By Phebe K. Warner

It has been a long, long time since the Stone Age of Man. Historians tell us perhaps 12,000 years. But what of it? Who knows where TIME came from or whither it is going. Who knows when it began or when it is to end. Time to us is the most mysterious of all creations. It is the gift of our span of life. That's all we know about it. To many it is only a few hours. To a very few it has been a hundred years.

But one thing we all know, and that is Man is born with a creative, constructive instinct. The constructive instinct in Man is eternal as the stars in the heaven. If it had not been, where would this world be today? We would still be back in the Stone Age. Would we? Or how could man even have reached the Stone Age with out the instinct to build something.

Think of that period if you can that day and then look around you. See your comfortable home. See your well clothed family. See your highthey glide by. Touch a little button and flood your home with light. Ring a little bell and speak with your neigh bor five hundred miles away. Turn a little screw and listen to the music across the continent. Look up and behold men like birds sailing the skies. This is what we call EVOLU-TION. And what is it? It is simply the development of the creative instinct in Man for a period of some 12,000 years more or less. Why worry over the span of time. Look at the results and then look not back but into the future. It is the projected life that has brought about all C. D. Smith, one of the oldest gar- these changes. J. Floyd Clouse, field man for the Federal Reserve Bank at Dallas, recently made a tour of the western counties of this state, checking up the files of his financial institution and he unhesitatingly made the statement, that "counties with agents aras a rule, better financial risks than those non-progressive enough to employ an agricultural demonstrator."

Mr. Clouse further explained his statement by saying that counties with agents were invariably ahead of others in diversification of crops, in poultry dairy, cows, hogs, better grade of cattle and garden stuff put up at home, consequently were in a more prosperous condition, their bank torture, handicapped, yet compeled to loans were paid more promptly and we fend their lives as best they could their paper more readily accepted by they might have more sympathy for his institution. He stated that one of the first questions he asked when he came into a county is "whether or some Littlefield citizens is not yet ennot a county agent is employed."
