Almost a millionaire

From Teresa:
 It almost happened folks, I almost became the newest Texas multi-millionaire on Jan. 29.

No, it wasn't the Lottery, nor did I almost come into a really large inheritance ...

I was among the top ten finalists in the big $10 million prize giveaway from Publisher's Clearing House!

I admit it, openly and honestly, I mailed back every envelope from PCH. With every entry, I got 5 more chances, 2 more chances at winning. I bought a few magazines, a few children's books, even a video or two. They were pretty good bargains.

I stopped myself when the urge hit to order the Ronco Slicer-Dicer for 4 payments of $2.99. I practiced diligent self-control when not succumbing to the offer for the leather bound set of 4 Slim Whitman albums.

But by this time, I was already receiving the letters informing me that I was a finalist. I was even called by their prize director three times to verify directions to my house.

Because of all of this, I began to joke about the fact that I was going to win the $10 million with my friends and family.

I joked that I had sent a laminated copy of the directions to my house to their prize patrol director and that I had ordered party platters for the big announcement party. I laughed and played it up big.

Then, about 6:30 p.m. Sunday, I got a phone call. A man introduced himself as Thomas Johnson from Publisher's Clearing House. He wanted to verify the directions to my house.

I knew it was a joke. It had to be.

My mind raced trying to place the voice. I couldn't for the longest time. My heart began to race. I was wearing sweats and my house shoes. I began to wonder if I had any make-up on. Did I curl my hair before church? Did I have cheese dip on my shirt? Was it really going to happen after all my joking?

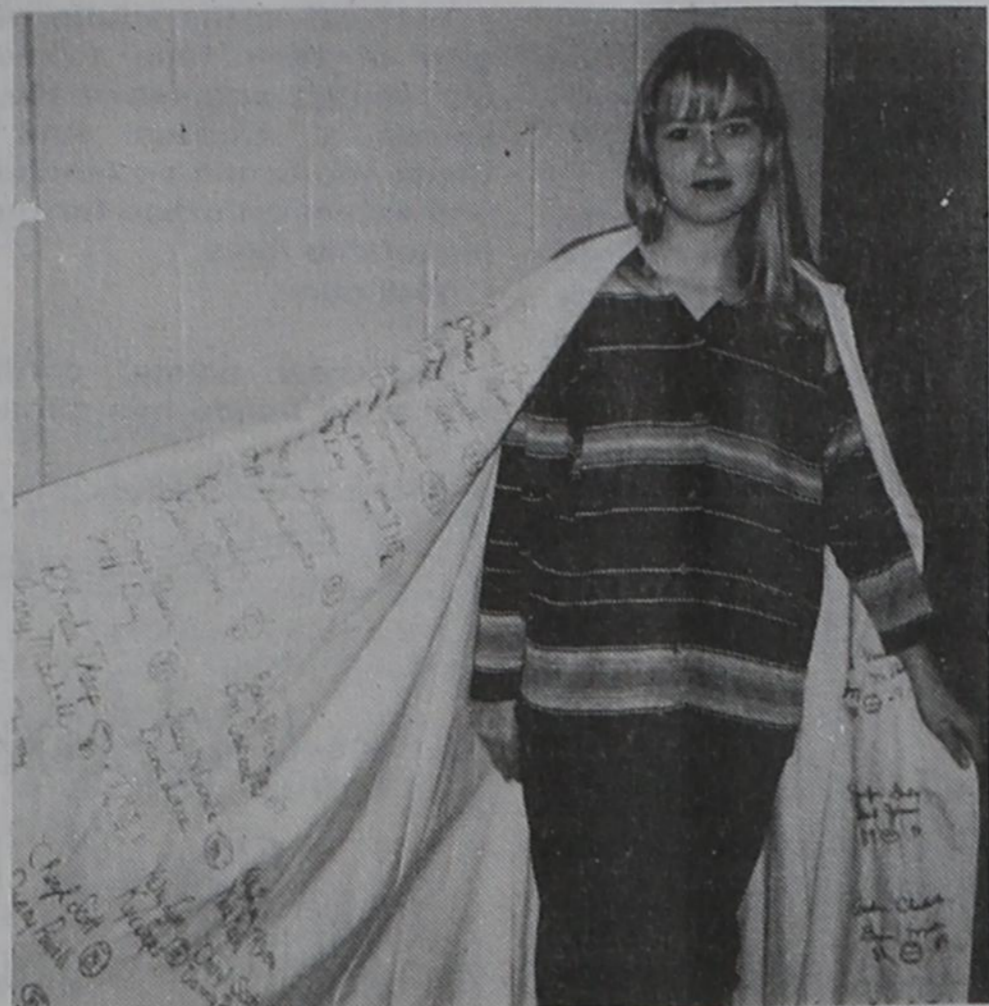

You've seen the commercials. The Prize Patrol greets the winner with the large cardboard check, flowers, champagne, the works. The neighbors are all there screaming and yelling and, this is the most amazing thing, the entire recipients' family has answered the door with them. I don't know about your family, but only one person ever opens the door at our house.

I laughed at the man, and said, "Oh yeah, right! Who is this?"

"Thomas Johnson," he said. "With Publisher's Clearing House. We're looking for your house."

"Oh come on, who is this, well okay, you go on the highway to Lubbock ... wait, where are you?" I queried.

Amanda Engram models the Homecoming Robe that was made by Jere Herington. The robe made its debut in 1979 and has the names of all of the Homecoming Kings and Queens embroidered in the lining of the robe.

Here's the history of the 'Royal Robe'

On Saturday night, the new Homecoming King and Queen will be crowned at Texico High School.

And with their crowns and flowers, the Queen is also given the "Royal Robe" to wear for the coronation and the Homecoming Court pictures.

This isn't just any robe, nor is it one of those costume type robes that you can order from a catalog. This robe was handmade by a local woman who wanted to do something for the school while her children were attending the school.

Jere Herington designed and sewed the Robe and it made its debut in the 1979 Homecoming Coronation.

"I made the robe, but the idea for doing it in the first place belonged to Janice Turner. We both had kids going to school then and we wanted to get involved in the school," she said.

Jere not only made the robe, but she also hand embroidered the names of the King and Queen on the lining. This started a tradition and the names of each of the Homecoming royalty ever since have been added to the lining.

"I just finished updating the names. They hadn't been done for the past eight years, so I went ahead and completed it up to this year," she said.

Sylvia Burgett, a retired Texico school teacher, had also taken part in embroidering the names on the robe.

Jere was a professional seamstress that sewed to make a living. She provided her services free of charge for making the robe and for updating the names.

Being crowned Homecoming Queen is a very special honor in the life of a high school girl and the fact that she can take part in a time honored tradition and become part of a legacy makes it even better.

Texico voters go to the polls

Texico School District voters go to the polls Tuesday to elect school board members and vote on a 2 mill levy.

All voting will take place at the Texico Community Center.

Three School Board posts are on the ballot:

- Position 1: incumbent Paul Dee Barnes, Jackie Don

Roberts and Deborah Autrey.

- Position 2: incumbent Bruce Mayfield, unopposed.

- Position 3: incumbent Byron Mayfield, unopposed.

School officials also are seeking a 2 mill levy, which they say would equal a $20 increase in property taxes based on a house with an assessed valuation of $30,000 and a market value of $33,000. For every $1.06 the local tax contributes, the state would match it with $1.

The tax, if approved, would provide money to maintain, repair and furnish buildings, buy equipment and for improving school grounds. It can't be used for salaries or administrative purposes.

Banquet ticket prices approved

The Farwell Chamber of Commerce Tuesday voted on ticket prices for the annual Chamber banquet, slated for early April.

Previously, one price was charged for tickets in advance and at the door. But last year, there was a last-second rush that caused a need for extra tables, food, etc.

So in order to try to get a better estimate of how many persons plan to attend, this year's ticket prices will be $10 per person in advance or $15 per person at the door.

Still on the subject of the banquet, the Chamber discussed a different type of door prize, also.

Suggested by Donna Ratke were vouchers that would be redeemable at Farwell businesses.

The Chamber discussed ways to get more recommendations for persons as Man and Woman of the Year. Joe Hughes suggested sending letters to local groups and churches asking for nominations.

And the members discussed putting signs on the Amarillo highway near the cemetery urging motorists to turn on the loop into Farwell. One suggestion was that it was a "shortcut" to the Lubbock highway.

Langford picked as judge at National Hereford Show

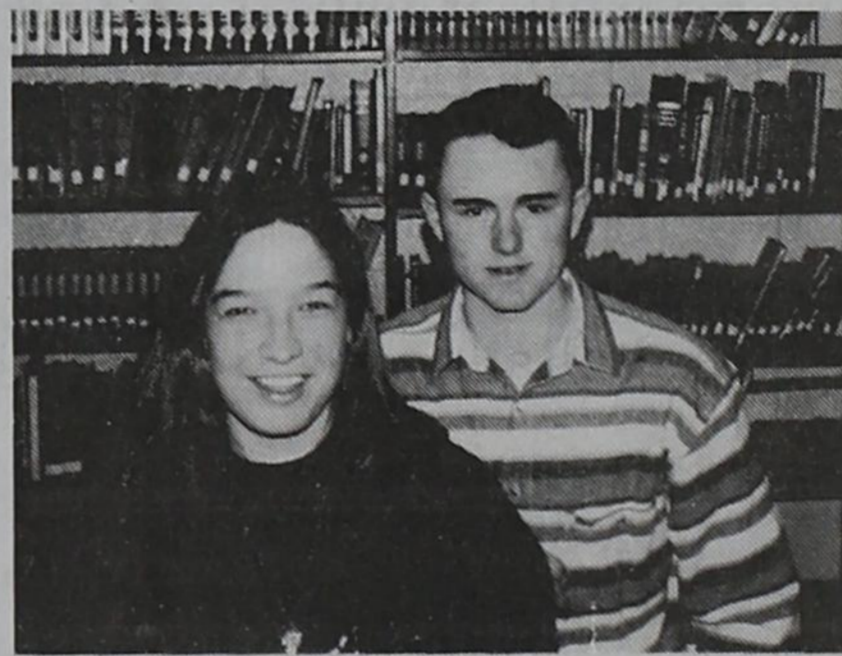

Leon Langford of Texico was the judge for the National Hereford Show in Ft. Worth on Jan. 30. The show was part of the Ft. Worth Stock Show and Exposition.

This is quite an honor for any cattleman to be named a national judge.

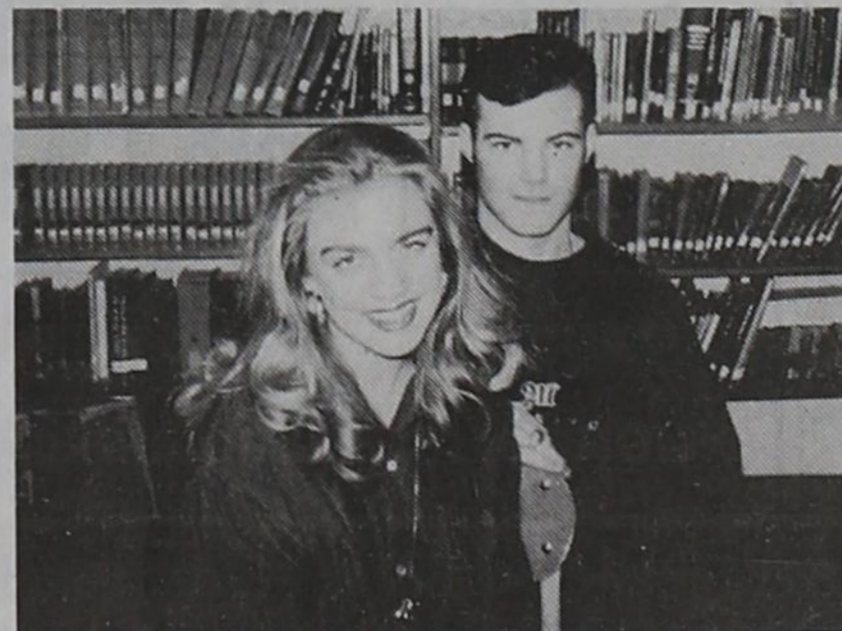

Leon has judged in both the Houston and Amarillo Stock Shows, but had never judged a national show before.

There were 125 Herefords in this national show. They are all registered with the American Hereford Association.

"At, I believe, it's Allsup's convenience store..." he began. Then I heard the whis-pers and giggles.

I screamed out the culprits' names. Then I knew I had been had by the two best jokesters in town. I had joked about all that winning nonsense and had played right into their hands. It was hysterical!

Joe. Mike. Thanks! You both made an otherwise blasé Super Bowl Sunday a little more exciting.

But gosh, I'm still in the running for the other big prizes that will be given away in 1997 and the year 2000.

Kiwanians put on.

Well, folks, February is al-ready here - it seems like it was just Christmas. What happened to January?

We get a list of spe-cial days, weeks and months each month from our press association. I would like to announce that February, among other things, is "Shape Up With Pickles Month."

I recall reading that one of the goals of the new GOP-controlled Congress is to get rid of the age-old practice of spending Congressional time and money on designations such as for the pickle.

I sure hope so. What a waste of time for Congress to mess with stuff like these (all official Febru-ary tributes) - National Snack Food Month, National Grape-fruit Month, Great American Pies Month, Canned Food Month, Potato Lover's Month, etc.

So if you ever wondered what did canned foods, snacks, potatoes and grapefruit have in common - they all are official February whatever...

I mean, does anyone really care about these proclama-tions?

Well, here's my prediction for the Super Bowl (I'm writ-ing this column last Friday): 49'ers 27, Chargers 10.

But I did root for San Diego. I still insist that if the Cowboys had been healthy, they would have rolled over San Francisco. Injuries made the difference.

I thought our area stock shows went extremely well.

Hats off to the adults who give of their time to help our youths and make these shows a success. And a thank you to the ag teachers and extension office for their leadership roles.

Well done. The new animal control officer in Texico has already begun her duties.

So make sure your animals aren't running loose...

We would like to welcome a new business to the Twin Cities: "Steel Building Com-ponents," run by Bill Adams. It's always great when a new business opens here and we wish them well.

They are located in the large building just across the highway from the Spur Restaurant.

'FOR' requirements explained

From Curt Miller, director of the USDA Commodity Credit Corporation Parmer County office:

The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, contains provisions for a Farmer-Owned Reserve (FOR) Program applicable to the 1994 crop of barley, corn, grain sorghum and oats. Nonrecourse regular 1994 crop barley, corn, grain sorghum and oat price support loans are eligible to enter the FOR upon the maturity date of the loan if the commodity is currently collateral for a regular Commodity Credit Corporation nonrecourse price support loan. The President announced provisions of the FOR feed grain program on Nov. 3, which includes a 900 million bushel maximum quantity for entry into the FOR.

The quantity of 1994 crop feed grains that may be placed into the FOR will be determined based on the respective quantities of eligible barley, corn, grain sorghum and oats, under loan that are offered for the FOR as of May 1, 1995, in relation to the 900 million bushel maximum. This maximum quantity includes outstanding 1992 crop feed grains in FOR. Commodities pledged as collateral for nonrecourse loans for which loan documents have not been signed and loans disbursed by March 31, 1995, for barley or oats, and by May 1, 1995, for corn or grain sorghum, will not be eligible for entry into the FOR.

Producers who wish to participate in the 1994-crop feed grain FOR program have until May 1 to file an intention to participate on a form available at the county office in Farwell. An intention to participate is required for each 1994 crop regular barley, corn, grain sorghum and oat price support loan.

More conservative methods used

The following information is from New Mexico State University:

As farmers in Eastern New Mexico switch to more conservative tilling systems like stubble mulch and no-till, reserves of important nutrients increase in the soil, said Bill Lindemann, with NMSU's ag experiment station.

"Particularly on the eastern side of New Mexico, farmers are switching to more conservative methods of tillage," he said. "The advantages of these systems are manifold, including decreasing soil erosion and conserving fuel, soil organic matter and soil nitrogen."

For five years, Lindemann studied the conversion of farmland from a conventional till system to stubble and no-till systems at NMSU's ag science center at Clovis. Under the different tillage systems, he considered the accumulation of organic nitrogen and organic carbon in soil planted in a sorghum - sorghum - fallow - wheat rotation.

In conventional tillage, farmers usually use moldboard plows or disks to plow under crop residues each season. Conservation tillage techniques leave at least 30 percent of the residue covering the soil surface after planting.

With stubble till, farmers use many of the same tillage tools as in conventional till, but they try to leave enough crop residue on the surface to reduce soil erosion. In no-till, the soil is left virtually undisturbed from harvest to planting. No-till requires more chemical inputs than stubble till for weed control.

"We've found that after five years, organic nitrogen, organic carbon and other soil factors have increased in the soil under stubble and no-till systems as compared to conventional systems," said Lindemann. "The stubble and no-till systems had very similar results, but the no-till conserved a little bit more organic nitrogen and organic carbon than did the stubble."

The differences were most notable during sorghum planting and growth, he added.

Lindemann said these added nutrients mean the soil holds moisture better and resists erosion. More moisture in the soil is especially important to farmers in eastern New Mexico where lack of water can be the limiting factor for high yields.

Farmers sometimes opt for stubble till over no-till because stubble requires a minimum investment in new farm implements. With no-till, farmers need to invest in no-till planters that can get through the crop residue to plant the seed and apply herbicides, insecticides and fertilizer all at once, said Lindemann.

"I recommend the no-till systems because of the long-term savings in organic matter, fuel and labor costs," he said. "But they will require a little bit more input in terms of pesticides, at least initially, and a little more nitrogen fertilizer because organic debris is not breaking down as fast."

More details of 1995 cotton program announced

More details of the 1995 cotton program have been released by the USDA, said Plains Cotton Growers.

PCG officials note that the two most important pieces of information announced were sign-up dates for the 1995 cotton program and the announcement of an estimated upland cotton deficiency payment for the 1995 crop.

USDA is still seeking comments on several other items, including the amount of the estimated deficiency payment to offer in advance to growers and which crops will be allowed to be planted on ACR and Conserving Use acres. Final announcement of these provisions will come at a later date.

Sign-up dates for the 1995 program will begin Jan. 30 and run through April 28. Producers need to remember that purchase of crop insurance is required for 1995 program participation. Deadlines for purchasing crop insurance are earlier than those for program sign-up.

Crop insurance deadlines are March 15 in most U.S. growing regions, including the High Plains of Texas. Producers and landlords alike should be sure to purchase at least the minimum catastrophic coverage level of insurance before March 15 if they want to participate in any 1995 commodity programs. Failure to purchase at least the basic coverage level will mean they are ineligible for all program benefits.

Catastrophic insurance is available to producers for a processing fee of $50 per crop up to a maximum of $200 per county. In cases where a farmer has limited resources, the processing fee may be waived.

Crop insurance rules apply to both primary and alternative crops for which crop insurance is available. Producers and landlords should be sure and find out exactly what they are required to do in order to follow the loss of their primary crop with an alternative crop and remain in compliance with program regulations.

Also announced was a change in the 1995 price election for Upland and ELS cotton insurance policy holders. The Upland cotton price election was increased 9 cents per pound and the ELS cotton price election was increased 10 cents per pound. For High Plains cotton producers, the new price election is 62 cents per pound, up from the earlier rate of 53 cents per pound set in October 1994.

Earlier announcements from USDA set the Acreage Reduction Program at zero percent for 1995, meaning producers will be able to plant all of their cotton base acres to the fiber crop but receive deficiency payments on 85 percent of those acres.

Also announced earlier were the 1995 Upland cotton loan rate of 51.92 cents per pound and the Targer Price of 72.9 cents per pound.

Convalescent Center

Chit Chat

By Debbie Parmer

It's my pleasure to be involved with the activities once again at the Convalescent Center. I look forward to working with residents, staff, auxiliary and the many community volunteers.

We're making plans for our Valentine's Party Feb. 14th. We will be celebrating by having Hug Day, crowning a King and Queen, and having great refreshments. Sounds like a fun day, doesn't it? Families who wish, are invited to attend.

Residents had a nice birthday party on Friday. It was enjoyed by all who attended. Many thanks to the Border Town Four for the entertainment.

The Joshua Tree was a success this year. It's the people of the community who make it a success. Many thanks to each of you who participated by giving to the residents through the Joshua Tree. You brought joy to many residents as well as filling some of their needs.

JoAnn and I look forward to working with you this year. 1995 is going to be a great year!

Thank You

Perhaps you sent a lovely card,
Or sat quietly in a chair.
Perhaps you sent a funeral spray,
If so we saw it there.
As any friend could say,
Perhaps you were not there at all.
Just thought of us that day.
Whatever you did to console our hearts,
We thank you so much whatever the part.
