Named Defense Administrator

The Congress of the United States has appropriated a large sum of money to carry out the provisions of the Lease-Lend bill, to provide and man a two-ocean navy, and to otherwise protect these United States of America. Frank Scofield, collector of internal revenue at Austin, has been named by the Secretary of the Treasury as State Administrator for the Defense Savings Bond drive in Texas.

Nazi Drive in Balkans

Here is one of the big rail junctions in Zidani, Yugoslavia, toward which the spearhead of the German invasion first headed. Europe's three largest railways converge here and as a communications link the city is of vital importance to military strategy. Inset shows a Nazi tank rolling across the Yugoslav border as Hitler's mechanized legions pushed forward.

From The World's Ace Cameramen On the Nation's Strike Fronts

As congress and the President called for early end to all labor disputes affecting U. S. defense, scenes like the above marked the strike fronts. Upper photos show evidence of violence at the strike-closed plant of Ford Motor company. Lower left, John L. Lewis enters New York conference to settle soft coal dispute. Lower right, police try to prevent further violence by keeping strikers away from the huge Allis-Chalmers plant in Milwaukee.

Farmers To Have Cows Tested

More than 300 farmers of Lamb county have signed agreements with the Live Stock Sanitary Commission of Texas and the United States Bureau of Animal Industry to have their cattle tested for Bang's disease, according to V. F. Jones, county agent.

Mr. Jones states that the veterinarian is in the county at this time making the tests. This service is free, there is no charge whatever to the farmer. Any farmer who would like to have his cattle tested is asked to call at the county agent's office and sign the agreement.

Some of the requirements that the herd owner agrees to are: to sell for slaughter within 15 days time any animal which reacts to the test, clean and disinfect his premises after each test if reactors are found in the herd, confine additions to the herd to cattle that have been tested for Bang's disease, or keep such animals separate from other cattle on the farm for a period of 60 days and such animals must pass two clean tests.

This program offers the farmers of Lamb county an opportunity to clear their herd of Bang's disease and further gives the family the satisfaction of knowing that the family milk supply is from Bang's free cows.

More Than 2,000 Rabbits Killed In Hale County

HALE CENTER, April 2.—More than 2,000 rabbits were killed by about 100 hunters scouring the pasture lands, wheat fields and the draw 14 miles west of here recently. Organized by George and Walter Struve, Bergin Bird and Chas. Bruce, the affair was the most successful ever held, they announced. It is an annual affair which draws hunters from all over the Plains. Dinner was served at noon on the Mullican ranch, where the hunt originated.

Another rabbit hunt took place in Hale county Sriday of last week in the Lakeview community, southeast of here about 17 miles. The hunt was organized at 9:00 o'clock a. m. on the Ed Lutrick place. Only shotguns were allowed and shells were sold at wholesale cost to hunters.

Health In Army Camps

If you've heard those rumors about epidemics at army camps, large numbers of deaths in army hospitals, unhealthy sanitary conditions and fast spreading diseases among our recently recruited soldiers, put them down as malicious whispering.

These stories have been going the rounds about practically all of our new and enlarged camps. Whether the purpose is to stir up resentment among families of soldiers, or to create fear for the strength of our army, we don't know, but investigation shows that men in army camps are, in most cases, in much more healthful surroundings than they are at home.

Whispering campaigns can spread false rumors like wild-fire. And there is little doubt that a lot of these army camp stories are planned and paid for by enemies within our gates.

Recent investigation in one camp, where it was reported that the army hospital was overflowing with pneumonia cases and that there had been a large number of pneumonia deaths and that conditions were deplorable, showed these facts: out of several thousand soldiers, two were in the hospital with pneumonia and were well on the way to recovery; there had been no pneumonia deaths; out of a normal expectation, based on civilian averages, of five per cent on the sick list, less than two per cent were sick; most of the soldiers in camp stated that they were healthier than before they came to camp.

Another interesting finding was that a large portion of the soldiers who were in the hospital just had simple colds or other slight ailments, which in civilian life wouldn't have kept them from going to work. But the army doesn't take chances. Any sign of sickness means a visit to the doctor, and when he recommends a day of rest it means a day in the hospital. So a large proportion of hospitalized soldiers are the ones who, in business life, would be going to work with the "sniffles."

Movie Polls

Each year the big-time metropolitan movie critics get together to pick the best ten pictures of the year.

After the last poll of critics, Dr. George Gallup of the Institute of Public Opinion made a poll of moviegoers and found the public's First Ten choice included only one picture that was in the critics' First Ten.

It would be interesting if the movie houses in all communities would take an annual poll of their audiences to determine which picture was liked best by the people in their town. Those opinions could then be gathered together by some national group and the best pictures chosen by combined popular opinion.

If the moving picture industry had such a nation-wide poll to judge by, it would be in a better position to determine what kind of pictures they want in the future. Now they are apt to judge by the critics' opinion rather than by the opinion of the people for whom movies are made.

Movies are the leading form of entertainment in this country, getting about one-third of all the money which Americans spend for entertainment. Since they are such an important part of most people's leisure life, we should be given an opportunity to have our say about the types of pictures which have the greatest appeal to us.

"CHICKENS CAUSE YOU TO PAY INCOME," SAYS MILLARD PHILLIPS

Recently, while discussing the chicken business, Millard Phillips, who lives about four miles north and one and one half mile east of Littlefield, said, "the only thing wrong is that it will cause me to have to pay an income tax."

Mr. Phillips has 1,100 hens on his place. Among these he has 900 of a special strain that he has 10 cases weekly of their eggs contracted for 40 cents per dozen, the year 'round for hatching purposes. Two hundred of these hens cost him $270 when they were baby chicks, only a few days old, or -1.35 for each chick. Over a year's time the special strain hens will produce 270,000 eggs or 22,250 dozen eggs. From the contracted eggs, he is due to receive $6,240 for 15,600 dozen eggs for a 12-month period. He is feeding sack feed which under a rough estimate will cost him between $1,800 and $2,000.

He and his son are paid by the hens to put in 365 days a year with no time lost on wage and hour, jurisdictional disputes, idleness while waiting for material from a strike infested plant, and so on, ad infinitum. In addition to revenue above feed costs, other egg revenue adds to the $4,240 that goes to pay Mr. Phillips for time he and his son put in. We wonder how many 160-acre farms in cotton, corn or wheat have netted that much in the last ten years.

When Mr. Phillip was asked why he paid $1.35 each for the baby chicks, his reply was that he wanted chickens that would keep him, instead of him keeping the chicks. Or, he puts it this way: In the last 12 months eggs have averaged 15 cents per dozen. The average hen does well to lay 150 eggs a year. From this hen he paid $1.35 for as a baby chick, he gets 300 eggs in a year, or 150, or 12 and one-half dozen more eggs per year. This additional 12 and one-half dozen eggs at 15 cents per dozen amounts to $1.87 1/2, or the first year of production, her extra, or bonus eggs, bring 52 cents above what she cost as a chick, besides producing the average annual egg production.

Seventh Grade Clears $35.00 From Operetta

The annual seventh grade operetta, which was presented by members of the seventh grade Thursday night at the high school auditorium, was an outstanding success.

Approximately 60 students took part in the operetta, "White Gypsy," which was directed by Miss Laura Virginia Bills, seventh grade sponsor, and assisted by Misses El-larene Vause, Martella Graves and Allyne Lynch.

As reported by Miss Bills, a total of between $55 and $60 was taken in from tickets, from which $35 is clear, which will be used toward graduation expenses for the seventh grade.

A Break in the Gloom

THE SNOOPER ... SAYS ...

After seeing that new rotary water pump in operation last week end, we realize that the world is indeed going "round and round." But the world has been going that way for a long, long time.

Leonard McCormick, who is associated in the new enterprise, may have found something that Dr. Holden at Texas Tech might be interested in. When he and C. A. Baucom, who invented the new rotary pump were digging the well for the experiment, they dug up several bones that were different from an ordinary human's bones, or those of an ordinary animal.

Paging Mr. A. G. Jungman of Pep—For our personal information, we would like to know if Mr. Jungman ever goes hunting for big game.

He has mounted many animals killed by hunters in this section, brought from various parts of the United States, and recently his picture appeared in the Lubbock paper, with E. K. Hufstader Sr., and E. K. Jr., Lubbock implement dealers, with trophies that were mounted. Mr. Hufstader and his son went to Colorado on an elk hunt last fall, and brought one of the finest trophies out of that state, that had been brought in years.

Besides mounting animals Mr. Jungman is one of the best farmers in that territory, and is a public-spirited person that is a credit to any community.

Mrs. Hilda Hancock, Indian Missionary of Oklahoma, who was honor guest recently at the local First Baptist Church, is a Cherokee Indian. She came to this section to attend open house at Woyland College at Plainview, and was kind enough to accept an invitation to attend open house at Woyland people's organization.

She came dressed in her native garb, including Elk's skin dress and beaded moccasins. A special feature of her dress was a long strand of Indian beads carved of human bone, which had taken her seven years to find and secure.

Mrs. Hancock said that there were only two of these strings of beads left in the United States, and guarded by the Indians like a white person guards jewels.

Here is a statement that would be hard to contradict. Robert A. Millikan says that the filling station men have improved the manners and courtesy of the American public more than all the colleges and universities in the country.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Glasscock and Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Davis of Muleshoe recently made a trip to Mexico City, D. F.

Mr. and Mrs. Glasscock are the parents of Miss Jumo Glasscock who is a teacher in the local school.

Four Sudan women have entered paintings in the ninth annual South Plains painters exhibition which opened last week in the West Texas Museum, Lubbock, under auspices of the Art Institution.

The painters and their entries are Mrs. Cecile Foster, "Creek and Canyon Park" and "Ranchos de Taos Church", both oil paintings; Hazel Wiseman, "Bottles and Turnips" and "Mora Valley", oil paintings; Mrs. Ray McCrory, "Halsell Ranch" and "Landscape", pen sketches; and Mrs. Hugh Johnson, "Landscape", oil painting.

The paintings are to remain on exhibit at the museum until April 29.

And—Littlefield will have an Art Exhibit Saturday, in connection with the County Federation of Women's Club meeting, which is to be held at the First Methodist Church.

Lamb County boasts of many painters, who have found beauty on these Great Plains, and have been able to put these beauties on easels.

After reading "Boot Wearing Regulations" in the Hereford Brand last week, I've been trying to figure out where the Drug Store Cowboys Come in—'cause there's a lot of men in this used-to-be cattle country who enjoy wearing boots, but never thought of owning at least two head of cattle.

My definition of a drug store cowboy is a man who never owned a couple of lop-eared cows, but who wears boots because they are more comfortable than shoes—it is easier to tramp around in the mud, snow, or sand in boots, and because boots usually make a lot of noise while walking down the street.

I forgot to ask Bennett Pezia, laboratory technician at the Payne-Shotwell hospital, if he took his boots with him when he left last week for a visit home—up Minneapolis way—But the last time he went home he wore his new boots, and after only a few minutes on the street in the "big city" he was "stared at" so much, that he went down alleys the remainder of the time he was there.

Back to the "Boot Wearing Regulations"—Our boss says he is a long way from wearing spurs!

The regulations are:
The regulations are:
1. Owner of at least two head of cattle—entitled to wear boots.
2. Owner of three head—can stuff the right pants leg in.
3. Owner of four head—can stuff both pants legs in.
4. Owner of six head—can wear spurs.

But this is another one of those places where I came in—for "wham"! I knew one of Mr. Drake's boots would come my way before this story ended!

These Three Loves

by Louis Arthur Cunningham

CHAPTER IV

Synopsis

Lovely, red-headed Gillian Meade lives with her uncle, Colonel Anson Meade, at Rydal House in northern Canada. Realizing that family fortunes are disappearing, Gillian makes up her mind to marry wealthy Jonathan Hillyer, who saves the old house, as well as provide for her seventeen-year-old sister, Deborah. She meets Simon Killigrew, best friend of Jaffry Fry, to whom Gillian was once engaged. Simon blames her for Jaffry's death. Driving with Jon on a weekend party at his house, she tells Gillian that Simon is looking for financing to publish Jaffry's poetry, and asks her advice. She urges him to advance the money.

Gillian colored. "You spoil me. If so, my darling, I shall continue the process as long as I live, since it makes you bluish so prettily."

"I didn't know I could blush—more. You're making me find out of the things I thought I'd do for good."

"I want to make you love me, Gillian." His lips touched her hair, and he softly into her ear.

"Not now, Jon. Please not tonight—you will tell me tonight. We had better go down."

"But there is a chance for me?"

"Yes—oh, yes—there is a chance."

She saw him when she and Jonathan were halfway down the shore. He was standing by the stone fireplace and he was looking at the flames that leaped and seethed, chasing each other up the blackened chimney with a rush and roar.

She saw him in profile, cut, rugged, high-browed with a seaman's look about him, an intense look as if his thoughts were fit and vital. And as she watched he turned from gazing at the flames and looked directly up at her. Their eyes met with a devastating impact. She felt something like panic. I'll face him, thought angrily. I'll not give and to him, not an inch.

She tore her eyes from his. She was something to Jon. Then she came among the guests, going from group to group with Jon. Four couples had arrived. There were some she did not know. The introductions took time. When, at last, it came Simon Killigrew's turn, she gave him look for look. It was all right now.

"You've met Gillian Meade," Jon said in a statement of it. "You were passing on her preserves, she believes me, I didn't know." He looked at Jon, not at her.

"Well, no matter, Killigrew. I have forgiven you. I asked her about your proposition—left it up to her, in fact. And I'm in the fishing business. You come to me next Wednesday in Monday and we can work out the details."

Slowly, Simon looked from Jonathan. She saw the color ebb from beneath his tan, saw his lips move. He said, "Thank you, Mr. Hillyer. I—I'd like to see Jaffry's works published—under any terms. Miss Meade has been more than kind."

She did not again look at Simon Killigrew and presently she and Jon walked away. There were cocktails then and there was dancing and then dinner. Simon had pointedly avoided her. At dinner he sat far down the table on the same side and she could not see those angry eyes of his. She on her without too much condemnation.

"I was dreaming. I'm sorry, Jon."

"I hope they were pleasant dreams—of what will be."

She did not answer. Presently they left the table. She saw Simon Killigrew go off with Jon and some of the other men to the stables.

Gillian wandered off alone, down a winding path among the pines and tall white spruce by the lake laughed and talked with a forced gaiety. Try as she would she could not forget his presence.

Jane Craddock, who sat next to Simon, and some of the others, were talking about books. Simon spoke of those he had published and those he hoped to publish.

Someone unthinkingly spoke of poetry and Jane Craddock said, "People don't read poetry these days."

The others listened then. "It depends," said Simon. "If the poetry is good and yet can strike a modern note, the public will like it. We had such a poet in Jaffry Clay, but it seems that the good die young."

There was silence then. Eyes were bent to the table or cast sky looks at Gillian. She gave no sign that she had heard. Someone bridged the gap by beginning to talk about dogs and things again flowed smoothly. Still, for Gillian, the dinner seemed to drag along interminably.

There was hopelessness in her heart, hopelessness at the thought of ever winning Simon Killigrew's regard. He was cruel, as only the young and strong can be cruel. There would be no forgiving, no relenting.

"Why so quiet, Gillian?" Jon's hand touched hers. They were at the coffee now. She would be glad when this meal was ended. She wanted to wander out under the stars alone. She wanted to be with herself in all the world, save Anse, the only one who could look at her without too much condemnation.

The path led down to a little jetty where Jon kept a speedboat and some canoes. She walked out to the end of it and sat down on a bollard. Tonight, she thought, will be a night of destiny. Tonight will shape my life. After tonight I'll be where Simon and all the other Simons cannot reach me.

She heard a step on the dry planks of the jetty. She turned her head and saw a tall figure walking slowly towards her. He hesitated when he was close enough to see her sitting there, then came and stood on the cap of the wharf beside her.

"I was looking for you," he said. "I suppose it is in order to thank you for putting in a good word with Jonathan Hillyer. So I thank you."

"You don't really thank me?"

After a brief look at him, at his dark face in the moonlight, she gazed off over the water at the deep mystery of the forest.

"My instinct was to refuse. I hated to think that you should have anything to do with—even the poor things Jaffry left. How can you bear even the mention of his name, without thinking that you might have stretched out a hand to help him, and did not. How can you—?"

"I can't—that's the answer!" She stood up, facing him, her head thrown back, her arms straight at her sides. "I can't hear his name without suffering a private hell of my own. So I won't hear it, not from you, not from anyone. He's dead now. Sometimes I think he's better off than I am. At least, he has some rest, some peace. I know you hate me for what you think I did to him. Who are you to condemn me? I want you to know it doesn't matter to me."

"It wouldn't. I didn't expect it to. You are the glamorous Gillian Meade. Men break their necks and their hearts—running after you."

The great Jonathan Hillyer loves you, gazes on you with adoring eyes. You'll be his darling. Perhaps when you're in his arms he will change to someone else—perhaps to a boy who was fool enough to think he loved you."

She could listen to no more. She brushed past him, ran blindly, stumblingly, up the jetty and thru the silver and shadow of the woods. She heard Jon's voice calling, "Gillian! Where are you, Gillian?"

She did not answer. She would not have Jon see her like this, panting, breathless, as if she had been pursued by fiends. She covered in the shadow of a pine trunk and stayed there, quiet as the night, until Jon's voice receded.

She walked slowly back to the lodge. She was all right now. Almost, she could laugh at Simon's verbal flagellations.

"Hello, Jon," she called gayly when she saw him coming down from the veranda.

"And where were you? I hunted everywhere."

"Oh, I was a little girl lost in the woods and the cruel, wicked giant found me—or maybe it was the wolf—anyway he tried to gobble me up. So I ran and ran and when I heard you I was so out of breath that I could not answer."

Jon laughed. He drew her arm through his. "Come on, Gillian, let's get closer to that moon."

"Let's go all the way to the moon," she amended. "And stay there."

They strolled down towards the lake by another path.

The moonlight was still lovely on Lac St-Cloud. A road of shimmering silver stretched across the water and her feet were on the very edge of that road's beginning. Yet she might never walk on it. The night wind had come, sighing in the pines; poplar leaves rustled their eternal rustling—little, whispering lonesome voices. She shivered. Jon bent to her soiling.

"I should have brought a wrap for you, Gillian. Shall we go back and get one?"

"Please, no. I'm not cold."

"But I fancied you were shivering. She laughed. "Maybe because I was thinking of the poplar leaves, how they always shake and shiver, even when there is no breath of wind."

"I don't believe it!" Jon was ever practical. "But it's a pretty fancy all right. I often marvel at chaps who can think up such things. To me, it's only a tree shaking its leaves in the wind. The only time I feel the urge to utter beauty is when I look at you, Gillian, and then I'm tongue-tied. Even as now—"

"You don't need to talk, Jon."

These things speak with more sincere voices than the sayers of golden things. Sometimes a girl gets tired of words, you know. Oh, they do things to you—those lovely, singing things that some men can say; they touch something in you. But it's witchery, it's an illusion, it can do you harm."

"There's a bench over there, Gillian," he said. "Let's sit. I do truly find it hard to talk, now that the hour has come." They went over to the wrought-iron bench and sat down. He was silent for a while, as if looking for words with which to begin. She felt no stirring in her heart, no nervousness, no treacherous bewilderment. That was as it should be.

"I love you, Gillian," Jon said, his voice husky. "I love you, my dear. You are so lovely, Gillian. I don't ask you if you love me. What I ask is the right to love you, to keep you from that dark shadow I've sometimes seen upon your face. As if wings were passing overhead, shutting off the light from you. I never want to see that again."

"You will always see it." He stared at her, startled. "What do you mean? Tell me, Gillian. You must tell me!"

She shook her head. "I dare not. You are strong and I can use your strength. You are kind and I can do with kindness. I'll go to you, Jon, if you want me. And I'll try to be all that you want me to be."

"I want you to be just Gillian—just as you are now." He took her hand and carried it to his lips. He kissed it and pressed it against his cheek. For a moment she clung to him, trembling. She felt no joy, no triumph in this moment.

"Make a new life, a new world for me, Jon," she whispered. "Make me another Gillian. You can do that."

"But can I, darling? I would so gladly. I can make another material world for you. I could build you a city. And yes—yes," his voice was eager—"perhaps with my love I can make you another Gillian. I don't know what bothers you, but I think I can guess, at least in part."

I can never get away from the memory of it, Gillian thought. I was wrong to think that I could. She said, "Yes, yes, that is what I want."

He held her closely, strongly. He was afraid for her, and he soothed her with a thousand promises.

Retiring Worthy Matron O.E.S. Honored Tuesday

In compliment to Mrs. O. P. Wilmon, retiring worthy matron of the Littlefield Eastern Star chapter, the officers entertained with a party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Boone Tuesday evening at 7:30.

The receiving rooms were beautifully decorated with cut flowers and suspended from the ceiling were stars in the emblematic colors forming an improvised constellation.

The receiving line was composed of Mesdames Boone, Wilmon, and J. D. Dodgen. Mrs. W. J. Aldridge directed the guests to the register which was presided over by Mrs. J. H. Barnett, and in turn escorted to the dining room by Mrs. T. A. Henson.

From the dining table, laid with a linen cutwork tea cloth and carrying out a gold and white color scheme, punch was served with Mrs. Quinton Bellomy presiding. Assisting in the dining room were Mesdames Pryor Hammons, J. A. Price, V. Roberts, L. R. Sewell, Wm. Rumback, Max D. Woods and V. S. Cassell.

Programs carrying out the color motif were passed announcing a welcome song which was rendered by Mesdames J. G. Singer and J.

Storey at the piano.

Mrs. Aldridge, associate matron, presided over the program and roll call of officers was answered by a wish to the honor guest. "Oh, Look Who's Here," a musical sketch, was given by Mrs. Boone, which was followed by a pageant which portrayed the 20th century prelude to music with participants dressed appropriate to the date they represented. They were: Mesdames: J. W. Hopping, V. Roberts, Sid Hopping, J. A. Price, L. R. Sewell, W. M. Rumback, and J. D. Dodgen. Mrs. Max D. Woods gave the reading part.

Past worthy matrons were introduced and the outstanding accomplishment during their year was read.

The honoree was presented with a beautiful gift from the officers of the chapter as an expression of appreciation for her service to the chapter during the past year. The presentation was made by Mrs. Aldridge, assisted by the star points of the chapter. Mrs. Wilmon graciously acknowledged the gift. The closing number was a song, "When You Come to the End of a Perfect Year," sung by the assembly.

Miss Dora Geistman And Ronald L. Schlottman Are Wed Here Monday Morning

In a beautiful and impressive ceremony read Monday morning at 8 o'clock at the Sacred Heart church, Miss Dora Geistman became the bride of Ronald L. Schlottman. The Rev. Father Peter Morsch officiated with the single ring ceremony, as the couple stood before the altar, which was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies. As the couple entered the church, Miss Helen Zoth played the "Harp" march, and during the ceremony she sang "Veni, Jesu," and "Bright Queen of Heaven," accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Winnie Zoth.

The bride wore a lovely dusty rose costume suit with black accessories. Her only attendant was Miss Anna Jo Servatius of Anton.

Roy Lee Dolle attended the groom.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Geistman of near Littlefield. She was graduated from the local high school in 1938, attended a business college in Lubbock, and for the past year has been employed in the county agent's office at Amherst.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Schlottman of Rosebud, Texas. He has made his home in Littlefield the past several years and is employed at Eddins Food Store.

At high noon dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents. The three-tiered wedding cake was the centerpiece for the beautifully decorated table.

Those attending were Rev. Father Morsch, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Foltyn and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Macha and family, Mr. and Mrs. Edie Schlottman and children, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Jilek, and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dolle, and sons, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Schlottman, and sons, Henry and Andrew, Mrs. Ben Dolle, and son, Roy Lee, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. 'Protective Custody' for Axis Ships

When the U. S. seized Italian, German and Danish ships in American ports for "protective custody" to prevent sabotage, the axis powers soon protested the action to the state department. A typical scene as the U. S. stepped in is the above in which Italian seamen cheer an Italian flag surrounded by U. S. marines shortly after their ship was seized.

U. S. 'Changes the Guard'—On Axis Ships

With the report that Germany has sent the U. S. a new and stronger note re-enforcing its protests over the seizure of axis ships and crews, that incident took on a more serious aspect. Here the U. S. guard is changed on one of the seized vessels—the Italian luxury liner, Conte Biancamano—at Cristobal, Canal Zone. This is the largest ship seized by the U. S.

Edgar Walters Now Aviation Instructor

A few of us have ambitions and dreams that we accomplish—many of us have ambitions and dreams. Truly, Edgar Walters' dreams that he has had since he was a small child have come true, for he was last week appointed student instructor at the Hicks Aviation School in Fort Worth.

Edgar received his pilot's license about three years ago, and several weeks ago he received an instructor's rating, making him eligible for the position he now has.

All his life he wanted to be an aviator. While other boys were playing with marbles and tops, he was flying in his mind, like a bird in the air. He finished Littlefield high school and took a business course in Lubbock. Then he worked in the First National Bank here, before he was employed as substitute clerk in the post office. Three years ago he went to work as full-time clerk, and he began studying more about aviation.

After he secured his pilot's license, he became a member of the Aero club in Lubbock, and purchased a small interest in a cub plane.

Flying has been a hobby with Edgar. Now it will pay him dividends.

Postmaster W. D. T. Storey reported that there would be no extra clerk at the post office for a while. Walters was granted a six months leave of absence by the Postmaster-General, and he will probably be granted another six months leave of absence from the local post office.

share the view of the overwhelming majority of the Members of this Congress when I say that I want this money spent right and without waste or graft, and spent promptly for the defense of this country.

"I believe the American people are tired of having their pleas for action in regard to the slowup of the national defense answered with the statement that the situation is being investigated. The patience of the people is about exhausted. What the people of this Nation want is action—and action now (Applause.)"

"I say that this hold-up of our national defense is nothing short of an outrage against the public welfare of our Nation. I hope the Mediation Board will act, and I hope the President will act and act with increasing firmness and promptitude. As for myself, I am ready for the Congress to supplement investigation with action—and action now—for the defense of our country.

"In my opinion, the overwhelming majority of the laboring people, in both the organized and unorganized groups, share the views which I have expressed." (Applause.)

200 Persons Attend CCC Open House

Approximately 200 persons attended annual open house at the local CCC camp Sunday, April 6, M. L. Moore, commander in charge reported.

Most of the enrollee's parents visited the camp on that day, and all of them returned to their homes feeling that their sons were receiving valuable training.

The enrollees escorted the visitors through the camp. About 25 business and professional people enjoyed having lunch with the commanders, and members of the soil conservation service technical staff.

Mahon Urges Defense Action

Participating in a debate in the House of Representatives at Washington Thursday, April 3, relative to an appropriation of $4,000,000 additional for National Defense, Congressman George Mahon said:

Mr. Speaker, this conference report provides for more than $4,000,000,000 additional for national defense. I think the appropriation is in the public interest and I am for it, and I am for such taxes as may be necessary to raise all or part of the sum. However, I

Vegetable Laxative Makes Happy Friends

Here's a laxative that usually acts thoroughly as harsher ones but is a gentle persuader for intestines when used this way: A quarter to a half-teaspoonful of spicy, aromatic BLACK-DRAUGHT on your tongue tonight; a drink of water. There's usually time for a good night's rest, with a gentle, thorough action next morning relieving constipation's headaches, biliousness, sour stomach, bad breath.

BLACK-DRAUGHT is a splendid combination of vegetable ingredients, chief of which is an "intestinal tonic-laxative" that helps impart tone to lazy bowel muscles. It's economical. 25 to 40 doses: 25c.

Why does a Golf Ball bounce?

EVER notice that a golf ball, when you drop it, bounces higher than something hollow, like a tennis ball? That's partly because of internal pressures, which also have so much to do with Buick's extra FIREBALL power.

Rubber threads inside a golf ball are packed tight, highly compressed. When flattened against a hard object, like a sidewalk, they come back harder, with more push, and so the ball bounces higher.

A similar thing happens inside a Buick FIREBALL straight-eight cylinder. Fuel compression pressures are higher here than in any other standard-production automobile engine.

So when the spark jumps in the tightly-packed, fuel-fat ball of gas-mixture at the top of the stroke—the Buick piston goes rushing down with more push, more shove, more power than the same amount of fuel gives up elsewhere.

Result: every Buick engine travels farther per gallon this year than the same-size engines did last year, while Compound Carburetion* with Buick FIREBALL design gives as much as 10% to 15% more miles per gallon.

In fact, if you're buying any car this year, it's pretty important to see and drive a Buick before you're through; it's Number One in smart engineering as well as Number One in solid, rock-bottom, all-round VALUE!

DEMONSTRATION OF CHAMBERS RANGE AT JONES HARDWARE ON APRIL 21, 22, 23

Jones Hardware announced Wednesday that they are now handling and have in stock and on display the Chambers ranges, which are outstanding in the cooking field.

A special feature of this range, states Mrs. Otto Jones, who assists her husband in the operation of Jones Hardware, which concern handles stoves, chinaware, cutlery, and all accessories for the home, that "you can start a complete meal of meat, vegetables, and dessert before you leave for work in the morning, turn off the gas completely, and be free to leave the house. Dinner finishes cooking on retained heat. You go home at meal time and serve a delicious hot dinner direct from the Chambers range to the table with no waiting."

This stove can be used for either Butane gas or natural gas. In order to introduce this range to the public, and show the housewives what this range will do, a special demonstrator will be at Jones Hardware Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, Mr. Curtis Claiborne, who will cook a ham and otherwise demonstrate the use of this wonder range.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones invite all their friends to attend this special demonstration on either one of these days.

That Cooks with the Gas turned OFF.

Eliminate that drudgery of pot-watching 3 times a day, 365 days every year. In a Chambers Range, you can start a complete meal of meat, vegetables and dessert early in the day, with only 20 to 30 minutes of gas, turn off the gas completely, and be free to leave the house. Dinner finishes cooking on retained heat and does so in the usual length of time. But it need not be removed when done, as nothing can burn or scorch. Hours later you can serve a delicious dinner direct from Chambers Range to table. Littlefield Teachers Are Re-elected

All of the teachers of the Littlefield schools who desired their positions for another year, were re-elected by the local school board at a regular meeting Monday night.

C. C. Flesher, who has been principal of the high school the past two years, asked the school board not to consider his re-election for another term. He has not announced his plans.

At the board meeting, Supt. F. A. Hemphill gave a report of the meeting held at Temple last Thursday, on the progress of the 12-year program, which will probably be adopted by the local school next year, as well as other schools in the state.

Teachers who were re-elected were: high school—Bill Cone, Miss Ernestine Cundiff, Miss Anna Mae Flesher, L. A. Cooper, T. C. Holden, Miss Gladys Jones, Morgan Layfield, Abe Murphy, Miss Daphene Wren, and Miss Eloise Hanes, C. L. Storrs was elected assistant athletic coach by the board several weeks ago.

Lindley, Miss Alleane Lynch, A. A. Mitchell, John L. Sims, Miss Marion Short, Miss Lois Riggins, Miss Ellarene Vause, and Miss Sybil Wiginton.

Primary teachers are; Miss Mary Ruth Boles, Miss Thelma Davidson, Miss Juno Glascock, Miss Ruth Jordan, Miss Kate, Gordon, Miss Virginia Nell Kirk, Miss Johnnie Pace, Miss Olene Robbins, Miss Wilma S. Gee, Miss Margaret Teel, and Miss Myrtle Woodfin.

J. C. Cogger and Miss Thresa Graves are teachers in the colored school.

Teachers who have been substituting in the school the past several months, and who did not make application for another year are: Mrs. Earl Hobbs, Mrs. J. D. Dodgen, and Mrs. C. C. Flesher.

Mrs. Jack Harvey, the former Miss Charley Davis, tendered her resignation in February, but is continuing to teach until school is out.

The school board will consider a small addition to one of the school buildings, after the 1941 scholastic census total is reported, it was said.

Last Rites Monday For Mrs. Cawthon

Mrs. L. C. Cawthon, 54, passed away suddenly at 11:45 Saturday night, March 12, at a local hospital where she was taken in a critical condition a few hours earlier.

She had been in bad health for the past three years, and had been suffering from diabetes and high blood pressure, resulting in a heart ailment, which caused her death. She had been ill since Thursday, and was taken to the Littlefield hospital Saturday about 2 p. m.

Mrs. Cawthon was born in McMinnville, Tenn., and with her parents came to Texas in 1896, settling at Moody, McClelland county, where she lived until as Miss Lena Miller she was married to L. C. Moving to the Plains, they arrived in Littlefield on July 25, 1925, where they have since continued to make their home.

To the above union were born two children, a daughter, Ersey Lodena and a son, Lantis Eugene, both of whom are at home here.

Mrs. Cawthon was a good Christian woman, whose beautiful character and personality won for her friends with all whom she came in contact with.

She was a member of the Church of Christ, having joined the church about seven years ago.

Funeral services were conducted at the Church of Christ, LFD Drive, at 10 o'clock Monday morning, with Brother Harold Collard, pastor officiating. Interment, in charge of Hammons Funeral Home, took place in the Littlefield cemetery.

Pallbearers were A. A. Webb, Ben Lyman, J. M. Stokes, G. R. Sandidge, Enloe Smith and Joe Wells.

Travel Bureau Established Here

Littlefield's newest business enterprise, the AAA Travel Bureau, was established this week with offices located at the Pass Cotton Office, at the corner of Main Street and Highway 7.

Operated by L. D. Keithley, of Sudan, the travel bureau adheres to the "share expense" plan for guest passengers and private car owners.

Travel bureaus have been successful in other towns and sections of the United States, and this is the first bureau Littlefield has had in several years.

Mr. Keithley has been associated with his father, S. L. Keithley, in the insurance business at Sudan the past several years. Assisting him in the operation of the travel bureau, only for the first few days, is his brother, who has been operating travel bureaus in Los Angeles, Calif., for several years.

EMMANUEL LUTHERAN CHURCH

(E. H. Riese, Pastor)

Sunday school and Bible classes meet at 10:30 a. m. next Sunday. Service at 11 a. m.
On Sunday afternoon at 2:30, a Gulbransen Magnatone organ will be demonstrated in our church by the Tolzien Music Store of Amarillo. A collection will be lifted at that time, which will go to the organ fund.
The young people will meet at 8 p. m. Sunday night.
Sunday school teachers will meet on Tuesday, April 22, at 8 p. m.
The pastor intends to return from the conference near Houston on Saturday of this week.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

Roy Shahan, Pastor

The pastor is back and will speak at both services Sunday. We enjoyed one of the best meetings it was ever our privilege to be in. Though this was a great meeting and we enjoyed meeting old friends and making new ones, we are really glad to be back at home and with our own people.
The text for the morning message will be, "For I Am Not Ashamed of the Gospel of Christ; For it is The Power of God Unto Salvation to Every One That Believeth." Rom. 1:16.
The evening message subject is, "Those Who Will One Day Wish They Had Never Been Born." Matt. 26:24.
We will be looking for a good attendance at all the services and hope to see each of you in your place.

AMHERST METHODIST CHURCH

We again remind you of the District Conference at Matador Texas April 28, 2:30 p. m. to Tuesday 29, afternoon. The following from this church are members, general Church school Superintendent, District Steward, charge lay leader, president W S C S, president young people's department, and chairman of the board of missions, and according to the Standing Rule No. 1 of the Northwest Texas Conference we shall have three delegates.

Our Easter service was well attended last Sunday and we had a good service with a good number of visitors with us.
Some one has said that "Today's best is not good enough for tomorrow". What rapid growth this sort of an ideal would bring about in us were this the ideal of our life and we carried it out as punctually as we do eating three or more squares per diem.
It is growing life that keeps vigorous. Old age cannot be avoided al together but its horrors reduced by certain physical and mental observations, and these are aided by a high type of spiritual observations.

The greatest decay tho with amny today is a spiritual decay. Many are spiritual dwarfs because of lack of the daily spiritual dozen. The war, finances, and a lot of other obligations will be here always but many feel that they are more pressing than our spiritual obligations and relations.
Meet your duty each Sunday by attending public worship some where and rest from the grip of our world's cares and routine of labors.

Car Accident Fatal To E. Inklebarger Near Socorro, N. M.

Ernest Inklebarger, 22, met almost instant death about 1 a. m. Sunday in an automobile accident near Socorro, N. M., which is located about 100 miles south of Albuquerque, N. M.

A companion, Jack Jones, about 20, and a former resident of Littlefield, was also seriously injured.

The new 1941 light car, occupied by Inklebarger and Jones, was reported in collision with another car, and the suction by the wind on the mountain road, is believed to have contributed to the accident, the car leaving the road and dashing into a ravine. The young man died 20 minutes after the accident, en route to a hospital. The automobile was a complete wreck.

A telegram was received early Sunday by the young man's father, J. M. Inklebarger, who lives 2 and one-half miles east of town. Mr. Inklebarger left immediately to accompany the remains back to Littlefield.

The body arrived here by train Monday afternoon, and funeral services were held at the Methodist Church Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock, by Rev. J. H. Sharp, Pastor. Interment was in the Littlefield cemetery, under the direction of Hammons Funeral Home.

Ernest had been working on a ranch near Socorro, N. M., with his friend, Jack Jones, and they had returned to the Jones' home for the Easter holidays. Ernest had planned to come to Littlefield Sunday for a visit with his father.

He was born May 9, 1918 in Wilbarger county. He moved here with his family in 1929, where he attended school, and was popular

*Congratulations, Jim, and best wishes -
Hope you build the church and fill it up with good God fearing folks -
Yours friend
George Mahon.*

*Jim Mr. Mahon credit for the better donation - she located

Hats Off to Jim Sharp!

Congressman George Mahon, and Mrs. Mahon read the Lamb County Leader as an important part of their program of keeping in touch with people and events in this section.

Two weeks ago the Lamb County Leader published a picture showing Rev. Jim Sharp, pastor of the Methodist church, laying brick in the erection of the new auditorium. With the picture was also published an article telling of the efforts of brother Jim to raise funds for the building project.

with the younger set both here and Socorro, and had many friends who mourn his untimely death.

His mother and a sister preceded Ernest in death.

Survivors include his father, a brother, A. C. Inklebarger, and four sisters, Mrs. Irene Sanderson, Mrs. Louise Merrifield, Oneta and Marjean Inklebarger, all of Littlefield, and several aunts and uncles.

Mrs. Mahon noticed the picture and article, in reading the Leader in Washington and asked Mr. Mahon to send contribution to the building fund. A few days later the Methodist preacher received a letter enclosing a personal message from the congressman and a check.

Above is reproduced the note from the congressman, also the caption used over the picture of Mr. Sharp.

Brother Jim and the congressman have been personal friends for many years. They first met at a Methodist conference in Sweetwater in 1929, at which Congressman Mahon was a delegate. Their friendship has continued down through the years. They have met at Methodist gatherings on numerous occasions.

"George can preach as effectively as he can make public address on political issues or government affairs," commented Mr. Sharp. "I will always be glad to have him occupy the pulpit of any church of which I may be the pastor".
