A special hospital fund for Michael Rangel, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Vicente Rangel of Littlefield who was burned last week when he fell into a hole where trash had been burned, has been started at Security State Bank. He is now hospitalized at Brook Army Hospital in San Antonio in their burns center, and is suffering second and third degree burns on his body—particularly his arms, legs and face.

Mohair, Wool Production Big Business In County

"Spring shearing of goats and sheep is under way in Lamb County and 1974 promises to be a profitable year for the mohair and wool producer," says Agriculture Commissioner John C. White.

Though production figures for the 1974 season are not expected to equal the spectacular 1973 yields, goat and sheep raisers can look for substantial increases over previous slump years.

Sheep shearing, underway for the 12-month clip, is expected to run into the first of June. Producers in the southern part of the state who clip twice a year have completed their first clipping.

Experts expect wool shearing yields to be down a little from last year's production, due principally to West Texas drought conditions.

Prices are quoted as fair for wool, with wool sold at a recent Sanderson sale averaging $8.90 per pound for the better quality wools.

January exports of wool top and raw wool, clean basis, totaled 1,375,600 and 390,254 lbs. respectively. Texas produces 20 percent of the total U.S. wool production, which is more wool than any other state in the nation.

"Goat shearing has been completed statewide with adult hair bringing an average of $1.40 per pound, and young goat hair going for $1.54 - $1.70 per pound," Commissioner White said.

With Texas producing about 97 percent of the U.S. mohair, statewide exports of mohair in January totaled 272,926 lbs., clean basis.

Prices received for wool and mohair made tremendous jumps in 1973 over previous figures. A combination of increased world demand and the worry of decreased supplies of synthetic fibers due to the energy crisis helped bring about the surge of 1973 receipts.

Prices for the 26,352,000 lbs. of wool sold in 1973 averaged $8.88 a pound, compared to $4.48 a pound in 1972.

The 9,930,000 lbs. of mohair sold in 1973 averaged $1.87 per pound, jumping from $1.33 a pound in 1972.

Candidates With Running Mates Make Political Expense Reports

This is the first year political candidates on the local and county levels have had to account for their expenditures.

The first reporting date is past, and candidates with opposition for county-wide and precinct-wide offices report they spent a total of $5,122.84 through mid of March.

Expenses incurred since that reporting date are to be turned in April 24.

Candidates who are unopposed do not have to account for their expenses.

The three candidates for county clerk show the largest expenditures to date. Kathryn Day reported a total of $971.90 spent through the middle of March. Mary Beth Willey reports expenses of $902.08, and Betty Anne Hall shows a total of $690 spent through the first reporting date.

In the county judge's race, Bill Angel spent $521.72 and G.T. Sides showed expenditures of $514.14.

The two candidates for county treasurer reported expenditures of $398 for Lucy M. Moreland and $316.79 for Fannie B. Rogers.

Candidates for precinct-wide positions show less expenses than those running for county offices. Candidates for commissioner of precinct 4 are running about even on expenses with Hubert Dykes showing expenses of $186.26 and Eugene Young reporting expenditures of $187.

Candidates for commissioner of precinct 2 are T.L. Buddy Free and Clarence H. Kelley. Free reported expenses of $187.78 on the first reporting date, and Kelley showed expenses of $183.78 on the first reporting date, and Kelley showed expenses of $183.17 through mid March.

Only one justice of peace office is contested. Running for JP in Littlefield's precinct 4 are Jerry Collins and Stanley Doss. Doss reported expenses of $140 and Collins showed $20.

Most of the candidates' expenses included their filing fees, newspaper advertising and political announcements, and car expenses while out campaigning.

In addition to the second reporting of expenses 10 days before the election, each candidate is required to file expenses 10 days after the election.

The Texas Supreme Court has upheld the right of city governments to regulate rates for extended area telephone service.

The decision was handed down Thursday, April 11, and upheld a verdict of District Court Judge Pat Boone Jr. of Littlefield, against General Telephone Co. of the Southwest.

General Telephone had sought to raise rates for extended area service provided to Littlefield, Amherst and Anton, and those cities filed a temporary injunction against the company to prohibit a forced increase.

General Telephone had contended that extended area service was, in reality, intrastate long distance service, and could not be regulated by the cities.

Extended area service at Littlefield provides local service, plus toll-free calls to Anton, Amherst, Spade, Witharrah, Pep and Bula.

The Texas Supreme Court upheld the opinion of the Amarillo Court of Civil Appeals that "the extended area service was a combined type of service with no distinction being made between purely local and extended area service."

"A thorough perusal of the record in this case reveals no attempt to segregate the two types of service or their rate basis, so the system must be treated as a single unit for regulatory purposes," the appeals court decision stated.

As a matter of review on the case E. R. Richardson, district manager for General Telephone notified the cities by letter dated Dec. 26, 1972 that rates for the extended area service would be increased effective Jan. 15, 1973. Then cities brought the suit for a temporary injunction to enjoin General Telephone from placing the proposed rate increase in effect, to which General Telephone answered, contending that the cities had no rate making jurisdiction over the type of service in question.

General Telephone, in the alternative, contended that if the cities were found to have such jurisdiction, the rates then in existence which had been approved by the various city commissions, were so low as to deprive General Telephone of its right to earn a fair return on its investment. Then General Telephone sought an injunction prohibiting the cities from interfering in any way with the company's collecting a fair rate of return.

The District Court, after hearing evidence from both parties, found that the cities had jurisdiction over the type rate involved and granted the cities a temporary injunction restraining the company from charging the proposed increased rates to resident subscribers.

In support of the order, the trial court found that the cities—which have such jurisdiction—had previously rejected the proposed rate increase.

The court found no evidence, nor insufficient evidence, that the rates in existence subjected General Telephone to confiscation of its property; but the court found sufficient evidence that the rates in existence yielded General Telephone a fair rate of return.

General Telephone then appealed the case to the Court of Civil Appeals at Amarillo, based on two points of error. The phone company contended that the trial court had made a mistake in granting the cities' request for a temporary injunction and denying the phone company's request for a temporary injunction because the rates for extended area service were not within the jurisdiction of the cities, and consequently General Telephone was not required to obtain the cities' approval before placing the new rates into effect.

The Court of Civil Appeals upheld the District Court decision.

Last week the Texas Supreme Court upheld the rulings of the first and second Civil Appeals Courts and the District Court.

Now, two things may happen—General Telephone Company must come back to the cities with another proposal—or the cities may offer a rate increase as they choose. Neither have indicated definite plans in the matter.

Weather Modification All 'Go'

This week directors of Lamb County Better Weather, Inc. said funds for the planned weather modification program for 1974 were short, but there would be a program.

Dale Stanley, secretary of the organization, said funds were about $40,000 short of the $164,000 goal when the directors met April 8.

Another meeting is scheduled May 1 in Springlake when a program will be shaped to fit the money that has been collected to that date. Directors say there are several options, and a definite target area and plan will be made at that meeting.

A three airplane hail suppression and precipitation increase program beginning May 1 and continuing through harvest season will cost about $164,000. The planes and radar system are to be headquartered at the Littlefield airport.

If the full amount isn't raised, directors said the target area, time period, or facilities will have to be trimmed to meet funds.

Participating farmers are asked to pledge 90 cents per cultivated acre.

All persons interested in weather modification are invited to the May 1 meeting.

Councilmen Award Airport Contract

Thursday night, Littlefield's city councilmen accepted the annual audit of accounts and re-hired Alvin C. Webb, certified public accountant, as city auditor for fiscal year 1973-74.

Councilmen also voted to give Ed Lingnau the contract as city airport manager, with a promise to provide a workshop area. In relation to the workshop area, councilmen asked City Manager Jim Blagg to look into possibilities for the workshop, and bring a recommendation to the next meeting.

In matters of new business, councilmen re-appointed Dr. Carl Nowlin as city health officer for 1974-75; reviewed and accepted proposed changes in the employ salary and wage plan; and discussed several proposals for converting the utility billing system to some form of data processing.

Councilmen decided to study the billing system further, and asked the city manager to seek further information and make a recommendation at a future meeting.

Following the adjournment of the regular meeting, city councilmen met with representatives of Anton and Amherst for an update on the recent telephone rate case.

Senior Babe Ruth League To Organize

Mike Cotter will be the coach of the Littlefield team.

Library Week, 1974

NATIONAL Library Week is to be observed this year April 21-27. The purpose of the week is to encourage all people to read more and make greater use of their libraries.

IN THE United States, the President, members of Congress and other major elected officials may debate legislative action and national policy.

But it is the people who have the last word in deciding the ultimate course that the nation is to follow, and only an informed public can choose wisely. All indications are that the American people are doing their homework.

TWENTY-TWO thousand new books were published last year, along with some 9,000 newspapers and thousands of other publications. The local newspaper is still the major source of day-to-day information, and the library is the reference point in every community where people go to learn or read for pleasure.

The library is the symbol and the citadel of knowledge and an informed public.

In America, this is the key to freedom itself. —Industrial News Review

What's Holding Up Cloud Seeding?

By LANE PALMER AND NILAH RODGERS

In the pre-dawn light of a harvest moon, a dark figure crept toward a deserted trailer. The quick swing of an arm, the sound of rick and an explosion ripped through $10,000 worth of weather instruments inside.

That home-made bomb, tossed near Monte Vista, Colo., in August 1972, brought to an end one of this country's most successful weather modification projects. It may be the only act of violence so far, but it illustrates the emotions which have attended "rain-making" from its beginning.

The Coors Brewery Company of Denver had started the project for 380 malt barley growers in the five-county San Luis Valley. Their aim: to suppress hail and divert rainfall during late summer when moisture encourages a mold which prevents germination—essential for malting barley.

That fall, Coors got its best barley in 25 years. And Valley Growers got $4.30 per cwt. instead of $1.50 to $1.75 for feed barley. But the Valley is surrounded by range land. Ranchers want all the moisture they can get—rain or hail.

So in November, following a hearing that resembled the famous Scopes monkey trial, Valley residents voted 4-to-1 against further cloud-seeding.

Some 500 miles to the northeast, citizens of South Dakota have consistently voted 3 or 4 to 1 in favor of weather modification. That state will put more than $1 million into cloud-seeding this year. But in the rest of the Plains and Midwest, not much is happening.

"What's holding up cloud-seeding?" said Oklahoman Ray Booker, repeating our question. I'd say four things: *Those who oppose "tampering" with weather at all; *Those who doubt the effectiveness of seeding; *The debate over who should do it; and *The controversy over who should pay for it.

Even in South Dakota, 38 percent answered "yes" to the statement, "Cloud seeding probably violates God's design for man and the weather."

Thomas J. Henderson, a Fresno-based weather consultant who worked on the Coors project, tells of one rancher who took this view. He claimed that rain clouds disappeared when cloud-seeding planes flew over. "There goes one now," he said, pointing skyward.

"But that's Frontier Airlines flying up to Denver," Henderson replied in disbelief. "Doesn't matter," the rancher answered. "They're probably seeding anyway!"

Barbara Fahar, the University of Colorado sociologist who conducted the South Dakota survey, says that many who object to cloud-seeding fear that it will unbalance nature. Among these are several environmental groups.

"The heaviest opposition we've run into has been in the Hungry Horse area of Montana," says Robert Elliott, whose North American Weather Consultants operate out of Santa Barbara. "A wilderness group threatened to take us to court for increasing snowpack and endangering elk."

The value of cloud-seeding is now firmly established in mountain areas. That's because the weather modifiers are working with what they call orographic systems—moisture-laden clouds which condense and yield moisture as they rise into cooler air to pass over mountain tops. By seeding on the windward side, usually with ground generators, they often can increase snowfall.

This opportunity for recharging their reservoirs excited the California Electric Company in the early 1950s. Its Kings River Project, now in its 20th year, has been evaluated by the National Academy of Sciences, the National Science Foundation and several universities. The records show a 10 percent to 15 percent increase in precipitation and an increase in the flow of the Kings River of 80,000 feet per year.

"The project costs about $60,000 per year," says Henderson, who has worked on it from the beginning. "If you figure $5 per acre foot, that's $400,000 worth of extra irrigation water. And that doesn't even count the benefits that come from its power generation."

We asked Merlin Williams, director of South Dakota's Division of Weather Modification, how the people of that state had become convinced. "Well, our people started by recognizing that we had a moisture problem," he says. "So they've been willing to put up enough money to test it."

The Institute of Atmospheric Sciences at the South Dakota School of Mines has been seeding clouds for 10 years. "Their records show they've increased rainfall an average of one to two inches per summer. And their 40-year program of hail suppression in southwestern North Dakota has headed off 40 percent to 60 percent of the hail."

Cloud-seeding is tougher over the Great Plains because you're dealing with summer cumulus clouds. "If you seed them indiscriminately, you probably won't get much for your effort," says Ray Booker, who Meteorological Data Service operates out of Norman, Okla. "You have to pick your 'seeding windows'—clouds that carry the moisture. Your best opportunity to increase rainfall is when it's actually raining."

Booker argues fervently that seeding should be done by private operators. He fears that the Bureau of Reclamation's Skywater Project will ultimately be converted from an experimental into an operational program, as some farm groups and political leaders have demanded.

"As with any other business, it takes the pressure of competition to get the job done," he says. "Not all the rain clouds pass over between 9:00 and 5:00."

But Ted Smith, a private operator who does work for the Bureau in Texas, points out that no commercial operator can afford the kind of broad test like Skywater.

Robert Elliott sees another reason why a government agency must be involved. "If you have a local project, then private operators can handle it," he explains. "But if you undertake a broad program, such as seeding all the yield areas in the Colorado River watershed, then you're into something that the federal government has to do."

Federal money is the object of many who want to see the Bureau take over. It's the old illusion that we can somehow get it done for nothing if it comes out of Washington.

But all weather modifiers, including Reclamation officials agree cloud-seeding must be kept close to the people.

"Cloud-seeding has to have local approval," says Ted Smith, another California meteorologist. "Too much chance of law suits otherwise. And that calls for local leaders who can conduct referendums if necessary—like county commissioners or directors of an irrigation district."

That's exactly the way it operates in South Dakota. The state puts up three-fourths of the money and the county puts up the other fourth. "It's strictly voluntary on the part of our counties," says Merlin Williams, "but 46 of our 67 counties are participating."

A Woman's View

By PEARL BRANDON

I RECEIVED a card this week from an old-time friend who said, "we should pray for rain." It reminded me of the old days when people used to pray for rain. I never really attended a meeting where people got together to pray for rain, but I've heard many stories about it when I was a child—how the people back in Alabama, where my people come from, would meet at the church to pray for rain when they were having a drought.

THEY SAID sometimes it would pour down rain before they could get home. I don't know whether this really happened or not, but the old people told it for the truth.

There is the story of Elijah in the Bible where he prayed for rain. He went upon Mount Carmel to pray and told his servant to go and look toward the sea for a cloud. The servant came back and said he couldn't see any sign of a cloud. Elijah kept praying and the servant kept watching. After awhile he came back and said, "I see a small cloud the size of a man's hand."

ELIJAH SAID go tell the king to take his chariot and get down the mountain before the storm came—then Elijah ran before the king's chariot. It had been more than three years since it had rained, but now the sky was black with clouds and there was a terrible rain storm.

I think the people of old had more faith than we have—at least some of them did.

THE LORD said if we had faith the size of a mustard seed we could remove mountains.

A mustard seed is a very small thing, but if we plant it, it grows into a large plant and produces many seeds. Maybe that is what the Lord meant—a growing faith.

SOMETIMES we really don't know what to pray for, or what is best for us. In Romans 8 we have this, "In the same way, by our faith—the Holy Spirit helps us with our daily problems and in our praying. For we don't even know what we should pray for, nor how to pray as we should, but the Holy Spirit prays for us with such feelings as cannot be expressed in words.

And the Father who knows all hearts knows, of course, what the Spirit is saying as He pleads for us in harmony with God's own will.

AND WE KNOW that all that happens to us is working for our good if we love God and are fitting ourselves into His plan."

Sometimes this is hard to understand when so many bad things are happening to us.

I know a young man from our town who received back injuries as a paratrooper in the Vietnam War. He has had recent back surgery and is in a brace which restricts his activities. Yet he isn't bitter. He says he is not going to let it keep him from having a good life. "Everybody has something to face and this is mine," he said, "and I am going to make the best of it."

The quotation is from the Living Bible.

THE ABUNDANT LIFE

Malice Mars Life

THERE ARE MANY negative attitudes which can invade our thought processes, and against which we must build the strongest defenses.

Even after doing our best to defend ourselves against them, it seems that they break through now and then. If we permit them to do so, they will take over our lives.

Of course, there is one fact to remember; they are not invincible. We can stand against them; we can overcome them. This is exactly what we must do, and do so in the quickest and most complete way.

IN CONVERSATION with a friend some time ago, he was soon telling me about a grudge he kept alive in his mind for a number of years. I was surprised, because he has many reasons for thinking of himself as a relatively successful man.

The reasons he gave for his grudge were trivial, and the events he described happened years ago. How sad! When a man should be thoroughly enjoying the fruits of his labor and good management, he lets a degree of malice mar his life.

"GRUDGE implies a cherished feeling of resentment or ill-will that seeks satisfaction." Most of us have probably known some of this feeling. It is always harmful; even when only temporary.

OTHER DEGREES OF MALICE are malevolence; ill-will; spite; malignity; and spleen.

"MALICE" CAN PRODUCE but there are many different types of this ugly feeling which are not in violent action. It is common to most people keep their malice reasonably well submerged and not seek to express them in physical harm.

Nevertheless, whatever the malice; it mars one's life. It has the potential to nullify all of our accomplishments.

"THERE IS NO BENEFIT that malignity will not lessen. It is narrow that a good interpretation not enlarge it." Seneca.

MALICE IS NOT inevitable. We have the capacity and the power of choosing how we respond to it, said and done to us.

We may not necessarily prove what others say to or about how they treat or mistreat us, but we can manage our response to be free of hatred, resentment, hot temper and every other malice.

"MALICE MARS LIFE" crimes against others come to malice someone feels toward them. Of course, it is not always in this manner; but it is always the persons who permit it to stain them.

WE CANNOT AFFORD because of the damage it does to may cause us to do to others.

Turn Row COMMENTS

By EMIL MANN

WITH THE STORIES of political scandals, real and imaginary, dominating the news these days, it is only natural for Americans who love their country to ponder: "What in the world most other people (people of other nations) think of us?"

One encouraging, and in some ways surprising, answer comes from the Republic of China, through a public opinion poll conducted by the Public Opinion Polls Association, in results released in late March, 1974. The poll was conducted to determine the people's choice of merchandise, company, country, and world leaders.

AND IT TURNS out that Coca Cola was the best-known merchandise, the United States the best friend, and Mao Tse-Tung the most disliked person to the people in Taiwan.

Of the total returns, 99.8 percent of the Chinese people "recognized" Coca Cola, followed by Hilton, Ford, and the Reader's Digest.

ACCORDING TO the survey returns on "country," the 10 best-liked nations among the 40 polled were the Republic of China, (in first place) followed by the United States, South Korea, Israel, South Vietnam, Switzerland, Germany, the Philippines, Canada, and Australia, in that order.

THE POLL FURTHER revealed the five most disliked persons among world leaders are Mao Tse-Tung (69.2 percent), Leonid Brezhnev (69.2 percent) and Pierre Trudeau (69.2 percent).

It is encouraging to find the people of free China still have a favorable attitude towards the States.

After all, it was bugging U.S.A. which led directly to the admission of Communist China to the United Nations and to the expulsion of the free from the U.N. Happily, the people appear to recognize that the majority of the people of the Free China, and that American policy does not always reflect the of the American people.

Dear Editor:

This will be of interest to the hairdressers in this area and possibly to the public.

Will you please print this in the editorial section of your Leader-News.

Dear Governor Briscoe:

As many licensed hairdressers as there are in Texas, it is certainly hard to understand the fact that the Cosmetology Commission of Texas is represented by a majority of beauty school owners and former beauty school managers and owners.

As a voting citizen and a licensed operator as well as a salon owner, I can't understand why you, as Governor, could not appoint a qualified licensed hair-dresser from the many mitted. Since our new commission went into effect in 1971 there has been equal representation of Cosmetology Commission segments of the beauty industry law intends.

Jim Jemison, who is the appointment, has been for many years known all over Texas as one of a beauty school in Houston, known Mr. Jemison for several years and as a person feel he is well qualified to serve on the Commission. I understand why you would appoint another school owner to the Commission for the position of "licensed operator."

As I see it now we have registered hairdressers of Texas the late Herby Cohen, a school owner Longview who is the Chairman. I have employed as the Director Ron Resek who has been involved in a beauty school in Littlefield and who has also served as the president of the Beauty Schools Association of Texas in past few years.

I simply cannot understand thinking by appointing another who has been and involved in the school segment of the industry position that should be for a "operator" and that should be in connection with a beauty school beauty salon, but should be a licensed operator.

This still leaves many, many operators in the industry without representation on the Commission which the law says we shall

Traffic Light Law Has Serious Problems

Right-turn-on-red may be great for some and even for some consumption. The Texas Society for the Prevention of Blindness warns of serious problems with peripheral vision. Drivers need to be alert at intersections for pedestrians in the crosswalk. Fast-moving vehicles speeding up to "beat the light." If any driver is unable to see to the right, the risk is no exact statistics. A number of licensed drivers with side vision problems says it is well known, particularly to glaucoma and other eye diseases that cause a field of vision defects glaucoma.

screening drives throughout the state). The Texas Society for the Prevention of Blindness maintains that no one with peripheral sight loss—drivers with so-called "tunnel" vision—should be allowed to drive, because the risk is too great, and urges drivers who have any personal doubt about their side vision capabilities to seek an examination by an eye doctor.

For all drivers, TSPB says, even those with excellent eyesight, the right-turn-on-red rule means visual alertness is more important on the highway today than ever before.

DROWNING IN IDEAS

"There is a great disarray of ideas confronting policy makers in U.S. society today. What the New Deal tried to put over 40 years... and the civil rights the Great Society tried legislate... have simply run out of gas. We have poured our collective wisdom and energy into reform; we have studied, we have given papers and reports... We are drowning in ideas and suffocating from suggestions based upon the narrow interests of those presenting them." —Alan S. Boyd, president, Illinois Central Gulf Railroad.

Who Are Texas CowBelles?

By MARY M. GIBSON
Hereford

Texas CowBelles is a rapidly growing organization of Texas women interested in beef promotion. It is an affiliate of American National CowBelles, the auxiliary group to the American National Cattlemen's Association, both of which are headquartered in Denver, Colo.

ANCB is 22 years old and counts affiliates in 28 states plus Canada, with a 1974 membership of 12,000 women. Texas CowBelles is 20 months old—the first meeting of 28 Panhandle women was held in August, 1972—and now lists 19 locals representing more than 300 towns and counts a membership of more than 2,000 beef saleswomen across our state. A local may represent a single town and its immediate area or it may cover several counties, as is the case with South Texas CowBelles which lists members in eighteen counties!

Texas CowBelle membership is open to any woman in Texas interested in beef promotion and that involves a lot of ladies. A Texas CowBelle may head up her own ranch or be directly involved with some phase of the cattle industry; some women are home economists with the various news media; some are teachers and for many women, their husbands are the link to the industry. Many are wives of cattle growers, feeders, processors and packers; some are the wives of grain producers and dealers; there are also the wives of bankers, the wives of the truckers who haul the grain, the critters and the processed beef to and from; and there are wives of the men in the nutritional field of the industry—the list could go on and on, but the point is that ALL these women are concerned consumers wanting the most for their food dollar and knowing that "Beef Is Business In Texas." Every business needs informed salespeople and that's what a CowBelle is!

If you eat, you are involved in agriculture and CowBelles offers you the opportunity to become a better acquainted with the beef industry and learn just how that beef product gets in your plate. The following is a list of the present Texas CowBelle locals and their presidents' home towns—please visit the one in your area and if there isn't one, help us begin.

Texas may have been 20 years later getting started, but we should be the largest and most active group to ever join American National CowBelles, Inc.—Washington County CowBelles, Brenham; Caprock CowBelles, Lubbock; Oldham Co. CowBelles, Wildorado; Riata CowBelles, Friona; Tejas CowBelles, Lamesa; Cass Co. CowBelles, Naples; Live Oak CowBelles, Christoval; South CowBelles, Hereford; Top CowBelles, Panhandle; CowBelles, Perryton; Cotta CowBelles, Golden Spread; Amarillo; XIT CowBelles, Uvalde; Dimmitt; Tall CowBelles, Longview; Pomona CowBelles, Littlefield.
