

Hoover Debt Plan Sends Cotton, Stocks Up

HOME TOWN TALK

By BEDDY

A 19-year-old youth, who has finished a course in aviation mechanics and has had other mechanical experience, is seeking employment here. Anyone having something to offer him should call The Herald.

A middle-aged widow, without a family, wishes to find employment at home nursing, housekeeping or any other work that she can do. Call The Herald.

Over the weekend, Church attendance, you may learn by taking a look at the number of cars parked around the houses of worship from atop the Settles Sunday morning, could be heavier.

Miss Hatch has one of those bird-wild attachments on his Ford.

Here a young man who thinks he could make a lot of money in Reno, Nevada.

The Bankhead Airway—that's a good name as any—was roaring Sunday morning. Century Airlines was ferrying a fleet of tri-motor Stinsons to Los Angeles to place them in service on a Los Angeles-San Francisco line. Three of the ships stopped at Big Spring on terminal.

That deep bass road you heard about noon was a giant Sikorsky amphibian plane. It was large but appeared to be easily handled.

Who is more "at ease" than a traveling salesman over the weekend-end at a hotel.

Have you seen the cactus beds at the airport? Lee Sanders has a lot of interesting ones thriving out there. Did you know a dozen to fifty automobiles are parked behind the barrier at the post every Sunday afternoon?

Abilene is planning a to-go July 1 when American Airways ships begin stopping there for mail and passenger service.

Something to do if you want an argument to end "no decision." Let a man and his wife debate this: Resolved that Mrs. Blank is (wise) (foolish) because she insists on traveling thousands of miles with her traveling salesman husband because he is (always) true (too) (attractive) and that she (imagines) (has reason to) (suspect) that he is not the wonderfully faithful mate that Mr. Blank (knows) (maybe he doesn't know) all that he is.

Here's a pretty waitress who is crazy about her husband. She keeps house for him.

Speaking of waitresses we put in a word for them. They are often sensitive because a lot of people have not the faculty of appreciating honest labor no matter what kind it happens to be. Most of them have tried matrimony. Some have been cheated or just naturally picked the wrong man. Others walked out on him because they wanted to go places and see things. A few are dead; most of them are supporting aged parents, a kid sister in school or their own children.

The most pathetic thing we saw in Big Spring last Christmas week was a young mother—a waitress—standing on a corner with arms full of bundles of toys. "I think I've got both my little ones fixed up for Christmas now," she said. Her clothing was not new or fashionable; but she was a mother.

Again we extend our sympathy to those who revel in pessimistic discussion of "what is the world" (CONTINUED ON PAGE 6)

Eleemosynary Institutions Are Protected

AUSTIN, June 22.—(AP)—State Eleemosynary institutions have found a champion in Governor R. S. Sterling who refused to veto new buildings to facilitate care of the state's unfortunate wards. Governor Sterling eliminated $1,000,000 appropriated for buildings at state eleemosynary institutions but declined to also pencil new structures at eleemosynary institutions.

No economic crisis is so grave or no prospective deficiency so great that it can relieve the state of the adequate care of its unfortunate citizens, Governor Sterling said in his message on the eleemosynary bill. Approximately $200,000 was cut from the eleemosynary bill by chopping out items for minor improvements.

Governor Sterling expressed regret that the state's financial condition did not permit a greater increase in eleemosynary facilities. Hundreds of persons are confined in county jails awaiting the time when there will be room in the state hospitals for them, according to reports reaching the governor.

In discussing his veto of the buildings for educational institutions, Governor Sterling commended the general sentiment of the various school officials when they told the buildings would be eliminated. They agreed that if the cut was general there would be no hard feelings, the governor said, expressing a keen appreciation of the position in which the governor found himself in view of the prospective state deficiency of $7,000,000 to $2,000,000. A total of $3,790,000 was vetoed by the governor. This included $2,140,000 from the educational bill; $1,000,000 appropriated to pay pink boll worm and tick eradication expenses and $72,000 to build hospitals on the Goree and Wynne state prison farms.

Governor Sterling said he had a "couple of hole cards" in his hand that he expected to play in overcoming the deficiency. He declined to indicate what these cards were but indicated they would be sufficient to meet the situation.

One of the hole cards was believed to be an increase in the state ad valorem tax rate above the present limit of 27 cents per $100 valuation. Governor Sterling said he realized this would be unpopular to the already heavy burden of taxation.

Figures prepared by the state comptroller showed that an increase of the tax rate of 30 cents would yield an additional $1,938,000 for the biennium, while an increase to 32 cents would yield $1,938,000 for each year of the biennium.

The prospective deficiency at the end of the biennium, August 31, 1933, has been estimated at $5,935,411, less the cuts in the appropriation bills. Taking into account the vetoed items the deficiency at the end of the biennium should be $2,132,851.

By increasing the tax rate to 30 cents for each year or to 32 cents for the last year of the biennium the deficit would be nearly erased.

The deficit at the end of the present fiscal year, August 31, was estimated at $5,235,638, a large portion of which was "inherited" by Sterling from former administrations.

Governor Sterling has held to the hope that stabilization of the oil industry will increase the gross receipts tax from this source to such an extent that little or no increase in the ad valorem tax rate will be necessary. Gross receipts taxes from oil producers for the year ending August 31, 1930 totaled $5,021,539. The estimated receipts for August 31, 1931, totaled $3,254,755. For each year of the next biennium was estimated at $1,804,973, a decrease of $3,213,486 from the amount received last year.

One Poultryman Of County Still Obtains Results

To make receipts from a flock of poultry cover feed costs is something of a rare achievement these days, according to J. V. Bush, county agent. According to Bush, hundreds of Howard county poultry producers have quit feeding, culling extensively and selling seems to be a regular order of business of many of the local farms this year, according to Bush.

"With P. E. Little, Howard county poultry demonstrator, it is a little bit different," Mr. Bush said.

Mr. Little professes to handle his business a little differently and continues to make a profit in spite of the low price of eggs.

I started out several years ago with the highest bred English White Leghorns I could get, and instead of having periodic spells of culling and feeding I cull all along during the year," states Mr. Little.

"When a hen shows signs of inactivity or unproductiveness I take her out of the flock and fatten and sell or eat her, and I never cease feeding a balanced ration. This way I keep good quality high producing hens. During the hatching season I raise those hens to high-grade cockerels and sell hatching eggs and baby chicks as well as market eggs," he said.

Here is Mr. Little's record for the three months, March, April and May, starting with 297 hens, he culled 17 in March, 26 in April and May, giving him an average of 277 hens for the three month period, to which he fed 2500 pounds of mash and 2400 pounds of grain for a total feed cost, not including green feed which he kept growing for them at all times, of $90.90. He harvested 18,406 eggs which he sold three ways, as market eggs, hatching eggs and baby chicks for a total consideration of $129.05 and a net profit of $138.15.

Little's flock averaged 66 eggs per hen for the three month period bringing the total to 118 eggs per hen for the entire seven months of record, beginning the first of November and ending May 31. This amounts to 16.3 eggs per hen per month.

Design Of Pajamas Important Matter, Say El Paso Police

EL PASO, June 22.—(AP)—Some pajamas in some places are proper, in the opinion of the El Paso, but all pajamas in all places are something else again.

The particular pajama which has drawn the official frown consists of a pair of pants and some shoulder straps. Others disapproved include certain rayon creations and intricate designs.

Mrs. Charlie Fairley, police-woman, acting on protest of South El Paso that the pajamas had reached the point of indecency, recently announced she would undertake regulations.

"We aren't aiming against pajamas only," she explained. "We will arrest any woman who is indecently dressed. However, the latest are against pajamas."

"Some South El Paso people call me daily to say indecently dressed girls and women are parading their streets. They say their young daughters are hard enough to control without having indecent pajamas flaunted before them as smart wearing apparel."

"Of course, there always have been complaints about women's dress. We had them when short skirts were stylish. Just now it's pajamas. We have to act on such protests."

"As a matter of fact, some pajamas are just as decent as a dress but hotter. A woman is more comfortable in a dress."

LUBBOCK, June 22.—(AP)—The Old Chisholm Trail, one of the famous of old cattle trails of the Southwest, furnished the theme for this year's annual at Texas Technological College.

Two Participants In Oil Fight Agree To Cranfill Plan

AUSTIN, June 22. (HNS)—Two more participants in the long fight over chaotic conditions in the East Texas oil fields today had pledged support to or encouragement to the Cranfill plan of 300 barrels per acre as a production basis in the field.

Carl Estes, leader of the anti-producers, pledged his support to the Cranfill plan with a request that his injunction suit, which has been preventing enforcement of production in the field, be dismissed from the Travis county district court. A few hours after this action, a statement signed by Chairman

PATENTED PROCESS BRINGS OUT FINER FLAVOR IN COFFEE

Controlled Roasting Gives Hills Bros. Coffee Flavor No Other Coffee Has

As everybody knows, the flavor of coffee varies according to the way it is brewed. Especially disappointing is the result when coffee stays on the fire too long or is taken off too soon.

Similar, unsatisfactory results occur in the roasting of coffee. If the blend is roasted too long or just enough there is a noticeable difference in flavor between the two lots. Even with watchful care such variation is exceedingly difficult to prevent when coffee is roasted in large quantities.

Realizing this, Hills Bros. originated and patented a continuous process which roasts coffee a few pounds at a time, instead of in bulk. The quantity of coffee passing into the roaster does not vary. The speed of operation and the temperature remain the same with the result that Hills Bros. Coffee is absolutely uniform and has a flavor no other coffee has.

Hills Bros. Coffee never "goes stale" because it is packed in vacuum. By this process air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is taken from the can and kept out. Ordinary cans, even if airtight, do not keep coffee fresh. Ask for Hills Bros. Coffee by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can. Sold by grocers everywhere.

Hills Bros. Coffee, Inc., Kansas City, Missouri.

This new movement is abundant recognition of the merits of our efforts. We will embrace any constructive plan that will carry into effect the conservation laws.

Chicago Factories Placing Idle Men Back On Payrolls

CHICAGO, June 22. — Several leading industries in Chicago are reemploying some workmen who have been idle, it was learned today. The Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation reported that between 10,000 and 12,000 of its employees had just been put back to work and that officials hoped within the next three or four weeks to recall 280 or 300 more.

Slight Changes To Be Made Soon In Air Schedules

Effective July 1 slight changes in the schedules of American Airways mail-passenger ships on the Los Angeles-Dallas-Atlanta line will be made, according to announcement of Saturday.

The westbound ship will reach here at 10:44 a. m. daily, instead of 10:40 a. m., as at present and will leave at 11:04 a. m., instead of 11:00 a. m.

The eastbound ship will arrive at 5:48 p. m., instead of 4:40 p. m., as at present, and will leave at 6:20 p. m., instead of 5 p. m.

The later departing time for the westbound ship will give business men more time to prepare outgoing mail each day, it was pointed out by Postmaster E. E. Fabrenkamp.

Beginning July 1 the ships will stop at Abilene. The eastbound plane will reach that city at 7:01 p. m., 33 minutes after leaving here. It will reach Fort Worth at 8:17 p. m. and Dallas at 8:42 p. m., or 2 hours 54 minutes after leaving here.

The westbound ship will reach Dallas at 8 a. m., 2 hours 44 minutes before reaching Big Spring. It will reach Fort Worth at 8:18 a. m. and Abilene at 9:40 a. m., making the Abilene-Big Spring flight in 54 minutes, and reaching El Paso at 1:34 p. m., mountain time, the same day.

Mr. Fabrenkamp also announced new "closing time" for all mail at the local post office. Mail intended for the eastbound ship may be deposited at the office until 5:30 p. m. daily. The deadline now is 4:20 p. m.

Westbound mail must be in the office by 10:30 a. m. each day.

Financial Genius' Riches Shrink As He Faces Charges

ROGERS CALDWELL

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Fate again is shuffling the cards for Rogers Caldwell, 41-year-old sportsman and financier, and this time his cards will fall upon the judge's bench in criminal court instead of the mahogany board of directors' rooms.

Once so rich that he told intimates he himself did not know the extent of his millions, this youthful financier was widely known as a liberal entertainer, an enthusiastic turf follower and a breeder of fine horses.

Today his name is written in indictments returned by a federal grand jury at Greenville, Tenn., and by state grand juries at Nashville, Tenn., and Louisville, Ky.

Wide Ramifications Failure of Caldwell and Co. last November was followed by bank crashes all over the South as the extensive ramifications of the institution began to unravel.

Nearly seven millions of funds of the state of Tennessee were tied up, and the crash brought its political reverberations as the legislature began an investigation.

The investigation still is going on, with a governor and several state officials under fire. Sharing the blaze of criticism is Luke Lea, newspaper publisher.

But this, one of the major crashes of 1930, found its central figure outwardly cool. The crash, he said, was due to the 1930 bear market.

He promised a comeback. The financier used to say that Caldwell & Co. was founded because the Lusitania was sunk.

In 1915 Caldwell, not long out of Vanderbilt university, was sent by the Chicago bond house he represented to Waverly, Tenn., to bid on highway bonds.

A telegram from the Chicago house stopped the bid because the money market was disturbed by the sinking of the Lusitania by the German submarine.

Bank Grows Rapidly Stuck by the realization that the South needed capital, Caldwell formed his investment house less than a year later. "We Bank On the South" was his slogan.

Dominated by the restless spirit and adroit generalship of Caldwell, the company grew amazingly during its 14 years' existence.

When the crash came, the marshal who notified him of bankruptcy proceedings found him unconcernedly exercising a fine horse. Farming and breeding of livestock was the career he had planned for himself until he became a financier.

Now he finds his fortune gone, his horses sold at auction, and his palatial Brentwood Hall involved in court action.

Trial Of Cowboy At Crane City Progresses In Dramatic Scene

By SAM ASHBURN Special Correspondent

CRANE CITY, June 22.—The writers of western stories are missing plenty of bets by not attending the Jack Hall murder case now on trial in Judge J. H. Drane's district court here. Hall, a typical cowboy, bronzed from the hot winds and sandstorms, has black eyes and hair and says little or nothing at all.

His seat is next to that of his attorney, Charles Gibbs, Jim Stovall, Henry Russell and Paul Moss, and his clothing could easily be that of a play boy in a big city. His white shirt is without tie, there is no coat and his shoes are low quarter boots. He is charged by indictment with slaying T. C. Barnsley of this county.

At those who enter the courtroom of Crane county is what the laymen think of when ranches are mentioned. There is apparently little sweetness and light in such a country where ravens are the principal birds and yet there is perhaps no more engaging group of men to be found in the nation as certainly fewer than are those their living ranching in this county.

Courtroom Crowded The mahogany colored open chairs of the courtroom are filled at all times for it is the first trial ever staged in this county and there are such few qualified jurors in the county that the trial almost stops business. The ventral crowd in the corridors, and water kegs have been placed for their use and of the rest of the visitors in the hallway by genial Judge Blair, the sheriff, former San Angeloan and one of the most popular men in the west. A short climb up the stairway and there is the courtroom which has been rearranged by Judge Drane, slight of stature and

He looks inquiringly but not belligerently. He seems to be alone in the courtroom, for he has lived alone so much in this and other counties. His residence on the banks of the Pecos was in one of the most desolate locations that Dame Nature could provide in her most angry moments. For company there were drifting sands, a sorry river, mesquite bushes that can never become trees and not far away a salt lake that has pickled the bodies of many livestock that have wandered on its uncertain banks.

The place at which he resides was part of a lease operated by J. L. Tubbs and the late T. C. Barnsley, who was one of Hall's nearest neighbors and yet he lived at a distance over the sands. That part of Crane county is what the laymen think of when ranches are mentioned. There is apparently little sweetness and light in such a country where ravens are the principal birds and yet there is perhaps no more engaging group of men to be found in the nation as certainly fewer than are those their living ranching in this county.

This Game of GOLF

By O. J. Keeler

Reports from the recent British women's golf championship played at Portmarnock, Ireland, and won reasonably enough by the powerful Miss Enid Wilson, indicate that British women are becoming civilized at a considerably more rapid pace than British men. That is, viewed from an American golfing standpoint.

The women played a qualifying round this time. Indeed, they played two rounds, making it a 36-hole test, the same as that for our long-time amateur championship where our women are content with an 18-hole qualification, establishing 32 competitors in the match-play which follows.

FRUNING THE FIELD

The British women did not do directly to the American type, either masculine or feminine. They played 36 holes in the medal test, and they qualified 60 contestants, where their American cousins, both business and feminine, qualify 32 possibly going on the theory that there are not, or should not be, more than that many golfers in the country with a proper chance to capture the title.

With 64 engaged for the match-play, the British tournament requires six rounds instead of five; but that is to our way of thinking a vast improvement over the pop-eyed and frantic melee going under the name of the British amateur championship.

I do not know how many started that recent year, but last summer there were 272 names on the sheet. And as I recall it there were 100 women starting the British tournament at Formby last year—more than twice as many as were qualified by the 1931 process.

I am now curious to see what the British golf writers and critics think of their first yearing to the American system.

The masculine amateur championship of Great Britain ran true to its own particular form this year.

The new championship is a Cambridge cantab 22 years old, whose name is so unfamiliar—it is Smith—though, in his specific instance, entirely unheralded and unassuming before he came out on top at Westward Ho!

BARRING THE "RABBIT"
 After a terrific battle in 1928 J. G. George Greenwood and Frank Carruthers and Fred Pignon to concede that there was something to say for the American idea of a stringent qualifying test.

They left the gate open by deigning the fact that the worthy Mr. Simpson, then taking a dire beating from Jess Sweetser in the final round at Muirfield, was not precisely a representative of the best British amateur golf.

One of them, indeed, referred to Mr. Simpson impolitely as a rabbit, the British term for easy prey in a golf tournament.

SPORTS

By Alan Gould

A number of distinguished graduates of Old Elia have become somewhat perturbed by the tendency of the undergraduate editors at Yale to squawk about athletic episodes and affairs.

Some of the squawks at New Haven, as a matter of fact, have not been confined entirely to the undergraduates, as in the celebrated case of the tackling of Albie Booth by the Army last fall.

Successful defeats administered to the Elia by the superior varsity crews of Columbia and Cornell this spring prompted criticism of the Elia's coaching system, as well as competitive tactics, despite the almost unbroken stretch of triumph for the Blue crew since 1923.

The latest squawk concerns the intercollegiate polo championship. The Yale Daily News attacks the scheme of playing this tournament on a handicap basis as "incompatible with the spirit of match play between universities."

Yale has the strongest college polo team in the east, at full strength. On the handicap basis, obliged to concede anywhere from five to nine goals to its rivals, the Elia's chances of winning would be only fair.

Polo, however, is one of the few sports based almost entirely on the handicap system. Every individual is rated at so many goals, up to a maximum of ten, whose Tommy

HOOVER DAM BUILDERS CHALLENGE CANYON, DANGLING ON ROPES TO REACH THEIR WORK

Like a movie stunt man, the jackhammer man in the picture at the left is going to work at the site of the Hoover dam. He is descending a rope dangling over the precipice facing Black canyon. Upper left, one of the steam shovels is gnawing away at a shoulder of the Colorado river canyon. Lower right, looking from the entrance of the tunnel on the Arizona side of the Colorado, the tunnel on the Nevada side is seen, excavated more than 150 feet.

LAS VEGAS, Nevada—Hand over hand 50 feet above the precipice dangling over the precipice that faces Black canyon—that's all in a day's work for the men engaged in the preliminary work of building Hoover dam.

It's the way they go to work and the way they go home from work for the point where they are engaged is in the middle of the cliff, some 30 to 70 feet above the murky flow of the Colorado river.

They are drilling and blasting out a niche where will be anchored one end of a large cable tramway reaching across the big stream.

Eleven Cable Trains
 A total of about 11 of these cables will be installed between the bluff walls of Black canyon to furnish fast transportation from one side of the river to the other. The first is being cut less than a mile upstream from the actual dam site.

A rope more than 100 feet long hangs from the cliff above. To get to the scene of their labors the jackhammer men must cross the river by boat, climb up the cliff, then lower themselves over the precipice 50 feet down the sheer rock walls.

At night they go down the rope to a waiting boat.

A compressed air feed pipe line was stretched across the river from the more accessible rim on the Nevada side, where large compressors are in use.

Precarious Business
 First a cable was strung across the 200-foot chasm, then the two-inch cable chasm, then the two-inch compressor air pipe was pushed across section by section, men hanging precariously to a slim cable suspended below the main cable, on wire loops.

Power thus reaches the jackhammer as holes are drilled in the "Barnes' Nest" spot where the stout anchor for the tram cable will be made.

At another point, some 50 feet above the water level, jackhammer men are working in a man-made groove about 200 feet long, chipping their way along the face of the cliff, cutting out a right way for the railroad trains which will carry debris from the dam site.

Adventure And Trip Home Inspire Plan For Sea Hop

NEW YORK, June 22.—A reported flight to Denmark spells venture for Otto Hillig, 33, and his wife, Mrs. Helger Holm, 29. They plan to take off May 17 from Roosevelt field, L. I., and fly to Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, where they will await the first favorable weather to make a non-stop jump to Copenhagen.

Their course has been laid out across England for a possible landing about 100 miles off the coast of Great Britain. The flight is a commercial proposition of Liberty, N. Y., is the backer of the venture and will go as passenger. He purchased a Heilanca monoplane, christened Liberty for a home town, out of savings from a work.

The plane driven by a single 20-horsepower motor, has a capacity of 300 gallons of fuel and 20 gallons of oil. Among the instruments now being installed are an altimeter, compass and an artificial horizon.

Hillig, who Hillig claims, said him the idea of the flight is a transport pilot, will make that 25-hour flight in 1931. He began his aviation training in 1921. He was born June 13, 1897, at Aarhus, Denmark. He is 5-foot-10, weighs 175 pounds.

The two men in Liberty last year were flying over the Atlantic and Hillig to take aerial photographs. The plan, according to Hillig, was to fly from New York to Copenhagen and Hillig became an enthusiastic collaborator.

If successful in reaching Denmark, they plan to tour England, France and Germany.

Their special six-weeks mapping their proposed course have been done with government officials for advice, and made many test flights in their plane, both across country and over the Atlantic.

Hillig left behind when the first flight made his world flight in 1928, brought suit for $25,000 because his passage was cancelled.

or administrative positions in municipalities, will plead for government ownership of public utilities.

Some who class themselves as among "the common people" argue for the same when the bills come.

Labor fights for a living wage, shorter work days, but a few labor organizations, organizers, "penalize individual initiative."

Likewise universal public ownership of utilities, including railroads, would kill individual initiative—the one factor that has made America dominant and made American laborers the best paid on earth.

There are two routes to the same place—substitution for the balanced democracy created in the Constitution of a purely economic system. Used one more step—and you have communism.

65 Oil Companies Chartered in May

AUSTIN, June 22.—Sixty-four of the 226 new companies chartered in May were organized for oil and gas development purposes, according to the records in the office of June T. McCallum, secretary of state. Capital investment of the 226 companies was listed at $14,417,000.

Total capitalization of companies chartered in May was in excess of capitalization of the 203 companies chartered in April when capitalization totaled $8,900,000. Capitalization in May of last year of the 148 companies chartered was $3,367,000.

The number of oil companies chartered was the largest in a single month in the past decade and was attributed to the rapid development of the East Texas oil field. Nine public service companies were organized; 23 manufacturing companies; four banking and finance corporations; 14 real estate and building organizations and 112 companies for general purposes.

Foreign permits issued showed a decline, 41 having been issued in May as compared to 52 in April.

Hudspeth retired from congress after serving 12 years. For a long time, he was seriously ill, and in Baltimore was given prolonged treatment. He says he has fully recovered.
