Tuesday, December 16, we will have as our guest, Mrs. Florence Reed, our District Deputy Grand Matron. She will grade our work, and each officer and member is urged to be present on time.

MRS. R. E. McCASKILL HOSTESS TO FIRST BAPTIST LADIES

Monday afternoon will be long remembered by the ladies of the First Baptist church as one of the most pleasant occasions of the year. The lovely reception room of Mrs. R. E. McCaskill's new home was filled to overflowing with happy bright faced women who anticipated a delightful evening, and they were not disappointed.

The sacred music selected for the afternoon was in perfect harmony with the other number on the program, and when the lovely melody of "Silent Night" had fallen like a benediction on every heart, the leader, Mrs. Jordan, gave a beautiful reading "The Wise Man's Vision of the Star."

Mrs. Heathman conducted the devotional, reading the wonderful story that never grows old, sung by herald angels nearly two thousand years ago. At the conclusion of a very interesting "Royal Service" program, conducted by Mrs. Troy Howton, a treasure hunt began, led by the honor guest, Mrs. Barnes, the clues being given by Mrs. "Mac" in an original poem. Many dainty love tokens were discovered that spoke more eloquently than words could have done of our affection for the honoree. The treasures all safely stored, another pleasant surprise awaited the ladies. Two youthful musicians, Morris and Henry Replin, came in, bringing their violins, and delighted their audience with several duets and solos.

Another pleasing feature of the program was an art contest, each lady drawing a picture representing the title of a song. Mrs. Ike Griffin was awarded highest honors, but many of the artists ran her a close second.

Next came the refreshments, and the ambrosia of the gods "has nothing on" the dainties served by the genial hostess. The plate favors were particularly attractive. Twenty-seven adults and a number of younger guests enjoyed the pleasures of the hour.

The following members answered to

HOME ECONOMICS CLASS

The girls in section four of the home economics I class are finishing their dresses and are going to make child's play suit next.

The dresses which the girls have just finished look very attractive. It looks as though the girls are interested in making dresses for themselves.

Miss Collins has complimented them on the two garments that they have made, but she says that she expects them to do better on the next garment.

COTTON CO-OP GETS FIRST BALE Total To Be Great In Event T.-P. Shops Are Established Chamber of Commerce Making $ of Annual Tonnage in Littlefield

IS GROWN ON FARM OF F. G. SADLER AND WEIGHS 355 POUNDS

SECOND BALE ALSO GOES TO MARKET-ING BODY

Littlefield ginned the first cotton of the 1930 season late Monday. The first bale came from F. G. Sadler's farm, three miles northeast of the city. It arrived at the Texas Cotton Growers gin at about 5:50 p. m. and was ginned under the personal direction of J. T. Elms.

The second bale, which arrived at the Irwin gin, was brought to that gin from the F. H. Glagener farm, shortly after the bale from the Sadler farm reached the Texas Cotton Growers gin.

Both gins immediately prepared to gin their bales. The Sadler bale is declared to have been ginned first, and the fact was heralded by the sounding of the whistle at the Texas Cotton Growers gin.

The Sadler bale weighed 1270 pounds of seed cotton and ginned 355 pounds of lint cotton, while the Glagener bale weighed 460 pounds of lint cotton.

Both bales were exhibited on the sidewalk on Main street, and Tuesday were billed out to the Texas Cotton Co-operative association. The records at the Santa Fe show that Mr. Glagener has bill of lading No. 1.

Many other counties are taking pride in the fact that the first bale was billed to the Texas Cotton Co-operative association, but Lamb county can go them one better in the fact that the two first bales went to the association.

Further, it is expected that more than half of Lamb county's cotton will be marketed through the co-operative association.

Hoover Will Aid T. & P. Rail Request

An Associated Press dispatch from Marshall, Texas, and published in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, says that President Hoover will take up with the Interstate Commerce Commission the matter of speeding up action on the Texas and Pacific Railroad's plan to build the proposed Panhandle-Plains lines.

The article says: By Associated Press Sept. 8.—President Hoover will take up with the Interstate Commerce Commission speeding up action on the Texas and Pacific Railroad's plan to build a 333-mile extension through West Texas, according to a dispatch received from the chief executive of the Marshall Chamber of Commerce Monday.

The idea of consummating preliminary details as speedily as possible was originated by Homer M. Price, editor of the Marshall Morning News. His plan was to have West Texas Senators go to Washington in the interest of the project, which had been approved by the Marshall and a number of other Chambers of Commerce.

With the fall atmosphere and the beginning of school comes the thrill of the football on the gridiron.

Heretofore Amherst has offered very little competition for their larger and bigger rivals, the Wildcats, but Coaches Tucker and Hemp (Continued on last page)

BILL CHESHER RECEIVES "BIG HAND" ON INSTALLATION OF WESTERN ELECTRIC SOUND SYSTEM AT PALACE THEATER

Compliments are being showered on W. J. (Bill) Chesher, manager of the Palace theater.

Bill is receiving the "big hand" for three reasons: First, because he has installed the Western Electric Sound System in his theater; second, because he has his theater "all dolled up," and third, because he has demonstrated his faith in Littlefield of the present future by installing the very latest in motion picture presentation equipment.

The first showing of a picture with the new equipment was Tuesday night. "Manslaughter" was the feature offering. There was a big attendance, in fact, the event of the first use of the new equipment was made a special occasion in Littlefield.

The picture was screened; J. W. Hale, secretary-manager of the Littlefield Chamber of Commerce, made a speech in his well known and eloquent style; Mr. and Mrs. Chesher made their bow from the stage; Bill made a neat little speech, then charming ushers, charmingly attired, made trips down the aisles to the stage, carrying flowers which had been sent to Mr. and Mrs. Chesher by Littlefield friends.

The new equipment makes possible perfect sound, perfect projection, in fact, as good a motion picture presentation as is available in any city, large or small, throughout the country.

Manager Chesher has refinished the interior of his theater, making it one of the most attractive show houses to be found anywhere.

ENROLLMENT GROWING IN LITTLEFIELD SCHOOL DISTRICT

GAIN SHOWN WITH LESS AREA THAN ONE YEAR AGO

1930 VALUATION WILL TOTAL ABOUT $6,700,000

The fact that the Littlefield Independent school district is rapidly increasing is substantiated by figures showing the enrollment in the Littlefield schools this year in comparison with that of the enrollment of last year.

Despite the fact that 64 sections of land, embracing 300 pupils, has been taken from the Littlefield district and made into a separate district, there were only 24 students less enrolled at the beginning of school last week than one year ago, which shows a growth of 276 in enrollment.

The tax rate for the Littlefield Independent school district for the current year will be $1.50 per $100 valuation, according to J. S. Hilliard, secretary of the school board and business manager for the school.

Valuation totals for the year have been completed. It is estimated that the valuation this year will be about $6,700,000. Last year's valuation was $7,700,000.

"This is not a decrease in valuation, but an increase," Mr. Hilliard explained. "Last year we had 243 sections of land in the district. In the spring we cut off 64 sections, leaving us 182 sections.

"As a matter of fact our valuation shows a substantial increase."

Lamb County Fair Will Open Next Thursday

Littlefield Cotton Co-op. Office To Open Here Monday

The Littlefield branch office of the Texas Cotton Cooperative Association will be opened in Littlefield Monday, according to announcement by J. W. Hale, secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce, at a luncheon meeting of that organization Tuesday.

Space for the local office of the association had not been obtained Wednesday of this week, because of the scarcity of such accommodation in Littlefield.

Mr. Hale was making every effort to obtain the desired office accommodation.

The 90 per cent advance authorized by the Federal Farm Board on all cotton placed in the seasonal pool of the Texas Cotton Cooperative association is available at all branch and sub offices of the association, as well as from receiving agents.

The West Plains Baptist Association will meet with the First Baptist church at Littlefield, Tuesday morning at 10:00 o'clock, October 7.

Mr. Hilliard said that this year school began with 19 trucks used to convey the children. Last year we had 26. But our trucks this year have larger bodies, and we handle as many, if not more children," Mr. Hilliard stated.

EXHIBITION SEEN AS GREATEST EVENT OF KIND IN THIS AREA

WILL PRESENT AGRICULTURAL PROSPERITY OF COUNTY

Next week will be Lamb County Fair Week, and the entire area is invited to attend, and visit the finest county fair to be held on the Plains of Texas.

The dates are September 18, 19, and 20, and the fair will be held at Amherst.

Four communities have indicated that they will have community exhibits, and a number of individual farm exhibits have been entered, as well as sixteen home demonstration club booths. Much interest is being displayed in the general agricultural exhibits.

The dairy show promises to be the best ever held in Lamb county, and will reflect the wonderful progress that dairying has taken in this county.

The swine show will be filled to the limit, and the horse and mule show will be good.

The different departmental superintendents are working hard to make their respective departments outstanding in every respect.

Amusements of all kinds have been arranged for football and baseball games are part of the amusements.

if only he could so hold her forever. But she had only been playing, even as he had! No doubt she would be just as relieved as he was that the little game was finished.

For Chittenham meant it to finish as soon as they reached Montreux. He would never willingly see her again; once he was away from her he would soon forget the clasp of her arms and her kisses.

She did not seem to notice his silence, and presently, glanced down at her, he saw that she had fallen asleep.

Chittenham looked at her and longed to gather her close into his arms and kiss her as he had done last night.

He looked away from her with a little cold feeling round his heart.

Why were such women allowed to be? What right had they to wander through the world bringing trouble and tragedy to every man who crossed their path? The woman who had sent Rodney to his death.

Well, he would have paid back part of the debt, if not in full. He would have paid back part of the debt if he caused her one sleepless night, or one tear!

Julie slept with her cheek against his arm all the way back to Montreux. When they were close to the town Chittenham gently roused her.

She flushed, meeting his eyes. Her eyes were so happy; it made him feel mean as if he had pretended to give a child a beautiful gift, knowing that when she opened the box she would find only a stone.

"I'll look much prettier when you see me again," she said. She squeezed his hand and turned away.

"Au revoir, till tonight then."

Chittenham went on to the hotel where he had arranged to meet Lon-bard. It was nearly dinner time when he was dressed, and Lombard tapped at the door.

Lombard fidgeted about the room. "So you got snowed up!" he said. "There's something I want to tell you, Chittenham."

"Go ahead. What is it? Have you been getting into a mess while I was up on high?"

"No, it's only that I made a silly mistake yesterday about Miss Farrow. Can't think how I did it."

Chittenham looked up sharply. "A mistake! What do you mean?"

Lombard flushed, and his eyes grew a little anxious.

"I made a damned silly mistake. Quite unintentional, of course. But the fact is... well, she's not the girl Rodney knew after all—she's not the Julie Farrow he was so mad about. It came out last night when I was talking to Miss Lennox. They've got the same name—Julie Farrow both of them—they're cousins, you see, but this one isn't the one Rodney was so mad about—she's in London at this moment—the one here is her cousin."

Chittenham turned, his face flushed, his eyes furious.

"What in hel are you talking about?" he demanded thickly.

"My dear chap, I've just told you. It was a mistake—quite an innocent one on my part naturally. After all, there's no harm done is there? What difference can it make? Miss Farrow will never know..."

"Never know!"

Chittenham flung past him and out of the room. He went downstairs, took his coat from the lobby and went out into the gathering dusk.

Not Julie Farrow! not the woman who had driven Rodney to his death!

Not Julie Farrow, the woman who had lain in his arms last night; not the woman to whom he had believed he was paying back a bitter debt—not the cold, calculating adventuress whose kisses and sweet, whispered words he had taken with a covert sneer.

"It's impossible to be just as happy

She had said that to him, her hand in his, just before they parted; she said that, believing in him, trusting him, loving him! Not knowing anything of Sadie—not knowing that he was a married man! not knowing perhaps any of the tragic happenings which had led up to this, the worst tragedy of all.

What would she say when she knew? how could he explain what possible excuse could he find for his actions which would not seem utterly callous and despicable in her eyes?

It was as if some one had torn down a veil that had blinded and deceived him.

He remembered a hundred and one little things which should have warned him, told him of his mistake.

He knew now that when last night Julie had said she loved him it was the truth, also. And there was Sadie.

What a sport of the gods!

He felt like a man in a dream He tried to believe that he had only to rub his eyes and he would find that the house before him had vanished, find that he was back again in South America, that he had never come to Switzerland with Lombard, never met Julie Farrow on the little lake steamer.

And then one of the windows leading on to the balcony opened—the sound of voices was wafted down to him through the quiet evening, and a woman's figure was silhouetted against the light.

Julie? For a moment the pounding of Chittenham's heart almost choked him, then with a breath of relief he saw that it was not Julie, but Bim Lennox.

Presently he heard her voice—quietly cynical.

"I can't see any signs of your Romeo, Julie, dear."

Chittenham drew further back into the shadows as he heard Julie's laugh, and the little confident note in her voice when she answered.

"He will come. I am not at all afraid."

So she had told Bim as he had been sure she would. Chittenham gritted his teeth and clenched his hands. He was to be spared nothing.

He turned with an effort and went up the steps.

He could hear voices from that balcony room and muffled laughter as the maid turned to him to ask his name. He braced himself and went forward.

Julie Farrow was there alone.

Chittenham heard the door shut behind him, but he did not move forward. There was a mist before his eyes, blinding him, then he heard Julie laugh nervously.

"I believe you are more afraid of me than I am of you," she said.

She was very pale—in her white frock she looked almost like a ghost, but she was smiling happily, and when he made no movement towards her she raised herself a little on tip-toe and softly kissed him.

"Isn't it the same now we are down on earth again?" she asked with a note of banter in her voice, through it shook a little with emotion.

Chittenham tried to speak, but he could not.

He read a shadow of question in her eyes, that changed into vague fear.

"Why... is anything the matter?" she asked uncertainly.

"Is it the same now we are down on earth?" he asked hoarsely. "You haven't found that last night was just a dream?—that we were two dreamers, and that now we are awake?"

She laughed at that, shaking her head.

"The earth is so much—so very much more real than the mountain tops were, dear," she said softly.

She bent her head and lightly brushed his coat sleeve with her cheek.

"I told Bim—" she said. "I was so happy, I just had to tell some one..." "And then as if struck by his silence she looked up swiftly to ask: 'You don't mind? you're not angry?'"

"Angry...?" How could he answer? what could he say? He released her hands, and moved a step from her.

"I've something to tell you," he said abruptly.

"Tell away then!"

Chittenham looked away from her.

"It's last night... Last night..."

ney."

"Yes."

"You told me you knew him."

"Yes, I often met him when he was with my cousin Julie."

Chittenham caught a hard breath. Then it was true.

"You knew Lombard, too? Do you know that at first he mistook you for your cousin—the other Julie Farrow?"

"Lombard told me that you were the other Julie, that you were the woman Rodney had cared so much about."

She met his gaze directly, but unsuspectingly; suddenly she smiled.

Well, what difference does that make? I'm not, and you know it now." She frowned a little in perplexity. "It's not anything to look so tragic about surely, is it?"

Chittenham's eyes wavered, for a moment he hesitated desperately, searching for yet some means of escape, then he told her.

"I went up to St. Bernard with you yesterday believing you were the woman my brother had loved. I wanted to pay back some of his debt. I wanted to hurt you as I believed you had hurt him. I wanted to make a fool of you as I knew you had made of him. I thought Fate was playing into my hands when you agreed to take me with you yesterday. I thought I was being damned clever... It seemed so easy to make love to you... you seemed to make it easy for me..."

"Giles!" Her voice was a wounded cry.

History says early man had only mud floors in his cave home. Most of it, no doubt, was tracked in during the spring months.

At the last meeting of the Chamber of Commerce it was decided that Anton needed a pound for loose stock for protection of the residents, who have feed exposed to the ravages of outside stock. R. T. Hammitt, who is now the pound man, was elected to the job of impounding the stock, and he will charge for all stock he takes up.

Home Demonstration Activities

There were 275 women who entered the national canning contest from Lamb county. These women competed with women from 36 states. Mrs. Charles Reynolds of Olton won $5.00 on a jar of meat, Mrs. V. M. Peterman of Rocky Ford won $3.00 on a jar of snap peas.

There are 32 women in Lamb county entering the living room contest for 1931. These rooms will be scored early in January by Mrs. Barth Milligan and Mrs. Neil Duffy of Amherst.

We are particularly glad to have these women do the improvement at this time as it will give them an excellent opportunity to show what can be done toward making a comfortable and attractive room with what we have on hand and the wise expenditure of money.

We are thankful for our business relations during the past year, and feel it is but a reflection of your good will and patronage.

It is our sincere wish that the coming year may, through your co-operation and friendship, be filled with those pleasant relations which have been our privilege during the year which is now drawing to a close.

Our good will and best wishes are yours throughout the Yuletide season and the coming years.

Help Santa

To make Santa full of joys
Fill up his bag with toys

COLOR him first; then cut out his toys and cut slits where dotted lines appear in his bag—and then, after pasting on thin cardboard, put a toy in its allotted place. The numbers will tell you where each belongs. Join Old Santa when he is entirely cut from the page, would make a really splendid calendar, for see! there is room on the left of his cap for you to paste a small one. He would be stronger if pasted finally on cardboard.

LITTLEFIELD'S FIRST—

Postoffice Is Established
One of the first jobs I had when I arrived in Littlefield was circulating a petition for the establishment of a post office. The postoffice was located in the townsite land office for over three years, and then moved to the brick building now occupied by the Yellow House Land Co.

I served as postmaster for five years, until I resigned and entered the service during the World War. Mrs. V. V. White (now Mrs. T. P. Wright) served as the first assistant postmaster. The first mail sack was brought in by horse team from Bartonsite, about 25 miles due east of Littlefield, the carrier being paid for his services by public subscription. I was a "first class postmaster in a fourth class office," my friends said.

This postoffice, which was the only one between here and Lubbock, served a tremendous ranch country—easily 40 miles southwest and that far northwest of Littlefield.

The Rev. Mr. Neal has been in evangelistic work for years. He was raised in Texas, and has held meetings in many states.

More complete announcements later. Everyone invited.
