Skillful Feeding of Livestock and Poultry Primary Necessity Now for Profit, County Agent Bush Declares

There has never been a time when more care was needed in making up livestock and poultry rations, according to J. V. Bush, county agent.

According to Mr. Bush, when prices are high, errors in judgment may not only shrink profits, but may now anything short of skillful feeding may turn what might be slight profits into losses.

M. H. Odams of the Coahoma community, with the idea of cutting feed cost, is planting 80 acres to sudan grass preparatory to feeding a nice bunch of beef animals.

R. T. Hale of the same community, planted 20 acres to sudan with the same thing in view.

Sudan Planted

I. B. Cauble Elbow community, always has in addition to good natural pasturage a fine sudan pasture for his fine bred herd of herefords. Jim Cauble, a brother and in the same community, never fails to plant sudan for pasture.

Down at Hartwell, in the western part of the county, you always find sudan grass planted on H. H.

Wilkinson's ranch for pasturage. Lee Hamlin, in the Hisco community, plants sudan every year, and back in the Northeastern part of the county is found J. P. Anderson in addition to having considerable acreage of wheat for grazing early in the season and good natural pasture, is planting sudan grass for pasture.

A creep feeding demonstration will be conducted by Mr. Fisk, in charge of H. H. Wilkerson ranch in the western portion of Howard county, this year and it is hoped that every farmer and ranchman will visit Mr. Wilkinson's ranch from time to time during the year and observe the results of this demonstration. Mr. Fisk has secured blue prints from the county agent and is now constructing creeps preparatory to creep feeding 20 registered calves.

Creep Feeding

Because it increases economy of gains, Mr. Fisk and other leading ranchmen believe that creep feeding of calves while nursing their mothers is an important new development in cattle feeding on Texas farms and ranches.

Demonstrations have shown that calves fed grain while nursing their dams can be made to weigh 600 pounds when around eight to nine months of age.

Aside from cheap gains, ease in handling and other common sense features connected with the system, other advantages may be listed as follows: adds weight, produces a higher finish, insures a uniformed crop, lessens shrink at weaning, permits marketing 45 to 90 days earlier, cows go into winter in more thrifty condition and permits marketing slaughter calves or continued feeding in dry lot.

According to Mr. Bush, poultrymen that are feeding milk and grain are succeeding better with their chickens.

MIDLAND FETE

Asbury, who has been a member for 49 years, also was present, and twelve were present who have been members for 35 years or longer.

A.P.I. Dallas Conference Ends With Texas Oil Men Agreeing Only That Quick Action Alone Will Save Them

By THOS. A. WLEDGE
International News Service Staff Correspondent

DALLAS, Texas, June 8 (INS)—Agitated by discussion before the American Petroleum Institute meeting here, the controversy over "what's the matter with the oil industry" had grown to new proportions today with Texas oil men agreeing between themselves on only one thing—that something must be done.

A half dozen independent operators were on record with statements today charging that speakers before the petroleum institute were looking at production problems generally from the standpoint of the major companies, and that the "remedies" they suggested for the situation would have little effect but to annihilate the small oil man.

In his address to the institute, Robert E. Penn of Dallas, vice president of the American Petroleum Institute, said that flush production in East Texas was responsible for the "disastrously low price" of oil and the resultant operations loss being suffered by many companies.

Huge Corporation
Although he said candidly he did not know how it could be accomplished, he advocated the formation of a huge corporation to take over the entire field in order to halt what he called the reckless, wasteful production there.

He recited figures upon which he based estimates that flush production in East Texas is resulting in losses totaling $1,650,000 a day, or $650,000,000 a year. This estimated loss, he said, resulted partly from the lowering of prices because of large production and partly from economic waste.

He said the formation of a corporation such as he advocated would bring about orderly development of East Texas fields and the curtailment of production to the needs of the market.

An equally damning picture of the present situation was presented by C. V. Terrell, chairman of the Texas Railroad commission. He outlined the efforts of the commission to enforce proration and told of how a dozen court actions had tied its hands, allowing production to proceed full blast.

Opposition
Earle Freeman, independent Dallas operator, in a statement following the meeting, took exception to the view of Penn and Terrell and charged that the "corporation plan" advocated by Penn would mean "absolute control of the East Texas field" by four or five major companies and "probably the annihilation of the independent producer."

He took the state of some other East Texas independents that landowners and operators have every right to produce and sell the oil under their properties and that they should not be restrained from doing so as long as the price they received for oil was satisfactory to them.

He said that an organization to fight the "corporation" plan of Penn would be formed if Penn's proposal gained any popular support.

"If the plan outlined by Mr. Penn at the A.P.I. meeting should become effective, it would result in absolute control by four or five major purchasing companies of the entire East Texas field," Freeman said. "The most serious phase of the plan is that it would enable the majors not only to control production and prices but also would afford them complete rule over the entire oil situation by eliminating the independent refiner. This would come about through curtailment of production to the requirements of the major operators much to the detriment of lesser producers and would, in all probability result in the annihilation of the independent producer and refiner."

Criticism
Charles F. Rosser, Fort Worth operator, mildly criticized the major oil companies in an address before the institute and charged some of them with "poor faith" and with "taking advantage of the situation to benefit financially."

"Who is the worse contributor to the situation," he asked, "the independent with 40 acres, and perhaps harassed by his liabilities, or the major company who is using its power to disrupt the market?" E. A. Landreth, another Fort Worth operator, charged that certain of the major companies were not only buying oil at the lowest possible price, but were encouraging operators to produce the limit in violation of proration, and contributing to the breakdown of the effort of more responsible major companies to establish a market.

He expressed the belief that Governor Ross Sterling will call a special session of the legislature and that a new conservation bill, carefully drawn, would be offered in the hope of affecting a permanent cure to the situation. Landreth declared that proration is here to stay ten or fifteen years, and that its the most desirable way to produce oil. Conserving of pressure through proration will mean that wells will flow for ten or fifteen years, he declared.

While admitting that many obstacles stood in the way of formation of a holding corporation such as he suggested for East Texas, Penn declared its realization is not as impossible as it sounded.

Prediction
Without some such plan, he predicted the new field would break the oil business and every independent operator who has to drill leases in the field.

An economic loss since the field was discovered of 70 cents a barrel was estimated. Properly exploited, the East Texas field should add $1,000,000,000 to the capital of the southwest, Penn said. Instead, he declared, it promises to create billions in losses.

He expressed the opinion that the East Texas field will, when its boundaries are found, contain at least 120,000 productive acres, and recover at the lowest, an average of 12.5% barrels an acre, or a total of 1,500,000,000 barrels. This may even be doubled, he said, at the lowest figure he pointed out, it would be capable of producing 400,000 barrels a day for ten years.

SAN ANTONIO, June 8 (AP)—"Ricky" and "Buster," 29-month-old chimpanzees enjoyed luncheon as guests of the Ad club and made a distinct "hit" as delegates from the San Antonio zoo.

They ate lunch at their own individual table and performed numerous tricks for their hosts under the direction of Fred Sullivan, superintendent of the zoo.

It's what's "under the jacket" that counts—

Shiny silver buttons don't make a good officer. Or glittering promises a good cigarette.

Under CHESTERFIELD'S white jacket of pure French cigarette paper is a milder, better-tasting smoke—and it's what's "under the jacket" that counts.

CHESTERFIELDS are milder—smoke as many as you like. CHESTERFIELDS taste better—you know that the minute you light up!

More men and women are changing every day from other cigarettes to CHESTERFIELDS.

Uncle Andy's Idea

JUST what is behind Uncle Andy Mellon's suggestion of a federal sales tax on automobiles is not clear, but you may be sure that the "greatest secretary of the treasury since Alexander Hamilton" has something else in mind besides a federal gasoline tax and an excise tax on automobiles. Uncle Andy is given to circumlocution and circuitousness, at times.

The secretary has been a great stickler, all along, for lightening the income tax burden on the extremely rich, and in favor of making the lower brackets bear plenty of the burden. Almost every reduction in the rate on low-income brackets has met with his personal objection, while he has fought in season and out of season for a reduction in the rates on the higher brackets.

Uncle Andy's idea is to make the majority of small income pay an income tax, by lowering the exemption scales. In order to get the public and congress in the proper frame of mind to accept such a proposal, he advocates a federal gasoline tax and restoration of the sales tax on automobiles—as a sort of bugaboo to scare the boys into line.

The automobile owner is already about the heaviest-taxed individual on earth, what with ad valorem, registration, insurance, liability, gasoline and whatnot tacked onto him.
He is building most of the nation's good roads. The automobile is one good horse that has been ridden almost to death by the taxgatherers.
Any additional tax burden on him would be bitterly resented and would bring a storm of protest. In the midst of such a storm, Uncle Andy hopes the people will object less strenuously to an imposition of the income tax on wage earners and the small-income class.

Rebels On the Campus

PRESIDENT G. W. RIGHTMIRE of Ohio State university, condemning recent outbreaks of student unrest, remarks that "the university throughout 60 years of existence has been remarkably free from ill-considered or socially destructive agitation with which the world outside has been disturbed.

This may be a cause for pride, but there are plenty of critics of our educational regime who would feel otherwise. A youngster in college is bound to be something of a rebel, if he is really getting an education. The boy in his late teens or early twenties who is being taught to question things will almost inevitably indulge in a little ill-considered or socially destructive agitation.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

The Case of Albert Fall

Lubbock Avalanche
PRESIDENT Hoover alone stands between Albert F. Fall and a felony cell. The once powerful New Mexico politician and former Cab-net member stands now, old, sick and mentally shaken, before the barrier which the law says he made for himself. It looks very much now like Albert Fall will have to go to jail.

There are two different ways of looking at the pitiful case of the man who has been found guilty of violating his office. To the letters of the law and to the satisfaction of the statutes, Albert Fall should be made to pay the price of his folly.

bert Fall—therefore, we are led to believe that no bribe was given.
Another jury finds Fall guilty of accepting the bribe—which, according to the first jury, never existed at all.

HUMAN DISEASE TESTERS Physicians have not always used guinea pigs for their experimental researches on diseases and their causations. Sometimes they experimented on themselves or on their kin.

Jenner, who discovered smallpox vaccination, vaccinated his own son to protect the boy against smallpox to test the efficacy of his discovery and to demonstrate his own faith in his vaccine.

In the Reed commission appointed by the United States Public Health Service to study the problem of yellow fever, Dr. Carroll, a member of the commission, was the first to submit to being bitten by a mosquito known to have sucked the blood of a yellow fever sufferer.

He promptly came down with and successfully weathered an attack of the disease.
Dr. Laxar died from yellow fever, having been bitten accidentally by another mosquito.

In the study of the cause and method of transmission of syphilis, quite a number of physicians experimented upon themselves.

One of the last to fall a victim of medical self-experimentation was Dr. Joseph Goldberger, whose labor did so much to clear up the problem of pellagra.

Sydenham, properly called "the English Hippocrates," wrote a classic description of gout from which he suffered.

More recently, another English physician, Dr. Leonard Portal Mark, wrote a detailed study of acromegaly, a relatively rare disease from which he suffered.

The victims of this disease undergo extraordinary physical changes. Their hands and feet, their faces and their general bony structure grow sometimes to enormous size, giving rise to brute-like giants.

Mad Pursuit
BY JESSIE DOUGLAS FOX

SYNOPSIS: Julian Lake's arrival from Italy to join his daughter, Nora, at her Aunt Emily's home may disturb her dream, soon to be realized when she moves into the Thayer household. Since the suicide of her husband, Nicholas Thayer, she has been living with her aunt and cousins, Frances and Hallie.
An improvident artist, arrives members of the family and young Dr. More and Jonathan, Nicholas' brother, who has repeated the invitation of the step-sister Damon, that Nora come to live with them.
After the guests leave, Nora reveals to Julian her humiliation at his obvious attempt to borrow money from Jon. Quickly evaluating her emotions, he brings her suddenly to the realization that she loves Jon.

Chapter 23
NORA INTERVENES

THE little red brick house began to take on a Bohemian air.
There were innumerable canvases stocked against the walls which, however, no one was allowed to look at. There were canvases being stretched, paint brushes in jars.

At midnight Julian would tell the family he was starving and they would troop down the stairs to cook impromptu meals which he would enliven with stories of adventure.

He entertained them with such vivid plans for their future that Nora was disturbed. Although he assured her he would not ask Jon for money, she knew his promise meant less than nothing.

She swallowed her pride toward the end of the week and telephoned Jon to ask him to meet her at the office after five.

It was a warm sunny afternoon and the streets were crowded as she came down the wooden stairs.
Jon was waiting for her. Her heart rose as she saw how splendid he looked in his gray flannels.

"I had to see you," she began directly. "I don't know how to tell you—but if my father should ever ask you for money," she drew a deep breath, "you must not lend it to him."

"You've seen him again?" She stood still and, lifting her spirited face, defied him with all her pride.
"Yes, why not? I like him enormously," he smilingly answered.
"Don't ask why. Only I beg you not to lend him money!"
"I've given him my word I won't. Besides, you don't know your father's plan. He wants to exhibit his pictures." She burned with shame. She must tell him that her father's pictures would only hold him up to ridicule. He would only be laughed at.
"Jon, you mustn't do this!" she cried with a dreadful earnestness.
"Why?"
"I know what my father has done."
"But Nora, his pride has been hurt. He wants to show us all that his work is esteemed by the critics. The show will do this for him."
"Isn't there anything I can say to make you stop before it's too late?" She lifted stormy blue eyes, dazzling with tears.

"I was on the same car, but I lost you at the edge of the woods."
"Have you changed your mind?"
"No."
It did not matter now what Jon thought of her. She must save him from this hopeless plan of her father's. She must save her father his inevitable humiliation. There was only one way. She stood up.
"Do you know why I married Nicholas?"
Jon waited, his eyes bearing down on her white face.
"I did not love him. I married him so that he would bring me home."
"I know from the first you did not love him. Why did you come home, Nora?"
She drew a deep breath. She was very white.

"Don't you know? Don't you know that too?"
He stood looking at her.
She said, "You were here." There was a dreadful stillness in the wood. She would never look at him again. The pity she would find in his eyes would scorch her.
Searching his face, at length, she saw the mockery and insolence were gone. It was the face of the boy she had fallen in love with when she was 15.

Now he was looking at her in a way that dazzled her. Why was she standing there frozen into stone? Why was he coming nearer?
"Nora!"
She could no longer look at him.
She clung to the tree.
"Nora, haven't you known all the time... I love you?" All the need of her nature cried out to him. The need for one person who would give her that refuge that was for her alone, that refuge against the very impermanence of life.

"I love you so. I love you so," she said as he held her close; "now you know it all."

CITY VANISHES
QUANAHA, June 8—Little trace can be found today of Pease River City, one-time center of copper mining activity 18 miles southeast of this city. The city never consisted of more than one rock dugout but that formed the basis of colorful literature sent out by an enterprising New Englander 40 years ago.
The literature pictured steamers docking at wharves at Pease River City with industrial activity at a new peak.

"People purchasing lots at the "coming metropolis" arrived in Vernon but had difficulty in finding out where Pease River City was located.

A story was told that a General McClellan bankrupted himself and his friends in attempts to make the copper mines pay in the early '70s.
The mine site was once the favorite picnicking ground for young people of this city.

BALING HAY
QUANAHA, June 8 (AP)—For the first time in many years farmers in some sections of Hardeman coun-would not be sufficient to warrant threshing, owners are getting what they can out of the crops.

A check of hardware dealers in this area reveals that many binders which have been unused for years are being repaired for this season's grain crop. Threshing is expected to be underway by June 15.
