

M'Crory Store To Open For Business Saturday Morning

Every Detail Of Plant Is Up-To-Date

Full Stocks Displayed In Modern, Air-Conditioned Building

Big Spring will add another to its growing list of new businesses when the McCrory store opens the doors of its beautiful and modern plant at the corner of Second and Main streets Saturday at 8 a. m.

Completely stocked and adequately staffed, the department store will be the newest and westernmost of the more than 200 McCrory units in the nation.

Furnished throughout with the newest type fixtures, stocked with completely new merchandise and given utility by latest lighting and air-conditioning devices—the store is outstanding for its size in the McCrory system and is one of the finest of its types in this section of the state.

Staff of Over 70

Managing the McCrory store will be J. W. Sherwood, formerly of McAllen, and a man of several years experience in the business. He will be assisted by M. L. Marlow, who transferred here from New Orleans at his own request. The staff, numbering 70 to 75 persons for the opening, is composed entirely of local people. All, however, have been given special training for "McCrory service."

Virtually any item of merchandise to be found in department stores will be on display in the new counters, a majority of which were made especially for the company, and choice ranges will be unlimited in 22 separate departments.

Washed Air

Daytime shopping will be made comfortable by a steady flow of washed air which will make it pleasantly cool inside the store. Nine big fans keep the new, fresh air circulating constantly. Thirty lights with a total of 1,500 watts will furnish "day lighting" at night.

Women who care to rest during their purchases will have ready access to the ladies lounge in the rear portion of the building. An abundance of ice water is on tap at all times.

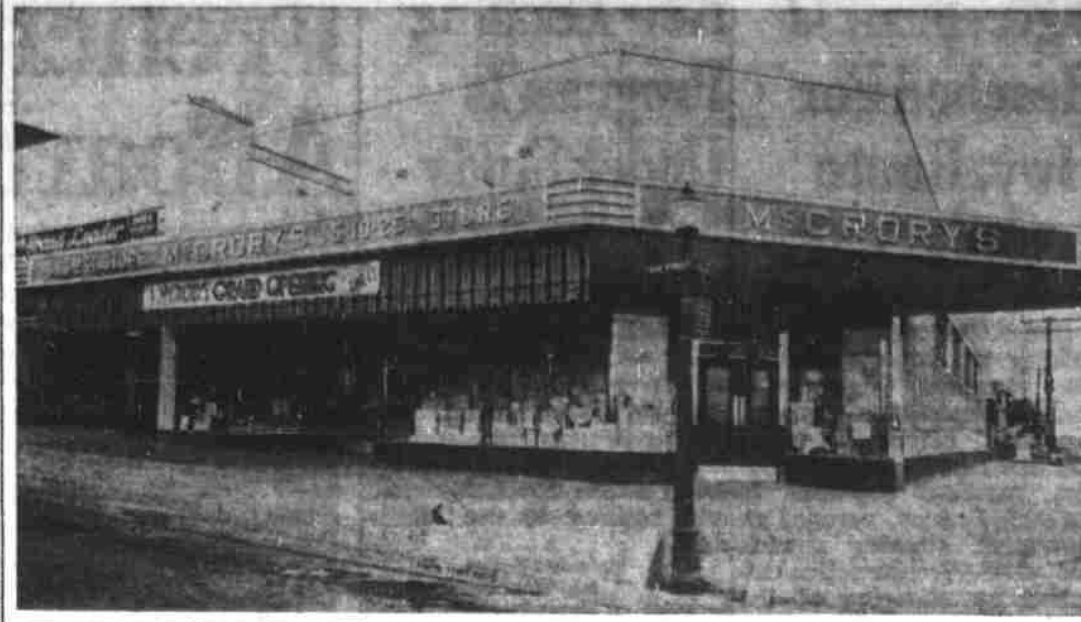

A feature of the store will be its candy department with its ultra-modern display counters of chromium (stainless) steel and big supply of sweet meats received each week.

Silhouette signs over a majority of the departments will enable the customer to go at once to where the article wanted can be found. Lively decorations for the walls will add color and life to the well appointed interior.

Big Storeroom

Well filled display counters are no more impressive than the storeroom in the basement which has its great supply of stocks neatly ar-

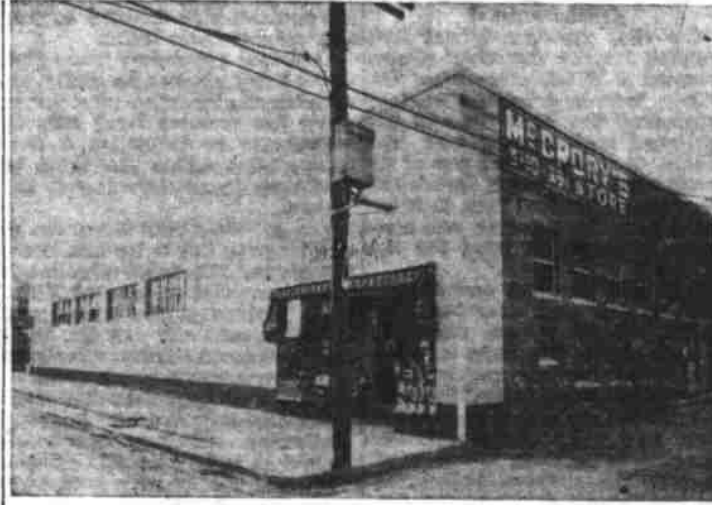

NEW STRUCTURE HOUSES M'CRORY STORE

anged in order corresponding to the departments upstairs. All merchandise is kept in shelves in dry compartments and away from light.

Also in the basement is a check lounge and rest room for the women employees of the store. Adjacent is the stockroom headquarters where all material is received and methodically stocked. Directly under the candy department, the mouse-proof candy storeroom connects with the counter above by a dumbwaiter. This, like other departments, contacts the basement by means of an interstore telephone system.

The building, finished in a white brick, lends beauty to a corner that was for years an eyesore following the burning of the old Ward hotel structure. Attractively designed windows, effectively trimmed, and gold plated McCrory signs add a fitting touch to the new plant.

This new, beautiful and modern building will house the city's newest business—the McCrory department store, which holds formal opening here Saturday. Located at the corner of Second and Main streets, the white brick structure was erected at a cost of $30,000. All interior furnishings are the latest available and the store is thoroughly stocked with an unlimited supply of new merchandise. At top, front view of store; below the Second street side.—(All photos by Kelsey.)

22 Separate Departments

No small thing is the McCrory department store.

Although it is classed as a "medium" sized store by company officials, it is large enough and well enough arranged to embrace 22 separate departments.

General departments in the local store, where almost any need can be satisfied, include candy, piece goods and domestics, ladies and children's wear, footwear, men and boys wear, rayon underwear, laces and ribbon, hosiery (for all ages), handkerchiefs, notions, jewelry, and souvenirs, stationery, toilet goods and cosmetics, hardware, electrical goods, glassware and crockery, house furnishings, pet supplies, toys, and musical recordings.

STORE HERE IS THE FARTHEST WEST IN M'CRORY SYSTEM

In a measure McCrory is "pioneering" in Big Spring by opening one of its department stores here Saturday.

The new store happens to be the westernmost unit in the system of more than 200 businesses. Closest McCrory stores in Texas are at Wichita Falls, Fort Worth, and San Antonio. There are six others in the state.

J. W. Sherwood, manager, said that the opening of a store here demonstrated the company's "faith in the prosperity and future of Big Spring and surrounding area."

STORE'S EXTERIOR ATTRACTIVE IN DESIGN, COLOR

While the interior of the new McCrory store, opening for business Saturday at Second and Main, is among the most attractive layouts in West Texas, the exterior, too, is a thing of beauty.

The design for the attractive light-faced brick is compelling in its lines, and well proportioned McCrory signs—plated with gold leaf—add to the symmetry.

Modern store fronting, built around well arranged show windows afford an opportunity to invitingly display merchandise of quality and price.

A large Neon electrical sign has been erected on the store front, further concentrating attention upon it.

Intra-Store Phone System Installed

Efficiency in operation is achieved by the use of an intra-store telephone system at the McCrory store which opens for business Saturday at its location at Second and Main streets.

When a customer calls for an article which is temporarily not on display, the staff member in charge of that department merely steps to a nearby store phone, contacts the basement and has the article ready for inspection in a minimum amount of time.

This arrangement also permits sales women to keep up stock without necessity of ever leaving their counters.

STORE MAINTAINS SPECIAL DISPLAY DEPARTMENT

Its walls so arranged that timely seasonal displays can be created effectively, the McCrory store in Big Spring requires a department for this purpose—the art or display department.

A talented young woman sketches large figures to fit the motif to be followed, cuts out the design, colors it and then displays it above the several silhouette signs against the store walls.

Currently the rodeo motif is being carried out in recognition of the sixth annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo.

OFFICE PERMITS A FULL VIEW OF STORE

Advantageously located, the offices of the McCrory store which opens here Saturday afford the management a sweeping view of the store at all times.

Constructed as a balcony effect at the rear of the store, the offices are elevated enough that they do not expose employees in this department to the noise and activity of the sales floor. Yet, the manager and his staff can, from this point, see that service goes on uninterrupted.

Stock Layout In M'Crory Basement Follows That On The Main Floor

Not the least of the striking features of the McCrory store, which opens at its location at Second and Main on Saturday, is its basement.

Used mainly for storeroom purposes, the basement runs the entire length of the building and as nearly as possible stocks are arranged in shelves directly under the actual department on the main floor. Thus, materials are readily located.

The basement connects with the alley by a freight slide. The storeroom keeper checks each shipment of merchandise and sees that it is placed in the proper shelves and is accounted for.

Women staff members have a lounge room downstairs where they may rest before and after work hours or during lunch. Valuables may be left in the check room joining the lounge quarters.

In one end of the basement, looking much like a bank cage, is a mouseproof compartment used to store candies. Supplies of candy go directly from the compartment to the candy counters on the main floor by dumbwaiter.

MANAGER

Directing operations of the McCrory Store here as manager is J. W. Sherwood, who has been with the company for three years. His experience in the 5 and 10-cent store business, however, extends back 15 years. Mr. Sherwood, who came here from McAllen, has been here for some time in directing pre-opening activities.

Candy Dept. A Feature

If there is one department of the store to which McCrory officials point with particular pride, it is the candy department.

Its fixtures are the most modern that money can buy, are constituted of chromium (stainless) steel, have slanting display arrangements with storage bins enclosed underneath.

Box candy and specialties will be displayed in glass shelves behind the spotless counters.

For sanitation, the candy department connects directly with its mouse-proof storage vault below by a dumbwaiter attachment.

Not only is the department unusually large, but it will carry an equally large variety of candies from which to choose. At all times the candy will be fresh, for orders are transmitted at least once weekly.

CENTER POINT SERENADERS TO PLAY AT STORE

The hundreds of people who visit McCrory's during the formal opening Saturday will be entertained by some music which has proven very popular in this area.

The Center Point Serenaders—Glenn Cantrell, Donald Atkins, Hoyleland Ben-Nix—will appear at intervals during the day. J. W. Sherwood, manager, announced. The string band scored a hit in its appearance with the trade trippers to half a dozen towns north of here during the past week.

SPECIAL TRAINING FOR ALL WORKERS

Experienced or non-experienced—every person joining the McCrory store staff is given special training.

Over 50 years experience in merchandising have taught company officials some important things about aiding the customer in buying. Out of this has come a system of training in what is known as "McCrory Service."

Fixtures Designed For McCrory Use

Done in red mahogany finish, the fixtures of the McCrory store, which opens here Saturday at Second and Main streets, were largely designed and made especially for the company.

This is particularly true of the 12 counters in the center and the four flanking the center tier on either side. A feature of these counters is the adjustable trays which permit articles to be kept in an orderly manner, thus facilitating shopping for the customer.

Whether it is a pen or a hammer, a dress or a bar of candy—the McCrory fixture provide for its display in plain sight.

Civilization Comes At Pretty High Cost

DOWNTOWN SCENE HELPED

For years following the burning of the Ward hotel, the vacant lot at Second and Main remained a black mark on the downtown scene. The old Ward basement became a catch-all for trash, was finally hidden by a board fence erected by the city, as shown above. It was not until the McCrory Store came along, however, to erect a new building, that the site became one of the most attractive in the downtown section.

Fair Trade Act Up To Governor

AUSTIN, June 16 (AP)—Awaiting the governor's signature today was the controversial fair trade act, subject of a bitter fight which developed a six-week filibuster in the senate.

Proponents gained unexpected strength and showed the house bill through the senate yesterday morning. It was returned to the house where that branch promptly concurred in senate amendments.

Final vote in the senate was 20 to 11 and in the house, 91 to 34.

Manufacturers and merchants are permitted to agree by contract on minimum retail prices of trademarked articles and commodities under the bill. A senate amendment limits price-fixing contracts to two years.

Proponents said the measure would protect producer, middleman and consumer, while foes contended it was a device to hike prices for manufacturers.

Under the bill, any merchant who sells a trademarked article at less than the contract price is subject to suit. Friends said this would eliminate loss leader sales and would be a benefit to all concerned.

However, opponents contended it was a "15 to 20 per cent sales tax," claiming it would increase the retail cost of many articles that would be sold at a profit.

The senate tacked on an amendment stipulating the entire act would be void if any portion of it was found to be in contravention to the state's anti-trust laws.

The house also adopted a conference committee report on the vocational education bill appropriating $1,554,664 for the biennium, passed and sent the senate a bill appropriating more than a million dollars to rural aid fund deficiencies and passed and sent the governor a bill lending $5,800 to the Nueces Valley Authority.

The house yet must act on other major appropriation bills. The senate approved the report on a bill appropriating $4,848,725 for the judiciary for the biennium. Previously having adopted reports on eleemosynary, departmental and education appropriations, it now has to act only on rural aid and vocational education.

Both houses adjourned until Monday morning.

McCRORY'S
On Their New Store In Big Spring

M'Carthy And Fields Star In Comedy

Rated pretty well at the top as a comedy combination, thanks to their popularity on the radio, are W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy. They steal the show for laughs in "You Can't Cheat An Honest Man," an opus with hilarious sequences which plays at the Ritz theatre Friday and Saturday.

Highlighting the film, as you might suspect, is the bitter feud between Fields and his wooden nemesis, McCarthy. Their battle reaches new heights of potency and comedy in "You Can't Cheat An Honest Man."

There's supposed to be a new high in comedy reached when Charlie pops up with a black eye, instigated by Fields, and has to do one of his acts in blackface so the discolored orb won't be noticed.

The attractive Constance Moore, playing her first major role, gives a brilliant performance. Mortimer Snerd is back again too.

A brand new face seen on the screen for the first time is that of Princess Baba. Another newcomer is Blaceman, Hindu animal hypnotist, who performs some amazing feat of hypnotism and crocidies.

Mary Forbes and Marion Hall are cast as James Bush's parents. John Arledge gives an excellent account of himself as Fields' son. You also will see Charles Coleman in one of his never-to-be-forgotten bit roles. Edward Brophy, Arthur Hohl and Eddie Anderson are splendid as a union representative, bill collector and Fields' colored helper respectively.

War, Peace And Propaganda' Topic Of March Of Time

The March of Time presents in its latest monthly issue, to show Friday and Saturday at the Ritz, an important and thought-provoking film story on War, Peace and Propaganda, which shows on the screen many hitherto unpublished details of one of the most extensive international sales campaigns in modern history—the efforts of foreign propagandists to win the friendship of the people of the U. S. now—in 1939—against the day when this country's help may be needed to win a war in Europe.

Coinciding with the American tour of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England, which has attracted nationwide attention and deep interest, the film War, Peace and Propaganda is especially timely.

In turning their cameras on this dramatic subject, however, the editors of the March of Time have gone beyond the kings and statesmen, whose every action is reported in the headlines of each day's news, to discover the deep dramatic role that millions of ordinary people are playing here and abroad in the rapidly unfolding story of international peace and cooperation.

The culmination of several months' work by cameramen, writers and editors of the March of Time, War, Peace and Propaganda shows for the first time in clear perspective a subject of unusual interest and vital concern to every U. S. citizen today.

M'Alister Aids In Installing Huge M'Crory Sign

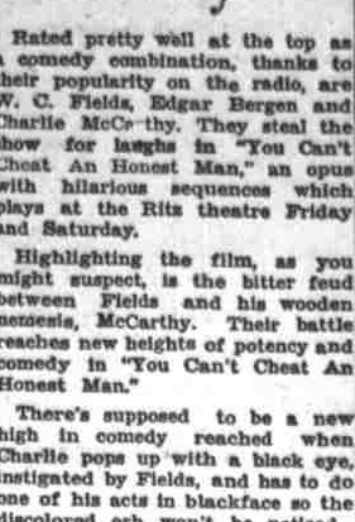

A big sign, weighing approximately 900 pounds, was in place over the McCrory store building at Second and Main streets Friday because of a good turn by O. H. McAlister, trucking contractor.

When the sign arrived, G. E. MacKay, construction foreman for the company, found that no provision had been made for moving and hoisting it into place. One of McAlister's crews not only got the sign to the building but had it in place in little more than an hour.

MacKay extended thanks to McAlister, especially because there had been no charge for the service and because the act made it possible for the sign to be in place by opening time.

CHAS. STARRETT FILM AT LYRIC

Here's a sample of the tense episodes to be expected from the western film at the Lyric Friday and Saturday. It's "Western Caravan," with Charles Starrett in the hero's role. Iris Meredith and Dick Curtis are others in the cast.

FEUDSTERS

W. C. Fields, he of the red nose, would have you think the other object in the picture is Charlie McCarthy. But it's not Mr. Fields just naturally doesn't like Charlie, and he'll tell him every chance he gets. And vice versa. The feudsters have at it in uproarious fashion at when they appear, with Edgar Bergen of course, in "You Can't Cheat An Honest Man."

Charles Starrett And Tex Ritter Starred In Western Film

Two of the most popular of the cowboy stars—Charles Starrett and Tex Ritter—show their ridin', shootin', fightin' and romancin' abilities on local screens this week-end.

Starrett, one-time visitor here, plays at the Lyric theatre Friday and Saturday in a action packed range drama called "Western Caravan." It has all the excitement associated with the wild west days, Iris Meredith and Dick Curtis are other featured members of the cast.

The Queen presents on Friday and Saturday the singing cowhand, Texas Ritter, in another action drama—one which has a mystery element, too—called "Rolling Westward." Tex not only uses his gun and his fists, but he uses his voice, in range ballads.

When A Man Plans To Fly To Europe, His Wife Ought To Be Concerned

EDITOR'S NOTE: The AP's aviation editor is going to fly to Europe tomorrow on a "preview" trip prior to the establishment of regular passenger service. He has just broken the news to the little woman.

By DEVON FRANCIS NEW YORK, June 16 (AP)—When I got home last night I said to my wife, "Trene, I want you to get my store clothes pressed and wash me a pair of socks because I am going to fly to Europe Saturday."

"Then I waited calmly for her to faint."

I had it all figured out what I would do when she keeled over. I would be tender and give her smelling salts and bring her to. Then I would tell her it was all right, that 28 or 30 other people were going along and that it was to be in the world's biggest airplanes, with four motors.

"I think," she said, "that is just fine. I have a steak for dinner. Do you want mashed potatoes or fried?"

I did not know quite what to say. "I guess," I said, "I have not made myself clear. I am going to Europe, which is a continent, like on the maps. I am going to Europe in an airplane. There is a lot of water between the United States and Europe."

She nodded. "Lindburgh and Corrigan and now you. They have been flying the Atlantic since 1919. I hope you remember to be nice and not ask for a second helping."

I am not one to quibble over trifles, but it seems to me that when a man is flying to Europe in the first plane to carry anybody but the crew, a woman ought to realize—

The plane will take off from Manhattan bay, on the north shore of Long Island, tomorrow and head for Horta, the Azores. Then we will go on Sunday to Lisbon and stop overnight, and land Monday at Marseille, France.

This is the same plane which has flown the route before. It weighs 41 1/2 tons fully loaded and starting June 28 will be used for regular passenger service by Pan American Airways. It carries a crew of twelve and on shorter hops can seat up to 74 people.

There are births in it, and all that, and it seems to me a woman ought to realize this is something which will be recorded in history. Well, current history anyway.

"I hope you will not be too lonesome while I am gone. I don't want you to worry," I said, half sarcastic.

She replied, "Oh, I don't want you to worry either. Just don't think about me. I have lots of things to do, just lots of things."

Somewhat, this trip doesn't seem to be the fun I thought it would be.

SAVINGS-LOAN ASSN. SENDS OUT DIVIDENDS

Dividend checks have been mailed by the First Federal Savings and Loan association for the eighth time. Officers of the institution have announced.

The current semi-annual payment was at the usual rate of 4 per cent per annum for the six months ending June 30.

Since its organization on June 17, 1935, the association has made regular dividend payments twice a year, and made 98 loans totaling $135,247, of which $102,448 was outstanding at the end of last month. Of $46,000 originally secured from the federal government, $8,000 has been repaid and officers plan to further reduce the government investment in July if local money is available within the next 30 days.

All investments are insured by the Fidelity to $5,000, and no local investments exceed that amount.

Indians Dance For Joy Over Good Crops

Indians were happy because it is summer time and the corn crop looks good, the jackrabbits are slowed by fat and the women aren't grumbling about plowing and other chores.

Braves from eight southwestern tribes—Soux, Pawnee, Caddo, Alabama, Coushatta, Comanches, Apaches and Kiowas—gathered in this hilltop town to dance with joy because the gods have been good this year.

They wore war paint and feathers on overalls and some wore only breech cloths. Few own automobiles and none own oil wells. They are the poor country Indians spring celebration held on Texas soil since rambunctious cowhands drove all but the Alabama-Coushatta from the state with six-guns a long time ago.

Chief Clenson Sylestine, talking the sing-song dialect of the Alabama tribe, greeted the Indians and the curious whites, who got seats for the show at two-bits a throw, with a great big friendly "Ho." The chief, when he chooses, can speak perfect English.

Old men pounded drums and youngsters, more adept at jitterbugging than doing the difficult alligator dance the Indians know as the Ha-Chun-Choba, strutted and preened and romped and stomped.

Pretty Indian maids dressed in bright calico and silk and strings of beads, peeked timidly at the dancing men. The girls giggled at the white folks who dressed any old way for the heat. Some of the whites giggled back.

But most of the time the maids watched the dancers. The old squaws whispered last night in the tepees that sometimes the dancing men choose wives in times like these.

The 400 Indians from the village 20 miles from here and their visitors from Oklahoma and New Mexico took the town last night without firing a shot.

Ladies Lounge In New M'Crory Store

An innovation in department stores of its type and size in Big Spring is the ladies lounge incorporated into the new McCrory store opening here Saturday.

The lounge is located at the rear of the store building and is equipped with comfortable, modernistic furnishings. Adjacent are rest room facilities.

The room is spacious and can accommodate several women at a time. It is handy for those who wish to pause for a brief rest during a prolonged shopping tour.

FILTRATION PLANT TO BE ENLARGED

CORPUS CHRISTI, June 16 (AP) M. R. Nelson, McAllen contractor, was low bidder yesterday among the five concerns seeking the contract for the enlargement of the McAllen filtration plant, officials of Central Power & Light company announced here.

The present 1,000,000 gallon daily capacity of the plant is to be doubled to take care of the recent and contemplated growth of McAllen.

Facing Guillotine, Slayer Purchases Cemetery Lot

PARIS, June 16 (AP)—Eugene Weidmann, ready to go to the guillotine tomorrow on the same spot where Henri Landru, his predecessor in the "bluebeard" annals of France, died 16 years ago, has bought and paid for a 132 cemetery lot.

A German woman sent by the 31-year-old German ex-convict's family and identified only as "Frau Carlier" hastened to St. Pierre prison at Versailles shortly after Weidmann's pardon appeal was turned down yesterday by President Albert Lebrun.

Weidmann authorized her to purchase the lot and shortly afterward he paid for it—45 francs.

In that lot will lie the body of the killer of six persons, including a 23-year-old Jean De Koven, a dancer, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Miss De Koven was lured from Paris to the ex-convict's rented villa La Voultie, in suburban St. Cloud, where Weidmann strangled her and burned her body.

Landru lost his head in 1922 for the murder of 11 persons.

National Hotel Week

Currently being observed is National Hotel Week, a period during which the attention of the public is being focused on the place in our scheme of affairs occupied by the nation's seventh largest industry.

Hotels occupy a unique place in their community, because, in addition to paying taxes and employing citizens of the community as do other business enterprises, they offer congenial meeting places for social, business and civic purposes; afford accommodations to visitors who, in turn, spend money in the community; and attract conventions which also bring added revenue to the community.

Concerning the visitor's dollar, it has been estimated from surveys that this "dollar" breaks down as follows: 23 cents to the hotel, 18 cents to restaurants, 31 cents to retail stores, 10 cents to garages, eight cents to theatres and 10 cents for miscellaneous purchases.

As times have progressed, the old "bowl and pitcher" rooms have disappeared, and in their place have come fine quarters of pleasant and attractive appointments, rooms arranged and equipped for public meetings, and services designed to meet every demand of the traveler and the local resident.

Big Spring may properly count itself above the average town of its size in the way of outstanding hotel accommodations, and many a tourist and traveler has agreed to that. Many of these travelers remember a town principally from the hotel accommodations they had, and we can be assured that none ever left Big Spring without a pleasant memory of being taken care of in the way of rooms and meals.

We count our hotels here significant institutions in what goes to make Big Spring a thriving center. Other cities regard their hotels in similar fashion, so that a special week to give this industry due recognition is entirely proper.

Man About Manhattan

NEW YORK—An experiment in jungle dentistry has in no sense discouraged Otis Lloyd, a trainer at Frank Buck's wild animal camp out on Long Island, even though it went somewhat awry.

Several years ago, Lloyd made the headlines when a giant python curled around his body, crushed his chest and left him temporarily blind. Then, last summer, a diamond-back rattler bit him and he almost died.

This summer it's been the python again. For several days the 27-foot reptile had been snooping around with an infected tooth. Seizing his fociops, Lloyd was ready to clamp down on the tooth when the python sank 72 needle-sharp teeth into his left hand.

Said Lloyd, later: "It's all in the day's fun. And besides, turnout is fair play. Almost every day I go in there and catch that python barehanded. Today he caught me barehanded."

The infected tooth? "It's still in there," admitted the trainer, "but I'll get it in a couple of days."

Sometimes people need "medical attention" in a hurry. Especially is the availability of a good physician a godsend when one is away from home. It seems to me that the thousands of fair visitors who will note I did not say millions may want to know something about the availability of physicians, should an emergency arise.

Well, the medical profession of Greater New York has established centers in all the five boroughs in anticipation of that need. So, if you're planning to go to the fair here are some good telephone numbers to paste in your hat in case you should need a physician:

Manhattan 8-9100, if you stop in the Bronx; MAIN 4-7100 for Brooklyn; Independence 3-2900 for Queens and for Manhattan and Staten Island the same number—Regent 4-1500.

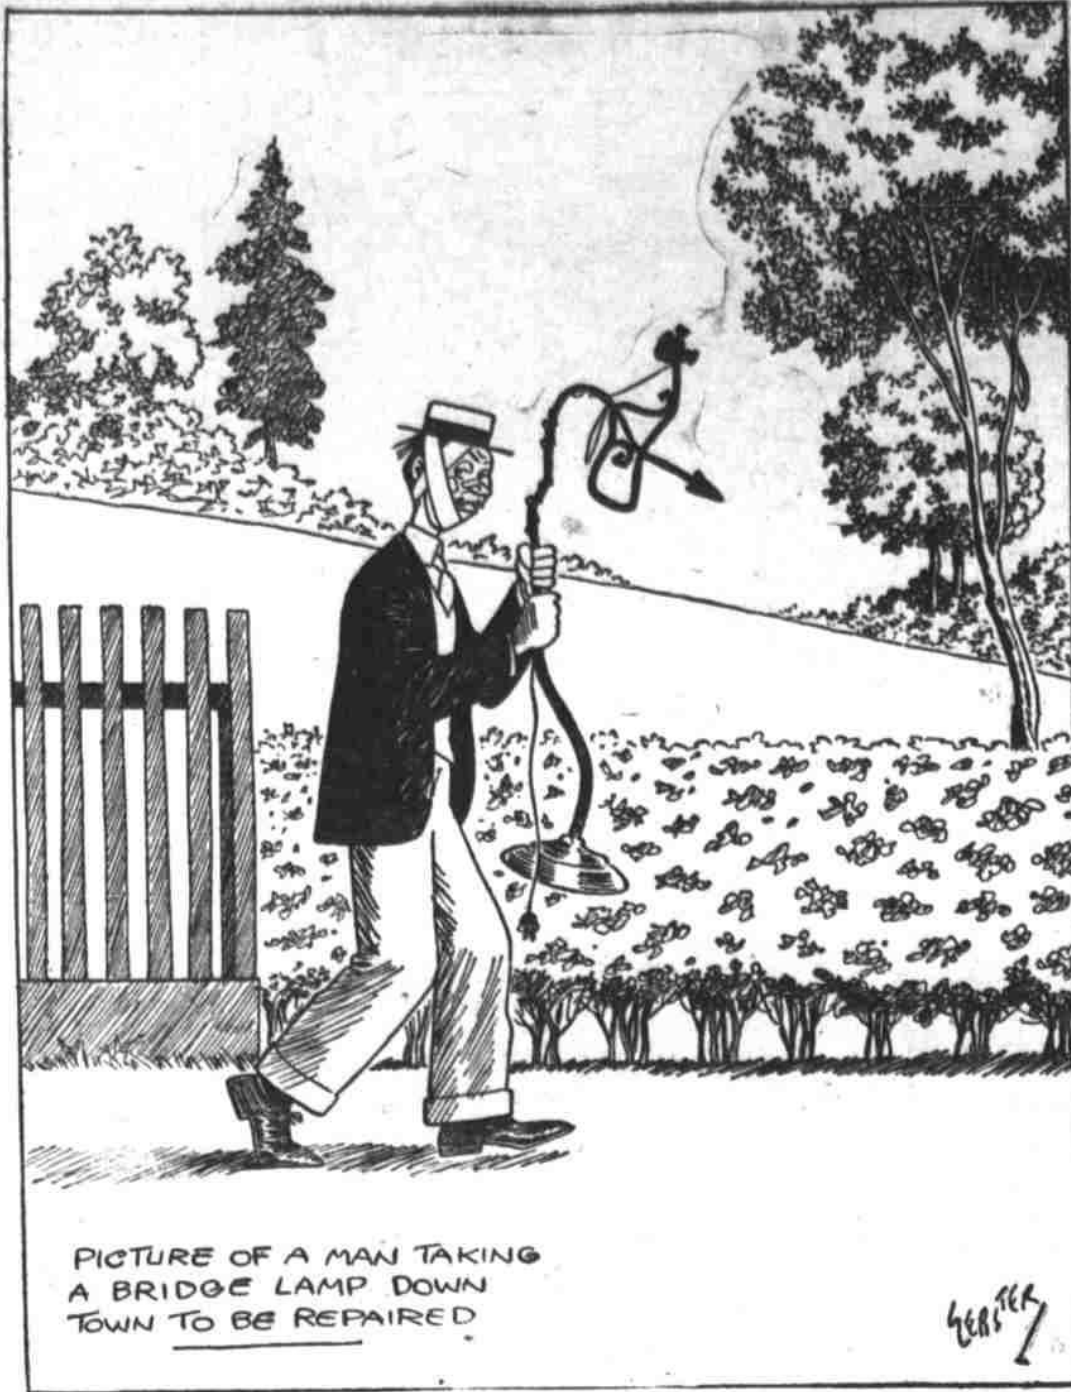

When you call one of these numbers and give your address the center will provide you with a list of reputable doctors in your immediate vicinity. And for this service there will be no charge.

One of the most profoundly interesting books I ever read is the United States navy's escape manual for men and officers on submarines. The recent under-sea disasters at home and abroad have rekindled interest in this little known branch of the service. This manual should be made available to everyone who is interested in the under-water branch of the service and everyone who has at heart the welfare of the men who perform it.

Another fine piece of reading (Boy, have I been getting in a mess of good reading) is "The Adventures of Captain Horatio Hornblower," a fit companion to the Bounty books for any shelf. It's about the days when Britain was building her might on the sea and looked in a death-dual with Spain. I don't know what half of them mean, but my mind still lags with such words as "Avast," "rigging," "the mainmast," etc. And blood! Mister, you never read about so much blood-letting in your life.

Foreign countries have thus far announced their intention of competing in the 1940 Olympics in Finland.

Chapter 10 FACE ON THE NIGHT CLUB FLOOR

"Pull up in front of this place," Tacks ordered his driver. "I want to speak to the Emperor."

The driver complied. The doorman, hand outstretched to assist a supposed patron of The Heel Tap to alight, paused suddenly. A kind of terrible face that, in the shadow of a muddy and rain-soaked hat, looked as if it had spent the early evening stopping a few of Joe Louis's efforts, was peering out at him.

Tacks started. From doormen, waiters, bartenders and such, he was accustomed to a becoming servility, as if he now forgot that he looked like something ripe for the broom and dust-pan.

"Keep a civil tongue in your head," he warned the doorman, "or you might get into trouble."

This seemed to amuse the vast Cerberus. Behind the bulwark of his mustache he shook with dignified mirth.

"Hi!" he ejaculated at length. "Is that so?"

"Yes, that's so," snapped Tacks. "I suppose the management of this dive parks a statue like you out here just to insult—er—ah—possible patrons?"

The doorman ceased to shake and regarded Tacks with hostile eye.

"Fat chance of your being a possible patron," he observed.

"What the... er..." began Tacks and stopped suddenly. He was remembering at last that he had spent a good deal of time this evening slithering around in gutters. There was just a chance that the doorman was within his rights in refusing to rate him among the customers of The Heel Tap.

"Drawing himself up to his full height the doorman extended a stern finger not at Tacks, but at the cab driver.

"Move on!" he ordered majestically.

"Just a moment!" out in Tacks. "Are you going to tell me who that girl is and what she's doing here or aren't you?"

"The doorman favored him with a frosty stare.

"I am not," he said decisively. "Because, young fella, it ain't none of your business." He turned to the driver again. "Come on, buddy! Step on it!"

The gorilla in charge of the cab, who had been enjoying this bit of byplay immensely, looked at his temporary employer for confirmation of these marching orders.

Tacks snarled at him, managing to incorporate the address of the Penguin Club in the snarl. He was being baffled and worsted. Well, he was a fool, that was all. Just a plain damn fool. Nevertheless, he intended to get back with this snooty doorman if it took him a lifetime. No doorman, he assured himself savagely, could highlight an Adams and get away with it.

A little more than an hour later Mr. Adams again presented himself at the door of The Heel Tap. The behemoth with the mustache was still at his post. He did not, however, recognize Tacks. In the interval that had passed since his former visit Mr. Adams had wrought noteworthy changes in his appearance. True, his jaw was now generally plastered with adhesive tape. But, aside from that, in his perfectly-cut dinner-jacket he looked to the doorman like any of the other young gentlemen who frequented The Heel Tap. In no way connecting him with the disreputable face which had grimaced out of a taxicab an hour ago, the doorman bowed him politely into the night club.

Tacks suffered the ceremony in silence. Sometime he was going square accounts with this doorman. But not tonight. Tonight graver considerations were at hand. This very Heel Tap had swallowed Miss Patricia North. If it still held her in its toils Mr. Adams was going, if humanly possible, to get her out of them. And when that had been accomplished, he intended to demand how-come in a big way. He was getting exceedingly tired of being booted about like a soccer ball.

The Heel Tap was a place of little white-clothed tables, soft lights and thick gray carpets. At one end, just off the usual postage stamp of dance floor, a very blue orchestra was dispensing very blue rhythm. The head waiter approached Tacks deferentially.

"Good-evening, sir," said the head waiter.

"Table," growled Tacks. "Near the dance floor."

Arriving at a ringside table the head waiter waved a majestic hand. Like geni, two lesser waiters appeared. It seemed to need the combined efforts of all three of them to get Tacks safely into a chair.

"Don't want anything to eat," Tacks snapped to the huddle of waiters. "Scotch and soda."

The waiters scattered, convinced that the surly young man with the bunged-up jaw was out to do some serious drinking. Tacks hit a cigarette and glared about him. No Patricia! No Patricia at any of the tables or among those loy-sided tables laughingly called the dance floor. This was certainly not his night out.

Presently, however, his attention was diverted by a sudden darkening of The Heel Tap. This darkening occurred simultaneously with the end of a dance number and the dancers, shadowy figures now, sought their tables. Then the beam of a spotlight, violet-colored, played over the dance floor.

Straight into this cornucopia of brilliance came the nearest thing to a dream walking that Mr. Adams had ever seen.

She was in white. At least Tacks supposed it would be white if truth were known. Right now it was violet, due to the spotlight. Then came the sound of a piano played, it seemed, with only the tips of the pianist's fingers. Miss Patsy North, in her low throaty voice, began that same song number to which Tacks had listened outside the door of her apartment.

It was a snappy tune and Patsy sang it snappily, yet with a kind of caressing buskiness that got right in amongst Tacks Adams. He sat there goggling at her, forgetting his travail of the evening. Out on the floor the spotlight, changing intermittently, put Patsy through the gamut of the spectrum. But it mattered not to Mr. Adams. He was looking a Patsy North, listening to her, and whether it pleased the management of The Heel Tap to have her lavender, crimson, sky-blue-pink or green-glass-yellow, Mr. Adams was satisfied.

"Oh, Patricia!" The song finished. The Heel Tap snapped back to its normal illumination. And there was Patsy, revealed in all her proper loveliness, tall and slim in a shimmering gown of white and smiling her golden smile. Then applause burst forth, led by a young gentleman who seemed to go in for jodging behind adhesive tape.

So loudly did Mr. Adams state his approval by smacking his palms together that even Patsy shot a startled expression across her face. Tacks, whose eyes had never left hers, caught it. He ceased applauding abruptly. Good heavens, had he put his foot in it again? Could it be that, in abandoning himself to wild approbation, he had caused her embarrassment? It would be just like him. Where this girl was concerned Patsy seemed to have decreed that Tacks Adams was to make a mess of things.

Patsy, without another glance in his direction, began an encore, threading her way between the tables as she sang. Tacks waited hopefully. He noted that, every so often, she would pause momentarily at a table as if singing to its occupants. Surely she would look in at his table and give him an indication that she was grateful for the way he had established himself as a one-man cheering section.

Preston Crover Washington Daybook

WASHINGTON—Observers here interpret the appointment of Admiral Leahy, naval chief of operations, to take over the government in Puerto Rico, as meaning that the administration had decided nothing should be spared to bring about improvement in the island's condition.

Of all U. S. colonial problems that of Puerto Rico has been worst. Hawaii, the Philippines, Puerto Rico and Cuba came under the American wing almost simultaneously, and the conditions of all but Puerto Rico have improved with reasonable steadiness since. Old timers who knew Puerto Rico "away back when" will tell you that affairs in the Caribbean island, both political and economic, have grown worse. They place the blame about equally on natural difficulties in the island itself and on inept governors.

Under democratic and republican administrations alike it has been the habit, with a few exceptions, to appoint governors who are either out and out political hacks or military executives who have limited patience with cumbersome civil processes.

PRESENT GOVERNOR CRITICIZED

The present governor, General Blanton Winship, has been the target of criticism from witnesses before congressional committees just as have previous governors. Every governor who goes down there has two strikes called on him before ever he sets foot on the island.

Just now a coalition group has political control in the islands—under the governor, of course. General Winship's critics have testified that he has given in to them far too much with the result that patronage rolls have been swelled expensively.

General Winship replies that the island's budget is in balance, a statement which his critics greet with derisive cheers. They say that under the act giving Puerto to its government the budget never can get unbalanced. If the legislature appropriates more money than is raised by taxes, the budget has to be adjusted to fit.

Meantime sugar plantations have expanded in the island, the larger ones owned by people outside the island. That takes out some of the wealth and has hurt many who once depended on small crops. The population is almost as dense as that of Rhode Island, nearly 500 to the mile, and hasn't a handful of factory industry with which to support it.

There has been street shootings and assassinations, culminated by that of 1937 when police killed 20 and wounded 100 in suppressing a Palm Sunday parade of young men and women supporting an independence movement. The leader of that group now is in Atlanta penitentiary, convicted of conspiring to upset the United States government.

The administration has financed public works projects in the island for the past five years. This has brought relief to many.

In dispatching Admiral Leahy to the scene, the president is sending the man upon whom he has leaned most heavily in advising him on naval matters for the past four years. Leahy has had to deal with congress extensively, however, and that has broadened his military tradition with a dash of civil routine.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

"Young Mr. Lincoln." Screenplay by Lamar Trotti. Directed by John Ford. Cast: Henry Fonda, Alico Brady, Marjorie Weaver, Arlene Whelan, Eddie Collins, Pauline Moore, Richard Cromwell, Donald Meek, Dorris Bowdon, Eddie Quillan, Spencer Charters, Ward Bond, Millie Stone, Cliff Clark, Robert Lowery, Charles Tanner, Francis Ford, Fred Kohler, Jr., Kay Linaker, Russell Simpson.

HOLLYWOOD—Few of the numerous plays and films about Lincoln have dwelt upon the man's early years. "Young Mr. Lincoln" achieves an interesting portrait not only of the man but of his picturesque and homely setting.

The face (to coin a paraphrase) is the face of Lincoln, but the voice is the voice, unmistakably, of Fonda. The lank, gawky young fellow who rods into Springfield one day on a rummy mule to study law is recreated splendidly through make-up, gesture, and posture. And—who knows?—maybe Abe talked like Hank Fonda, whose work is creditable.

The youthful romance with Ann Rutledge (Moore) is briefly, poetically presented, dissolving into a soliloquizing sequence at the girl's grave. At Springfield's Independence Day celebration—scenes rich in lustrous colors of the past—Abe takes part in pie-judging, wins the rail-splitting contest, pulls a fast one when his side is losing in the tug-of-war, meets Mary Todd (Weaver), a southern belle who goes about with the beau Steve Douglas (Stone) but has an eye also for awkward, reticent Abe.

That night a murder is committed. A cheap town bully is knifed, presumably during a fist fight with two farmer sons (Cromwell and Quillan) of the Widow Clay (Brady).

Young Abe takes on his first case—for the defense—after he has shrewdly talked a lynch mob to its senses, and he goes into court with two strikes against him. The boys haven't a chance, apparently, under the pompous attack of state's attorney Feilder (Meek). But slow-moving Abe outwits the opposition and brings the real criminals to justice. These trial scenes highlight the man's homely humor (there's a choice sequence with Francis Ford as a bumbling, backwoods candidate for the jury) and are handled for nice suspense.

The film ends on a symbolic note (after Lincoln, accepting Douglas's congratulations, has remarked that in future neither should "under-rate the other") with young Abe taking a walk "maybe to the top of that hill" and getting caught in a storm.

"The Sun Never Sets." Screenplay by W. F. Lipscomb. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Cast: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Basil Rathbone, Barbara O'Neil, Lionel Atwill, Virginia Field, C. Aubrey Smith, Melville Cooper, Mary Forbes, John Burton, Arthur Mulliner, Theodore Von Elts, Douglas Walton, Cecil Kellaway.

A good cast struggles through the hackneyed story of a family devoted, through hell, high water, and melodrama to Britain's colonial service. The theme is hyped by the fantastic plot of an international malefactor (Atwill) who uses his powerful mystery radio to stir up strife among nations, with world dictatorship his aim.

Almost everybody else is noble and duty-bound except young Fairbanks, who joins the nobility parade at last and busts up the crooked doings. Melville Cooper's comedy is such a relief the wonder is they didn't throw out the others and do a story about him. The acting of the principals, apparently unrestrained in face of forced heroics, is generously and frequently seasoned with perk. Funniest sequence has Rathbone, restrained from dashing off to duty by Fairbanks during O'Neill's childbirth sequence, crying, "I gotta get a lotta!" In short, the sun never rises, either.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 16 (AP)—Urging an end to the ancient practice of passing out government jobs in payment of political debts, Attorney General Murphy declared last night the government payroll was not "a legitimate field for charity and benevolence toward special groups of persons who lack qualification for public service."

Atty. General Urges End Of Patronage

"Both notions," he said in a radio broadcast, "are unsound, poor political science and above all, poor public economy."

He said the six billion dollars in salaries to national, state and local government workers made the cost to the average family $200 a year, or over 13 per cent of its total annual income.

WASHINGTON, June 16 (AP)—President Roosevelt told a press conference today the administration was working gradually toward ending the practice of giving government jobs in payment of political debts.

That was his comment on a speech by Attorney General Murphy at Asbury Park, N. J., last night. Murphy urged that this practice be stopped and also proposed a $1,000,000,000 cut in the public payroll, federal, state and municipal.

HIGH WATERS DUE TO FOLLOW STORM

MOBILE, Ala., June 16 (AP)—Police today warned business houses and shipping circles that a tropical disturbance which hit the Alabama coast this morning may send tide waters over the city wharf and the Mobile Bay bridge causeway.

Concessionaires At New York Fair Demand Drive To Boost Admissions

NEW YORK, June 16 (AP)—A reduction in the New York world's fair admission price from 75 to 50 cents and an immediate nationwide advertising campaign to increase attendance were demanded today in a resolution by 27 amusement area concessionaires.

Perley Boone, fair publicity director, who attended a meeting last night of the concessionaires where these demands were formulated, said the majority opinion was that reduced admissions should be effective only from 10 p. m. to 2 a. m.

Agitation for the admission cut has faced Grover Whalen, president of the fair, because attendance has been below official predictions. Elliott Roosevelt, son of the president, speaking on a radio program last night, offered "the advice, free of charge," to Whalen that immediate action was important to offset a growing belief throughout the nation that New York fair prices were beyond the means of thousands of potential customers.

Charges of "extortion and sabotage" leveled at union labor by foreign exhibitors were labeled "utterly untrue" and "motivated by mad jealousy," in a retort from Thomas A. Murray, New York labor leader.

Murray, president of the building and construction council of Greater New York (AFL), replied to the charges made by Dr. Neil Van Aken, president of the foreign government commissioners club, and by other concessionaires.

Among accusations made by some exhibitors were claims of slashing of seats, cutting of wire cables, incendiarism, half speed work and arbitrary jurisdictional strikes, in addition to assertions they were forced to meet building and labor costs which had gone as high as 100 per cent over original estimates.

4-H Clubbers In Capital

WASHINGTON, June 16 (AP)—The towering Washington monument cast its slim shadow today on a robust band of boys and girls who actually have been feeding off the fat of the land.

They look it, too, this bustling bunch of 4-H club members—an organization of rural "teen-age" youths who do farm work as their club activity.

Encamped on the lawn beneath the monument, the 173 members from 48 states and Puerto Rico make up a tent-city that looks like a bivouac of biceps.

City folks don't know much about the 4-H clubs, but there are more than 1,250,000 members in the 48 states and territories. The four H's, incidentally, stand for head, heart, hands, and health.

Organized by the agriculture department 25 years ago, the clubs have a simple formula—each member does an important piece of work that will demonstrate the better way in homemaking or agriculture. Here are some samples:

Fay Crosslin of Lamar county, Texas, last year put up 467 containers of fine fruits and vegetables, set out 157 shrubs and vines, and then had time to plant 80 berry vines.

Dorothy Boyette of Lowndes county, Ga., makes all her clothes, helps with the family's garments, and last year had time to put up 35 cans of fruit and vegetables and to over the furniture in her home.

The Washington encampment is a serious affair. The bugle blows at 6 a. m., and everybody gets up, which makes it one of the most successful rallies in the world.

Classes For Jittery Papas-To-Be Open In 400 Cities Within A Year

A puzzled pupil tries to learn how to change diapers at school for prospective fathers conducted by New York's Maternity Center Association. The baby's a doll.

Fathers are coming in for a lot of attention these days. Father's Day Sunday, June 18, is supposed to prove that Dad is something more than a fellow who keeps the family in cash. And this story tells of another development indicating that folks think Father really is important.

By LYDIA GRAY SHAW AP Feature Service Writer

NEW YORK—A year ago this spring, the Maternity Center association hesitantly announced a class to initiate prospective fathers into the mysteries of babyhood, then sat back to wait for a handful of diffident gentlemen to arrive.

Instead of a handful, 100 papas-to-be showed up at the association's tiny offices. The lecturer divided them into two groups, but even so, some of the initiates stood up against the wall all evening. They had so many questions to ask, the session lasted till 11 o'clock.

That was only the start. Today, more than 400 cities and towns hold classes on the pattern of the first New York session. Chicago, Cleveland, New Haven, Washington—cities like these and small towns too—run six-week courses instructing the prospective father in everything from anatomy to lessons in bathing the baby.

The association says the publicity resultant from the first New York class was responsible for the development of other classes. Mothers said: "Now if my husband had only had a course like that..." They said it in health committee meetings. Finally, they asked the association in New York how to set up a class locally.

As these requests poured in, the staff decided to prepare a syllabus to help other organizations plan their classes. Now when an inquiry comes in, they just ship the syllabus off. They're doing that every few days.

Most popular part of the course is the session with the model baby. After the first class, the association thought it would drop the child care lesson. To a man, the papas chorused "No." The same thing happened when they thought of eliminating diapering from the syllabus. "Don't," protested classes everywhere. So a seven-pound dummy Junior keeps on having his hide stuck with pins.

If he wants to, the prospective father can receive cabinet-making instructions too. The association has diagrams to show how to build simple, inexpensive cabinets and shelves to take care of baby's belongings. Also, it helps men budget the new baby.

No more jittery fathers, say the association. The courses are guaranteed to take him out of his floor-pacing, cigarette-smoking role the day his wife goes to the hospital.
