

STERLING CITY FARM BEATS 'HARD TIMES'

STERLING CITY, Sept. 3.—Determination, hard work and progressive ideas applied to the 100-acre farm owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. Allard near Sterling City have resulted in success.

Four years ago Mr. Allard bought 100 acres of land 8 miles west of Sterling City, and started improving it. He drilled for water and at 37 feet found all the water he could use. The well was put under pump and flowed at the rate of 500 gallons per minute.

During the first year Mr. Allard put 20 acres under cultivation and at the beginning of the second year he added 15 more acres. Five acres of this amount during this season was used for garden truck, two and one-half acres in alfalfa, four acres in corn, and remainder of the cultivated land in maize.

Two feed crops are raised during the season. The alfalfa has been cut twice and will get two more cuttings. On only one-fourth of an acre last summer Mr. Allard produced enough tomatoes to net $884 and this season with one and one-half acres planted to produce this fruit, he expects to make $1,500.

An orchard has been started on the farm. Pecan trees make up the largest part, there being 100 of these, while peach, apple, apricot and cherry trees are included in the remaining 28.

The house, the barn, the fences—everything is white and attractive to the eye, not only of local people but of visitors from distant places in the state.

A section of the productive farm is devoted to chickens. White Leghorns was the stock chosen. A small herd of dairy cows is run and a flock of Rambouillet sheep are kept. Each help to contribute to the family bank account.

Rabbits are raised now for family consumption. Starting with three rabbits in February the farm now boasts of 30. A net wire surrounds the farm. Concrete tanks, a storm house, and comfortable chicken house are on the farm.

Last year Mrs. Allard canned 1000 cans of vegetables, meat and fruit. Eight hundred cans of these were sold on the local market. Two additional wells are to be pulled by windmill, for orchard and a large flower garden, which has also proven successful. Not long ago Mr. Allard was offered $28,000 for his place. The products from the farm are sold at Sterling City and Big Spring.

The farm is the most unusual in this county.

Louis Stockho of St. Louis, has worked for a furniture company 62 years. He is 75 years old.

Art Of Flavoring Centuries Old

King of Babylon Served Anchovies Made From Turnips Disguised With Spices

The early Romans in their Bacchanalian feasts enticed the appetites of their guests with every possible flavor and condiment. No doubt a twenty or thirty course dinner required high spicing to enable the gorged guest to do full justice to his host's hospitality.

Perals Influences Rome
From Persia, with the sensual indulgences of their oriental Potentates, had come to Rome the inspiration for elaborate epicurean festivals, while from Greece, Rome had borrowed many of their older staple items of diet. Porridge had been the national Roman item of diet, until wheat bread was introduced from Athens. The Roman predilection for fish, as manifested in elaborate reports by Homer, in which he records the construction of great fish pools, of both fresh and salt water, permitting the guests to select their own finny denizen of the deep, prior to its serving, further encouraged the development of tart sauces and flavorings. Perals had contributed the famous spices and condiments of the Ind. The result was an invincible debauch of flavor that no doubt in part, served to overcome an unnatural culinary weaknesses of the cooks of that early day. Plato and Plutarch record the ingenious use of seasonings and flavorings by which disguised viands, intriguing the appetites of the guest were equally as intriguing as their identity. Turnip Anchovies Nicodemus, King of Babylon, at one of his feasts served anchovies which had been made from turnips disguised by salt, oil, poppy seed, and other seasonings, while it is an acknowledged fact today that veal, with the aid of olives, salt, pork, onions, parsley, and condiments, can imitate overdone quail. The most ingenious chef today would hardly dare to tackle the lowly turnip with an anchovy as his ultimate aim. Even in Biblical days, the use of flavorings to disguise the identity of food items, is mentioned. Rebecca, with her own hands, in order to insure for her favorite son his legitimate birthright, disguised goat meat as venison so successfully that the blind patriarch Isaac was unable to distinguish it. Learn To Flavor It is the attitude of the modern cook to not attempt such amazing disguises as characterized Rebecca's deception of Isaac, in order that her favored son Jacob might steal his brother Esau's blessing. There are, however, many household dishes in every home that have been served so long, a disguise could not help but improve their palatability. Here again seasoning which is the real magic of the kitchen comes into play. The carefullest administration of skill and knowledge is essential to proper seasoning and much of the missionary work in the seasoning field is being done today by home economists, who have had at their disposal laboratories and supplies far beyond the reach of the average housewife. With the final discovery of a seasoning secret that will rejuvenate an otherwise tasteless meal into a highly delectable epicurean treat, the data is carefully charted for dissemination to housewives desirous of improving their cooking standards. Attend Institute In this essential field of the culinary arts Leona Rusk Ihrig whose research work in cookery has made her nationally famous, is an outstanding figure. With the appearance of Mrs. Ihrig, in Big Spring during which time she will conduct the Herat cooking school at the high school auditorium many Big Spring housewives will find a solution of minor problems that have been bothering them—minor in actual magnitude, but major in significance. Any housewife knows what the absence of a sprinkle of salt can mean to an otherwise palatable dish. Each of Mrs. Ihrig's lectures will be complete in itself, but the five units which comprise the school will be completely interwoven that in order to get the greatest benefit from Mrs. Ihrig's instructions it is recommended that all women

Rejoice Over What Argotane Has Done For My Family.
He Says
I believe in giving everything its due, and I want to tell you right now I sure rejoice over what Argotane has done for my wife."

"Two years ago," he continued, "she began to go down hill with stomach trouble and nervousness and the agony she suffered was something awful. Most everything she would eat disagreed with her and gave her no end of trouble. Many a time she would wake up in the night with such nervous spells that she was unable to go to sleep again. In fact, she was so tired and worn out by morning she would hardly be able to get up at all. She got to the point where she spent a great deal of her time in bed and was not really able to do her house work and I was afraid she would never get well."

A WRITER in the current issue of The Nation calls attention to a by-product of the automobile industry which ordinarily goes unmentioned—the utter ruination of tempers and manners which the automobile seems to have brought to millions of good citizens. It is a point worth considering.

hour in changing opponents with every effort, ranging from mere breaches of etiquette to downright felonies. Radios ring like angry machine guns with multiplied charges of official and moral delinquencies. But the Texas press, thanks to the Texas Label laws, was practically free from the four-weeks menu of official delinquencies.

Hollywood Sights & Sounds
DAGGER
by Mary Dahlberg
SYNOPSIS: Blaine Howard, rescued by Dagger Marley, young Texas girl, from some Mexican insurgents, is the first man to arouse her love, but he is killed on the Western Front in France. Later she marries Captain Vanneering, a gifted aviator, but he loses his life in an airplane crash. Howard's memory, however, Dagger cherishes most. In France the Duc de Pontoise offers her his hand, but she refuses. She decides to make a pilgrimage around the world visiting three friends whom Howard once evaded on a similar trip, seeking the answer to life's riddle. In Africa she finds Sid Marut, Arab sheikh, the first of Howard's friends who tells her one should do what he thinks right. In India Ghulan Buk, Buddhist holy man, advises her that peace lies in forgetfulness of self. Next she journeys to China, and Chang Kai Shih, powerful war lord, comes quickly to her hotel when she mentions Howard's name in a note to him.

There seems to be something inherent in the mere act of driving an automobile that makes a man feel that he is exempt from all, or nearly all, of the common requirements of courtesy and human decency. It applies to nearly all of us, and in the last few years it has produced a set of road manners which would seem to justify the complaint that we are a nation of barbarians.

Rather strange, too, a public speaker in Texas can make any charge under Heaven and subject himself to no danger, apparently. The radio can broadcast felonious charges to the remotest bounds of the commonwealth and enjoy complete immunity apparently. But no newspaper can publish what public speakers have charged and what the radio has broadcast. There is a law against such publication, and it was as a general rule enforced her laws. But if muzzling the press kept a single scandalous charge out of the Texas campaign it would be interesting to know just what the possible charge was. Apparently the one outstanding effect of the law is to keep the public from reading occasionally what they hear from the hustlers at most every hour in the day.

HOW'S your HEALTH
Painless Surgery
There is a tombstone in the United States upon which are inscribed the following words:
"William T. G. Morton, inventor and revealer of anesthesia inhalation, by whom pain surgery was invented and annulled; before whom in all times surgery was agony, since whom science has control of pain."
Few appreciate the full significance of this epitaph.
Truly, as it is said, before him in all times surgery was agony.

CHANG AIMS TO PLEASE
CHANG spoke very slowly, as if choosing his words, and his pronunciation was so perfect that only the slightly singsong intonation of his voice betrayed his race. But what intrigued Dagger most was his choice of the word "come." It was as if he had expected her.
"Thank you for answering my question, General," Dagger responded. "I didn't expect a personal call."
"You are the friend of my friend," he returned.
He lifted a hand, and snapped a short order over his shoulder, which cleared the hall of all occupants, including Mr. Araki.
"I may, Mrs. Vanneering."

Daily Oklahoman:
TEXAS politics reveals the fact that Texas in some respects is a most peculiar state. In which respect Texas is exactly like the other 47 states. The four weeks gubernatorial bout between Ross Sterling and the Ferguson pair brought out about every charge that could possibly be launched against a primary candidate. Public speakers exhausted hour after hour.

"I understand," assented Chang.
"Of course," he added, "I am not so constituted."
"Blaine Howard wouldn't accept your belief," she replied. "Nor should I."
"That is true as to Mr. Howard," he agreed. "I offered him power on a plane with my own. He would not accept. The old lama had bent his mind the other way."
"Ah, yes, the Way!"
"Understand," assented Chang.
"Of course," he added, "I am not so constituted."

There are different beliefs for different men," Dagger reminded him. "Ghulan Buk is happy with his; you, I dare say, are happy with yours."
"Happy?" Chang considered. "Scarcely. No man who is ambitious can be altogether happy. Were he, his ambition would die, and that having been the main-spring of his life, he would cease to have a reason for living."
"That is a material point of view," Dagger protested. "Possession is not everything."
"I should hazard the guess that you, Mrs. Vanneering, possess much," he commented.
"True, yet—"

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS Answered By Dr. S. Parkes Cadman

Questions from readers are answered daily by the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Radio Minister of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Dr. Cadman seeks to answer inquiries that appear to be representative of the trends of thought in the many letters which he receives.

the earthen vessels into which St. Paul poured the treasures of his grace and wisdom. Sumter, S. C. If you believe that an infant must be baptized in order to behold the face of God how can you compromise with those members of other churches who say that infant baptism is not necessary? May I ask if you're willing to give up infant baptism for the sake of church union? If you are then, do you believe the end justifies the means? Your church (Episcopal) teaches the necessity of infant baptism, original sin, etc., therefore how can you compromise such an important belief and continue as an Episcopal minister?

If you are not willing to make this compromise with the Baptists, how can you expect to get together on church union? I am not an Episcopal clergyman, but a Congregational minister of Methodist ancestry and training. With such backgrounds I could hardly be expected to regard the issue of baptism, its subjects, or its forms as of sufficient importance to prevent the union of Christian churches. This is not to say that baptism does not have sacramental rank, even though it may not have regenerative efficacy. At the least estimate infant baptism consecrates the child and its parents to the service of God, and adult baptism, whether by sprinkling, pouring or immersion, testifies to the candidate's change of heart and life. The exact degree of divine grace bestowed in the act of baptism is not for me to determine. The character of its observance I am perfectly willing to leave open to the choice of conscientious believers. I practice infant baptism because it symbolizes the truth that every child is Christ's property, and also to enforce the obligation of parents and churches to cooperate with Christ in securing His possession of the child. I am also perfectly willing to immerse adults on their confession of faith in their Redeemer. Obviously I am not called upon to settle the long standing dispute between our Baptist and Anglican brethren. Nor do I foresee any immediate prospect of their oneness unless they are willing to subordinate their differences to the cries of Christendom. But I firmly adhere to our Lord's purpose for the unity of all His disciples, and I shall continue in that adherence. May His Spirit create in them and in all of you that catholicity which is sufficiently broad to allow for the differences you apparently deem insurmountable. Milwaukee, Wis. We read in Luke 17:21 "The Kingdom of God is within you." Is there another Kingdom of God beside the one that is in you, in me in all God's children? If there is, where is it? The Greek word here translated Kingdom could also mean rule, reign, sovereignty and realm. Many modern scholars prefer one of the alternative translations to the word "kingdom," which conveys the thought of something localized and definitely marked off from all other areas. One of the best definitions of the term is that of Dr. Hort—"The world of invisible laws by which God is ruling and blessing His creatures." This world is sometimes viewed propaedeutically as though those laws were already in full power everywhere; hence the scripture, "If I by the spirit of God cast out demons, then is the kingdom of God come upon you." Again, it is viewed as a social state the consummation of which is to be realized at a future time. The following passage is an example: "There be some here which shall be in no wise taste death till they see the Kingdom of God come." You will perceive that kingdom as used in the New Testament is a somewhat elastic term. In the words you quote God's "world of invisible laws" works silently in a man's mind and conscience, while the parables of the wheat and tares and the dragnet painted the kingdom as though it were a visible community. Other parables compared it to a seed which grows silently; unfolding in the tree to the stately proportions. Still other parables speak of the kingdom as already completed. Perhaps the most inclusive interpretation is to conceive the kingdom as present everywhere, whether in man or in nature, whenever God's laws are regarded as sovereign and implicitly obeyed. Midway Opens New Session

Midway school, located on the Bankhead highway between Big Spring and Coahoma, opened the 1930-31 session Monday morning with 102 pupils enrolled. Rev. W. G. Bailey of Big Spring spoke at the opening program. The opening song was led by Mrs. H. L. Shirley and Miss Lucille Rogers gave a reading. The auditorium stage in the new brick building has been equipped with scenery painted especially for the building. Scenery consists of a parlor set, woodland set, tormenters and front drop curtain. The scenery was purchased with proceeds from advertisements by Big Spring and Coahoma business people, for which the teachers and patrons of the school expressed appreciation. A bus is being used this year to transport pupils of this school.

Curtis Hancock Sells First Martin '30 Bale

STANTON, Sept. 3.—The first bale of the 1930 Martin county cotton crop was ginned Monday, August 25, and sold at 10 1/2 cents a pound. Two more bales were ginned later in the week. Curtis Hancock brought in the first bale and received in addition to the market price, a prize of $58.50 given by business men.

Rifle Fire Shatters Propeller Of Plane

SHIRO, Texas, Sept. 3 (UP)—An uncomfortable realization of the strange sense of humor possessed by somebody has come to Jack McBride, a local aviator. The propeller of McBride's plane was shattered by rifle fire while he was flying over a heavily wooded section of Grimes county. The flier and his passengers successfully landed in a clearing. The authorities, meanwhile, began an investigation.

Easy to look at. Image of a man and a woman in a circular frame. The man is wearing a suit and hat, and the woman is wearing a fur coat and hat. They are both smiling and looking at each other.

EASY TO LOOK AT—good to look at—that's your reaction to charm and beauty. Easy to smoke—good to smoke—that's the lure of Camels. Good because of the natural mildness and fragrance of mellow tobaccos, with all the delicacy and aroma preserved by scientific skill in preparation and blending—good because there's no over-processing or doctoring—no flatness of taste.

Members Tell Of Their Vacation Trips This Summer

The T. E. L. Class of the First Baptist church held its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon in the church parlors. The meeting opened with a song followed with a prayer by Mrs. K. S. Beckett. The devotional, by Mrs. Lester King was given in an interesting way. Mrs. King led a Bible quiz of the members. Mrs. B. N. Duff and Mrs. W. W. Grant gave the closing prayer. At the close of the business session Mrs. W. R. Douglass social chairman took charge. Different members who had been away on vacations were asked to tell of their trips. Mrs. W. W. Grant told of some of the things she saw while visiting in North Carolina. Mrs. Ira Fuller described her trip to California. Mrs. K. S. Beckett, Mrs. Sellers, Mrs. Lester King and Mrs. Carter also gave brief talks. Mrs. Roy Lay and Mrs. J. T. Mercer entertained the group with a vocal and a piano solo. The members then went into the dining room where the table was decorated with cut flowers and a large cake featuring the class colors of green and white. A hand painted booklet, "Let You Forget" with wishes written in it by all of the members was presented to Mrs. Barton, who has been with the class all summer and is now leaving. The hostesses were Mesdames J. C. Douglass, R. V. Hart, H. H. Squires, Lester King. Refreshments were served to the following: Mesdames Clifford Hurt, Fred Sellers, R. V. ART— (Continued From Page 3) contemplating attendance should try to visit as many as possible of these lectures.

Attendance will be absolute, free and without obligation. While the very best auditorium possible was secured for the holding of this great lectures series, the Herald management wishes to warn its readers that judging from the interest already displayed in Mrs. Thrig's cooking school there will, no doubt, be record attendance at each of her platform appearances. It is therefore, suggested that every woman possible endeavor to arrive early, since the lectures begin sharply on the hour, and the first to come will be the first seat.

extended not only to the women of Big Spring, alone, but to all in the county, since judging by mail queries, large numbers of out of town women are desirous of taking advantage of this great opportunity.
