Why Bugsy missed the massacre

Chicago: A nice place to visit but I wouldn't want to live there.

Our family got a chance to return to that area two weeks ago when my wife's parents celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary.

I'm lucky in that I have good in-laws. Judy's folks, Ed and Violet Allen, have been hard-working people all their lives.

They were what I term "children of the Depression." They grew up at a time when money was almost nonexistent and you had to drop out of school early to try and make a buck -- to survive. It's hard for folks who didn't live through that period to understand that concept.

Ed was on his own by age 15. He grew up on the old West Side of Chicago. Many of his boyhood chums have become household names -- by virtue of their criminal activities. But he took the path of honesty and didn't get involved with the Accardos, Giancanas and their type.

Still, Ed's one of the most interesting folks I have ever met. He worked in construction many years and since that's only a seven-montha-year job up north, it meant he took other jobs during the off period. Thus, he accumulated at least 13 careers (that's careers -- not jobs) during his life. They included:

Trucker, machinist, laundryman, taxi cab driver, boxer, bus department dispatcher, midget car racer, motorcyle shop owner, crane operator, mechanic, motorcycle racer, and worked in a feed mill and naval ordnance plant.

But it's the stories Ed can tell from his youth, when bathtub gin was in vogue in Al Capone's Chicago, that are really interesting. For example, here's a true story about the infamous bootlegger Bugsy Moran:

You recall the St. Valentine's Day Massacre in Chicago when Capone took control of the Chicago mob by wiping out the Moran gang?

The Moran gang was in a North Clark Street warehouse getting their booze shipment ready (it was Prohibition) when two men dressed as cops walked in, announcing a "raid." But the gang members were lined up against a wall and shot dead in cold blood.

Bugsy, who was supposed to be in the garage, wasn't there. And he was one of the gang leaders that Capone wanted out of the way

According to historical accounts, Bugsy was late arriving. Some business had taken longer than expected and he arrived shortly after the massacre had taken place, he said.

But here's what really happened: Bugsy had found out about a raid coming up, but figured it was a typical police raid. His booze would be confiscated and his gang members locked up for a day until he could spring them. He didn't know it would be a mass killing.

So instead of going to the garage and await the raid, he went to an apartment of an uncle of Ed's across the street. There, he drank coffee and chatted, waiting for the raid to end. It must have come as quite a shock when he found out that it wasn't a police raid, but a Capone raid.

Anyway, he would have looked bad if he had admitted that he had known a raid was coming and hadn't informed his men. So he copped out by saying he had been held up on business, thus "luckily" missing the massacre.

Well, now Texico-Farwell folks know what really happened -- and all the folks reading the history

Economic development unit being created

A new economic development unit for the Twin Cities is in the process of being created.

Farwell Mayor Chris Gikas had called a meeting May 15 to discuss economic development. Also, Texico officials were invited

Attending the meeting at Farwell City Hall were:

Gikas; Farwell Councilman Curtis Smith; Farwell School Supt. John Grigsby; Frances Kube, head of Farwell's beautification committee; Tom Nichols, president of the Farwell Hospital District; Texico City Councilmen Butch Tharp and Doyal LaRue; Ricky Stewart, chairman of Farwell's planning and zoning commission, and Mike Pomper, Farwell Chamber of Commerce vice president.

The concensus of the group, after its 90-minute meeting, was that the discussion points made would be brought up before the full Texico and Farwell City Councils at their next respective meetings.

The economic development unit then will meet again, at 7:30 p.m. June 19 at Farwell City Hall, to discuss what avenues to take.

Among the ideas discussed were: 1. More middle-income residences to be built. This would increase the number of students in the schools. thus strengthening them. Also, it would provide more customers for local businesses. And it would help broaden the tax base.

2. Surveys would be needed, to find out how many properties are vacant and how they could be used, to find out how many persons work in the Twin Cities but live in Clovis' because they can't find housing here, to find out if areas outside the city limits could be annexed and, if so, whether utilities could be provided them.

3. The city clerks in Farwell and Texico could coordinate the work. Also, the schools might be used to run the surveys.

4. Advertising could be done in media elsewhere in New Mexico and Texico.

5. Businesses can be attracted here. Empty buildings along the highway are available. More beautification of this area is needed.

6. If an economic development unit is formed, it would be wise to zero in on one goal and stick with it, instead of trying to accomplish too much.

Barrel races, roping events on tap

After years of inactivity a group of members of the recently reorganized Farwell Arena Association met to work on cleaning, restoration and repair of the arena, bleachers, concession and announcer's stands and the grounds in preparation for their forth coming season of activities.

The work crew consisted of Danny Finch, Buddy and Carol Nickerson, Walt and Karen Didyoung, Jim and Ardith Bruce, Charlie, Donna and Toby Dean, Joe Mark and Vicki Milloy, Craig and Vickie Chumley, Clay and Ronda Melton, Patsy, Red, Lindsey and Lacey Kingston, Bob Chadwick, Milton Lee Walling and Mike Snodgrass.

An "Open to the World" Team Roping will start at 11 a.m. Anyone may enter this three head progressive roping up to eight times for a $30 cash only entry fee per team each entry.

Following the open roping, a three headed progressive "B" Roping is planned. The entry fee will be $20 books about that time are getting the wrong info.

Here's another interesting story about that period:

Capone, as did other gang leaders of the 1920s, made most of their money on selling illegal booze, since Prohibition was in effect. Well, it was costly bringing the booze down from Canada or up from Kentucky, so the idea was to get it made locally.

So Capone went into the real estate and financial markets. He had homes built and offered on the market at ridiculously low rates to allow a lot of low-income folks to own their own homes for the first time.

There was one catch, however. Persons buying these homes had to operate "stills" in them, and give (Continued on Page 2)

Money found

A sizeable amount of money, along with a note, were found on Farwell school grounds Tuesday afternoon.

If you can identify the sum and the note, please go to the Farwell superintendent's office or call him at 481-3371.

The club thanks all these persons and to Parmer County.

An additional work session is planned for May 29. This session will be preceeded by a hamburger fry for workers at 6:30 p.m. at the arena.

Kickoff for the club's first scheduled activity will be a "Jackpot" to raise funds for the future restoration of the facility prior to the High Plains Junior Rodeo held annually during Farwell's Border Town Days July 25 and 26.

The Jackpot will be May 31 and will start at 10 a.m. with a barrel race. The entry fee will be $20 (cash cash only per team, each entry and will include stock charges.

If time permits, there may be additional ropings to fit the ropers present.

Cattle for the event will be furnished by Alford Stock Contractors who promises plenty of good, fresh Corriente steers.

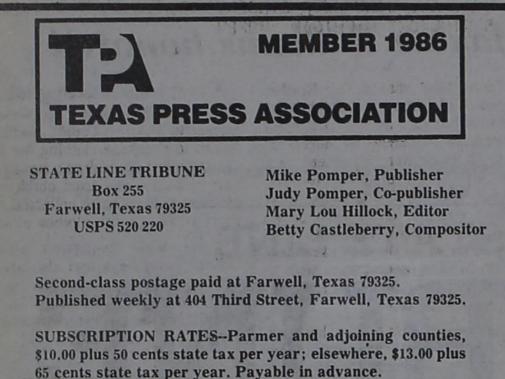

A food concession stand will be on the grounds for the convenience of "all day" spectators and participants. There is no admission charge. The public is invited.

Interested persons are also invited to join the association. Dues are $25 per year per family.

Further information about F.A.A. and the Jackpot may be obtained by calling Mike Snodgrass, president, at 482-3363 or 763-3090.

the homemade booze to the Capone operation. Many folks took up this offer.

Violet said she can still recall a police raid on one of these homes and watching the booze slither through the wooden slats of the house after police chopped up a still. Interesting, eh? That Capone, one of the most vicious criminals in history, actually helped persons finance their own homes. I can see the advertisement now:

Money: The major topic of education

BY JOHN GRIGSBY Farwell School Superintendent

We hear so much of House Bill 72, especially the "no-pass-no-play" and the "1-22" rules, that our attention is often pulled away from the things which should occupy more of our attention.

In March 1984, the State Board of Education passed a comprehensive revision of the total school curriculum -- Chapter 55 of the Texas Education Code. From this document, schools are told what subjects were required to be taught, how long to teach it and, in some cases, how it was to be taught (science). From Chapter 75 came the "Essential Elements" and the term "Documentation of Mastery." Districts are required to have specific policies regarding the promotion and retention of students - based upon documented mastery of the essential elements.

Because we have heard so much of H.B. 72, the impact of Chapter 75 has been overlooked. Education in Texas has made much progress in the past two years, but all or most of the credit has been credited to H.B. 72. The improvements have been the result of both acts, not one or the other.

The focus of Chapter 75 was curriculum, but, as I shall describe later, one cannot isolate any one part of education from another. From curriculum, you must touch personnel, facilities, textbooks, and finally, finance, both state and local. A seemingly simple decision to rotate textbooks to a five or six-year cycle will result in billions of additional tax dollars being spent over the next twenty years.

I do not mean to question the wisdom of the change, but only to bring out the fact that even the most mundane of decisions can have a far-reaching impact. Personally, I feel the decision was sound and cost-effective, and with the rapid technological changes in our society, how long will it be before textbooks, as we know them, are obsolete?

H.B. 72 addressed all other facets of education, finance, students, transportation, salaries, activities, teachers, accreditation, administrators, school board training and even some areas of curriculum missed by Chapter 75.

This work is to address many of the changes brought on by H.B. 72 and Chapter 75. I hope to point out their direct or potential impact on our district, or other small districts, on schools in general and, finally, on the taxpayer. These changes affect all aspects of education, but this work will focus primarily on costs to the district, to the state and to you.

Although the focus will be on financial costs, it must be stated that there are other "costs" involved -non-economic in nature. These are very important because they affect our lives, how we feel about our jobs and how our students feel about school and themselves. I am talking about stress, pressure, efficient use of time, non-productive or unnecessary paper-work, etc.

Even Sen. Bill Sarpalius (who voted for H.B. 72) has gone on public record stating that some regions throughout the state are experiencing a 40% dropout rate. This is almost one-half of the high school students in Texas.

How many outstanding professional teachers and administrators have abandoned education in the past two years? I do not know the count, but I can tell you that the vacancy listing for superintendents and principals is frightening.

Education is a business - but one in which our "product" cannot be measurably defined as in the business world. Yet, money is definitely the major topic of education.

This piece was accented with silk peach gladiolus and rose buds, candlelight open roses, and aqua freezia, accented with peach baby's breath, finished with a large peach bow. There was a background of palm trees and pots of greenery accenting the 45-branch candleabra.

The registration table was served by Tammy Jones, of Farwell, and Debby Johnson, of Clovis, sister of the groom. The table was covered with an aqua cloth. Next to the open guest book was a peach feather plume pen and the brides throw away bouquet.

The mother of the bride wore a mauve street length dress with white accessories. The mother of the groom wore an aqua street length dress with white accessories. Both mothers wore shoulder corsages of candlelight rose buds, gypsophila, and finished with an apalesque bow.

Following the wedding was a reception in the fellowship hall of the church. The bride's table was decorated with a chantilly lace cloth with a scalloped underskirt of aqua.

The three-tiered cake was accented by a spiral staircase, beneath the middle was a fountain accented with leather leaf fern, baby's breath and running water. The cake was topped with a mound of peach roses. The crystal punch bowl was based with fresh baby's breath. Rose and bell mints were placed on the table.

Serving at the bride's table were BeeGee Johnson of Austin and Janice Sanders of Portales, both cousins of the bride, and Roxie Johnson of Muleshoe, sister-in-law of the groom.

The grooms table was covered with an aqua cloth, and decorated with the poem "A Mother Gives" in a wooden frame which was a gift to the bride from her mother-in-law. A silver coffee service set to the right side of the table and a chocolate cake in the shape of a dollar sign.

Commissioners try to raise money for Texas

1836: TUESDAY, MAY 24. Stephen F. Austin and Dr. Branch T. Archer, Texas commissioners to the United States, left Washington City today to return home, having accomplished only a part of their mission. The third commissioner, William T. Wharton, is remaining in Washington as an unofficial representative of the Republic. He has an appointment with President Andrew Jackson next week.

The commissioners' major goal of raising money for Texas has been only moderately successful. The main incentive to lenders has been the opportunity to convert loans into Texas land at a very low cost per acre, and the land market has weakened recently. In New Orleans a loan of $250,000 was subscribed to, with $60,000 cash in advance, and in New York $100,000 was obtained, with $10,000 cash in advance. However, the Texas government has not ratified these loans, and further payments have not been made. The cash advances went for medical and quartermaster supplies, buying and equipping a vessel, hiring special agents, and the commissioners' expenses.

After leaving New Orleans, the commissioners went to Nashville, arriving on February 12. They were detained there for some time because of snow and ice. They went on to Louisville on March 3 and to Washington on March 30. Archer then went to Richmond, and Austin to New York, where he was joined later by the other two.

Everywhere they found great interest in the Texas cause. They set up a number of committees to raise funds and to recruit and equip volunteers, but were unable to obtain further loans.

The commissioners have complained that at no time have they received any official communications from the government. It was mostly through newspaper articles that they learned of the Declaration of Independence on March 2 and of the Battle of San Jacinto. Not knowing what terms would be ac-the march.

General Huston is in Houston City to meet with various members of Congress in an effort to gain support for his proposed invasion of Matamoros, Mexico. He is convinced that many Mexican Federalists will join the Texians. President Houston opposes this action. He believes that Mexicans will unite against a foreign invader, and that Texas does not have the resources for such a major undertaking. With the army furloughed, General Huston's project is no longer possible.

1839: WEDNESDAY, MAY 22. French Admiral Charles Baudin's visit to Galveston last week was a brilliant success, reports today's Houston Morning Star. The Admiral has been accorded a hero's welcome throughout his 10-day stay in Texas. Texians are grateful for the French blockade of Mexico during the past year. It provided much needed protection at a time when the Republic was practically without a navy. The Admiral went ashore at the Brazos River port of Veslaco on May 4 with his Chief-of-Staff Eugene Maissin and his Chief Engineer Chauchard. Their intended port was Galveston, but they wandered in Gulf waters for two days without finding it, due to the inaccuracy of their French maps. Indeed, the Brazos River is not on their maps. They were brought in by a Texian pilot, who was picked up by the French steamer accompanying the Admiral's flagship.

The French party was met by General Thomas J. Green and Captain Adam Clendennin to conduct them to the Texas capital of Houston, some 60 miles distant. They stopped along the way at the Wharton home on Eagle Island, and at Bingham's at New Bowling Green. Chief-of-Staff Maissin says of the Binghams that even though they are immensely wealthy because of the land they own, they "remain down to earth." He impressed that their hospitality, "free to friends, is sold to ordinary travellers. Thus, the mistress of the house, though a rich landowner, is simply an innkeeper of an unusual type." And, he says, "Lovely Miss Bingham, who will in twenty years most probably be a millionairess, is perfectly willing to serve as a maid."

> When they arrived in Houston on May 8, they found that President Mirabeau B. Lamar had gone to Galveston because of their expected arrival there. He returned the next day, and the following four days were filled with special events honoring the Admiral and his party. On Tuesday morning, May 14, they sailed down the Buffalo Bayou to Galveston in the small steamer Friend. They were met at the wharf by Mayor John M. Allen and all the aldermen, including Gail Borden, Jr., and were presented with a signed certificate providing "the freedom of our city." They were entertained in several homes, and at a gala ball that night. The Morning Star reports: "On > Wednesday the Texian steam frigate Zavala carried the Admiral out to sea to his ship, the Nereide, accompanied by a large number of ladies and gentlemen, and a day has seldom been more agreeably spent. As the Zavala approached, salutes were exchanged by the respective vessels, and the 550 men of the Nereide spread themselves among the rigging, teeming in every direction like a swarm of bees, and gave three hearty cheers, which were responded to from the Zavala, which then came to anchor, and those on board were transported to the Nereide in small boats." The article goes on: "A splendid banquet was immediately set, and the Admiral gave the most unremitted personal attention to his guests, until the table had been three times filled, and they bid him a reluctant farewell, to return to the city. Shortly after, the sails of his ship were spread, and we saw her depart for Havana, accompanied by the armed brig Cuirassier and the steamship Phaeton."

nothing. A French ultimatum of May 15 was refused, and the French threatened to capture Veracruz. Admiral Baudin took command, and after unsuccessful negotiations with Mexican Foreign Minister Luis G. Cuevas at Jalapa, he set a new deadline of November 27. It was again refused, and on that date, French armament reduced the fort guarding Veracruz. On December 5 a French raising party quickly moved through the now deserted city, capturing a Mexican general.

This action, by a series of unusual circumstances, resulted in the return to the Mexican presidency of General Antonio Lopez de Sana Anna. Previously in disgrace because of his Texas fiasco, he was put in command at Veracruz. When the French returned to their ships, he claimed credit for "driving them into the sea." Wounded by grapeshot from a French cannon, he had to have a leg amputated. The following month, the now wounded "hero of Veracruz" was named provisional president of Mexico while President Anastasio Bustamente took to the field against revolting Federalists in the Tampico region.

Things are more or less normal at the Ranch now. The kids are busy with school and worrying about report cards. Five of our kids are in High School. School at the Ranch, grades 1-6, are going as usual. We have three Guatemalan teachers for these students.

Meanwhile, Admiral Baudin, who had 26 ships at his disposal, continued his blockade. He did all he could to support the Federalist rebels by lifting the blockade in ports they controlled. Mexico finally settled its grievances with France on March 9 of this year, ratified by the Mexican congress on March 19 and 20. After remaining in Mexican waters for more than a month, to settle the details, Admiral Baudin sailed for his Texas visit.

ceptable to the Texas government, they were hampered in dealing with potential lenders.

The trip home for Austin and Archer is expected to take at least another month.

1837: FRIDAY, MAY 19. At two o'clock yesterday morning, President Sam Houston dispatched Secretary of War William S. Fisher to the headquarters of the Texas army, near Victoria. He carried sealed orders, which he discovered upon arrival were to furlough the entire army by companies, with the exception of a unit of 600 men. Those who wish to leave Texas are provided with free transportation to New Orleans, and those who wish to remain are declared eligible for Second Class Headrights of 1,280 acres at no cost.

After San Jacinto, volunteers from the United States continued to pour in, and the Texas army rached some 2,300 men. It is now considerably smaller. Food and supplies ave been extremely scarce, and he men have not been paid. There has been much dissatisfaction, with lalk of a march on Houston City to "chastise the President," and to "kick Congress out of doors." In short, mutiny has been brewing. Secretary Fisher assembled the army and read them the order, hrowing the entire camp into uproar. The First Company was ordered to Dimmitt's Landing, the Second to the mouth of the Brazos, the Third to Galveston, and the others to other points along the coast. From there they are to take an unlimited furlough, liable to revocation at any time. With transporation to New Orleans readily available, it is doubted that many will await "revocation at any time." The sudden move by President Rouston was well timed, since commander-in-chief General Felix auston is presently in Houston City. Secretary Fisher was therefore the manking officer, and he required that the orders be carried out immediately. The men are already on

Skips important in evaluation

Plant distribution, as well as number of plants per foot of row, must be considered when High Plains cotton farmers are evaluating stand losses, according to tests conducted here by an Extension specialist and a USDA-ARS research scientist.

Each year, seedling diseases and adverse weather cause varying levels of stand losses on the Texas High Plains, explained Dr. James R. Supak, the Extension cotton agronomist here. The optimum stand of cotton, for both production and harvesting efficiency, is considered to be three to four evenly spaced plants for each foot of row. "Most newly emerged stands meet or exceed this, but the ex-posure of young seedlings to various adversities often causes uneven thinning of plants and results in skippy sands," Supak said.

In stand loss evaluation, a stand is considered adequate for near optimum lint production if it averages two or more healthy plants for each foot of drill, and there aren't too many long skips, the Extension specialist said.

"All too frequently, however, a damaged stand may meet the stand criteria, but the yield potential of the field may be reduced due to poor plant distribution," he said.

Under good growing conditions, the plants on either side of a two- to three- foot skip can compensate for the missing plants with little or no loss in yield, the agronomist said. When longer skips are involved, the potential for significant yield losses is increased.

Supak cited results of a recent study he conducted with Dr. Don Wanjura, USDA agricultural engineer, at the Texas A&M Agricultural Research and Extension Center here. It showed that both plant population and skips influence final yields.

In these tests, skips varying from six inches to nine feet long were randomly positioned in test fields. The number of skips was controlled to provide three types of stands:

Normal stand -- Four plants per foot with no skips longer than a foot; 25 percent loss -- Three plants per foot with random half- to nine-foot skips; and 50 percent loss - Two plants per foot with random half- to nine-foot skips.

Random skips that reduce stands 25 percent (only three plants a foot instead of four plants a foot of row) results in a 13 percent yield decrease. A 50 percent stand reduction (only two plants instead of four per foot of row) lowered yields 26 percent.

The French blockade was brought about by the refusal of Mexico to honor a French claim of some $600,000 for depredations to French citizens in Mexico. Mexico broke off relations with France in January, 1838, and the following March a large French fleet under Admiral Bazoche appeared in Gulf waters. It blockaded Mexican ports and paralyzed Mexican shipping trade. Customs receipts dropped to almost

Church honors senior adults

The First Baptist Church of Texico honored over 40 senior adults during senior adult day May 4.

SPS survey: 5,077,000 cattle fed in area

In 1985 more than 5 million cattle moved through the feedlots, and 4.8 million were slaughtered in the packing plants located in Southwestern Public Service Company (SPS) service territory, reports the electric utility's most recent annual Fed Cattle Survey.

SPS serves a 52,000-square-mile area in parts of the Panhandle and South Plains of Texas, eastern and southeastern New Mexico, the Panhandle of Oklahoma, and southwestern Kansas. The feedlots in the territory fed 5,077,338 head last year, down somewhat from the record 5,259,779 fed during 1984.

feedlots surveyed in 1985 was 2,619,775 head, up from the total capacity of 2,557,000 head in 1984 A reported 4,778,838 cattle were slaughtered at packing plants in the SPS service area last year, 125,454 fewer than were slaughtered in 1984, said Seth Thomason, SPS manager, agricultural and industrial power. There are 14 beef packing plants in the SPS service area, he said, with an annual slaughter capability of 4,945,953 head.

"Requests for Southwestern's Fed Cattle Survey come from all across the nation," Thomason said. "The survey is an excellent way for us to tell others about our area's capabilities in the beef industry. By providing this information, we hope to help stimulate further development in the agricultural sector."

He added, "The area's feedlots and packing plants were extremely cooperative and helpful during this survey. We commend them for their help.'

The survey lists each feedlot in the SPS area, and the lot capacities and number of cattle fed, by counties. There are feedlots in thirty of the counties in the SPS service area.

Charts of the number of feedlots surveyed, number of feedlots with 1,000-head capacity or above, growth of the feedlot industry, and one-time feedlot capacity are included in the report.

The survey showed 479,526 cattle in Parmer County and 103,600 in Bailey County. The leader was Deaf Smith County, with 791,350.

In 1985, the statistics were: Parmer, 446,249; Bailey, 64,500, and Deaf Smith, 702,780.

OLD FASHIONED AMERICAN PRIDE

There was a time in this country when the things we made, we made by hand. Skilled craftsmen who cared about the work they did took the time to do the job right. And every object they made was stamped with pride.

That spirit of endeavor is not lost today. You'll find it in Americans from coast to coast - men and women who still care enough to do their best. From artist to accountant, farmer to factory worker, Americans can be proud of the work they're doing. Just as they can be proud of the country that work has built.

It may sound corny today to say it, this country stands for and still has. America, you're the greatest!
