Next year's plates will again be reflectorized and will have high visibility letters and numerals on a white background. Herbert Dunn, county tax assessor-collector, said a change to blue was made because of reflectorization in

Chase Nets Nine Tickets

A total of nine tickets was issued to two drivers Tuesday afternoon following a 100 mph chase by a city patrolman down Ninth and Houston Streets in Littlefield. Two vehicles were racing down Ninth Street when the patrolman began pursuit with red lights flashing and siren blowing. They went across the railroad tracks and turned back to the left down Houston Street and proceeded at about 90 or 95 mph.

According to the officer's report, when the cars came to the intersection of Houston and Highway 385, one of the cars skidded through a stop sign and slid into a service station owned by Phil Adkins.

About $150 in damages resulted to a gasoline pump in front of the station, and about $10 worth of damages resulted to the 1960 Chevrolet.

THE HIGHWAY PATROL team here has the surnames of Angel and Parson. Weldon Parson, seated, and Bill Angel, standing, enforce traffic rules in Lamb County and investigate all county wrecks outside incorporated towns. Angel and Parson are called to an average of three weeks each week, and spend at least an hour a day on paper work in their office in the Courthouse. Statistics show that driving too fast for conditions and carelessness cause most wrecks.

AN ANGEL AND A PARSON

They Are 'Do-Right' Boys

By NILAH RODGERS

There's an Angel and a Parson watching Lamb County motorists. When a county resident is involved in an accident, the Angel and Parson are among the first to arrive at the scene to comfort and aid victims.

They also dispense justice to motorized law breakers. The Angel is Highway Patrolman Bill Angel, and the "preacher" is Highway Patrolman Weldon Parson. "Or pole cats, the do-right boys, or stripped legs," Angel said. "We know all the names—fuzz, cops, and worse. We've been called everything, but usually not to our faces."

Angel and Parson have been with the Department of Public Safety (DPS) for a total of more than 27 years. Angel, whose surname sounds like an endearment or suggests heaven, has been a highway patrolman over 16 years. He has spent almost 10 of these years in Littlefield.

Parson has been with DPS 11 years and has lived in Littlefield six years. These public servants work when most persons aren't working. All holidays are just another workday to them and they are on call 24 hours a day.

In their line of duty they see the gruesome side of life as well as the lighter, funny side. Speeding leads the list of traffic offenses and the excuses drivers give for speeding provide these two officers with many laughs. One woman stopped for speeding told Angel that her gas tank was almost empty and she was trying to get to a service station before she ran out of gas.

"I stopped one lad for speeding," Angel said. "When I asked him if he had a good reason for driving so fast, he said, 'I sure do, I left my wife in Dickens.'" Angel said the young couple was headed for California. The man was driving while his wife slept in the back seat. When he stopped at Dickens for gas, his wife got out and went to the rest room. They had clothes hanging in the back seat, and he didn't miss her until he got to Clovis, N. M.

"Don't you think it might be better if you just went on to California?" Angel kidded. The most common excuse for speeding given to Parson is that they were in a hurry to go to the bathroom. "I usually just follow them right on in," Parson said, "and give them a ticket."

Parson has found that drivers who weave down the highway aren't always drunk. "Sometimes they are about out of gas and are sloshing fuel from side to side trying to make it to a gas tank before running out," he said. "Oh, gracious!" Of all persons stopped for various violations, women give more excuses. "Women may be the weaker sex," Angel said, "but not when it comes to talking." Angel doesn't go along with the idea that women are poorer drivers than men, either. "Statistics show this. Men get the most violations," Angel said. "That's been my experience."

Angel and Parson say teenaged boys aren't a big problem either, although insurance companies penalize male youths.

Tickets issued to adult men account for one-half or more ticketed traffic violations in Lamb County. Women and teenagers get about 25 per cent each of the total tickets issued in enforcing highway laws.

Angel and Parson give 60-75 tickets a month, or close to 1,000 tickets each year.

May, June, July and August are peak traffic months. Out of state vacationers and tourists run up the total in the summer months. Local traffic is heaviest during the fall, or from the time school starts until about Jan. 1.

Angel and Parson enforce general highway laws on every public road outside incorporated towns in Lamb County. They assist towns outside the county if called on.

There are 300 miles of paved roads to cover in Lamb County, and Angel and Parson investigate about 120 accidents each year. Ten to 15 per cent of the accidents in Lamb County are on dirt roads. "Mostly at intersection," Parson said, "when people forget to look to see if another vehicle is coming."

In investigating wrecks, the patrolmen help clear the road and direct traffic. About two or three hours are required to work most highway wrecks. Patrolmen Angel and Parson drive

Lfd. Butane Has Herbicides, Fertilizers And Fumigants

This is the best time of year for farmers to begin chemical weed control, and A. C. (Ace) Bridwell at Littlefield Butane has Treflan and other herbicides for pre-emergence and post-emergence weed treatment. Littlefield Butane has a complete line of farmers' services. This is headquarters for all area farmers' needs, including butane, gasoline, diesel fuel, and motor oils. In the herbicide department, there is Treflan, Caporal, Lorox, and Propazine. Not only does Littlefield Butane have the chemicals, but they have the equipment for applying these measures, too. Lorox mixed with Propazine keeps weeds down in feed land and cotton can be planted right back the next crop year. Treflan and Caporal are very effective weed control chemicals on cotton land and other tap root crops. If nematodes are a problem, Ace has the fumigants for nematode control. Ace even has the equipment needed for fumigating and advises pre-planting fumigation. Even if you don't get your land treated prior to planting time, Littlefield Butane can help you fumigate at planting time with special fumigation attachments that will do a two-in-one job. Knife-type fumigation rigs can be run just ahead of planters. Littlefield Butane

B&C Pump Company Sells, Services Pumps

B & C Pump Company sells and services anything and everything connected with irrigation or domestic pumps. B & C Pump offers turn-key jobs with contract drilling. Drilling includes a speed or fast bailer with a suction that gets the sand out and activates the wells. This oftentimes results in a much better well than one drilled without a fast, high speed bailer. B & C Pump Company sells California Western Pumps with a five-year guarantee on tube line and shafting. B & C handles Red Jacket domestic pumps and Gold Crown submersible pumps. In addition to the well and pump service on new wells, B & C has a clean-out rig for old wells and winch trucks and a small domestic winch for house wells. B & C does general machine work and welding. They have a portable welder for making calls. They also handle all types of agricultural bearings and sprockets. This father and son pump company has been in business since 1951. Since beginning operations, they have expanded, and have a business in Levelland, too. Owners of B & C are W. H. (Dubb) Berry and son, B. W. Berry, and John Clayton Jr. and John (Johnny) Clayton III. All four of these men are avid armchair quarterbacks for all televised sports, and all of them like watersports. Clayton and son really go in for water skiing, and the Berrys ski, fish and hunt. Whatever your irrigation need, see B & C Pump Company for expert advice.

Be Careful

Be extremely careful when handling car batteries and wear old clothes if possible.

Sulfuric acid used in car batteries will weaken most textile fibers.

Certain synthetics, such as nylon and dacron, are pretty resistant, but be careful, advises a clothing specialist.

Don't ruin clothes unnecessarily.

Happiness is December! Wonder why???

Happiness is a month of snow (hopefully!) and its fringe benefits, Christmas and, of course, Santa Claus. (All you little kiddies cheer! He has his eyes on YOU!)

Happiness is a time for singing carols and giving gifts. Happiness is a year treat of decorating an evergreen tree or an aluminum tree, or, if you really are modern, a plastic tree. Everyone is rushing around buying gifts and cards for everyone else, and bumping into each other. Finally, it dawns on them, "I know these things are a great month...and we hope you have the best one yet!"

DEFINITION: Adolescent—One who is slightly too dress himself if he could just reach where he dropped his clothes!
