Texico cleanup target date selected

The ad hoc Texico Cleanup Committee set a target date last Friday for the cleanup this year - Sept. 20-22.

Attending the Friday night meeting were: Fern Tharp, Mae Stone, Ann and Lewis Cooper, Doyal LaRue, Mike Pomper, Evelyn and Ronnie Warmuth, Kathy Dionne, Jim and Carolyn Burrows, Shannon and David Kube and Mr. and Mrs. Milton Venable.

City maps were passed out and the group divided into pairs for a walking tour of the city.

On their maps, the committee members will list where they see abandoned vehicles, abandoned homes, large junk, vacant lots that need cleaning, and areas in need of general cleanup.

Each pair will take a portion of the city. They will turn in their lists to committee chairman Warmuth by July 13.

At the same time, the groups will pass out letters at every home in Texico. The letters, written in English and Spanish, note the establishment of the committee and the goal to clean up the community.

It notes that donations are being accepted toward buying shrubs to be planted throughout the city. Donations may be dropped off at City Hall.

The letter, written by Warmuth, a city councilman, notes "Your assistance, along with your neighbors, will be critical to reach this goal. You can start now by moving abandoned cars, mowing vacant lots, fixing up your home and yard, tossing out unused junk, etc. There will be a major cleanup effort in September when several groups will be available to help you move the big items."

Also at the meeting: - Mayor LaRue noted that large junk items can be taken to the transfer station at the landfill. Residents should contact City Hall so a city employee will go to the station with them and help dump the items.

- Shannon Kube will check on the cost of having bumper stickers made with the Texico cleanup logo.

- A re-numbering of the city's streets was suggested.

- Evelyn Warmuth will be in charge of setting up a "cleanup float" in the Border Town Days parade.

- Richard Hadley and Fern Tharp will be in charge of seeking donations for the planting program.

- Pomper, Tribune publisher, will print copies in full of the city's ordinances dealing with abandoned vehicles and homes, and trash problems, later this month so all residents can read the ordinances in full.

- LaRue will be in charge of the city having an annual cleanup campaign.

- Mae Stone will contact area nurseries to find out the costs for buying shrubs and flowers.

- Lewis Cooper will check with area wrecking yards on the removal of abandoned vehicles. He also will check with local residents who might have large equipment which could be used in the Sept. 20-22 cleanup.

- David Kube will talk with businesses along the highway about sprucing up their areas. Ann Cooper reported that the Chamber of Commerce has designated July 21 as "Main Street Hoe Down" to eliminate weeds before Border Town Days.

- Warmuth will contact the Curry County Commissioners, National Guard and state highway department about helping with the Sept. 20-22 cleanup. All have indicated they would. Also, Warmuth and LaRue will seek a fee waiver to use the Clovis landfill for that period.

- LaRue will contact the state EID about what assistance they might offer.

- Shannon Kube will report back to the committee about ideas to renovate the city's parks. A memorial fountain honoring the late Bill Christian is being built at KKR Park now.

- The next committee meeting will be at 6:30 p.m. mdt July 20 at the Texico Community Center. The public is invited.

BTD committee to meet

The Border Town Days Committee will meet at 8 p.m. cdt at the Spur Restaurant July 9.

This will be the final meeting before this year's event so it is important that all committee members attend and report.

The meeting is open to the public.

Pierce resigns as Texico supt.

Texico School Supt. James Pierce resigned after 31 3/4 years of service to Texico schools. His resignation was presented to the school board in a special meeting on June 28.

The board accepted the resignation and voted to seek applications from outside Texico as well as from the community. "We need to open this up to anyone who wants to apply. We are not a closed shop, and we need to open it up at least statewide," said board member Greg Martin.

Time is a factor for the board because anyone from outside of Texico who is employed by a school system in New Mexico must legally give his school system at least 30 days notice before he can come to work in Texico. That gives the board less than a month to find a replacement.

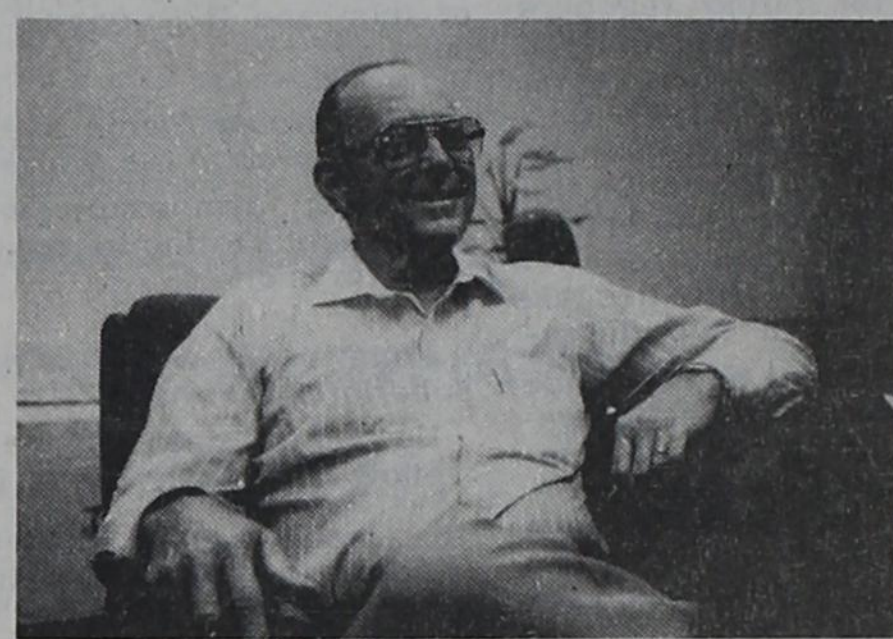

Board members are not too worried about the lack of time, though. They know that the position will be sought after by many in the state because Texico is one of the best paying school systems in the state.

The board members agreed that the salary paid to the new superintendent would be negotiable depending upon the experience and education of the applicant chosen. They will not automatically pay a new superintendent what Pierce earned.

They voted to Fax a letter to each school system in the state with a Fax machine and mail letters to the others to advertise the position. They would also advise the educational placement services of the universities in New Mexico and inform people in the State Department of Education.

The board will hold its regular meeting on July 10. They hope to have some applications to review by then. They hope to be able to fill the position by July 19 if it is possible.

At the end of the meeting, members discussed a tentative plan for a goodbye party for James Pierce.

James Pierce

Pierce looks back on his tenure

"It was time," said Texico School Supt. James Pierce of his resignation.

Pierce had worked at Texico School for 31 3/4 years, and he felt it was time for a change. He turned in his resignation at a special School Board meeting June 28.

"I feel good about this. I'm leaving without any harsh feelings," he explained. "I feel like this is a good time to retire."

Pierce has many retirement options available to him in the future including: raising calves, selling real estate, fishing, and spending time with his family- the last two are especially appealing to him.

The Brownwood, Texas native and his wife, Charlotte, hope to spend some time with their daughter Elizabeth, son-in-law Gary Williams, and their three children in El Paso.

Pierce began his tenure at Texico in December 1958 when Agrie Jones was superintendent. Pierce signed on midway as a vocational agriculture teacher. The 4 1/2 half years he spent as an agriculture teacher were very special to him. He enjoyed the work because he has always "been an aggie at heart."

Then Pierce switched jobs to become a high school principal and science teacher in 1963. The job paid a little more money and offered some new challenges.

During the 12 years that Pierce held the principal's job, he had his ups and downs. The 1960's were a time of challenge, change, and turmoil in schools across the country. The girls' hemlines went up and the boys' hair length went down. Enforcing a dress code at Texico was no easier than it was anywhere else.

Pierce tells many incidents of sending girls home to change clothing and boys to the barber shop because they did not match the school's dress code. Once, he sent the same boy to the barber shop three times in one day - the first two times he returned with just a whisper of hair cut off the bottom of his shaggy mane; the third time he came back virtually without hair.

The principal's position kept Pierce busy. There were school activities almost every night, and as principal he had to help schedule them as well as attend them. Class scheduling was also a tough job each year; getting the right kids and the right teachers together in the right courses is always a mind-boggling challenge.

Pierce's philosophy of education made class scheduling more difficult, but more effective. He notes, "You've got to work with every student from where he is at. You don't start him where he isn't and stall him for the rest of his life." That means that students must be placed in classes where they will be capable of learning what is being taught so that they can take pride in themselves and keep their self-esteem.

"The better you can get them to feel about themselves, the better work they will do," Pierce noted.

In 1973, he was chosen Texico Man of the Year. He also was active in the Lions Club, Texico Riding Club, and was a 4-H Club leader and softball team coach.

Pierce decided to assume another personal challenge in 1975 when he became the superintendent. At the time, the only complete instructional building that is still standing today was the old gymnasium. The campus also included part of what is now the elementary school. In the past 15 years, the school system added on to the elementary school twice, built the high school, the junior high school, and the educational complex building.

Growth wasn't limited to the physical plant. The school population has grown over the past several years, and so has the faculty.

The federal government has caused an increased number of new programs in the schools, and with each one there is an increase in the paperwork load required for the schools.

New Mexico has also increased the number of periods per day that the students and teachers must work. This has created "a burden on kids and teachers alike," said Pierce.

Other new programs were added by popular demand- football was added about 20

Be careful!

Due to the drought, conditions are ripe for grass fires in the Texico - Farwell area and residents ought to be careful.

A cigarette apparently carelessly thrown out of a vehicle in Lazbuddie last weekend caused a fire that could have burned down the Scott Brown residence.

Fortunately, the fire was spotted quickly and a Lazbuddie fire fighter at the school was notified. So he was able to get the truck there as other fire fighters arrived, and the house was saved.

Texico

years ago. This has proven very popular with the students.

Art was another program that Texico added while Pierce was superintendent, and he admits that it was a surprise to him, "I'm overwhelmed by the talent the students have," he said Artwork done by Texico students decorates the walls of the superintendent's office.

Pierce found that his background as a vocational-agriculture teacher helped him in his role as superintendent. Knowledge of building procedures such as plumbing and wiring helped him during the construction of the new buildings. It is also helpful in maintenance because "Sometimes you have to do it yourself," Pierce notes.

"Knowing agriculture in this community helps you understand taxes and expenses of the people, and basically how the community functions," he sums up.

Pierce's knowledge of New Mexico's method of financing schools has also helped. Texico went from being one of the lowest paying school districts in the state to being one of the highest paying districts in the state.

This has attracted many experienced teachers, and New Mexico rewards a school district for hiring teachers with high "T & E" (tenure and education units). The state multiplies the T & E of a school system by the number of students to determine the amount of money the school system will get.

Financing and legalities take up much of a superintendent's time, but he has made time to be active in school related organizations and community organizations.

Pierce and his family have been members of the First Baptist Church in Texico for many years. They have also been members of the Chamber of Commerce for many years, and he is a past president of the organization.

He is also a past president of the Eastern New Mexico Research and Study Council for 25 school on the Eastern side of the state. He has been active in the New Mexico School Administrators Association and the New Mexico Superintendent's Association.

Many things have changed in the 30 years that Pierce has been in the education business. He notes that there is less parental support today for discipline than there was years ago. "Now more parents are working and there are more single parent families," he notes. People used to spend more time at home 30 years ago.

How has the City of Texico changed in the past 30 years?

Pierce noted that more of the old buildings have been torn down and that more new homes have been built. "Main Street looks better," he notes. There have been improvements at the City Hall and Community Room, the City Park, and a new fire department building.

"I'm pleased to be a citizen of Texico and of our public schools," said Pierce.

What changes does Pierce see on the horizon for education in New Mexico?

Greater emphasis on vocational education. "To get a job students must be prepared with skills to make a living.

"We already have kids go to the Clovis Campus for some of this, and it is good," he says.

What would Pierce like to see at Texico in the future?

A new gymnasium with permanent seating to replace the gym is one.

What skills would a new superintendent need?

He would need to be a "fellow who can do a job that would better serve the students at Texico Municipal schools," said Pierce.

He would need to be a jack-of-all-trades who can handle the problems of maintenance, physical plant, buses, curriculum, state financing, and how to get the best for the least amount of money.

Is there anything you would like to say that hasn't been covered?

"I like to give my thanks to a fine group of people I've worked with at Texico School and the fine members of the school board that I've served with. Without their help and cooperation, the schools wouldn't be as good as they are."

Texico band camp scheduled

The Texico Wolverine Band will have a different kind of Band Camp this year before Border Town Days.

They will meet two evenings during the week before Border Town Days instead of Monday through Friday as they have in the past.

They plan to meet on July 25 starting at 7 P.M. MDT and on July 27 at 6:30 P.M.

MDT. There will also be a party scheduled for those who participate, but the time and date for that will be announced later.

The change in the band camp is due to the fact that band director Robert Simmons will be teaching at the West Texas State Music Camp this summer.

Drill team wins honors

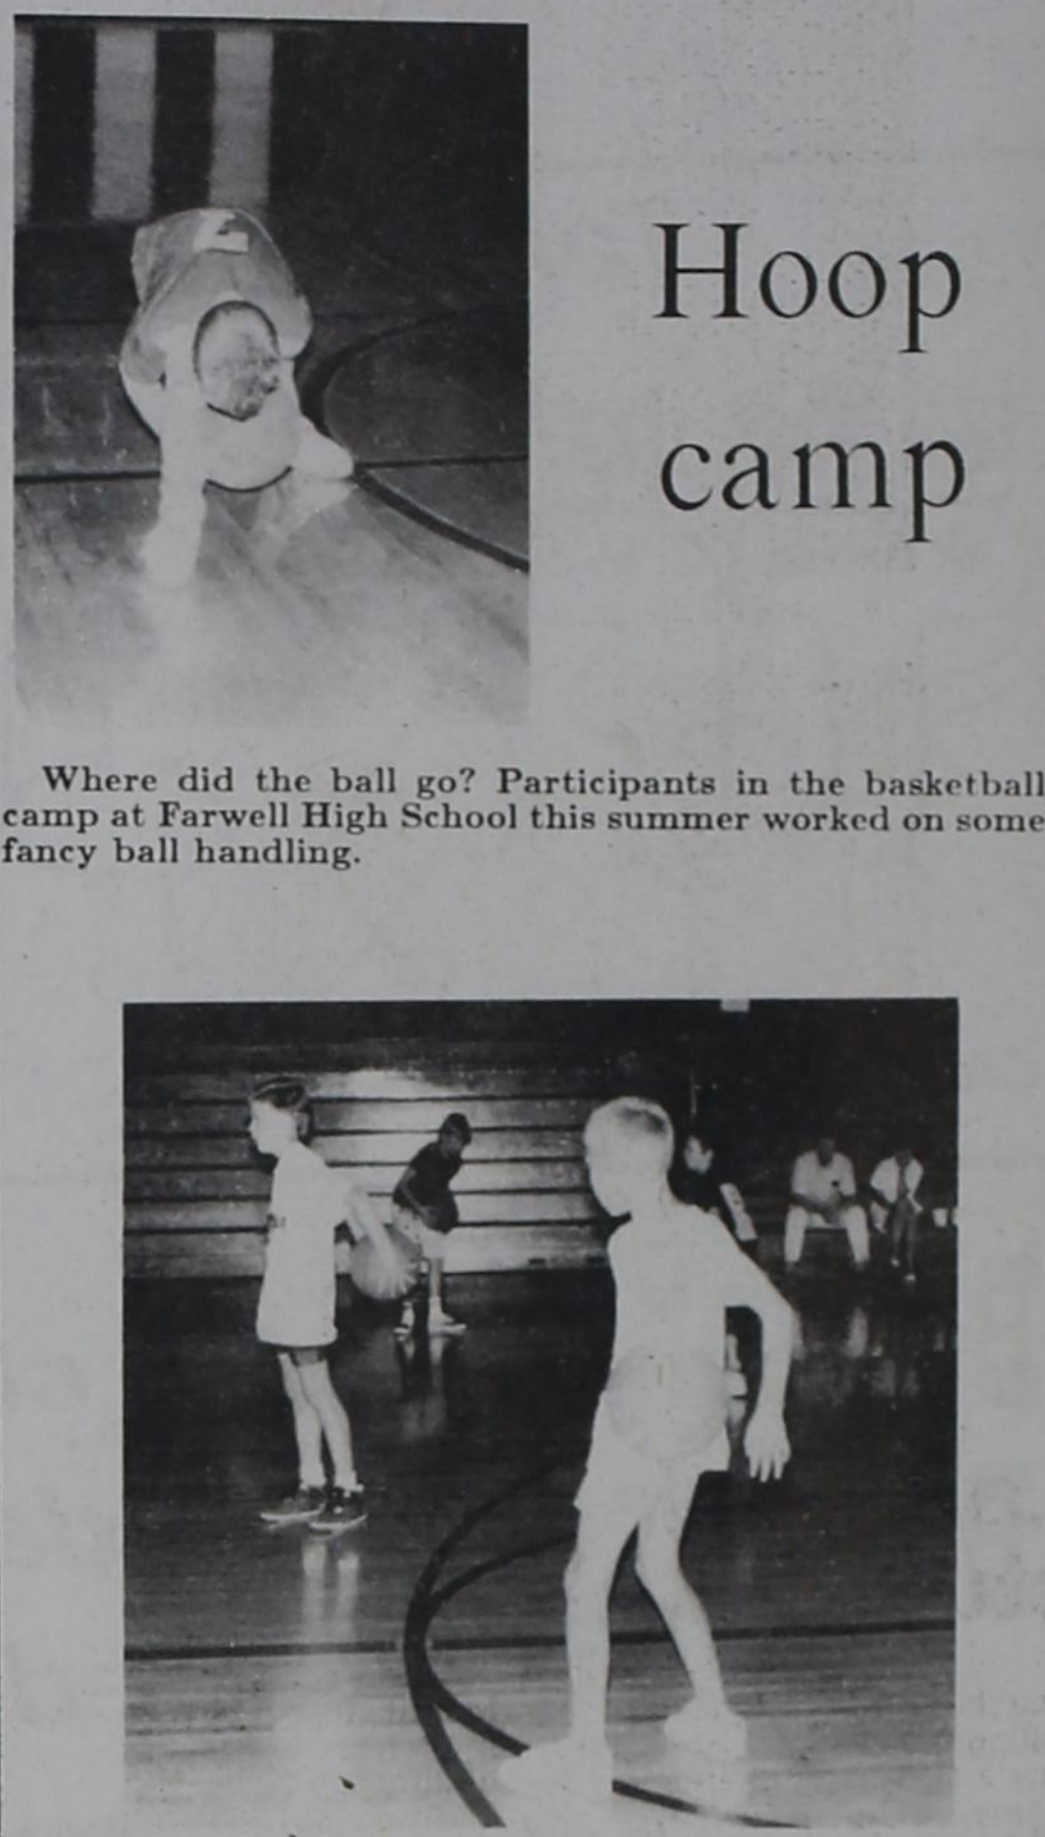

The Farwell Drill Team won the Shining Star Award and the Most Improved Team award and 12 individual blue ribbons when they attended drill team camp at New Mexico State University in Las Cruces June 26-29.

The Shining Star Award, like a spirit stick for cheerleaders, is awarded to those teams that showed spirit and positive attitudes throughout the week.

While the group was in Las Cruces, they learned 11 new routines and had the opportunity to watch some of the best drill teams around.

Attending the camp were: Lena Ortiz, captain, Liz Galvan, co-captain; Veronica Soto, Karen Aycock, Ruby Sanchez, Christie Phillips, Lorri Murray, Ginny Mitzelfelt, Lorri Haseloff, sponsor, and Debbie Phillips.

Drill team members are still raising money by cleaning houses and waxing cars. They charge $20-$30, depending on the job. Call Lori at 481-9453 for an appointment.

Hoop camp

Where did the ball go? Participants in the basketball camp at Farwell High School this summer worked on some fancy ball handling.

Around and around the ball goes, where it stops nobody knows.

Farm bills topic

Five-year farm bills from both House and Senate Agriculture Committees are on their way to their respective floors.

Debate on the House Committee bills is expected to begin soon after Congress returns from the July Fourth recess, and Senate action isn't expected to be far behind.

There are minor differences, but the cotton section of both bills basically continues the market-oriented approach that has proved successful in the 1985 farm act. And, says Donald Johnson, Executive Vice President of Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., that feature has been the foundation of legislative goals developed over the past two years by the cotton industry.

"We are especially pleased that the marketing loan program as we've known it for the past five years is left intact," Johnson states. Specifically, he points out, both House and Senate measures retain the basic loan formula and terms of the 1985 act, including an eight-month loan extension at the producer's option, a limit of five percent on year-to-year loan reductions, and a 50-cent minimum. Also preserved, Johnson adds, is the all-important provision for loan redemptions at a lower rate when necessary to keep U.S. cotton prices fully competitive with foreign growth.

On target price provisions, Johnson has mixed feelings. Both bills would freeze the rate for the 1991-95 crop years at the 72.9-cent rate in effect for 1990. With almost inevitable increases in cost of production, Johnson says, this feature "is not altogether satisfactory." But, he adds, it would at least end the Secretary's discretionary authority under which target prices were reduced from 81 cents in 1986 to the current 72.9 cents. "and under severe budget restrictions it's probably the best we could realistically hope to sustain in floor debate."

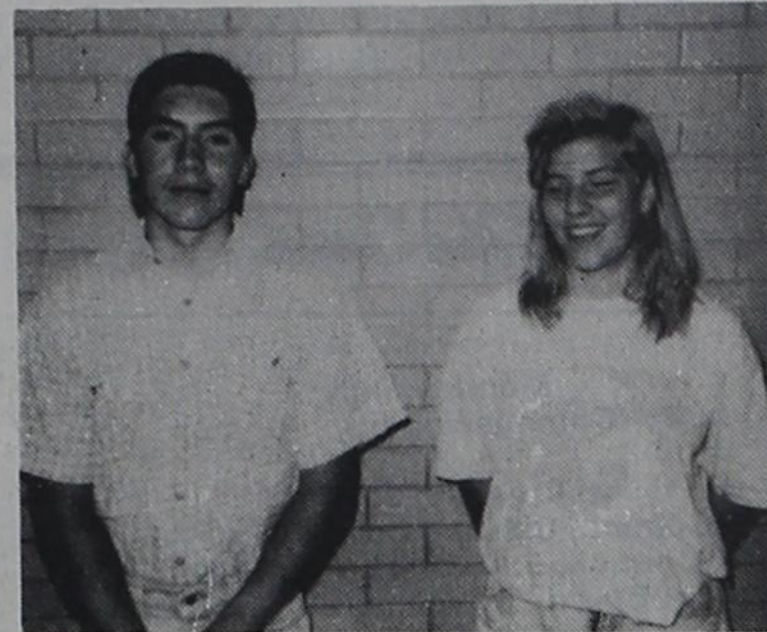

Provision for acreage reduction programs, another issue vital to producer interests, would be continued with the same 25 percent maximum ARP requirement of present law. But there would be changes, "some good and some not-so-good," Johnson thinks.

The "carryover target," now four million bales, would be the greater of four million bales or either a 33 percent (Senate version) or 30 percent (House version) stocks-to-use ratio. And, the Senate version would mandate a paid land diversion program if the 25 percent maximum ARP is deemed insufficient to reach that target. The House Bill would require paid diversion only if the carryover is eight million bales or more. Also, both bills call for an ARP announcement no later than November 1 as now, but provide for a revised announcement by January 1 with a mechanism to protect producers in early planting areas.

The "50-92" option is retained in both bills, with the addition of a guaranteed minimum pay rate. Also, a "0-92" option, now applicable only to grain, would be authorized (Senate) or required (House) for cotton producers who are prevented from planting.

Parmer County FmHA accepting nominations

The Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) will begin accepting nominations July 5 for election of county committee members under new rules that make it easier for farmers to qualify as candidates and to vote, Bobby Murphy said today.

FmHA county committees perform a variety of duties for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's credit agency, including deciding whether an applicant is eligible for a farm loan.

"One important change broadens the definition of a farmer to anyone who has an interest in a farm in the county as owner, tenant or sharecropper," Murphy said. "The new definition also includes the spouse of an eligible farmer. An old requirement that more than half of the candidate's income come from the farm operation has been dropped."

"The nominating period has been extended to 45 days from the previous 25 days, thus allowing more opportunity for people to run for the committee," Murphy said. "At least three eligible farmer voters, including the nominee, must sign the petition."

Two of the three committee members are elected by farmers in the county, and one is appointed by FmHA. Anyone interested in running for the committee can obtain a petition and other information from the FmHA county office at 207 Ave. Farwell, Tx.

Martin heads for Egypt

Warren Martin

Texico High School Senior Warren Martin can't complain that this has been a boring summer.

He has done several things this summer which would have been the highlight of most kids' summer vacations. He started vacation off with a trip to Iowa where he competed in the national Odyssey of the Mind Competition. Then he went to Boys State. When he returned from there he participated in a basketball camp in Roswell. All of this was just a prelude to the big trip of the summer.

Martin will spend the remainder of this summer as a summer youth missionary in Cairo, Egypt. He will help dig a basement and build a dining room for a church in Egypt as part of Teen Missions International which sends 1,800 youth to foreign parts.

Martin left El Paso, Texas on a school bus on June 17 with 32 pounds of bare necessities for the trip. He was only allowed a few personal items such as a sleeping bag, towels, clothing, laundry soap, and his camera and film.

He and the other teens bounced around in the school bus as they picked up more participants in San Antonio, Houston, New Orleans, and Florida. The trip took them more than 24 hours, and left Martin with a back ache.

The bus took him to "boot camp" on Merritt Island, Fla., where he will learn about the mission and prepare himself for the trip abroad.

Members of the group will camp out in the open and get into spiritual and physical shape for their mission abroad. They will be expected to cook their own food, wash their own clothing, and do their own mending.

In a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Greg Martin of Texico, Warren wrote of the heat and the hard work. "We just think we sweat in two -a -days."

On July 8, the group will get back on the old school buses and travel from Florida to New York City where they will catch the plane to Egypt.

The group will spend nearly a month in Egypt. Most of the time will be devoted to doing physical labor for a Christian church there. But, they will have some sight-seeing trips to see the pyramids and the ancient artifacts of Egypt.

On Aug. 7 the group will go to Martigny, Switzerland. They will spend about one week touring Switzerland, Austria and West Germany before they fly from Frankfurt, West Germany back to New York. He will have a short stay with other youth who have been involved in the program so that each can tell the others about their experiences in various foreign missions. Martin will not return to New Mexico until Aug. 19.

The trip was possible for Martin because he got sponsors from his church, Advent Christian Church in Clovis, and from friends in Texico to help him on his mission.

Goals established

The High Plains Research Foundation, which for 30 years has worked to assist West Texas agricultural producers, is initiating new efforts to benefit these producers.

Originally a privately-funded, non-profit research and educational entity, the foundation's present role is that of a clearinghouse and facilitator for agricultural research and education throughout the area.

The foundation's board of trustees, under the chairmanship of James E. (Pete) Laney of Hale Center, last year set five new goals for the organization: to bring together groups and individuals interested in High Plains agriculture as a forum to assess needs for and evaluate results of research; to define needs for research, education and extension; to communicate these needs to state institutions and agencies; to support such research by advocating resources and assisting in community awareness, and to help evaluate such research and development.

The foundation now serves as a network linking people from all walks of life who have an interest in supporting and promoting agricultural research in Texas, with an emphasis on the High Plains, Laney explained.

The board is made up of farmers, ranchers, representatives from commodity groups of nearly every crop, and of producer and agribusiness organizations.

Twice a year, the board meets with leaders of agricultural research, and extension agencies to discuss research and educational programs that will most benefit producers. Such agencies include the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas Tech University, and West Texas State University.

Information from these discussions is then presented to legislators, who determine the funding needed for the research.

"The foundation, serving as an advocate for research and development, will play a key role in the future destiny of High Plains agriculture and economy," said Dr. Robert E. Merrifield, Deputy Director of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Noting the "long standing and productive partnership" of TAES and the foundation since the 1970's, Merrifield said such synergism "couldn't have been accomplished without the forceful and dedicated leadership of the foundation."

He said TAES, through its research locations at Lubbock, Halfway, Amarillo and Vernon, "is pleased to join with the foundation in a renewed effort to develop the technology necessary to keep High Plains agriculture competitive in domestic and world markets."

"The foundation has been particularly instrumental in stimulating and nurturing the high level of research collaboration which exists today between Texas Tech University and the various agencies of the Texas A & M University System," Curl said.

Dr. Zerie L. Carpenter, director of the Extension Service said his agency is "proud to be a partner with the High Plains Research Foundation in a unified effort to help the region's agricultural industry prosper."

Carpenter said that for many years the foundation has served as a source of sound production information for the area's agricultural interests. "The Extension Service, through its specialists and county agents, has made excellent use of this information in delivering sound, unbiased educational programs to agricultural producers throughout the region," he said.

Results of research conducted by these agencies at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station facilities here, purchased from the foundation last year, and at the Experiment Station facility at Lubbock are presented in an annual progress report. This is mailed to all supporting members of the foundation.

"This report contains more information than ever," Laney said. It includes a listing of scientists conducting research not only in West Texas, but across the state, as well as daily weather data for the High Plains growing season.

"The foundation encourages agricultural leaders and legislators from other parts of the state and nation to visit the High Plains so that we may exchange ideas on the needs of agricultural research," Laney said.

Students learn how business works

Lenore Chavez, Amy Chadwick, Denise Gonzales, Dwayne Hamilton, and Penny Pierce of Texico attended Business Awareness Week at New Mexico State University in Las Cruces. During the week that the students were there, they learned about how business works.

One hundred and forty participants were divided into 10 companies. No group could have more than one person from the same school. The Texico students were divided up and didn't see much of each other during the week they were in Las Cruces. "At first we thought that we would stick together, but pretty soon we realized that we wouldn't," said Hamilton.

Once the groups had been divided into companies, they set to work on a computer game. Each company elected officers, and made decisions about how their company would buy, sell and manufacture their imaginary products.

At the start of the game, each of the companies had the same amount of money and each started in the same position. The decisions that the company made determined what happened to their company. Each day the group would get a computer print-out that told them what their actions had done to the value of their company.

Dwayne Hamilton was assigned to "G Company" which manufactured a product called "G skis"-jet skis. His group made some gambles the first day or two and wound up in last place of all of the groups at the end of the second day because of their decisions. Then they heard a speaker who explained a few key points on Wednesday, and they decided to play smarter. They began to "buy" information about what other companies were doing from the computer. This market research helped them make better decisions. Their company finished the competition in third place.

Hamilton was the vice-president in charge of finance for his company. He had to make the pricing recommendations to the group, so he took a lot of responsibility for the way the group finished in the competition even though other members of the group also had important parts to play in the activity. Some of the things they had to do were: design a marketing campaign, write a jingle or song, produce a commercial, make a logo, and prepare articles for publication. They also had to come up with the product's name.

G Company won the Business Awareness Week award for their marketing campaign. They produced a commercial jingle set to the music of the Beach Boys' "Little Duce Coupe" which was very well received. The award they won was just as important as winning the financial award at the end of the computer simulation game.

Hamilton call Business Awareness Week a "well run program." There were many informative speakers, and plenty of activities for everyone to do. "It was well organized, and they had good food and nice dorms," he said.

The nicest thing about the program was the opportunity to make lasting friendships with other young people from around the state of New Mexico. "A majority of the kids didn't want to go home when it was over," said Hamilton. "Everyone should go to this program. It lets you learn from your own mistakes, and you learn a lot more that way," he said.

"I really enjoyed it," said Dwayne Hamilton of the experience. "I really got a lot out of it," he said.
