Individual player awards highlighted the Littlefield Wildcats Annual Football Banquet Thursday night.

Senior Wildcat captain Doug McCain got his coaches' nod for Outstanding Offensive Lineman of the Year.

ANOTHER HIGHLIGHT of the event revealed the football players' choice for Football Queen. Cindy Purdy is the 1974 selection. Other candidates were Shebra Johnson and Sharla Grant.

Billy Tom Grant served as master of ceremonies and introduced the speaker of the evening, Chuck Moser. Moser is assistant football coach at Texas A&M and former head football coach at Abilene High School where his teams won three consecutive state championships and 49 consecutive games to set a state and national record still standing.

After talking on A&M's outstanding school spirit, Coach Moser launched into his topic with the theme that salvation of our country is in the public school system and the athletic program.

Moser's personal goals are threefold and simple: (1) get every boy and girl on a school team of one kind or another, (2) make every football player nice but tough—a real gentleman when he is not on the field but tough when he goes into the game, and (3) have the best school system possible.

"You don't have the best school system unless you have a good athletic system to set the tempo," he added.

When Moser was head coach in Abilene, Abilene High had 3,700 students on a team. He cited this as the reason for less unrest and violence in this part of the country as opposed to New York and other large cities.

He was invited to come to New York City and talk to them about upgrading their athletic program. In a school with 6,000 students he found one coach and 30 boys on the football team.

"It makes a difference when so many have an opportunity to play," he said. "Every student wants recognition, responsibility and to be part of the

Burglary Charge Made, Theft Found

Alfredo Trevino, 18, of Dimmitt has been arrested and charged on a grand jury indictment of burglary of the Sudan school about two months ago.

In other action at the sheriff's office this week an alien was turned over to border patrol authorities and one theft was reported.

M. P. Thetford discovered his barn had been entered and items valued at over $1,150 were missing. Included in the theft are 28 tires, six tubes, seven cans of oil, brake fluid, three cases of antifreeze, and a vice.

RICHARD BARTON, left, grabbed the Outstanding Defensive Back of the Year award at the Annual Football Banquet Thursday night, and Rick Hopping received the Outstanding Defensive Lineman of the Year award.

Metric System On Way In, Pounds, Inches, Are Out

What are the chances of the metric system coming to Lamb County? Well, it is a matter of when— not if.

And some of us are going to be ruined when we turn away from the current units of weights and measures— inches, pounds, quarts and the like—and adopt such newer units as centimeters, meters, liters and grams.

The first concrete step toward that end has just been taken nationally, with the enactment of a Federal bill authorizing the expenditure of $40 million over the next four years to introduce the metric system to today's school children.

When schools start pushing the metric system, Lamb County children will be told, for instance, that because of the energy shortage the speed limit on highways has been reduced to 88 kilometers per hour instead of 55 miles per hour.

per hour instead of 55 miles per hour.

Also, they would learn that their family gets about 6 kilometers to the liter, instead of 14 miles or so to the gallon, and that the 10,250 passenger cars in this area consume an average of 2,720 liters of gas annually.

Housewifes who sew may have noticed they are already getting an introduction to the metric system because patterns now include metric measurements as well as the traditional inches, feet and yards.

But in shopping for food, we will be buying 2 kilos of meat (equivalent to 4.4 pounds), 200 grams of cheese (7 ounces), and a liter of milk (1.06 quarts).

These and other changes in our present, non-decimal system of units will ultimately have to take place, according to Department of Commerce analysts.

There is an increasing pressure to take the plunge from the business, educational and scientific communities in this country. They propose a gradual conversion over a 10-year period.

Presently, more than 90 percent of the countries of the world use the metric system. The United States is the only major industrial country that does not.

MELTING AWAY - AVALON --

COMMENTS Turn Row

By EMIL MACHA

THERE IS MUCH to indicate that President Ford may have an unprecedented opportunity to establish an atmosphere and gain passage of legislation which will, in time, set the nation on a course away from the rocks of inflationary disaster.

In the past couple of years, there is some evidence that more understanding of the economics of the American enterprise system has been pounded into the heads of more members of Congress and the general public than at any other time in many years. The dislocations of wage and price controls under the Nixon Administration demonstrated how prices set too low could dry up supply, bankrupt companies, disrupt international trade and, by causing scarcities, actually increase inflationary pressures. It became apparent that no regulatory agency could possibly control the prices of products, services or labor with either the accuracy or the necessary quickness of response that is characteristic of the free market and essential to the proper functioning of the U.S. economy.

Most people have come to accept the ve federal deficits mean inflation and destruction of money values. More people feel this is just not worth the benefits that federal budget deficits might buy for a time- as, for example, expansion of "free" health services, low cost housing, unemployment payments and myriad other

GRADUALLY, it seems there is more understanding of the fact that individual security cannot, in the long run, be purchased with billions of borrowed dollars. More people see that the nation must produce before it can consume. And this may well have a most beneficial effect on attitudes toward work itself and toward quality, as well as quantity, of production. There may be a decline, and certainly there must be a decline, in the tendency among legislative bodies and governmental leaders to make what amounts to longrun economic decisions for short-run political expediency.

There is little point, for example in raising social security benefits if the schedule of increases already established to take effect in years to come, is beyond the capacity of the system to pay.

The determination to shun what looks like the easy way out, very likely will be tested in coming months if inflation does not noticeably slacken. In such a case, the pressure for another round of wage and price controls will be extreme, even though history and recent experience have repeatedly demonstrated that such attempts are not only futile but highly destructive of any efforts to successfully restrain inflation in a situation such as the United States faces today.

C. Jackson Grayson, Jr., with a wealth of academic, as well as practical, experience behind him, offers solutions in an article from Nation's Business magazine, entitled "Beating Inflation Without Controls." Grayson is dean of the business school at Southern Methodist University and was chairman of the federal government's unlamented and now extinct Price Commission from November, 1971, to January, 1973. He believes that the U.S. must break the habit of hesitancy. Politicians, fearing public reaction, have hesitated to impose effective deflationary action, yet such determination is required because it is the only thing that will break the inflationary expectations that have ruled governmental, as well as citizen, thinking for 30 years.

GRAYSON SPEAKS of the need to attack inflationary biases that have ". crept into our economy over the years. These include: Overexpectations and overspending. Underproductivity. Reduction of competition. Overemphasis on demand, and not supply. Overregulation of the economy. A search for 'full' employment. Rigidities of in stitutions- government, business, Environmental controls 'at any price'." He calls for a cut in federal spending and long-term fiscal policy aimed at budget surpluses of one to two percent. He says the U.S. has probably passed legislation to achieve national goals that are already beyond what we can afford in such areas as environmental protection and social services. It will take a new level of political honesty to point this out to the American people. If the goals set are too high, the choice must be made to either cut back or increase productivity to meet them.

The capital gains tax should be lowered to encourage investment. Also, deductions of capital losses for income tax purposes should be increased. Above all, there should be no general tax cut, no economic planning agency and no wage and price controls.

GRAYSON'S recommendations make eminently good sense. A number of them are included in President Ford's in flation-fighting program. Others should be. It is important to remember that a fiscal, financial and monetary disease that has been developing for a generation cannot be cured overnight.

That it must be cured, there is no doubt. It must be kept in mind that, as Thomas Paine once said, "Those who expect to reap the blessing of freedom must undergo the fatigue of supporting

Before us lie two top priority national objectives: (1) To control inflation and (2) To achieve a reasonable degree of energy independence for the United States. Both will require an unprecedented measure of determination to succeed on the part of the American people.

Slow To Speak

THE ABUNDANT LIFE

SOME OF THE BEST ADVICE available to us is found in these words; 'Be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath." We are not talking about being slow "of" speech, but about the im-portance of being slow "to" speak.

This concerns our understanding of one of the most critical elements in both one's personal peace of mind, and the best in our interactions with others.

"I SAY WHAT I PLEASE, when I please" seems to be a rather common expression which reveals a certain attitude of mind. Unfortunately, this is not a well-thought-out attitude; but it seems that these people are very pleased with themselves. In fact, they appear to be proud of the unwise use of their tongue.

Some of these people eventually realize how foolish this manner of speaking actually is, but many never change. One very strange feature about this type of person is in the fact that they are always wondering what is wrong with other people; why they are so difficult to get along with. Obviously, the difficulty is with the person who is slow to hear and "swift to speak".

"NOTHING IS MORE SILLY than the pleasure some people take in "speaking their minds". A man of this make will say a rude thing, for the mere pleasure of saying it, when an opposite behavior, full as innocent, might have preserved his friend, or made his fortune." -Steele.

Miss Green formerly taught school at Petersburg before going to Colombia two years ago in January.

Shortly after her arrival in Colombia, Miss Green wrote a letter to her friends at the Petersburg School, and only recently she wrote a "whopper of a fish tale" for her parents

She began: Dear Ones,

Here's a whopper of a fish tale for you. Our fisherman was instructed to fish for the "big" fish. One night a huge fish got away with one of his hooks. So the next night he was determined to get a very big fish. He got the strongest cord in camp. Two of them were in the canoe. All of a sudden a fish took the bait. The fish started running. He jerked the man out of the boat and was pulling him through the water. The other man started the motor and chased them. The man was not going to let go!! Card Of Thanks
