Humor and the Chicago Cubs

I realize that most folks have a good sense of humor. They enjoy a hearty laugh at a good joke.

Since coming to the Twin Cities, I have heard a variety of jokes, many of which even have been in good taste.

We probably have a tendency to think that humor doesn't change much over the years. A good joke back then, for example, is a good joke now. That may be true sometimes, but not always.

Awhile ago, I was going through a 1933 issue of "The Sunday Star Magazine" from Washington, D.C. It had been found in an attic and shown to me when I lived in Virginia.

Two of the magazine's pages were called "The Boys and Girls Page," with puzzles, crafts, jokes and riddles. I thought the humor was uproarious. Here's a sample:

Small bcy - "Give me a nickel's worth of nuts, please."

Shopkeeper - "What kind?" Small boy - "Oh, any kind, but don't put in too many cocanuts with

What a knee-slapper! I haven't heard such comedy in years! I bet you are still laughing from that circa 1933 bit of humor. You say you want more? Well, how can I say no? Here's a second sample of jokes from the Depres-

Said Miss Giraffe, "I wear, you

My wrist-watch round my neck; I do it by request, because

The town clock is a wreck." Wow, another belly-whomper! I'm afraid to tell you any more jokes, you're still probably laughing too hard. They sure had a sense of humor in those days, didn't they?

Having been a devout follower all these years, it hurts me to see them play so badly. I watched them play today against San Francisco's Giants and they simply failed to execute. They couldn't sacrifice along runners, they threw to the wrong base, they mishandled a fly. I could go on and on but there isn't room enough in this newspaper.

I acknowledge that I have never played major league baseball and that all my comments come from the grandstand. However, having watched that particular team closely for 35 years, I have drawn some conclusions. They're horrible.

Some blame it on the lack of lights at Wrigley Field. Some blame it on the management. Some blame it on the full moon.

I will admit that the chintzy management of the team during its tenure under the Wrigley family was responsible for many dark years in the second division. But today the Cubbies are owned by the Tribune Company, a very wealthy organization.

Today's problem is that management forgot the immortal words of the legendary Branch Rickey, general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals during the Gas House Gang Days. Said Rickey: "It's better to trade them a year too early than a year too late."

And the Cubs? Elderly "Sarge" Mathews is still playing, thanks to an expensive contract. Same goes for Ron Cey. Put them with slowfooted Moreland, injured Dernier and Durham and Smith, and you have another lousy team. In today's baseball, with its carpeted infields and outfields, speed is most essential. Speed can make up for many deficiencies. Look at the teams that have recently won the World Series, and I believe you'll find teams which accented their speed.

Well, the Cubs have some speed: Sandberg, Dunston and Dernier. But "some" doesn't cut it anymore. You need a lot.

I heard one of the Cubs' announcers say recently that the team was better suited for Wrigley Field. He didn't elaborate but here's what

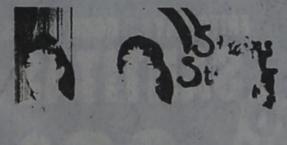

I believe he was saying: Wrigley has nice, tall grass which

Pre-kindergarten classes discussed

The Farwell School Board Monday heard a report from Supt. John Grigsby on the status of pre-kindergarten classes.

Under a new state mandate, prekindergarten classes must be offered if at least 15 students are identified.

Grigsby reported that a sufficient number have been identified here but will check to see how many would participate in a program before a decision is made to offer it.

In other business, Vicki Milloy, representing Farwell Arena Association, appeared before the board. The board approved a 10-year lease, at $5 annually, for the site to be used by the reactivated association.

Starting in June, the board will have a new monthly meeting date: the second Tuesday of each month.

This is on a one-year trial basis. Salaries for para-professionals were discussed, with the matter tabled.

The board reviewed some citizens asking waivers on penalties and interest for their taxes due to assessment errors. Two waivers were granted.

The board agreed to sell an extra school bus for use by city scouts and youths groups.

Grigsby proposed a summertime activity program, featuring an adult on duty at the gym and providing facilities and organized play for youths. Due to questions on funding, no action was taken.

The board will have a special meeting May 26 to begin work on the budget, career ladder, salary schedules and curriculum offerings.

Hadley resigns

The Texico School Board, Tuesday, accepted the resignation of Mrs. Evelyn Hadley. She worked in the cafeteria.

The Board accepted Chapter I and II funds. Lupe Olivas will help tutor students in the elementary, junior high and high school next year for about one hour after school.

The program is being suspended from June through August, and it will be reconsidered in September.

According to County Judge Porter Roberts, the commissioners took the action due to two reasons: the heat of the summer months, which causes some melting due to the long drive from Amarillo; and the cost of handling the commodities. The handling cost jumped from $150 a month to nearly $500 a month.

The commissioners also said the program's future is in doubt. Its fiscal year ends in September. By Texico Council backs pool use

The Texico City Council Tuesday expressed its support for keeping the city swimming pool open this

Before being allowed to open, the pool must meet state requirements. Reportedly, some filters and pipes must be repaired or changed, plus painting is needed. The problem facing Texico is that the state inspector said he can only come to check the pool once. So if it passes inspection that day, the pool can open. If it doesn't, the pool

The council instructed city employee Billy Hammit to talk with the inspector and find out what exactly is needed and take necessary action to get the pool ready for his one

In other business, four persons applied for the job of managing the pool: Ray Edwards, Phil Lambert and the team of Dana and Brenda Morris. The matter was tabled until the council could find out if the pool will be allowed to be open.

City Clerk-Treasurer Marie Christian reported several resumes have been received from persons seeking the vacant city marshal's post. The council also will advertise the post.

A request for funds from the Texico-Farwell Baseball League was received. No action was taken. It was noted that Texico provides free water for the park.

Councilman Steve Chancy said street lights are needed for Craig Street. Mayor John Hadley will check with SPS.

The council approved the final plan of Unit 1 of the Jim Burroughs' subdivision on the south side of Texico.

City Attorney Duane Hamar said he will set up the first meeting of the newly-organized city planning and zoning commission.

The council voted to spend $287 to join Eastern Plains Council of Governments for a year. Bryan Kube voted against it.

Three persons came to the meeting to show their support of Fred hamner, who was dismissed as city marshal in April. But when they found out the matter wasn't on the agenda, they left.

The council received a request from Max Carter to rent the Community Center for 1 to 11/2 hours or Tuesday and Thursday nights for $7.50 each time. The regular fee is $15 per day. The council said he plans to have a profit-making aerobics exercise class there so they voted to keep the fee at $15 per day.

The council noted that Clovis and Curry County police have been patroling in Texico while the city is without a marshal.

McCaw offers suggestions

McCaw Cablevision officials offered some advice this week:

When homes are planned, the builders take into account the regular utility lines needed, such as water, sewer and telephone.

But folks also take the cable service. And if those lines are taken into account during construction, too, it eliminates the later inconvenience of having to install cable lines after the construction is fin-

Actions taken on dogs running loose

"I'm hearing that we are making progress on keeping dogs and cats from running loose," reported Mayor Chris Gikas at Monday's Farwell City Council meeting.

He said three citations have been given since the crackdown was announced last month. Two were "warnings" and one caused the the pet owner to pay a fine.

Councilwoman Ysleta Kittrell said four persons have signed a complaint against the owner of a dog they say has been allowed to run loose. A citation is expected to be given this person.

In other business, the council heard a presentation from a salesman for Yellowhouse Machinery. The city may be buying a backhoe. Also, Case of Clovis sent cost estimates. The council decided to advertise for bids.

The council also:

-- Decided to present a plaque to former Mayor Walter Kaltwasser, in appreciation of his longtime service to the city, during Border Town Days.

-- Heard Doug Landrum report that the new pit is completed and fenced. The old pit is being covered. He said last week's Cleanup Day was very successful with at least 15 loads taken to the pits.

-- Heard Gikas discuss plans to plant wildflowers of different types in the vacant lot to the east of the former McDorman Laundry. The property is owned by Dickie Magness, he said. Gikas wants this to be a project of the highway beautification committee.

--Discussed the rubble left from the demolition of the building west of Stewart Motors. Gikas said that the man doing the cleanup ought to have it completed this week.

-- Allowed the Farwell Arena Association, which has been reactivated by 13 families, to have some caliche and asphalt for improving the road to the arena. The work will be done by the association, said

-- Agreed to buy three fans for City

Hall, at an estimated cost of $60

-Agreed to drive around Farwell Thursday and decide which streets need seal-coating.

-Placed its revenue sharing funds in a checking account for possible use in buying a backhoe.

-Will check into a proposal by photographer Frank Guenther to make post cards featuring the Sesquicentennial mural. Guenther proposes to sell 3,000 cards to the city, said Gikas.

Foster parents: Helping the family unit

Ever thought about being a foster parents? Ever wonder what it entails?

Farwell School Supt. John Grigsby and his wife have been foster parents for several years. During that span, they have provided a home for eight youngsters.

"We decided to get involved after we had two children of our own," said Grigsby. "We went to a fair one day and they had a deal about foster parents. We signed up, went to school and became foster parents."

The job of a foster parent, explained Grigsby, is to provide an interim home for a youngster whose own family unit is in difficulty.

"Foster parents give the family time to try and work out its problems by housing someone for a little while. Our purpose is to help the family unit be reunited," he said.

The reason that there's been a tremendous need for foster parents is the dramatic increase in referals due to times of economic strife. Many persons are having difficulty coping, and the family problems increase.

Grigsby pointed out that there is no pressure from the agency to accept a child you don't want. "We've turned down kids at some time. There's no problem. The agency understands," he said.

The Grigsbys enjoy foster parent-

"There are kids out there with no place to go. There are times they need to be away from their family unit for awhile. It's been our experience these times have been short-term and all but one of the kids placed with us have been reunited with their families; the other one was adopted," said Grigsby. The length of time foster children have been placed with the Grigsbys has ranged from three days to nine months. Since coming to Farwell a year ago, the Grigsbys have had two foster children. Foster parents can designate the age of any youths they take, such as from 5 to 8 years old.

Farwell is part of the "outlying area" for foster children in West Texas. Youths from Amarillo and Lubbock stay in those areas, while youths from small West Texas towns are placed in similar locales. However, children are not placed with foster parents in the same town and who the foster parents are is a secret from the regular parents.

Persons interested in being foster parents may contact the Department of Human Resources, a Texas agency, with regional offices in Amarillo and Lubbock.

The schooling involves one night a week for six weeks and is available in Hereford. The agency also pays a foster parent about $7 a day, depending on the age of the youth.

Crop acreage down

The farm bill is aimed at getting crop acreages down across the nation, and that approach seems to be working in Texas. Consequently, farm income is also expected to tumble.

With Texas farmers still in the thick of the spring planting season, overall crop acreages should be down sharply when the dust settles, says Dr. Carl Anderson, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Rice and soybeam acreage is expected to be about one-third less than 1985 plantings, the sorghum crop should be down 16 percent, cotton acreage should be 12 percent less, hay production should drop 9 percent, and the corn and peanut crops should be off 3 percent from last year's plantings. The declines in Texas plantings should be greater than in the nation as a whole, Anderson points out. Nationally, cotton acreage should be down 10 percent, corn, 6 percent and sorghum, 3 percent.

"While the new farm bill provides a safety net under farm income by keeping the same target prices as last year, the main feature of the bill is to let U.S. prices fall to market clearing levels," Anderson says. "That should boost use of crops and discourage production somewhat--especially in foreign countries. All this should encourage recovery of U.S. exports markets."

Although a weaker dollar overseas and lower prices could lead to a sharp increase in exports by 1987, the economists believes a noticeable market price recovery is still several years away.

"Market prices for 1986 should be near the adjusted loan rates," predicts Anderson. "These include $2.40 per bushel for wheat, $1.92 per bushel for corn, $3.25 per hundredweight for sorghum, $3.60 per hundredweight for rice and $5 per bushel for soybeans."

The adjusted loan repayment level for cotton will be 80 percent of the base loan rate, says Anderson.

"Since most market prices for crops are expected to fall below the variable costs of production, most farmers will likely comply with the farm program for target price protection and use of the regular farm loan," notes the economist.

"All this means that net farm income in Texas will likely fall 10 to 15 percent from the depressed $1.4 billion level estimated in 1985, says Anderson. That's a particularly sad situation considering Texas farmers only realized about a 1 percent return on their investment last

Barky cotton discussed

The joint Cotton Incorporated-Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. Barky Cotton Research Task Force met recently in Lubbock and laid additional plans for its broad-based drive to cut down on the number of bales that will be dubbed barky by area cotton classers this fall and in future years.

Agricultural economist Don Ethridge of Texas Tech University calculates that the price reduction on cotton called barky comes to $11 per bale, which in recent years has averaged to about $3 per bale for every bale of cotton produced in West Texas.

According to a research from Dr. William F. Lalor, Senior Director of Agricultural Research for Cotton Incorporated, 15 members of the committee were in attendance representing CI, PCG, the Cotton Board, Texas Tech, the Extension Service, USDA's Agricultural Research Service, Texas A&M, the Texas and Texas Independent Ginners Associations

Illustrating the scope of the effort, cotton breeders, agronomists, entomologists, agricultural engineers, ginning research specialists, cotton marketing authorities and textile D researchers were represented.

There were reports on work to identify various materials being called bark that in fact may not be bark, attempts to measure the amount of bark per one hundred grams of lint cotton, both by weight and as a percentage, and plans for demonstration plots.

The demonstrations, according to Extension Cotton Specialist Dr. James Supak, call for utilizing the best available technology at all stages of the planting-growing-harvesting-ginning sequence. The objective, he said, is to show that avoidance of barky cotton is not solely a harvest-time activity, but a matter of using seed selection, insect control, wise use of harvestaid chemicals and as many other good management practicies as possible throughout the year.

For more immediate effects, the group mapped the use of posters and pamphlets this fall to remind producers of harvesting techniques, timing and other measures already known to improve the chances of producing bark-free cotton. The educational materials are to be distributed to gins, banks, chemical companies, seed companies, ASCS offices and other places frequented by farmers.

The intent, says PCG Executive Vice President Donald Johnson, is to involve whatever people and funds are available to significantly reduce USDA's need for the "barky stamp" in its classing offices, and in the process save a significant number of the millions of dollars being lost to producers every year.

Texas concludes treaty with Santa Anna

1836: SATURDAY, MAY 14. Despite opposition from some of his Cabinet, ad interim President David G. Burnet today concluded a treaty with the captured president of Mexico, General Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna. He is now being held at the port of Velasco, along with other Mexican officers captured during the hostilities.

The treaty, in both English and Spanish versions, consists of nine articles. In the first three, Santa Anna agrees not to take arms against Texas again during the present war of independence, that all hostilities will cease, and that Mexican troops will withdraw "to the other side of the Rio Grande del Norte."

In Articles 4 and 5, it is agreed that the Mexican army will take no property in Texas without the consent of the owner and just indemnification, and that all previously captured property will be restored, "including horses, cattle, Negro slaves or indentured persons of whatever denomination."

In the remaining articles, the Texas army agrees not to come within five leagues, some 13 miles, of the retreating Mexican army; that the Mexican army will make no unnecessary delays; that Generals Vincente Filisola and T.J. Rusk will

The last article states: "General Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna will be sent to Veracruz as soon as it shall be deemed proper."

The document is signed by Santa Anna, and for Texas by President Burnet, Secretary of State James Collinsworth, Secretary of the Treasury Bailey Hardeman, and Attorney General P.H. Grayson. It is understood that another treaty was also agreed upon, but its contents have not been made public. It is thought to provide for Santa Anna, upon his return to Mexico, to work for the recognition of Texas and for a treaty of trade.

There has been strong opposition to any kind of treaty with Santa Anna, many Texians taking the position that he should be summarily shot or hanged. Secretary of War Mirabeau B. Lamar addressed a bitter denunication of Santa Anna to the President and the Cabinet, accusing him of violating all the principles of civilized conflict, with a "revolting policy of extermination and rapine, slaying the surrendered and plundering whom he slays." He labelled Santa Anna a murderer, and stated that he has "forfeited his life by the highest of all crimes, and is not a suitable object for the exercise of our pardoning prerogavailing attitude. Despite his show of bravado when he was captured, it is understood that he fully expected to be shot, and he has made every effort to be amendable to all Texas demands.

The captured materiel, much of which will be divided among Lieutenant Rice's men, include about 300 pounds of gundpowder and a like quantity of shot, balls and some bar lead, plus 114 horses and mules. Most important, however, are the paper found with Flores' body. They include direct orders to Mexican agents in Texas on how to deal with the Indians and what to offer them for their support. The orders were issued by General Vincente Filisola, commander of Northern Frontier, stationed in Matamoros, and also by his successor, General Valentin Canalizo, who took command Feb-

With Mexico presently involved in a war with France and in a continuing civil war against the Federalists, it has been unable to take any major action against Texas. It is known that General Filisola last January ordered his troops to prepare for attacks on San Antonio and Goliad, but a Federalist revolt in Tampico at that time forced him to divert his army there.

Mexico has therefore been trying to destabilize Texas by encouraging Indian raids. This effort became known to the Texians last August 20 when the Mexican agent Julian Pedro Miracle was killed in a skirmish at Cross Timbers on the Red River. With him were found instructions from General Filisola almost identical with those found on Flores. In addition, there was a detailed diary of his expedition, listing all of the Indian tribes he had called upon.

Miracle had left Matamoros on May 29 with a party of 142, including a number of Indians. They crossed the Rio Grande and camped at Los Fresnos for several days, awaiting supplies and attempting to capture wild horses. They then crossed the Arroyo Colorado and slowly worked their way northward, avoiding detection. By June 27 they had crossed the Brazos River and begun to contact Indian tribes, including the Wacos, Caddoes, Keechie, Kickapoos, Choctaws, and the Bowl, chief of the Cherokees.

Manuel Flores joined the party for a period. On July 2 they reached the Trinity River, and were joined three days later by Vincente Cordova, a former Texian, born in Nacogdoches, where he served as a alcalde before independence. Opposed to the separation of Texas from Mexico, he kept his sympathies to himself and worked briefly with the Texas government. Secretly, however, he continued to stir up opposition in Nacogdoches, and worked avidly among the Indians. He went to Matamoros to confer with General Filisola, carried instructions from Filisola to Miracle, and then returned to Nacogdoches.

At Nacogdoches he rounded up his followers, and set up a camp on an island in the Angelina River. He had some 120 armed Mexicans and about 25 Biloxi and Ioni Indians. On August 4 they attacked a party of residents who were bringing back some stolen horses they had recaptured from a Mexican settlement. One member of the party was killed. In the uproar that followed, Cordova's camp was discovered. President Houston happened to be in Nacogdoches at that time, and on August 8 issued a proclamation ordering Cordova and his followers to disperse.

They replied on August 10, in a manifesto signed by Cordova and eight others, including two Anglo-Americans, Nathaniel Norris and Joshua Robertson, "The citizens of Nacogdoches, being tired of the injustices and the usurpation of their rights, can do no less than state that they are embodied, with arms in hand, to sustain their rights and those of the nation to which they belong," they wrote. They vowed that they were "ready to shed the last drop of their blood," and ended with a plea: "They only ask that you will not molest their families, promising in good faith to do the same in regard to yours."

By this time Cordova's force was thought to have grown to some 600 men, including a party of 300 Indians. Having issued his manifesto, he set out to join the Cherokee nation for action against Texas.

Major H.W. Augustine with 150 men followed his trail. At the same time, General T.J. Rusk, commander of the Texas militia, made directly for the village of Chief Bowl in an effort to head Cordova off. Neither party made contact. Rusk decided that Cordova and some of his leaders had fled to the upper Trinity River area, and that most of their followers had dispersed. This incident is now termed Cordova's Rebellion, and is not yet ended.

In March of this year, Cordova was again discovered, en route to Matamoros with an escort of about 75 Mexicans, Indians and escaped slaves. This was in the hills near the site where the new capital city of Austin is being set up. Colonel Burleson immediately gathered up some 80 of his neighbors around Bastrop and went in pursuit, catching Cordova in the late afternoon of March 29, near Seguin on the Guadalupe. In the fight which followed, some 25 of Cordova's men were killed, but Cordova and others escaped as darkness fell.

A day or two later, Cordova was again located just north of San Antonio. He was pursued by Captain Mathew Caldwell and a company of rangers plus some citizens, but they were outdistanced. Cordova apparently crossed the Nueces and made his way to Matamoros. A letter found on Manuel Flores' body was from Cordova, dated from Matamoros on April 20, less than a month ago.

There have been numerous Indian depredations in Texas since last fall. It is difficult to determine how many have been caused by Mexican prodding, but there is no doubt of Mexican intent. Flores, Cordova and Miracle have surely been responsible for many. Of special concern are the documents which seem to inplicate the Bowl, chief of the Cherokees. The peace treaty which he concluded with General Sam Houston and John Forbes in February, 1836, was never ratified by the Texas government, and this may have prompted the Cherokees to side with the Mexicans, who orginally granted them the land they now occupy. The appearance of Texas surveyors on their lands may also be a factor.

Colonel Burleson is forwarding allof the documents retrieved from Flores' saddlebags to President Mirabeau B. Lamar for further action. They will do much toward strengthening Lamar's strong opposition to the Indians.

Thrips ready to attack cotton

Parmer county cotton farmers should make plans to battle thrips when these insects move out of nearby maturing wheat, says County Agent Gary Patterson.

Thrips are mainly a problem in areas with wheat acreage and in cotton fields planted before mid-May, Patterson said.

Tremendous numbers of thrips were found in wheat fields during recent surveys, the Extension agent said. Already this year, thrips have been a serious problem to cotton growers in South Texas, an area that usually isn't threatened by this

When you see thrips damage, it's too late to maximize benefits of thrips control, says Dr. James F. Leser, Texas Agricultural Extension Service entomologist at Lubbock. "That's because the visible leaf crinkling is indicative of a much bigger problem," he said.

During recent studies, Leser found that thrips feeding on seedling cotton delayed square initiation, reduced early square set and cut yields substantially when thrips were a problem.

Treatments delayed even one week from emergence often resulted in loss of earliness and yield. Where thrips move into cotton fields during the stand establishment period, preventive treatments produce higher yields than sprays based on visual damage or thrips numbers, the county agent said.

Preventive treatments consist of seed treatments and in-furrow apdications of systemic insecticides. The most popular seed treatments are the Orthene 80 seed protectant available commercially, or the Orthene 755 seed treatment applied in the planter box by the grower.

These treatments provide three weeks control from the planting date. Sometimes this is long enough

Lazbuddie receives new technology

It was on April 20, 1956 that Five Area Telephone Cooperative first 'threw the switch' for the first call ever to go out over lines in the Pleasant Valley Community. Making the first call was the late Bonnie Haverer, who also had the first telephone on the line. According to the "Texas Co-op Power" magazine printed in 1956, the following story was produced:

"Pleasant Valley Community in extreme northwest Lamb County now has telephone service for the

New property tax laws for mobile home owners

Beginning this year, a taxpayer applying for a homestead exemption on a mobile home must also submit a copy of the title to the

"This is one of several new property tax laws that affect mobile home owners," said Ron Patterson, executive director of the State Property Tax Board (SPTB).

Patterson said the new laws also provide both tax collectors and lenders with a means for ensuring payment of property taxes on mobile homes.

He explained that county appraisal districts require title documents in two instances. "If you haven't had a homestead exemption on your mobile home before now, you must provide a copy of the title to your home with the exemption application," Patterson said. "If you already receive an exemption on a mobile home, the appraisal district may ask you to show a title or other proof of ownership," he added, "but the district must have sent you written notice of the requirement before February 1."

Patterson pointed out that mobile home owners must meet the same qualifications for homestead exemptions as other homeowners. They must own the home on Jan. 1 and use it as their primary residence on Jan. 1. "The title shows the appraisal district that the applicant does in fact own the mobile home,"

Homeowners who don't currently receive a homestead exemption have until April 30 to apply with their county appraisal districts.

Another new law helps tax collectors enforce property tax liens on mobile homes. It allows tax collectors to file a tax lien notice with the Texas Department of Labor and Standards, which is the agency that records and issues mobile home titles. The lien notice remains in effect until the taxes are paid in full.

"The lien notice warns future purchasers that there are unpaid property taxes on the mobile home," Patterson explained. "This empowers the tax collector to foreclose on the lien and seize the home if the taxes become delinquent. In the past, a tax collector could not seize a mobile home for delinquent taxes if it had been sold to someone who was unaware of the unpaid taxes."

"Because of this new law," he added, "people should take unpaid property taxes into account when buying or selling a mobile home." In a related law change, lenders such as banks and mortgage companies can now require a mobile home purchaser to pay property taxes on the home through an excrow account, thus assuring the lender that the tax collector won't seize the home because of unpaid taxes.

first time in its history. This progressive step is the culmination of 18 years of work toward this end, and the attainment of this milestone came as a result of the residents' own efforts in the Five Area Telephone Cooperative.

"With a record of 'firsts' in community development already, it was appropriate that Pleasant Valley is the first area of the Five Area Telephone Co-op to reach the goal.

"What characteristic pride, residents staged Rural Telephone Day April 20 replete with ceremony, entertainment and mountains of food (prepared by the ladies of Pleasant Valley).

"With all directors joining in, plus businessmen of Earth, who provided coffee and cold drinks for the crowd and closed their stores to attend, a festive atmosphere prevailed. Speaking - briefly and obviously enjoyable - marked the ceremony.

"Co-op Secretary J.H. Angeley reviewed work leading to rural phone service for Pleasant Valley. Community President Harry Engelking cordially welcomed the crowd and served as master of cere-

"Co-op President Walter Damron introduced directors, and Manager D.B. Lancaster said, "We aim to give phone service as good as electric service," and urged members to report any difficulty they might have in getting calls through. "Dial 'O' for answers to any questions,"

Then, in February of this year, the exchange was updated and Lazbuddie who serves the Pleasant Valley exchange received the very latest in telecommunications technology in the form of a Northern Telecom DMS-10-M digital switch.

Hubert Kidd, Five Area Telephone Co-op manager said, "the new switch replaces the electromechanical Stromberg-Carlson switch. It is the first of six conversions that Five Area Telephone will make over the next three years.

"Many new features of telephones are provided through the operation of the switch and will be available to the members within a short time," added Kidd. "Although the change has created problems for some during the switch-over, it will be an asset to all.
