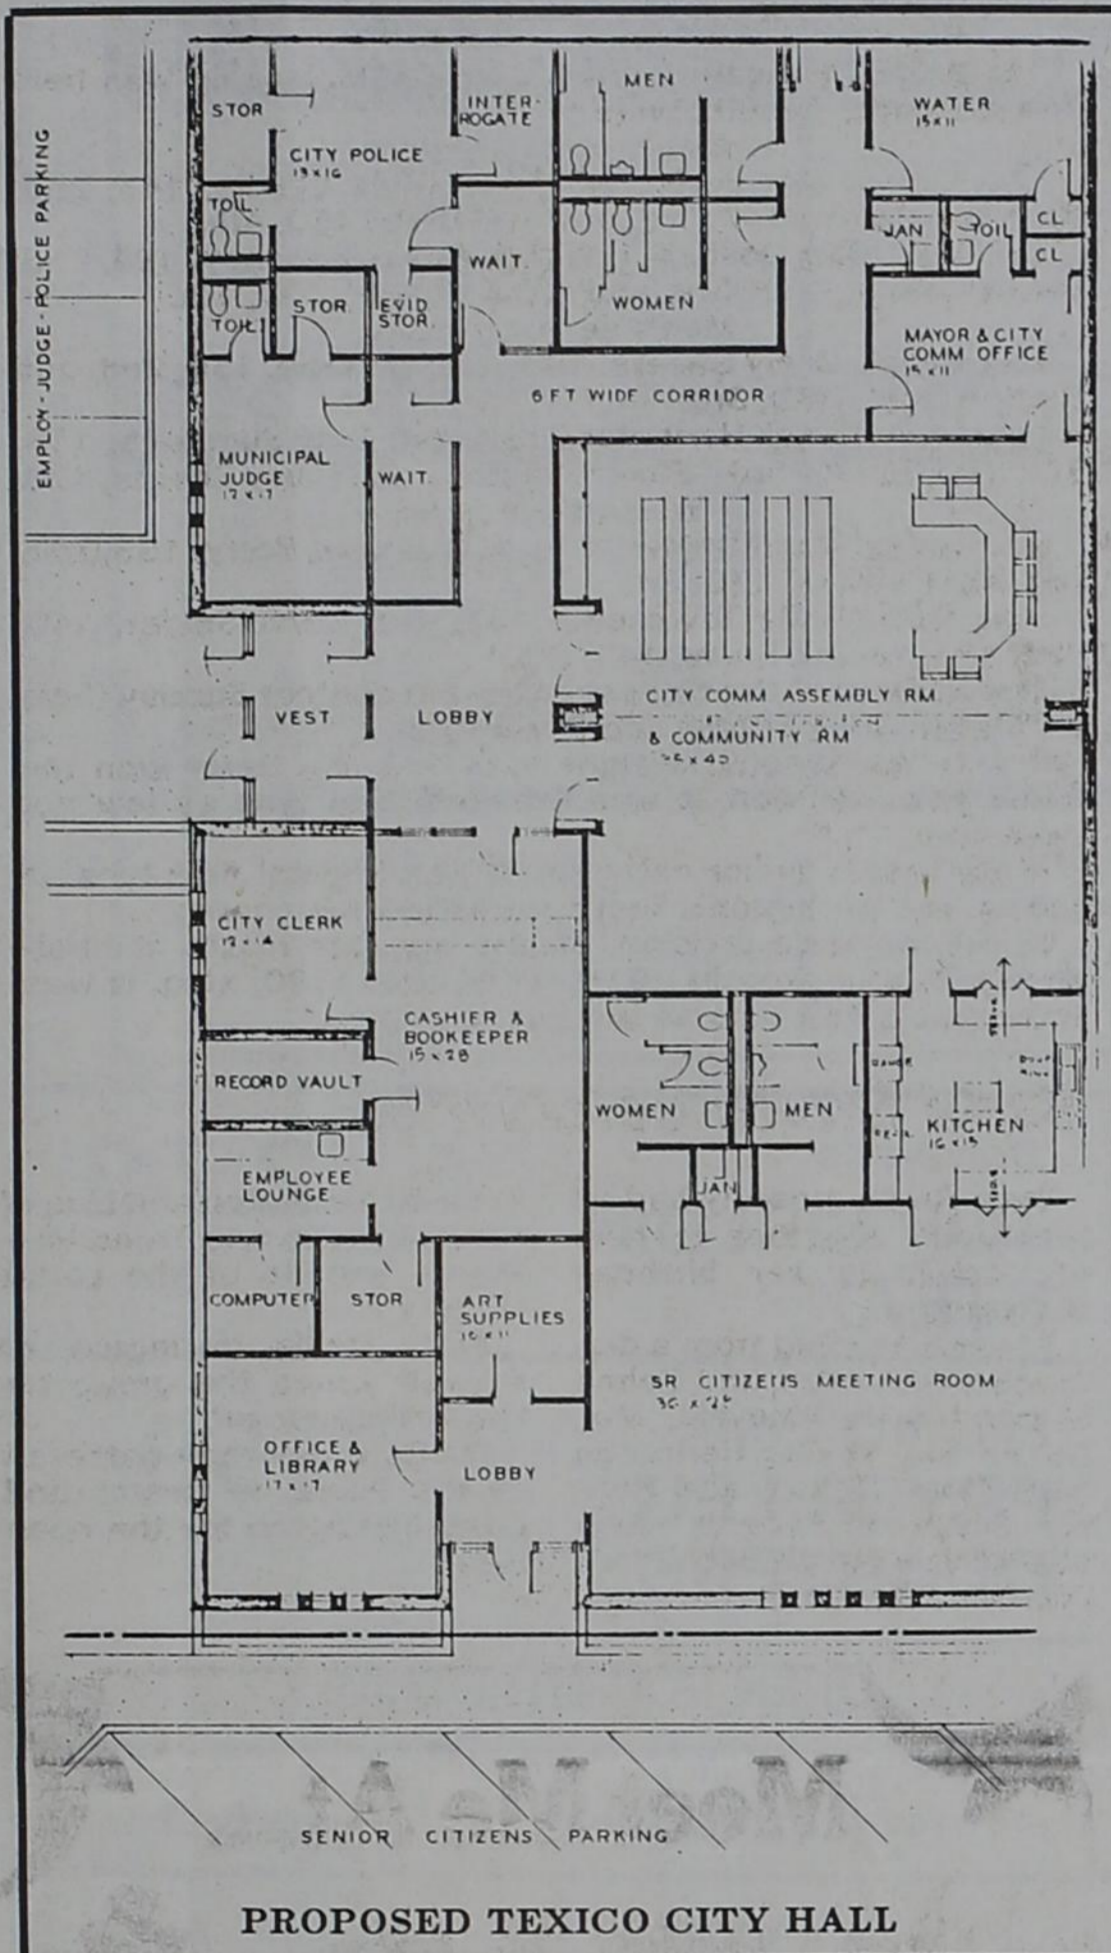

The council also:

- Heard personnel manager John R. Hadley give approval for Billy Hammit to attend a 3-day water school in Roswell in August, where he has been asked to teach a class.

- Rejected continuing the quarterly maintenance agreement with NCR since the new computer system is expected to be on line next month.

- Receiving information on bids for city insurance. A vote will be taken at the next meeting.

- Turned down a request from a resident just outside the city limits to use the city's trash hauler to haul items to the city landfill. Legal problems were cited as the reason for the rejection.
