Bike contest slated

All area youngsters are reminded that registration has begun for the Border Town Days Decorated Bike Contest at Texico City Hall.

This year offers a special incentive: Ted Lopez, of Tedson Trailers, is donating a brand new bike to the winner of "Best of Show" - the bike judged as best decorated regardless of age category.

This year's BTB theme is "Salute to Our Troops." It's important to follow the theme, since that is a large portion of the judging.

Also, an anonymous donor has provided funds for cash prizes in each category. And every entrant in the contest will receive a free ticket to ride the Bell Train.

The registration deadline is 3 p.m. Friday, July 26.

Mrs. Qualls said that youths planning to enter the decorated bike contest in the parade need to register, giving their name and age, to be eligible for the cash prizes and free train tickets.

No motorized bikes are allowed in the contest.

All riders must bring their decorated bikes to Anderson Street (between Texico City Hall and the flea market - across the street from Citizens Bank) at 9:45 a.m. Texas time, and line up for judging there on July 27.

Other rules are:

- All participants ride in the parade and must continue to Farwell City Park, and then park their bikes in the park area. A bicycle rack will be provided in back of the First Baptist Church.

- You must be present at the park to receive your cash prize and free train tickets.

There will be two judging divisions:

- Division A: Best decorated bike, ages 7-12.

- Division B: Best decorated bike, ages 6 and under.

Judging will be based 50 percent on originality and theme; 30 percent on neatness, and 20 percent on the use of color.

Charlie Phillips, band to give benefit in Clovis

Charlie "Sugartime" Phillips and his band "The Sugar-timers" will play a benefit dance at the Clovis Holiday Inn July 26 at 9:30 p.m. cdt. Tickets are $5 in advance, and $6 at the door.

This is the third annual benefit Charlie will be doing for the Farwell Convalescent Center in conjunction with Border Town Days.

Charlie grew up at Farwell and graduated from Farwell High School. Though he has lived in Amarillo a number of years, he enjoys coming back to Farwell and says, "I like doing something for my hometown."

Phillips became famous for writing and recording the No. 1 hit in 1958 called "Sugartime." His original version was recorded at the Norman Petty Studios in Clovis.

Phillips extends a special invitation to all Farwell and Texico ex-students. Table reservations for class groups and class reunions may be made by calling 481-3441.

Class reunions expected are: Texico classes of 1952, 1953 and 1981; and Farwell classes of 1931, 1943, 1956, 1961, 1971 and 1981.

Texico gets optimistic financial outlook on KKR Park well

The Texico City Council got an optimistic funding forecast Tuesday from its engineering consultant on the contaminated well problem.

Don Diego Gonzales, of Weston Corp., Albuquerque, said Texico quite likely will get a big state grant to help pay the costs of solving the problem.

The city is facing a huge financial undertaking: to eliminate the contaminant found in the now-closed KKR Well park, to connect the KKR and Tower Park wells (which would dilute the contaminant), and to build a new well.

Gonzales said the city is eligible for two state grants: - One with a $250,000 limit for emergencies. Gonzales said the needed air stripper in the KKR Well, costing about $60,000, may qualify.

- One with a $600,000 limit. On Gonzales' recommendation, the city council will suggest its total cleanup package. "There's a good chance to pick up most of this money if not all of it," said Gonzales.

The city has to present its package to the state by Aug. 23 for that second grant. Awards are announced Nov. 7.

Discussing that second grant, the city is preparing to take a survey of residents in order to try and show that over 50 percent fall into low to moderate income categories. If that proves true, then any funds gotten from that grant fund would not have to be repaid.

However, if less than 50 percent of Texico residents are considered with low to moderate incomes, then the city has to repay 5 percent of the loan. Thus, if Texico was given the $600,000, it would have to later repay $30,000.

The 1980 census showed that Texico had 47 percent of its residents fall into the low to moderate income categories.

Texico has scheduled public hearings on the well problem and its seeking of state financial aid for July 30 and Aug. 6 at 6:30 p.m. mdt at Texico City Hall.

At the July 30 meeting, it will further discuss the survey to be taken. Residents, especially those who are Spanish-speaking, are asked to attend so plans can be finalized.

The survey basically has two questions: how many people are in your household, and what is your yearly income. No names and addresses are needed. The more folks polled, the better the survey will look when it is presented as part of the grant request.

In his presentation, Gonzales made three major points:

1) The city needs to buy an air stripper for the KKR Park well.

2) The KKR Park well should be tied into the Tower Well, and the dilution of the contaminant should meet acceptable levels.

3) The "historic landfill" - the area covering the northern part of KKR Park and the adjacent Moore property - will need to be excavated, as well as the lagoon on the southern part of KKR Park.

He said the lagoon can be eliminated by designing a plan to divert surface water elsewhere. Last year, the city had preliminary plans made to divert this water to the west.

Gonzales said the debris and material buried in the "historic landfill" must be removed. He figured the debris was about 6 to 8 feet deep and it would take 2 to 3 weeks to remove it. "The new well would draw the contaminated plume toward it unless it's removed," he said.

Also, a site must be found for a new well. Currently, only the Tower Well is working.

When Texico goes before the state board, Gonzales said the city has to: explain the project, show a need, show appropriateness, explain its fiscal capacity, feasibility of the project, cost benefits to the city and state, and show how the improvements will be maintained. This package must be put together before Aug. 23.

Weston Corp. already has received the $16,000 the city voted to pay as a limit, so the council Tuesday voted unanimously to add $23,000 to the contract.

Lewis Cooper, who was on the City Council when the KKR Well was built around 1980, was in the audience. Gonzales asked him if it were true that the well was built through debris. Cooper said he was not aware of that until just recently.

It still has not been determined what caused the toxic contaminant problem at KKR Park Well. Gonzales said the No. 1 suspect is the "historic landfill."

The costs involved in meeting the well problem already has taken a toll. City Attorney Duane Hamar said the decision to add a second police officer has been put on hold because of finances. It was noted that the city has had 18 burglaries

City councilwoman Carolyn Burrows emphasized the need for the city to look to areas "where we're not collecting funds." She noted the city ordinance that provides for business license fees, generally $25. A discussion was held over whether businesses using the flea market were paying their fees and gross receipts taxes. This will be checked into.

In other business, the council:

- Decided to have specifications written for an enlarged computer system for City Hall employees, estimated to cost up to $25,000. It will have four work stations.

- Approved the annual street chip seal project. The state will pay $38,740 toward the cost of $64,500.

- Councilman Oran Jay Autrey reported that the annual highway cleanup before Border Town Days, spearheaded by the Texico Chamber of Commerce, went well.

- Heard Cooper, Chamber president, say the fire department was considering killing the weeds at KKR Park and clean it up. The city gave them the go-ahead.

- Heard that the county is planning a bond issue in the neighborhood of $5 million for a new jail.

West's retire

Two long-time Texico High School teachers, Kay and Eddie West, have resigned.

Eddie West, a graduate of New Mexico State University, has 28 years of teaching experience. He taught at Grady for 5 years and worked as a New Mexico State Poultry and Egg inspector before he accepted a teaching job at Texico. Over the years, he has taught vocational agriculture courses. He has sponsored the Texico FFA, and he has coached JV ball.

His wife, Kay, is a graduate of Texas Tech University. She has taught junior high and senior high English and journalism at Texico since 1971. She has sponsored the Junior Class and the yearbook at Texico High School.

Each year the Wests have served as sponsors of the Texico FFA. They have accompanied students to many meetings, fairs, state conventions and to the national FFA Convention in Kansas City.

The Wests plan to take some much needed vacation time, and to spend time with their family. They have three sons, Sammy, Joe, and Kevin, and 9 grandchildren (with one more grandchild due in September).

Gridders to report

Texico Football Coach Bruce Scroggins reports that those Texico High School students who are interested in playing football will meet at in the coach's office at 9 a.m. mdt on Aug. 5 to pick up forms for physicals and insurance and parental permission and to get equipment.

The coach will probably be available to meet with the potential players again that afternoon about 4.

The weight room will be open the week of Aug. 5-12 for those players who are interested in some pre-season conditioning before the football season when it actually starts.

The Latest

Marian Greenway, director of nursing for the past year at the Farwell Convalescent Center, has resigned to take a post at a Denton, Texas, nursing home.

Ina Martin of Redlands, Calif. stopped by the Tribune office recently. She was visiting her cousins, the Gary Singleterry family in Pleasant Hill. While here, she found a book with the cattle brand that her father and grandfather, J.K. and E. P. Billingsley, used on their cattle.

Mrs. Martin was raised about 5 miles north of Farwell. She stopped by town on her way home from the Singleterry reunion in Arkansas. She decided to visit Gary and Kay Singleterry because they had to miss the reunion.

Border Town Days are here again!

We are so looking forward to the many things there are to see at the picnic, parade and the music entertainment. Such a nice variety is planned.

The F.C.C. Auxiliary has their bake sale, the residents have their small arts and crafts to sell, and the nursing department will have their blood pressure booth.

The Auxiliary has so many excellent bakers that their baked goods usually go quickly. Do come by so you can get your choice of cookies, brownies, breads, etc., before they run out. The center will also be having several kinds of cobbler made by our kitchen staff to sell. Mercy - talking about all this food can make a person hungry.

We hope to see many of you we haven't had a chance to see for awhile, so do stop by and chat. Don't forget to give us a big wave during the parade. We will be the float with all the "young" ones on board.

Happy Border Town Days, Texico and Farwell.

Something for everyone

It's finally here - the 25th annual Border Town Days Celebration.

Once again, the outlook is optimistic. We have a full array of fun events scheduled - something for everyone.

The gala kicks off tonight (Friday) with a two-night amateur rodeo. Folks, this is really special. Please come out and support it.

Folks like Hobbie Coffman, the Kirklands, the Autreys and so many other have worked diligently to refurbish the Farwell Arena and offer a really special event for our Twin Cities.

Don't let 'em down. Take time, either tonight or tomorrow night, to stop by and show our support. Texico and Farwell are famous for supporting local groups; let's keep it going.

We're talking about a full-fledged rodeo here. All kinds of events. The tickets are inexpensive so there's no reason why you shouldn't stop by one of the two nights.

Saturday, the day will start with the decorated bike contest. Remember, kids, the theme - "Salute to our Troops" will play a big part in determining the winners. You need to be at the contest site by 9:45 a.m. cdt (see story listing in today's paper).

Tedson Trailers has donated a bike to the Grand Champion. And other winners will get cash prizes. The LTD Committee will give all entrants tickets good for one ride each on the CAKE Train.

The Big Parade kicks off at 11 a.m. cdt. Again, we'll have a lot of music, thanks to Gladys Hardage's calliope and the Texico and Farwell bands.

A special thanks to the band directors for their participation - Robert Simmons at Texico and the newly-hired Jim Bouse at Farwell. Bouse doesn't officially start until school time, yet he is giving his time to come here for LTD. That's appreciated.

The parade takes about 45 minutes (I have discovered that that's a perfect time for a parade). Then it's time to head over to the Farwell City Park for the big barbeque and a host of other concession stands.

Over 1,000 folks each year enjoy that barbeque. You can get your tickets early from Rotary Club members - $5 for adults and $2.50 for youths.

There will be at least 14 food booths at the park - again, something for everyone.

And after eating, you can enjoy more than 30 arts and crafts booths on the courthouse lawn. Lynne Mahaney, who is in charge of this part, said the variety will be really special this year.

The lineup for the gazebo is strong:

- The Hardages, with emcee Fred Chandler, will play throughout the afternoon - a tradition that is enjoyed by all.

- The "Billy the Kid" troupe is back - kids love 'em. The same is true for Joni Autrey, grand-daughter of Lola Richardson of Pleasant Hill.

- The teen Christian rock group "Vizion" will play twice - at 12:30 p.m. and again at

Border Banter

By Mike Pomper

4:30 p.m. Plus, there will be a band from ENMR.

- And the queen's contest features 11 young ladies from Texico and Farwell.

This year's theme is "Salute to our Troops" and I'd like to thank Rubie Craft, who manages the Sunbelt Savings office here, for heading the project at identifying and crediting those of our youths who served during the Gulf War. Some are expected to ride in the parade.

And don't forget the Merchants Giveaway that will take place throughout the day. More than 40 free prizes will be awarded.

And let's also remember the Charlie Phillips concert at the Holiday Inn in Clovis - a fund-raiser for the Farwell Convalescent Center.

I think it's really amazing that a small community like Texico-Farwell can put on an event like this. Just with any major project, it's a team effort. Here are some of the folks who made it possible:

Ann Cooper, Shandra McIntosh, Willie Dannheim, Debra Loooper, Lynn Gann, Becky Street, Cynthia Thigpen, Lynn Mahaney, Dee and Billy Hammit, Leigh Ann Woods, Susan Franse and her whole queen's contest committee, Dutch Quickel, Rhonda Qualls, Orie and Peggy Jones, Rick Sullivan, Fry Urioste and the area police departments, Maurine Caywood, Rob Pomper, the Twin City fireboys, etc.

I can go on and on, listing just about every community group. Everyone helps - and that's great.

Last year, I counted more than 3,000 folks at LTD (taking into account some who come and go). All I can say is, not too shabby for a community of 2,300 folks!

Arts, crafts show to offer wide variety

More than 30 booths will be featured in the Border Town Days arts and crafts show on the courthouse lawn July 27.

Committee chairperson Lynne Mahaney reports a wide variety of crafts will be offered. They include:

Wood earrings, key chains, tenny toppers, Indian items, hand quilted wood villages, sketching and calligraphy, soft sculpture face painting, jewelry, wood decor, beaded items, PVC furniture and ceramic, banks, puzzles, water colors and pencil drawings.

Also, crochet and kitchen items, shells, baskets, hand made pottery, country furniture, T-shirts, sweatshirts, leather and cloth items, crochet and plastic canvas, handbags and wallets, children's creative clothing, denim clothes, concho belts, photos and puzzles, Southwestern clothing and country items, dolls and fine art.

Showing their wares will be:

Agnes Brown, Clovis; Eddie and Jill Novak, Roswell; Pat and John Sellers, Loop, Texas; Joyce Wilson, Farwell; Jeanette Hurt, Farwell; Joan Faircloth, Texico; Phillie Ross, Plainview; Charlie and Jean Anderson, Clovis; Alma Garms, Farwell; Opal Childers, Lubbock; June Mosley, Loop.

Also, Ray Talley, Shallowater, Texas; Tommie Meeks, Clovis; Dawn Jalbert, Clovis; Joy Davis and Martha Armstrong, Rogers, N.M.; Butch Marks, Clovis; Karen Overstreet and Carolyn Sawyer, Lubbock; Diann Eshleman, Clovis; Gary Shankles, Carlsbad, N.M.

Family gathering held here

Ruby Newby Byrnes, 86, of Farwell and her brother Amos Newby, 88, of Lubbock enjoyed a family gathering at the Farwell Park on July 10.

Joining Ruby and Amos for the reunion were: Tiny Byrnes Jowell of Prescott Valley, Arizona; Mary Beth Newby Jenkins of Lubbock; Stan, Jackie, and Rala Byrnes of Dimmitt; James, Poppy (Byrnes), T.J., and Jake Head of Hereford; Blanche Hudson of Earth; Bridgett and Marc Howe and Buddy and Jeri Byrnes of Clovis.

Ruby Byrnes and Amos Newby are the only surviving children of Fred and Julia Newby. They are unable to get together very often these days, so the family decided to join them in their Newby family reunion.

RODEO

Here comes the rain

The Twin Cities' area received more rain this week. Lariat got a shower on Sunday night that brought about .43" of moisture, said Lonnie McFarland, manager of the Sherley Anderson Grain Elevator in Lariat.

He reports that most of the crops in his area are looking pretty good. "Some with well trouble got stressed, but most crops are right on schedule." The potato harvest is going on there right now, and the corn will probably be ready for harvest about mid-September.

More rain fell Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. Fred Chandler, manager of the Sherley Anderson Pitman Grain Elevator in Farwell reported .7" of rain.

Tommie Snodgrass reports 1" at their ranch near Texico. Neither Lariat nor Lazbudie got any additional rain on Wednesday night.

Enjoy all the fun: Big Parade, Day in the Park, Arts & Crafts, Barbeque, Decorated Bike Contest, Country Strings, Joni Autrey, Vizion, Queen's Contest, the Hardages, CAKE Train, petting zoo, puppet show and much, much more!

Corns get to visit Germany, Czechoslovakia

Farwell High junior Clay Corn and his grandmother, Ann Corn of Bovina, returned recently from a trip to Germany and Czechoslovakia. They were accompanied by Clay's cousins, David Sorley of Dallas and Doris Grissom of Dallas.

"The first thing I saw was a three tower nuclear power plant near the Frankfurt Airport. You could see it while you were landing. Franky was very modern, probably more modern than the United States," he said.

The Autobahn really impressed Corn. "We were driving along the road doing a casual 160 km. (100 miles per hour) when this motorcycle passed us like we were standing still. The rider leaned into a wide turn and just disappeared," he said.

In spite of the fact that there are no speed limits outside of towns, Germany has few traffic accidents. They have very comprehensive drivers' education classes, and are very strict about enforcing drunk driving laws. The driving age is 18 in Germany, so Clay was not able to try out the Autobahn.

They did run into a couple of traffic jams that were miles and miles long. As more Europeans begin to own cars, the more the German Autobahn system is becoming clogged.

"They've also got a new train system with bullet trains from large city to large city," he noted. There are also passenger trains that regularly service the outlying areas. He called the system quite efficient, although he noted that the German transit system was working on "a few glitches," when they were there.

In Frankfurt, Clay stayed in the beautiful 5 star Kimpinski Hotel. "It was 5 star times 2," he said. This was the first time that Clay had ever stayed in such a luxurious place. He was quite impressed.

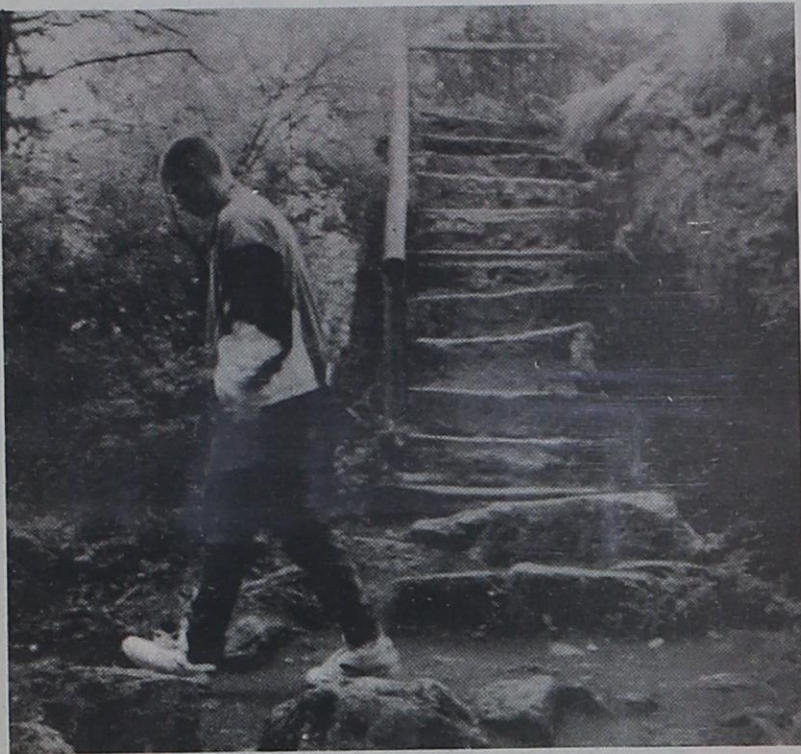

While they were eating in the luxurious hotel dining room, Clay's grandmother picked up the plate she was eating from and noticed it was made in Shoenwald, West Germany, the town where she spent part of her childhood. The porcelain made in her hometown is used by many hotels throughout Europe. Shoenwald was one of the stops on their trip. While they were in Shoenwald, they visited Mrs. Corn's cousins, Otto and Else Ploss.

From Shoenwald - near the Czech border - they could see the high school in Asch, Czechoslovakia, where Ann Corn went to school.

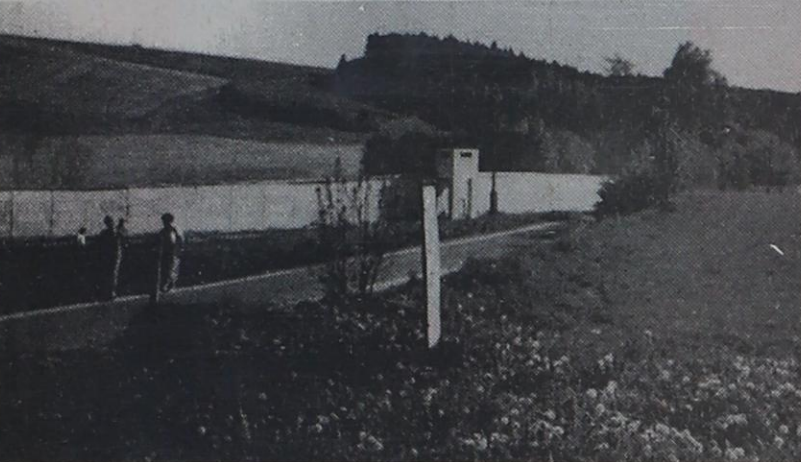

"They are about 5 minutes' drive from one another, and the people lived in a different world from each other. There are almost no Germans in Asch, and almost no Czechs in Shoenwald," said Corn.

Asch had been a very rich textile manufacturing community before World War II. Corn heard people say that the communist government wanted Asch destroyed, and "it all came out of the wealthiest people's pockets. Now it is all dirty and run down."

Clay Corn hiked through the Bavarian woods.

A portion of the wall that separated East and West Germany still remains as a monument.

This famous church is in Bamberg, West Germany.

Clay's grandmother and her parents were forced leave Asch when the Communist government took power in Czechoslovakia. She moved to Shoenwald with one suitcase. During the trip she saw old friends and relatives that she had not seen for many years. It was a very happy homecoming.

She and the members of her family were also able to visit the grave of her step-father, Christian Swoboda, who died two years ago.

Little details underlined the differences between the lifestyle of the people on either side of the border.

"People on one side of the border drove Mercedes Benzes and on the other they drove these little two cylinder, two cycle cars with engines like motorcycle engines," said Clay. The two countries were close together and the people who lived there were aware of what was going on across the border, even when it was impossible to cross it.

In Czechoslovakia, "the wall" was actually some white stakes with a 30' minefield between, but the wall between East and West Germany included a concrete fence with spiraled electric barbed wire atop. There were tall guard towers, and the wall there was topped by cannons loaded with items like glass and nails.

When they visited the wall, one of Clay's cousins told him the story of a person had attempted to pole vault over the minefield a few years earlier, and had been hit by shot from one of the cannons. He was injured by the shot, but he had lived.

They visited the Kornberg- a 75' tower in the wall. Near it was a 400' radar tower that sent messages to Moscow.

They also saw a place where there is a monument. It is supposed to have been the spy hole where spies traveled from the East to the West.

During the trip they visited a place near Hoff, Germany where the East Germans had a kennel for the dogs that patrolled the border. "They left in such a hurry, that there was still a wheel barrel full of meat and bones for the dogs," said Corn.

On the West German side of the border, bridges have manholes filled with bombs which could destroy the bridges if Communists from invaded.

Corn noted that the young people he had met on the trip were much more politically minded than American young people. "You could get into an argument and 4 hours later still lose," he noted.

The Texans visited many of the tourist attractions while they were in Germany.

In Munich they saw the famous clock with figures that dance around. And they climbed the tower in the Cathedral.

They saw Marienbad, a mineral bath resort which was used by kings and queens for their cures. Marienbad had become quite run down during the Communist era, but now it is a tourist attraction. "The buildings are very old. The fascades have been rebuilt and repainted; it's just amazing," he said.

The contrast in economic policies between East and West is underlined by the price of food. In the former East Germany, the Corns enjoyed a wonderful meal for four people in a very elegant restaurant for only $15. In Munich, a dinner for 6 people in a less fancy restaurant cost $60. In Germany a glass of Coca-Cola cost about $1. In Czechoslovakia a bottled Coke cost about 18 cents.

"We also saw Braunfels, that's were the prince of Braunfels lived before he came to Texas and founded New Braunfels, Texas. They called him "Texas Pete." The former prince's relatives live in the castle in Braunfels and are still addressed as "your highness."

They visited Fruedenstadt, "the Friendly City," of the Black Forest. It has the largest market place in Germany - 4 kilometers in circumference. Clay referred to the Black Forest as very beautiful. The steep hills and majestic trees made it a wonderfully scenic place to visit.

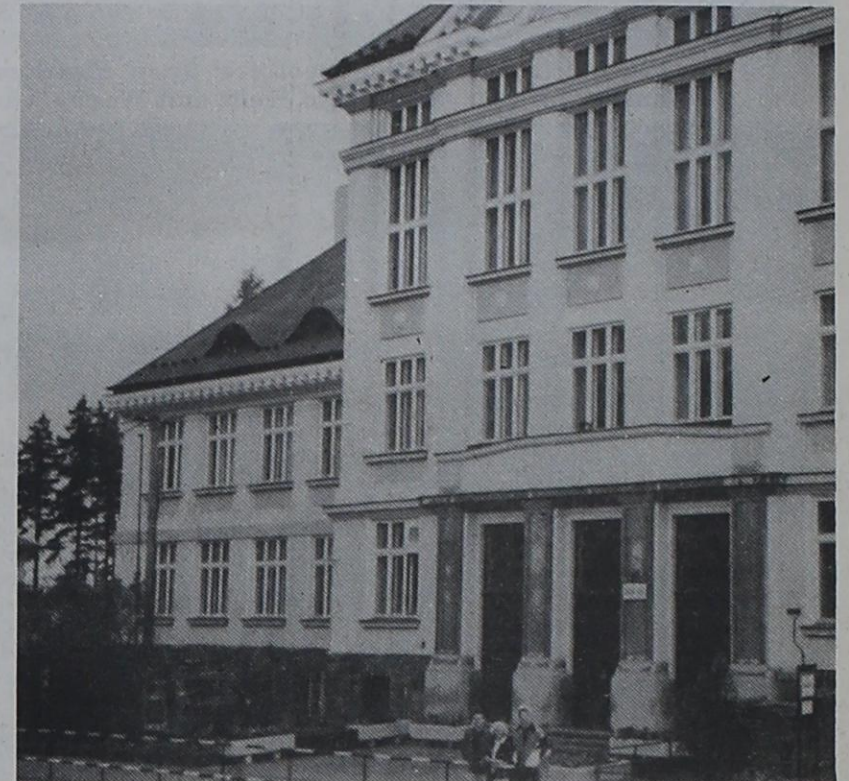

A highlight for Corn was a visit to Bamberg. They arrived at the Cathedral in Bamberg (which was built in 1015) just in time for the noon organ concert.

Clay, who loves to play the piano and keyboard, was really impressed by the ancient pipe organ. "We sat next to the bass pipes. They were 4' wide and 30' tall. They were huge. It was monumental." It takes two people to operate the mechanical pipe organ. One to run the bellows and to turn the music, and one to play the organ."

Bamberg is the home of a huge government building which sits in the middle of a tributary of the Main River. The Protestant people of Bamberg wanted to build a city hall, but the Catholic run government refused to give up the land for the building. So the building was built on a little island in the river and the water runs under the building.

The trip made Corn very proud of the U.S. "You don't realize that you have it so good until you see other parts of the world. Traveling put a different perspective on my appreciation of the U.S." "We have diversities in our people, and we have different accents in English, but over there they spell words entirely differently and they say things entirely differently from one state to another. It is very difficult for people from the state of Hess to understand somebody from Bavaria."

In Fruedenstadt in the Black Forest area, Clay's grandmother couldn't understand the German spoken by some people even though she is fluent in German.

Marienbadd, Czechoslovakia, is known for its famous spas. Clay Corn and his grandmother stand outside of one of the famous buildings there.

Launching the sorties!

The following information was provided by Debbie Phillips of Farwell about her brother-in-law who has just returned from the Gulf. It was supplied by the Navy Public Affairs Center.

Navy Capt. Arboth Andrew Rylant, brother-in-law of Dewayne and Debbie Phillips of Farwell, who recently returned from duty in support of Desert Storm aboard the carrier USS Ranger, has a prediction he'd like to make.

"Hollywood will probably try to capture Desert Storm on film but they won't come close to the real events as they occurred. They won't be able to touch those intangibles - heart, discipline, bravery and love of country that I observed aboard Ranger during the 43 days of combat."

Rylant has had a distinguished career as a naval aviator, flying the A-6 Intruder but this time his expertise was needed not in the cockpit but on the carrier. He heads the Ranger's Air Department - a unit of 530 men who man the control tower, handle the aircraft, fuel airplanes and work the carrier's catapults and flight lines.

The Ranger, a flattop based in San Diego, arrived on station in the Persian Gulf the day before hostilities began. Its planes flew the first strikes into Iraq two hours past midnight on Jan. 17.

"The more sorties the carrier launched, the more hours we spent in the tower and the more grueling the schedule is for the flight deck guys," Rylant explained. "On a normal cruise we work 12 hours on 12 hours off. During Desert Storm the first few days we worked round the clock and finally cut back to 16 to 18 hours a day."

The professional voice the fighter, attack, helicopter and reconnaissance pilots heard inside their helmets is always the voice of Rylant or his assistant, the mini-air boss. In the critical set-up to an approach the veteran aviators are there, like a second set of reflexes for the pilots.

Since the majority of the pilots who flew in Desert Storm had never flown in combat, the professionalism of the 44-year-old former test pilot was doubly appreciated.

"Once they're 10 nautical miles or less from the carrier, I control them. Outside of the 10 miles the control is done by instruments," he explained.

Capt. Arboth Rylant

Heltons 'tie me kangaroo down'

By Judy Pomper

Hal Helton doesn't remember what happened to July 10. All he knows is that he boarded an airplane in Albuquerque on July 9 along with his wife, Gloria; children, Kyle, 12, and Kymberly, 3; and his parents, Joe and Dardanella Helton, and 23 pieces of luggage.

He remembers that they flew from Albuquerque to Denver, and from to Los Angeles. From there they boarded a 14 hour flight to Sydney, Australia where they arrived at 6:30 a.m. on July 13. Somewhere along the line the group crossed the international date line and misplaced July 10 altogether.

As the newly elected Lions Club District Governor of District 40X, Hal Helton was on his way to the International Lions Club Convention in Sydney, Australia to attend the installation ceremony.

During the course of the Australian visit, which lasted from June 9 -July 5, the Texico native drove about 3,600 miles - almost all of them on what most Americans would consider the wrong side of the road. Members of the Helton party toured many famous sights from Brisbane in the north to the southern coast.

Hal Helton admits that at one point in his trek he looked up from the steering wheel to see a truck (or lorry, as the British would say) aiming straight at him. He realized that it was he, and not the truck, on the wrong side of the road. Luckily, the mistake was corrected before it caused any major problems.

The convention was held this year at Broad Beach which Helton describes as a "junior Las Vegas" with hotels, convention center, and gambling casinos. Nearly 40,000 Lions Club members from all over the world attended the event which featured lots of meetings, dinners, and a 3 hour long parade.

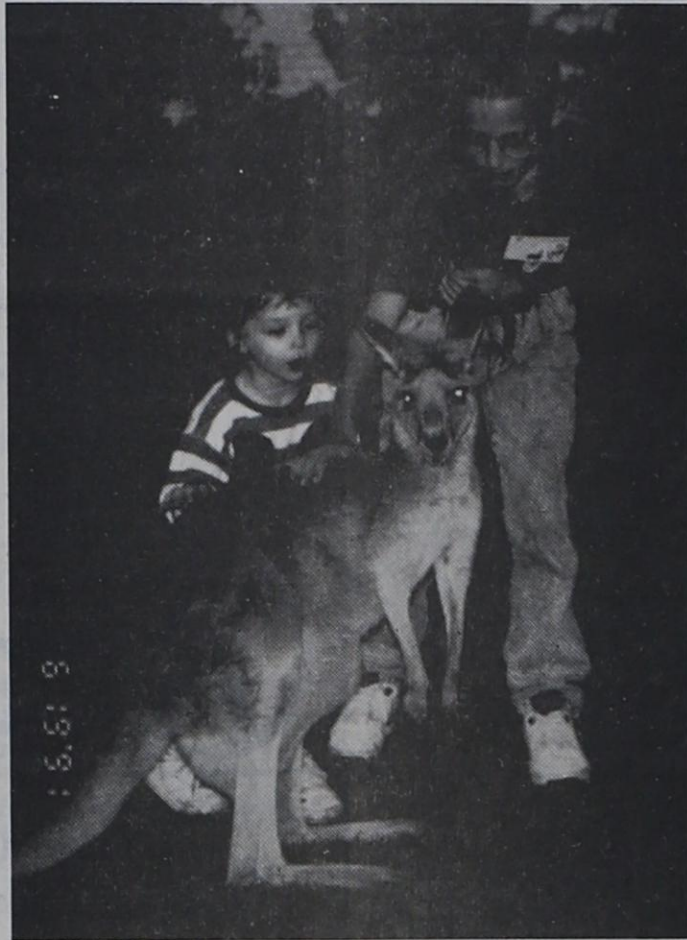

According to Helton, the Australian convention was hampered slightly because of some customs regulations. Delegates were limited in the amount and type of baggage that they could bring with them, and those restrictions limited the number of floats, costumes, flags, and souvenir trading pins that normally abound at a Lions Club International conventions. For instance, one group usually brings along Native American headdresses and costumes to wear in the parade. This year, they were not able to bring all of their gear because of the restrictions. But, the restrictions were not too bad.

Helton noted that this convention had a somewhat more formal atmosphere than some previous conventions. It began with a very formal tribute and toast to Queen Elizabeth II.

Things were livened up a bit when little Kymberly Helton stole the show by walking up to a person wearing a lion costume during one of the convention sessions. The spotlight was on the lion when Kymberly walked up and

Summertime means cookouts

Summertime means cookouts, but outdoor dining takes a little extra planning and preparation. Here are a few ideas to make summertime dining more enjoyable.

- Plan the menu ahead of time so that cold salads or desserts may be made days in advance. That way there will be less preparation on the day of the cookout.

- An ice cream pie may be made days in advance and frozen for an elegant end to a fine meal.

- Salads and appetizer trays may be made long before guests arrive so that they may be brought out at the last minute.

- Either use a gas grill to cook the meat or start the charcoal briquettes well ahead of the time for the guests to arrive. That way, they will not have to wait too long for the meat to cook.

- Set up bug killing devices or lights that repel insects before guests arrive. Have a supply of insect repellent available for guests.

- Set tables so that they will be in a shaded spot at the time that the guests may enjoy themselves.

- Cover each table with a disposable table covering. Tape the corners down so that the table coverings do not blow in the wind.

- Set out plates, cups, silverware and napkins before guests arrive.

- If baked potatoes are on the menu, put them on to cook ahead of time and keep them warm in the oven until guests are ready.

- Light the yard with insect repelling candles or other soft, pretty lights for an evening event.

- Set bottled or canned drinks in tubs of ice so that guests may help themselves.

gave the furry critter a big hug and waved to everyone in the crowd. She was the hit of the evening.

In addition to attending meetings and dinners, the Heltons found time to do quite a bit of sight-seeing. Sydney was one of the highlights of the trip.

The staccato profile of Sydney Opera House juts out into Sydney Harbor. It is one of the scenic highlights of the city. According to Helton, the people of the city of Sydney had the impression that their town lacked culture. They thought that an opera house would add to the cultural atmosphere of the area. Thanks to a lottery, the $8 million structure was paid off in two years time, and Sydney now has one of the outstanding opera houses in the world.

Helton noted that it is a magnificent building is an acoustic masterpiece. It has an organ that is built about half way up one of the walls. A TV screen enables the organist to watch the conductor.

The Heltons saw Sydney Harbor by boat as well as by car. Sydney has a tremendous number of harbors and inlets and beaches. One beach they saw was equipped with shark netting.

The scenery around some of the beaches was especially breathtaking. Nude beaches offered some sights that they wouldn't have seen at home. "They were standing out there on a rock wearing nothing but a smile and waving right back," said Helton.

Another highlight of the trip was seeing the world's largest aquarium. In one section tourists saw many varieties of tropical fish swimming around them in a ring. In another section they saw sharks and manta rays. "I don't think I'd want to meet up with a shark," said Helton after viewing one close up.

The Helton children enjoyed seeing other types of animals along the tour of Australia. Kyle boxed with a small kangaroo, and Kymberly learned to jump like one. They also saw koala bears and dingos.

The trip also allowed them all to taste some very interesting cuisine along the way. At one banquet Chinese food was served in little bowls. Diners were expected to clean their plates because each new course was added to the same bowl.

Some of the items they were served on the trip included: barbecued "bugs"- seafood larger than a crayfish but smaller than a lobster; prawns- giant 6" shrimp served in the shell with the head still attached.

Tea is normally served hot, and "they look at you like you're some kind of foreigner if you ask for iced tea," said Dardanella Helton. "You can get ice and you can get tea, but they don't serve iced tea." The first time she asked for tea in a glass and a glass of ice, the tea came with tea leaves in the bottom.

Waitresses routinely ask customers if they want coffee or tea, "black or white," meaning with or without milk.

Beef is grass fed in Australia, so it has a slightly different taste from corn fed beef in the USA. Hal Helton ordered a steak sandwich in one restaurant, and was surprised to hear pounding from the kitchen where the chef was tenderizing the meat before making it into a sandwich.

Australian fruits abound everywhere. The tiny "sugar bananas", kiwi, strawberries, and other fruits were reported to be extremely cheap.

Eating out in restaurants is normally pretty expensive in Australia. "Food was high, I'm sure glad there was a McDonald's," said Helton.

"Australia is in kind of an economic slump. Workers earn about $4 per hour and the price of things was very high. I paid anywhere from $4.75 - $13 a roll for Kodak film," he said.

Joe Helton added that in his estimation Australia has two classes. "You have the wealthy, and then you have the rank and file. It's more of two levels than three like we have," he said. "Their government has its finger on everything. For example, people have to pay a buyer's fee to the government for every piece of land they buy." Joe Helton noted that things have begun to change in Australia

Australians are working to restore the "James Craig," a ship that sunk and is being salvaged.

Joe, Dardanella, Kymberly, Gloria, and Kyle Helton visited a beach with Australian friends.

The Australian Kangaroo float had a place of honor in the Lions International parade.

Kymberly Helton got a hug from the Lions Club Lion.

Rylant

"We were preparing for war from the time we left San Diego last December," he said. "Actually each time we go to sea the Navy performs as if it were at war. Our training has been as tough and maybe tougher than what we did in combat. Everyone had to have discipline that extra 110 percent, to make things work for the air wing. The Ranger had the oldest equipment of the six carriers in the war and everything worked beyond our expectations."

Still even with excellent training and motivation the hazards to the carrier were increased by its wartime footing. Aside from the mines and the missile threat the carrier had its own explosive problems to contend with.

"The sheer amount of ordnance aboard increased the hazards of the flight deck," said Rylant. "Even a minor accident could have been disastrous and the large number of planes we were launching also increased the obstacle hazard. The biggest enemies on the flight deck are space and time."

During combat, squadrons from the Ranger jettisoned more than two million pounds of ordnance over targets in Iraq and Kuwait. This did not include the weapons carried by fighter aircraft used for air-to-air combat.

"During the war we never even had to rig the barricade to trap a damaged aircraft," said Rylant still marvelling at the carrier's good fortune. "If a pilot had come back with a damaged plane we would probably have diverted his, if possible to Bahrain, we couldn't take the risk of having a fire on the ship or damaging the deck."

Rylant remembers that when the Ranger's commanding officer announced last January that barring message traffic to the contrary the Ranger would launch the first air strikes of the war at dawn there was no noticeable difference between the floating airfield.

"Everyone went about their business," he recalled. "there was no big attitude change. Everyone was already on top of things that they were responsible for."

Although attitudes didn't change aboard the carrier, viewing habits did. Normally at sea, sailor are voracious off-duty movie watchers. This time they watched the news in real - time. Shortly before leaving homeport, the Ranger had a satellite dish installed which allowed them to capture CNN.

"All eyes were on the television," Rylant said. "In the tower we had a monitor to watch the flight deck but we were watching the news."

Rylant first served with the Navy during the Vietnam War; this time the feel was much different. "Watching the news was exceptional," he said. "We all gained a sense of pride for the whole allied operation and for the U.S. forces."

Now back in California, Rylant has the time to reflect on his experiences at war. "I take special pride in the fact that the carriers and the planes made the ground war a short one and less costly in American soldiers and Marine lives," he said. I told my people to think the thoughts of warriors. I think we all expected a worse war than we encountered. We had to be there and we were there for the right reasons."

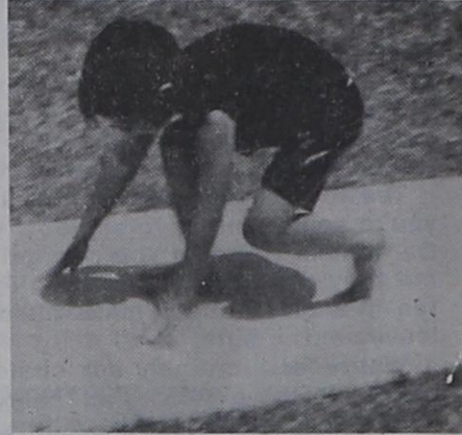

"In hindsight," Rylant concluded. "I didn't see us do anything different from what we usually do when we're at sea, just more of it. We did our jobs the way we were trained to do them and then we were ready to come home."

An alumnus of Springlake High School in Earth, Texas and of West Texas State University where he majored in education, Rylant tried to reach out to his family while deployed, to calm their fears.

"I'd send my son maps so he'd know where we were," he said. "I know they were all glued to the television set. I think it was comforting to them to know that things were going well."

Scott Childers recently returned to Farwell from the Persian Gulf for a short visit with his family. He shared his experiences in Operation Desert Storm with us in the following interview.

By JUDY POMPER

Navy Fire Controlman Third Class Scott Childers joined the Navy to learn electronics. He was told that he would be going to school to become a fire controlman; his immediate reaction was, "I don't want to be a fireman!"

The 1989 Farwell graduate soon learned that the fire controlman operates the computers which aim and fire the artillery on a ship. That was just the schooling that Childers wanted.

Childers had his basic training and one session of schooling at Great Lakes Training Center to learn the basic overall electronics necessary to operate the artillery.

When his class at Great Lakes ended last February, Childers reported to San Diego. From there he was flown from Norfolk, and then on to Italy, Saudi Arabia, and Bahrain. In Bahrain he caught a ship which caught up with the USS Harry W. Hill in the Persian Gulf. He joined his ship on Feb. 10.

His ship was patrolling the Gulf and checking vessels in the Gulf for contraband when he arrived. Later the U.S. Coast Guard ships arrived to take over this duty.

Childers reports that he did not personally see much action while he was in the Gulf.

"My first thought was, 'I'm in a war! Anything can happen.' After a while, though, it's kind of boring."

"There was one time we did have to go to General Quarters. That's the most ready condition. It was kind of scary, but that was about it," he says. "We didn't do much," he adds.

Hearing about other ships hitting mines did cause some concern, but his ship did not experience that kind of action in the Gulf.

"Mainly what everybody was doing is sitting there waiting for something to happen. I'm not going to have terrifying thoughts afterwards about what I did."

During the action the crew operated on shifts of 6 hours of work and 6 off work. The lack of a full night's sleep caused some problems, but nothing major. When it was over, "I was glad to go back to a full night's sleep," he notes.

One of the things that surprised Childers about being aboard a ship was the age of the crew. "It's very scary when you get on the ship and see that they are just a bunch of kids like me. When they are working on the systems, they are very serious. But, when they are off duty, it's just like the kids here on Saturday night," said Childers.

Childers' job entailed working with the electronics that operate the 5" guns on the ship.

Other crewmen called gunner's mates worked the hydrolics of the guns, maintained them, and handled the projectiles that the guns shot. "They maintained and oiled them, and got them ready to go; we did the actual shooting," he notes.

"I work with the gunner's mates and I work on the computer part. If something breaks on the computer, we fix it," he says.

While he was away, Childers missed seeing family and friends. "The hardest thing on ship was not talking to people at home," he notes. He was unable to talk to the folks back home until he arrived in the Philippines on the way back home. There he joked, "My mother asked me what I missed most about not being home, and I told her my car!"

Another thing that was hard for a landubber from Farwell to adjust to was the fact that usually on shipboard there was nothing to see but water in every direction.

Childers has been participating in a special Navy program. He has had basic training, and some advanced training. He will now use his skills for a year or two before he returns to school to learn more advanced electronic skills.

"I'm getting skills, and I'm learning how to use them," he notes. Altogether, Childers will be in the Navy at least 6 years.

When his ship arrived in California, Childers remained on board the ship for two weeks while part of the crew was dismissed for leave back home. During this stand down period the whole ship shuts down its normal procedures, and maintenance is done.

When the first crew members returned from leave Childers was finally able to return home. He was glad to be back in Farwell to see his relatives and friends.

Australia

in the past few years.

While they were in Australia the Heltons had the opportunity to meet many fine people. One hosted a seafood dinner in honor of Dardanella Helton's birthday. Another Australian, by an odd coincidence, was the cousin of someone living on Thornton Street in Clovis. Another was an American who came from Clovis, Calif.

All in all, the Heltons were tired, but very happy that they had had the opportunity to see Australia when they returned home July 4. They turned on their television sets as they unpacked, just in time to see a program about touring Sydney. Just about every scene showed something that elicited the comment, "We've been there!" from the Heltons.
