

THE TRIBUNE'S EDITORIAL COMMENT

Can't Go Along For 100% Parity Platform

We are unable to endorse the platform of Farmer's Union and other groups who seek government price supports of 100 percent of parity for farm products.

While we have conceded that price supports have effected a stabilizing influence on a market that has always been too big for farmers themselves to control, and the levelling off of these conditions has promoted a sound agricultural economy, we see a danger in carrying the program to extremes.

It is generally argued that a farmer is entitled to a "fair" price for his products. Quite so—and for everyone else, as far as that is concerned.

But the problem starts when any person, or group of persons, sits down and attempts to discover what is a fair price for any one product.

Costs of production vary enormously from one part of the country to another. They even fluctuate widely in the same place from year to year. For example, irrigation costs for Plains farmers have not been as great this year as they have in the past, due to timely rainfall.

And the farmer who often reminds that the businessman in town doesn't have any trouble getting a "fair" price for his products just doesn't know how things really work on the retail level.

Many manufactured products with nation-wide distribution arrive at a dealer's store with a "suggested" retail price. This is supposed to represent a fair margin of profit to the merchant.

But rare is the case when the businessman is able to sell his product at full mark-up. More often, he will banter around with a farmer or some other purchaser and through cash discount or a ridiculous allowance for trade-in, close the deal with little more than enough money just to keep going.

The people who know these facts best are the people who have successfully retired from farming and gone into retail business for some "easy" money. It just doesn't work.

No, we are convinced that only a free market can arrive at a fair price for the seller, whether it be in the field of agriculture or dime store novelties.

But to allow the disorganized farming industry an opportunity to orderly market products, we will agree to the necessity of a limited amount of control in the form of price supports. This can—and does—take the depressive slumps out of the market from one harvest to another.

There is somewhere a happy medium between the point that markets begin to break for lack of supports, and where surpluses begin to pile up in mountains because of artificial conditions created by supports, and in that area should come the government's efforts to stabilize the agricultural industry.

How would you as a homemaker like to be faced with the problem of planning menus day after day around—of all things!—sardines and cream-style corn? In a sense, that is what happened to Dot Richardson of Texico when she and her husband first moved to this community.

Our recipe this week is what evolved from this situation.

When we first called Dot and asked her for her favorite, she had planned to look up her directions for party sandwiches. But her husband changed her mind, insisting that her "whatsit" casserole was by far the most original and delectable dish.

Dot explained that some groceries were damaged while being shipped by the railroad (Jess works for the Santa Fe) and the Richardsons found themselves with two cases of sardines and one case of cream-style corn. "We ate corn and sardines every way you could imagine to prepare them," Dot says.

That's how this original casserole dish emerged, as a great favorite in the household. Dot was preparing dinner one day, and just for fun, began experimenting. We give you her method below.

- Whatsit Casserole
- 2 medium sized potatoes
 - 1 can sardines (tall can)
 - 1 can corn
 - 3 tbs. flour
 - 1 tsp. pepper
 - 2 tsp. salt
 - 1 cup whole milk
- Slice potatoes thin with slicer. Place layer in bottom of casserole. Place layer of fish, slice through fish with knife, then add layer of corn. Sprinkle with mixture of dry ingredients. Make two more layers like the first one. Then pour whole milk over the entire mixture. Bake in slow, about 250 degree, oven and when it browns on top, add a little water. Bake about an hour.

We read recently the story about two Texans who, having finished their lunch at the Shamrock, walked in to look at a solid gold Cadillac.

One ordinary Texan said, "I believe this is what I want" and began pulling out his billfold to pay for it.

His friend quickly protested, "Oh no, this is on me. After all, you paid for our lunch."

Seems like most of our column is borrowed this week, but we've had an opportunity to read some of the other weekly papers, and practically all have something we like so much that we want you readers to see it too.

From the McLean News comes this story:

An artist sought to paint the most beautiful picture in the world. He asked a clergyman, "What is the most beautiful thing in the world?"

"Faith," answered the clergyman. "You can feel it in every church; find it at any altar."

The artist asked a young bride the same question. "Love," she replied. "Love builds poverty into riches, sweetens tears, makes much of little. Without love there is no beauty."

A young soldier said: "Peace is the most beautiful thing in the world. War is the most ugly. Wherever you find peace, you will find beauty."

"Faith, Love and Peace; how can I paint them?" thought the artist. Entering his door, he found Faith in the eyes of his children, Love in the eyes of his wife, and there in his home was the Peace that Faith and Love built. So he painted the picture, "The Most Beautiful Thing in the World". And when he finished, he called it "Home".

Why is it that other people's new homes seem to spring up overnight but your own always seems to take forever.

The following clipping came from the Hamlin Herald. Since we are now blessed with two of the little "He's", we particularly enjoyed it. Maybe you will too:

"He may be nine to fifteen years old. He is made up of the following ingredients: Noise, energy, imagination, curiosity, eagerness and hunger. He is either 'the cute little fellow down the street', 'that spoiled imp next door', or 'my son', depending on who you are. He is Seems like The Tribune is surrounded by personnel with names that sound alike—especially over the telephone. If you call the shop you have to pronounce the name of the person you want carefully—it could be Jeanne, Joann or June. Of course, we aren't there as much as we used to be, so now there are usually only two to answer the phone.

So if you call up asking for Joann, you may get June and vice versa. You might get sold an ad (that's Joann's department); you might end up buying a sub or giving a news story (June's job); or you might get dunned for the ad you bought last month (both girls are good at this).

You never can tell. Anyway, when we call the shop from home, we just ask for Sonny.

Three camp bands and a choir will be formed, and students will attend daily sectional and group rehearsals, classes, practice sessions, and twirling classes throughout the two-week camp.

Concerts, recitals, television appearances, and entertainment each night are planned.

A series of outdoor concerts and programs have been scheduled each week-day night of the camp. The public is invited. Programs this year will be held in Buffalo Stadium and all will be at 8 p. m. except the final show.

Farwell Baptists Start Revival

Pianist for the series is Mrs. Shelby Jones. Mrs. Jack McManigal, originally scheduled to play for the singing, is unable to be on hand because of illness, according to Rev. Keith.

4-H Clubbers Leave For Camping Trip

Also, Richard Chitwood, Dean and Glen Watkins, Gary and Gerald Foster, Durwood and Dwayne Teague, Duart Ivy; Cooper, Steven and Edwin Young and Richard Leslie, all of Lazbuddie.

The group plans to return to Farwell some time today (Thursday).

No Decisions Made In Civil Cases

No decisions were rendered by Judge E. A. Bills in any of three civil cases in district court Wednesday.

Testimony was heard on the following cases:

S. E. Magness Jr. vs. Dorothy Magness, suit for child support.

Wenonah Jeane Gonser vs. Douglas Gonser, suit for child support.

W. E. Verner vs. Clay Scott, et al, a dispute over construction details of a house.

Chamber Gives Green Light On Brochure

Members of the Farwell Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night gave the green light to a public relations committee to proceed with plans for a brochure promoting the city.

The project, which has been in committee for several months, is almost complete, and lacks only last-minute statistics before being turned over to the printers.

Publication of the illustrated and detailed work is expected within a few weeks, according to W. H. Graham Jr., chairman of the committee.

He expressed his appreciation to members of the Chamber for their assistance in working up the project.

John Aldridge Serves On State Committee

State Bar of Texas President Maurice R. Bullock has announced names of the chairman and members of several standing and special committees for the group.

Among those named is John Aldridge of this city, who will serve on the committee on interpretation of canons of ethics.

Miller Gets 3 Years; Mrs. Hughes Fined For Bootlegging

Joe Miller, Groesbeck Negro, was sentenced by Judge E. A. Bills to three years in the state penitentiary Wednesday, in addition to having a three-year probated sentence (of which he had served one year) revoked by the court.

That will make a total of five years in the pen facing Miller, who recently was picked up near Silverton with his car full of stolen batteries.

Mrs. Anna Hughes of Friona was brought into county court Monday on a charge of possessing intoxicants for the purpose of resale. She had been picked up by members of Sheriff Charlie Lovelace's department Saturday night at her home and at the time had a quantity of wine and whisky on hand.

Mrs. Hughes plead guilty and was fined $100 and costs. She is now in the Parmer County jail after failing to pay her fine.

It was the second time within a month that she had been so charged.

Texico-Farwell Phones Grow 30% In 2-Year Period

Telephone connections in Texico-Farwell increased 31 percent in two years, it is revealed, reflecting the probability of a similar increase in population of the Twin Cities.

The new directory, issued by Mountain States only two weeks ago, carries 402 listings for Texico-Farwell. This compares with a count of 306 at the same time in 1953.

Not counted are 107 current listings for the Oklahoma Lane exchange, or the rural connections made through the Clovis operator.

TO HAVE GUEST SPEAKER

Rev. W. C. Wright, a former pastor of Texico Baptist Church, will be guest speaker at the church on Sunday, July 31, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. C. C. Morgan, who is conducting a revival in Lovington, N. M.

Everyone is cordially invited to attend the services.

What's Your "IQ"?

High Plains farmers—especially cotton farmers—find that they need to have a special type of "IQ" if they are to derive the greatest profit from their operations.

This "IQ" is not an intelligence quotient, but an INSECT quotient. How high a cotton farmer ranks in this field may well determine how high his profits will be when gin time rolls around.

This season, as in seasons past, County Agent Joe Jones is taking time to conduct special cotton insect meetings with farmers over the county, and to actually introduce them to their friends and enemies in the insect world.

There is still lots of educational work to be done in this field, however, says Jones, and this article is just one part of a complete program that can do much to assist farmers in identifying and controlling their cotton insects.

More technical information is available through the agent's office.

A survey of general cotton insect conditions in Parmer County last week did not indicate very many alarming infestations, and this is cheering news. However, it is no time to stop worrying about cotton insects, because they can multiply and do heavy damage in a very short time.

This threat is especially true in the case of the flea hopper and bollworm: two rascals that farmers are watching carefully right now.

Moist and cooler weather conditions recently have done much to speed the build-up of cotton insects, and farmers can expect trouble momentarily.

Insect control at this stage of the cotton's growth is vital. It is important every year, but this year, especially, it deserves the attention of the farmer.

Cotton on the High Plains is late, and will need every day it can get to mature those extra bolls that pay off at harvest time. Mid-season insects, on the other hand, can destroy the plant's fruit to such an extent that the new bolls put on by the plant will not have time to mature before the season ends with a hard freeze.

How Many Bugs?

Taking a "census" of insect population is recommended before considering methods of control. For those who need a rule of the thumb, Agent Jones suggests:

It's time to poison when there are 20 flea hoppers to 100 terminals; or 4 or 5 bollworms and eggs per 100 terminals.

Right here, he emphasizes, is a good time to warn farmers against "doubling up" their program when the count of one species of insect is higher than the other.

For instance, the situation sometimes arises where a farmer notices a heavy infestation of flea hoppers, and only a few bollworms. It's wrong, warns the agent, to decide to increase the strength of poisons, hoping to get both species.

When a farmer thinks, "Well, I have enough hoppers so that I'm going to poison anyhow, and since I have a few worms, I'll increase the dose and get 'em all," he's headed for trouble, says the agent.

The reason is because it is possible to control flea hoppers with lighter doses of poison WITHOUT knocking out beneficial insects that may stave off a bollworm attack.

"Know what you're poisoning when you attempt control measures," says Jones.

Here is some information that will help the farmer get acquainted with some of the common harmful cotton insects:

Bollworm

The bollworm is a major cotton pest. The tiny newly-hatched worm first feeds on leaves and then attacks squares and bolls. Greatest loss is caused by tunneling into and destroying bolls. The color varies from pink, green, to almost black. The full-grown worm, about 1 1/2 in. long, enters the ground and becomes a mahogany-brown pupa from which the adult later emerges. A generation may be completed in 30 days during warm weather, with 4 to 6 generations annually.

Control should start as soon as eggs and newly-hatched worms are found.

The adult is a yellowish to brownish moth (often with a strong greenish overcast which fades in flown specimens) with a wing spread of about 1 1/2 in. The female lays about 1,000 eggs singly, particularly on growing tips, squares, and bolls. The small, ribbed eggs are white, dome-shaped, and about half the size of a pinhead.

Lygus

These bugs are important pests of cotton in the Southwest. Alfalfa is a favorite host of these insects. When alfalfa or other plants are cut or dried out, lygus bugs migrate to adjacent cotton fields. Their feeding on cotton results in the shedding of squares, blooms, and young bolls. The plants also become deformed.

The adult females are straw-colored while the males are darker with red and brown markings. They are almost 1/4 in. long, slightly smaller than the tarnished plant bug. Eggs are laid within the tissues of the plants upon which they feed. Under favorable conditions, a generation may be completed in 30 days. There may be 6 or more generations in a season.

Flea hopper

The flea hopper pierces terminal buds and newly-formed squares, causing them to drop. This often results in tall, whiplike plants without fruit or fruiting branches, or other abnormal plant growth. Injury occurs chiefly in early season.

The adult cotton flea hopper is an oval-shaped, pale-green winged insect about 1-7 in. long. The body is dotted with small dark spots with four black marks near wing tips. The young flea hopper is very small, green, and wingless.

The flea hopper breeds on goatweed (croton), primrose, horse-mint, and other plants. Eggs are inserted singly in the bark of the stems. A life cycle is only about 3 weeks; several generations mature
