Cubs Exhibit Power At Plate But Not In Style Of 'Murderers' Row'

By DICK STROBEL CHICAGO (AP)—Seek as you might, you'll find no proverbial "murders' row" on the roster of the Chicago Cubs.

You'll run across a number of fellows chacking the ball around for better than 300 averages and you'll discover that the aging Gang of Hartnett is among the National league's leading hitters.

But that doesn't begin to tell the story of the Cubs' astonishing newly found power at the plate which hoisted them to the crest of baseball's senior circuit in the closing weeks of the pennant fight.

The Sportsman

By LARRY BAUER The first cool nights of early autumn always bring a revival of that grand old American sport—fox hunting—and this fall is no exception.

Meetings are being scheduled in many states and hounds have scribbled the weather as a subject of discussion wherever devotees of the chase assemble.

There are two schools of fox hunters in America. One conforms to the English style, with its red coats, fine horses and field court-cases.

The folks in the fancy get-up have formal hunt breakfasts, stirrup cups, and they follow the hounds during the day.

There's something mighty sweet about the baying of a foxhound, or the full-throated melody of the pack on a hot trail.

By Reynard will run atop a rail fence, wade or swim water courses, double and redoubt and try all his tricks in an effort to confuse the dogs.

Contrary to popular belief, the fox is seldom, if ever, killed. Sometimes the hounds may get one, but not often, as the sharp-nosed denizen of the countryside usually knows a hole or den where he can take refuge in a hurry.

"Harvest Time in Dixie" The harvest days are here again, the gladdest of the year; Old Dixie's air is all aglow.

The cotton fields are fleecy white, the crop is wonderful fair, The picker's song is brisk and strong.

The wheat is garnered in the barn, The corn is in the sheck; And sorghum juice for winter use is waiting in the truck.

The men wheel with ribs of steel Embellow seas of hay; While urchins tease the apple trees Throughout the gladsome day.

Oh, harvest time is here again, The gladdest of the year; Old Dixie's steps are airy light.

MORNING STAR

BY MARIAN SIMS

Chapter 23
CHECK-UP

"I'm beginning to believe that Emily agrees with you," said Dr. Wachs.

"Oh, it does!"

"And hard work?"

"Amusing, but I think with reluctant admiration, how his generation of women enjoyed work for its own sake. But there, didn't he enjoy it himself?"

"I'm hard work. Do you know, Dr. Wachs, I'm really beginning to get somewhere? I was errand girl and general funkier at first, but now I've been promoted to a desk and regular assignments. Charlotte says that if I keep it up, I'll be really good, and coming from her that's the epitome of praise."

"Charlotte must be pretty good here."

"She is. And she's a great deal more than that to me. Since I can't have you to strengthen my will, I'd rather have her."

He smiled, pleased at the idea that he and Charlotte might fill the same need. Then he put the question that he had sought her out to ask.

"And what about Barnes? No regrets?"

"The brightness faded swiftly. 'Yes,' she said slowly. 'A great many regrets.'"

He had dreaded that. "Why?"

"Why not? Because I've failed there? All so minor—the tone was impatient, 'you'd be falling yourself otherwise.'"

"Perhaps. But is my life—any one life—so important as all that? And besides, I haven't really tried; I've simply run away from it. What right have I to refuse to go on—to ask for a divorce—until I've done my best to make it a success?"

"Emily," he demanded, "what have they been writing you?"

She smiled at the menace in his voice. "Nothing like that. But my father has broken a great deal lately, mother says, and it tears my heart to think of him."

It was utterly impossible, he thought bitterly, to keep some woman—the Frances Felton—from cheating. He dwelt momentarily upon the idea of murder.

"It isn't what they've said," she went on. "It's this beastly Puritan conscience of mine. Whenever I stop to think it begins to plague me."

"Does this mean," he asked harshly, "that you're thinking of going back?"

"I've thought of it all the time, but it doesn't mean that I'm going. I'm not crowded that close yet. I'm still holding on tight."

He patted her hand. "That's the spirit. You keep on holding on."

If he could prevent it, he didn't intend to have his best cure ruined by outside interference—not until the cure was complete. Then, if she went back, she would be equal to the situation. He drove her home feeling that he had done a good evening's work.

When he had gone, Emily went first to Charlotte's room to report on his visit. Charlotte put down the book she was reading and Emily saw that her eyes were troubled.

"There's a special delivery for you on the desk. It came while you were away."

Even before she opened the letter, Emily knew that something was wrong; that her house of cards was about to be destroyed with a single blow. She read the letter quickly, and Charlotte's apprehensive eyes never left her face.

She stood very still when she had finished, holding the letter in an unsteady hand. Charlotte could stand it no longer.

"Emily?—'What is it?'"

Emily dropped into a chair and looked unseeingly at the floor.

"Edwin is terribly ill. Pneumonia. He—seems to need me." She held the letter towards Charlotte.

Charlotte read it quickly, standing with one arm about Emily's unsteady shoulders. It was from Frances Felton, and it was, Charlotte thought fleetingly, the most Machiavellian document she had ever read.

My dear Emily,

I have hesitated about writing this to you, and yet I am paying you the compliment of thinking that you will want to know it. Edwin is desperately ill with pneumonia.

Old Mrs. Latham died last week and was buried in the midst of a thunderstorm. Edwin was a pallbearer, and the exposure, together with the rundown condition he has been in for several weeks, was disastrous.

He has looked dreadfully for some time, and whenever he has been here for meals has eaten nothing, so it wasn't at all surprising that his resistance was too low to cope with the disease.

Dr. Morgan thinks he has a chance to recover if he can be persuaded to make the effort, but he doesn't seem to care. I took some broth to him yesterday and tried to cheer him up by saying that he would soon be up and about and he simply looked at me and whispered, "What for?"

Of course this may not have any effect on your course of action; I am not suggesting that it should. But as I say, I have paid you the compliment of thinking that you would like to know.

Your affectionate,
Mother.

Emily laughed wildly. "How like Edwin to have gotten his pneumonia being pall-bearer at a funeral! If he'd been eating a beef, or hunting—the voice trailed off. Charlotte's arm tightened. She knew all about hysterics. "Stop it! What do you want to do, or haven't you decided yet?"

Emily steeled. "There's no deciding about it. There's only one thing to do." Her voice was a lifeless monotone.

Charlotte said in a matter-of-fact voice, "Then I'll find out about trains and help you pack. I'll wire your mother as soon as I find out when you'll get there. Go over and lie down on my bed."

Emily shook her head. "I'd rather do something."

"All right. Run along and pack. Then I'll be back in a minute."

There was a train at eight the next morning, Charlotte found, as they finished the packing and lay down to wait for morning.

"This had to come some time," Emily said wearily. "So perhaps it's just as well to get it over, I Edwin—doesn't die."

her, trying not to think what an ideal solution it would be if he did, and lie down on my bed."

"And you're right about its having to come. But it doesn't mean that you're beaten and that you have to stay; you can leave him again as easily as you did the first time."

"I wish I could be sure of that!"

"You can. You can buck them all, now, because there's nothing to me and everything to gain. You're which led to freedom, or to a shadowy figure that persisted in looking like the ghost of David Carroll."

"I'll always want you." The voice called off. "I think I'll go to this; that you'll do what you think is right, no matter what happens. Will you?"

Emily said doubtfully, "I'll try."

"She'll really admire you for it," Charlotte insisted, "because she'll know then that you've grown up. And if you do decide to stay the same thing holds women of her type have such a superstitious respect for matrimony that I don't believe she'll try very hard to run things. If she does smile sweetly and say nothing and do what you intended to do all the time. You told me once that Judith Carroll managed her that way; try it yourself."

Judith: The name belonged to another age, another world. But Judith had known how to manage people, even Frances Felton.

"It sounds simple," she sighed, "and I'll do my best."

"I know you will," Charlotte assured her. "Now try to sleep a little."

Dr. Morgan opened the door softly and glanced into the darkened room. Then he turned to Emily and nodded. "You can go in, now."

Edwin was very straight and motionless in the narrow white bed. His eyes were closed and his breathing was shallow and very jerky. His face, she realized with a spasm of pain, was the face of a stranger; gaunt and shadowed with great dark hollows where his cheeks should have been.

"Emily?" The voice was only a breath.

She leaned over and brushed the unshaven cheek lightly with her lips. "Yes, darling."

"Darling," Edwin murmured. "Will you--call me that again, sometime?"

"She fought back the stinging tears. "My darling, as often as you like."

"And you'll--stay a while, this time?"

"As long as you want me."

It was a pledge. Now, she knew. She turned blindly towards the door and once outside found herself in Jeffrey's arms. She was at Edwin's end of the road now, and never as long as she lived could she look towards the other end of the road, or to a shadowy figure that persisted in looking like the ghost of David Carroll.

Howard Trio Gets Pay And Three Shoot

Three Howard county test struck oil last week, three that had drilled pay earlier were shot and one was acidized. One location was staked.

The value of the strike, made more than a month ago by Eastland Oil Co., Moore Bros. of San Angelo and Hugh G. White, 3 1/2 miles south of the Dodge-Denman area and slightly farther north of the Chalk pool was indicated further by the pumping of six barrels of oil hourly for 86 hours. The test followed cleaning out to 2,900 feet from an 800-quart shot Aug. 20 from 2,640 to 2,850 feet, the total depth. Three weeks ago the well was given a 24-hour potential swabbing test to obtain an allowable while cleaning out, yielding 140 barrels. It is 330 feet out of the southwest corner of section 20, block 30, township 1 south, T. & P. Ry. Co. survey.

Sinclair-Prarie No. 22 Dodge, in the northwest quarter of section 11-30-15-T. & P., showed oil from 2,585 to 2,900 and an increase from 2,815-30 in drilling to 2,675 feet in time. No. 21 Dodge, in the north west quarter of section 3-30-15-T. & P. was standing at 1,465 feet in time with 3 1/4 inch pipe cemented at 1,438 feet. No. 23 Dodge, in the southeast quarter of section 3-30-15-T. & P. had reached 1,065 feet in red shale. Shasta No. 4 Dodge, in the northeast quarter of section 30-15-T. & P. had drilled to 845 feet in. analysis. Owen D. Moore staked a location for No. 2 Davis, 2,310 feet from the south line and 990 feet from the west line of section 2-30-15-T. & P.

Sinclair Lands In Pay Sinclair-Prarie No. 1 Texas Land & Mortgage Co. in the southeast quarter of section 4-30-15-T. & P. showed oil from 2,435-50, drilled pay from 2,585 to 2,645 feet and continued below 2,670 in time. Bond No. 6 Rhotan, in the northeast quarter of section 4-30-15-T. & P. deepened to 2,745 feet in time, was shot with 550 quarts from 2,510 to the total depth and had cleaned out to 2,700 feet with the hole full of oil. Bond No. 4 Rhotan, in the same quarter, had cleaned out to 2,645 after a shot.

California No. 4 Dodge, in the southeast corner of section 1-30-15-T. & P. was running tubing and rods to test at 2,768 feet after shooting Merrick & Lamb No. 3 Bell, in the northeast quarter of section 12-30-15-T. & P. had drilled to 1,200 feet in red rock. Continental No. 13-A Settles, in the northwest quarter of section 6-32-2c, T. & P. was treated with 1,000 gallons of acid under a 41-barrel oil load at 300 pounds pressure and prepared to pump, bottomed at 2,423 feet in lime. Cardinal No. 4 Settles, in section 4-32-2c-T. & P. drilled pay from 2,205-12 feet, stopped at 2,317 feet and probably will be acidized. It appears a small well. Location is 884 feet from the north line and 210 feet from the east and west lines of the lease, which is the east 20 acres of the west 120 acres of the north 160 acres of section 6.

Iron Mountain No. 4 Read, in the southeast quarter of section 46-30-15-T. & P. was fishing for tools lost while cleaning out following a 500-quart shot from 2,560 to 2,768 feet the total depth. Iron Mountain No. 5 Read, in the southwest quarter of section 46, had drilled to 2,130 feet in lime. International Petroleum 5-T-P Land Trust, in the southeast quarter of section 45-30-15-T. & P. plugged back to 2,670 from 2,707 feet to shut off salt water and was waiting for cement to set. International No. 6 (formerly 2-B) T-P Land Trust, in the south west quarter of section 45, was at 1,523 feet in red shale with the hole full of water.

White 6 Read Shot Hugh White and others No. 6 Read, in the southwest quarter of section 46-30-15-T. & P. was shot with 600 quarts from 2,555 to 2,760 feet and had cleaned out to 2,550. The same operators No. 7 Read, 950 feet from the south line and 1,550 feet from the west line of section 46, had drilled to 455 feet in waist sand struck at 455 feet. It spudded Sept. 19. Ward Oil Co. No. 5-A Dora Roberts, in the southwest quarter of section 137-29-W. & N. W. was fishing for a ball at 830 feet in blue shale.

Complex

Although many business men credit President Roosevelt with the best of intentions in promising a "breathing spell," a recent inspection of the current Washington scene convinces them he can't make good. The kind and scope of laws enacted by the last session won't permit it, in their opinion. In the old days a law was a law. A banker, manufacturer or business man knew how it affected him as soon as his lawyers could study its terms. But recent legislation requires the framing of regulations and requirements more complicated than the enabling act paid some day. Even so, the recovery and farm issues are keeping the Fletcherites awake nights while they devise satisfactory comebacks.

Rebuttal

Administration leaders are singing the siren song of recovery in the same tune and the same words. It looks as if one master impresario were turning out the lyrics and lines. Republicans are picking flaws in the performance, however. They think they have discovered a partial answer to this seemingly effective political argument in the Secretary's recent proclamation that "Happy Days Are Here Again." Though his figures were slightly off, he estimated the increase in 1934 national income to be $5,000,000,000 more than in 1933. GOP sharps reply that this sum represents almost to a penny the amount which the administration spent in pump-priming during that period—public works, relief outlays, farm benefits, etc. They are still computing figures to verify their point before vocalizing. Granting that the outlay has stimulated business and minimized distress, the opposition will emphasize that this expenditure must be re-

Notes

Washington's population of needy white and black folks is rapidly increasing—relief seems to be more automatic than in the neighboring states. The long squabble among lawyers a century ago over the "general welfare clause" is about to be repeated. The Wagner, Guffey and social security laws are involved. Women committeemen took a prominent part in the GOP confab.

NEW YORK

By JAMES McMULLIN

Blow

The Wheeler bill for government ownership of railroads will come before the next session of congress—and rail men are taking it very seriously this time. So much so that they have organized the Transportation Association of America, with headquarters in Chicago, to stage a strong campaign against it. Many leading executives of western roads are members and traffic managers of big industrial corporations—such as Swift & Co., Montgomery Ward, Air Reduction, etc.—are directors. You'll hear a lot from this outfit in a few months.

Blow

Kinks in the original Wheeler bill have been ingeniously ironed out. That's why the railroads are so alarmed. For instance, the outstanding obstacle to the earlier measure was the premise that government ownership would deprive states and cities of large sums in railroad taxes that they urgently need. Many congressmen have fought it on that basis alone. The new version solves that difficulty by providing that the federal government shall continue to pay the local taxes which the roads are now paying. That would make it just dandy for everyone except the federal taxpayer. The bill would reimburse present railroad security owners on the basis of net operating income for each road in 1934. That arrangement would leave thousands of stockholders in the weaker roads thoroughly out of luck. Rail leaders hope to mobilize their indignation to block the bill when they learn what is about to happen to them. The only trouble is that maybe the security holders won't get indignant. A lot of them are so fed up with the callous of many railroad managements they might actually welcome the cut offered by the Wheeler measure—and what a blow to the said managements that would be.

Forces

Shrewd New York observers scent a whale of a boom in the making. They note especially three factors which would operate in combination to push business activity to the skies next year. One is the continued shortage of inventories which is building up a tremendous latent demand for consumers good of all types. A second is the growing need to renovate obsolescent factories, houses, machinery, etc. The surface of this market for heavy industry products has barely been scratched and the urge to modernize is continually increasing with the physical deterioration of properties.

Third is the huge reservoir of excess reserves available as a base for credit expansion. This mass of unused money—over $2,600,000,000—is like a charge of dynamite awaiting a lighted fuse. So far most corporations have drawn on working capital instead of applying for new credits. But the demand for credit is bound to develop if business improvement continues—and then watch the fireworks. These three forces together are likely to bring real happy days to business and the stock market. What they will accomplish towards curing unemployment is another question.

Democrats

Political undercurrents now developing in New York State may have a vital bearing on next year's election. The Democrats are far from one big happy family—even apart from the friction between Tammany and the Roosevelt-Lehman-Farley wing. Not all of those denoted as Farleyites are such in reality. A number of the boys would like to put general Jim on the spot. Apart from conservative resentment at his boss, a good many politicians have privately never forgiven him for the McKee-Recovery Party fiasco. The party cannot discuss the chances for a Roosevelt victory without his home state. That sort of talk doesn't sit well with Mr. Farley at all. After all, 45 electoral votes are not to be lightly chucked overboard.

G. O. P.

Conversely the Republicans in New York State are on the way to becoming a flock of cooling doves. Factional differences are being forgotten in enthusiasm for the common cause. This is largely due to the skilful diplomacy of chairman Mel Eaton and leader Clarence King of Syracuse. Eaton has learned that it doesn't pay to take a hand in local rows and prospects of victory will heal many wounds. Even the New York City fight over Chase Mellon looks as if it will end up in a love feast under Old Guard auspices—once the steamroller that's being built gets working. The G. O. P. youth rebellion apparently to have been squelched in the state as well as the city—at least for the present. Backstage party leaders are still none too confident of their chances to beat Roosevelt—but they are well sold on the idea that they can recapture New York State.

Jobs

Astate New Yorkers figure the only real hope of solving the national employment problem lies along the following lines: The young to be educated—perhaps until they reach the age of 15—with an apprentice wage to pay personal living costs from 15 on. Then 30 years of productive work on something like a job week—with some variation according to technical conditions. Those who have not emerged to leadership would be retired on a social security plan at the age of 55. The employed middle group would have to carry burdens on both shoulders.

Cautious

The Securities Exchange Commission is conducting an exhaustive private inquiry into the operations of firms that act as both brokers and dealers. One thing it is trying to find out is whether such firms are recommending securities to their customers (as brokers) with which they are loaded (as dealers). Little evidence of this practice—common in the old days—has been turned up. It would appear that broken-dealers have either become very virtuous—or very cautious. New Sleepers For American Airlines

CHICAGO—In keeping with its policy of affording the public the finest and most luxurious air transportation accommodations, American Airlines, through its president, C. R. Smith, has announced the purchase of 10 new Douglas Sleeper Transport planes for delivery to this largest airline in the United States early next spring. The new planes, which are being placed into production at the Douglas Aircraft Corporation plant at Santa Monica, immediately, are said to be more luxurious than any land plane yet conceived and will combine the comfort of the convertible sleeper plane with the speed of the huge all-metal type craft developed by this company. The steady growth and evolution of aircraft manufacture, together with the public's acclaim of American Airlines' convertible sleepers in use on the Southern Transcontinental route, has led to the present plan of producing this huge sleeper transport, which will be the ultimate in refinement and luxury in passenger planes. The constant improvement in equipment, service and schedules is responsible for the tremendous and constantly growing increase in air travel, declared Mr. Smith.

McCraw To Speak At Texas Public Health Ass'n Waco Meeting

AUSTIN—William McCraw, attorney general, will be one of the speakers at the annual meeting of the Texas Public Health Association to be held in Waco, Oct. 16-18. Other speakers of state-wide and national reputations in their respective fields will also be present, according to the president, Dr. B. E. Pickett.

Each year the Texas Public Health Association holds a meeting or short school that is attended by all who are interested in health work in Texas. Its membership is composed of doctors, nurses, sanitarians, and others. Many towns and counties send their representatives in order that they may become familiar with the trends in public health as it affects their communities and the state. Some of the subjects that will be discussed during the meeting are mental hygiene, nursing service to schools and communities, immunization of children, control of communicable diseases, laboratory tests for disease as well as testing of water and milk, sanitation and sewage supplies.

The meeting this year is of great importance as many health features enter into the social security bill; these will affect the entire state when money with which to carry it out is appropriated. The state-wide malaria and sanitation program will be described and other subjects of timely interest will be given. In addition to the attorney general other speakers on the program include Dr. W. K. Sharp, United States Public Health Service; Dr. C. F. Coogle, malarialogist; United States Public Health Service; Dr. H. R. Dudgeon, president-elect of the State Medical Association; Senator J. W. E. H. Beck; Major A. E. Wood, Texas Planning Board; Dr. E. W. Wright, chairman State Board of Health; Dr. E. Colp, State Park Board; Dr. John W. Brown, state health officer; and many others.

Woman's Weak, Nervous Condition Helped By Cardui

In thousands of cases where Cardui has been taken to help women overcome monthly discomfort, it has been reported to have been of valuable assistance. "Before I began using Cardui, I was so weak when I closed my eyes I felt like I was going to fall," writes Mrs. J. W. Harris, of Palzer, S. C. "I was very nervous and had a pain in my side. At times, I would have to go to bed. This made me more nervous as I had six children and there is always work on a farm. My mother had taken Cardui and told me to try it. I took six bottles, after which I was up and able to do all my work, washing and ironing. I have nothing but praise for Cardui." "Of course, if Cardui does not benefit YOU consult a physician." —Adv.

MAKING UP A Shopping List

THE hall needs a new rug. More towels are needed for the bathroom, and the kitchen floor could certainly stand a coat of paint. The children need shoes. The car will soon need tires. Well, we buy a hundred new things every year.

Scattered throughout the United States are manufacturers who make the very things we need. Their products are on sale in certain stores within easy reach. Certain of these products, and certain of these stores, are especially fitted to take care of our special need. But which products and which stores? Which can we afford, and which do we think is best? We must look to advertising for advice.

Advertising is the straight line between supply and demand. It saves time spent in haphazard shopping. It leads you directly to your goal. By reading the advertisements, we can determine in advance where the best values are to be found. With the aid of advertising, shopping becomes a simple and pleasant business, and budget figures bring more smiles than frowns.

From the pages of this paper you can make up a shopping list that will save you money.
