PLAN OF U. S. FATHERS CONFRONTS US ANEW

While the specialists down at Washington grope about among the wreckage of the NRA to see if any of the pieces can be patched up and used again, the rest of us might properly take time out to meditate over the underlying issue which the U. S. Supreme Court's decision brings into prominence.

Since then the whole structure of society has changed. In place of a predominantly agricultural nation, in which each community was largely self-sufficient, we got a tremendously complex industrial nation with commercial and financial ties that made every section dependent on all the others.

TEXAS TOPICS
By Raymond Brooks

First shift from speculation to production tends to cast the chief political roles for Texas in 1936. The whole line of candidates for governor, United States senator, attorney general and lieutenant governor has hinged upon Gov. James V. Allred's choice between a second term and a "now or never" race for the United States senate.

Here are some of the consequences: Chmn. Ernest O. Thompson of the railroad commission, one of the foremost fighters for states' rights; Atty. Gen. William McCraw and Speaker Coke Stevenson would have been out in front in the race for governor, and Lieut. Gov. Walter F. Woodul a likely fourth. But with Allred seeking re-election, McCraw and Thompson are out of it, according to opinion, and the prospect is less for both Woodul and Stevenson to contest for the office. This writer does not believe either will run against him. These views do not purport to quote personal commitment of any one of the four men. Sen. John S. Redditt and several others would have been in the race for attorney general. Rep. H. L. McKee and many others would have run for the railroad commission. A swarm of house and senate members would have run for lieutenant governor. All these would have brought in new people into the legislative races. As it is, McCraw and Thompson, according to this set-up, will seek re-election. Lieut. Gov. Woodul will either run for re-election or follow his wish to retire at this time from political affairs. Most of the senate and house members will hold on or seek re-election. This week, just 15 months from the first primary, thus has done, it Read The Herald Want-Ads

"I SUFFERED WITH CONSTIPATION FOR SIXTEEN YEARS"
Then ALL-BRAN Brought Relief to Mr. McNeil

We quote from his unsolicited letter: "I suffered with constipation" for 16 years. Finally, I started using Kellogg's ALL-BRAN in connection with other nourishing foods.

"I consider myself a well man at this time, not having had an attack for over two years. I am sure ALL-BRAN helped wonderfully by overcoming constipation."—Mr. L. M. McNeil, Lockwood, W. Va.

"Constipation due to insufficient 'bulk' in meals. Tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides gentle 'bulk' to aid elimination. Also vitamin B and iron. This 'bulk' relieves digestion better than the fiber in fruits and vegetables, so it is more effective. Isn't this food safer than risking patent medicines? Two tablespoons of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. If seriously constipated, use with each meal. See your doctor, if you do not get relief. Use as a cereal with milk or cream, or in cooking. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

assault on the aluminum industry. Administration spokesmen won't admit it, but they are trying to sell independent manufacturers the idea of locating near the power projects at Grand Coulee and Passanauddy. The proposal to "decentralize" industry strikes many people as an attempt to "decentralize" the Mellons.

Mellon lawyers have been the chief objectives to several reciprocal tariff agreements already signed. Most of the concessions given to foreign nations permit imports of Mellon products. This was especially true of the agreement recently signed with Belgium. The Pittsburgh man's counsel argued against every item in the agreement, but with little success.

Worry

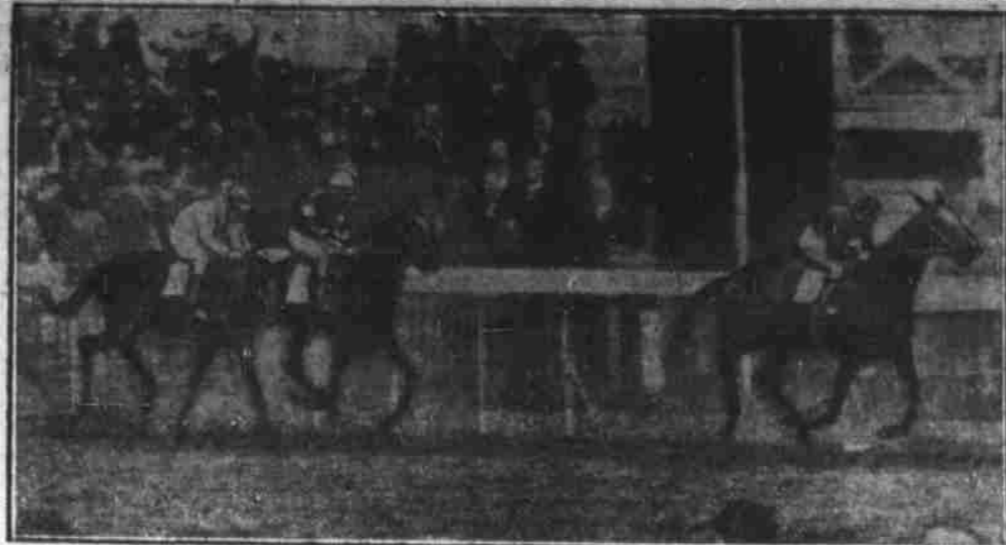

Frank Hogan, famous Washington lawyer whose life has been one rich client after another, says that the Pittsburgh financier is a "grand guy." He is human, artistic, humorous, according to Mr. Hogan, who mourns that some clever build-up publicist did not take charge of the shy, perplexed ex-Secretary twenty years ago.
In tax recesses Mr. Mellon grows weary about his public career—like a baseball player who reminisces. He tells a new Coolidge story. The late President was signing a batch of bills at the capitol at the close of a session. Awaiting his signature was one increasing congressman's and cabinet members' pay. A house member who needed the raise asked Mr. Mellon to find out if the President had approved the measure.
"No," replied Mr. Mellon rather curtly. "It's not been signed." Mr. Mellon moved away to convey the message. The President called him back. "Don't you worry, Mr. Secretary," said the president. "I'm going to sign it. You'll get your raise."

Probation—
The gentle Cordell Hull is the real dictator of the Roosevelt cabinet. He has met plenty of enemies—Ray Moley, George Peek and Claude Swanson—and they are all his.
Soon he may crack down on a couple of European dictators. Herr Hitler and Benito Mussolini, Germany and Italy are not behaving nicely with respect to tariff agreements. They talk a lot about negotiating but they are stalling. They are discriminating against American goods. Mr. Hull quietly put them on probation some weeks ago. Now he may have to spank them hard and publicly.
Here's why: Our reciprocal tariff agreements contain a clause permitting other nations to enjoy the same reductions in duties. That gives Germany and Italy a break. But it did not mean much until he negotiated an agreement with Belgium, Italian and German products do not compete with those of the nations with which we had concluded reciprocal arrangements. They do with those of Belgium, and if allowed to enter at a cut-rate Brussels would face cutthroat competition. So watch Cordell do his stuff—unless the dictatorial twins come across soon.

Notes—
The Securities commission is watching market plays in New York—just giving the lads a little rope... Republicans in congress didn't get much light from the Grand Reactors—the question still is, how to keep from voting for Roosevelt's "must" bills... Uncle Sam may regulate railroads but he can't regulate Washington taxi drivers, who have all sorts of rates and no legal responsibility.

NEW YORK

Organizations with various political objectives are discovering that the Supreme court is something of a fairy godfather. Take the committee for the nation. This group-

FAVORITE WINS ENGLISH DERBY BY TWO LENGTHS

This picture sent by radio from London to New York shows the finish of the 166th running of the English derby at Epsom Downs, won by Bahram, a 5 to 4 favorite from the Aga Khan's stables. Robin Goddellow trailed two lengths behind, with Field Trial a close third. (Associated Press Photo)

very close to the throne in "33" faded into the background after the Warren gold theory was snuffed out. It tried for a comeback this spring with the Goldborough amendment to the banking bill and was apparently decisively licked in the house when the administration quietly turned on the heat against the measure which would have ordered the Federal Reserve Board to restore the dollar to its 26-purchasing power and keep it there.
But now the committee has grabbed at a promising opening offered by the court and is again trying valiantly to shove the amendment through. The opening is delightfully simple. The justices disapproved regimentation and deflation via the Frasier-Lankie bill. They approved the "Monetary policy of restoring the price level" in the gold clause. This makes it clear (to the committee) that the government should obviously revert to monetary remedies, abandon unconstitutional interference with wages, prices and production, and abjure the siren song of international stabilization on a gold basis.
The committee's latest appeal—in cooperation with the national Grange and other agricultural organizations—is directed chiefly to farmers. Cotton gets a special play on the basis that devaluation accounts for five cents of the six-cent rise since 1923. The AAA is conceded credit for the odd cent. If this approach rouses the south sufficiently to get congress to override White House opposition to the Goldborough amendment—which is possible but by no means certain—it might have wide political effect. For instance, consider the bearing on the developing campaign to turn the Southern Democratic against FDR—not that the committee suggests anything like that.

Woman in the Case

Mrs. Margaret Waley (above) whose attempt to make a purchase in a Salt Lake City dime store with a $5 ransom bill led to the arrest of her and her husband in connection with the Weyerhaeuser kidnaping case. (Copyright by Deseret News, from the Associated Press)

The council has declared war to the knife on four pending measures: the social security bill, the Wagner labor bill, the Eccles banking bill (Title II) and the Wheeler-Rayburn utility bill. Mass protests to congress are being quietly stimulated.
Probably they won't carry much practical weight at this stage of the game—but the real object is not so much to defeat these bills now as to train the army for cohesive and effective action when the big battle of '36 begins.

Explosion

The Bank of France was successful in imposing its will on the French politicians—and you should near Wall Street's sighs of envy—but it has undoubtedly laid up a handsome store for future trouble for itself. The leftist parties won't forget their humiliation in a hurry. Their wishes—as representative of the people—were flatly overruled by the money power and they crave revenge.
Why don't they hit back now? Because they're in a weak spot at the moment. If they managed to seize power there would be an immediate financial collapse—for which an infuriated nation would blame them entirely. They know this and realize they must bide their time.
But New York sharps agree that their turn will come. Premier Laval has authority to "defend the franc" and check speculation—but none to balance the budget, which is the crux of the crisis. Moreover, even with the Deputies out of session he is obligated to consult parliamentary leaders on all important decisions. He can stall off a showdown for a while—but with those limitations he hasn't a Chinaman's chance of working out a satisfactory permanent solution to France's problems. Sooner or later that means another and more serious explosion—and the word here is that the leftists will be in the best position to take advantage of it. The Fascist Croix de Feu is too torn by internal dissension to function effectively.

Persuaders

One thing Laval will probably try to ease the financial pressure is a refunding of government debt at cheaper interest. French credit isn't equal to that on a voluntary basis—but there are ways and means of inducing reluctant bond holders to accept a lower return on their money.
Nothing so crude as a forced loan, of course. But there's the useful example set by Paul Van Ze-land in Belgium. The high coupon Belgian bonds which stubborn holders refused to turn in weren't exactly repudiated. Instead they lost their tax exemption privileges and were delisted from security exchanges. Little inconvenience like that can be powerful persuaders.

Precedent

Bank officers who were legally obligated to repay their debts this week and couldn't were much obliged to congress for its considerate action in granting them a three-year stay. But the really significant point to this was the proof it afforded that the banking bill can be passed piecemeal. The precedent is a great help to Senator Glass and the bankers who want Titles I and II enacted and Title II ducked in the nearest ashcan. It's opals to onions now that Senator Fletcher's committee will report the above three titles out separately.

Debarred

Reports are current that Securities Commission Chairman Joe Kennedy is slated for a cabinet post. His New York friends are inclined to snicker. They figure Joe is by far more valuable to FDR in his present job than he would be anywhere else and he would still be debarred from fostering his personal fortunes as Secretary of What-Have-You.

Sidelights

Add signs of recovery—the Normandie sports a broker's office. The RFC will buy no more preferred stock of banks after mid-July... Hopkins' plan to juggle work-relief employees from one job to another should mean a lot of government orders for motor trucks... Speculators have temporarily lost interest in the stock market. But high-grade investment buying goes quietly on.

The President's Decision and the Defense of the Constitution

The President's announcement comes to this: the question of what, if anything, is to come after the N.R.A. for industry in general, is not to be decided until the country has had about ten months to study the situation and make up its mind. In order to assist that study the N.R.A. organization in skeleton form is to be transformed from a law-making and law-enforcing agency into a fact-finding agency. This is a fair and sensible decision, and it ought to satisfy every sincere critic of the N.R.A.

It should satisfy those of us who believe that the N.R.A. went wrong because it was set up thoughtlessly and in a frantic hurry. We should not make ourselves ridiculous if we now complain, as some partisans are already complaining, that the President has not pulled a rabbit out of his hat and in a week proposed a new N.R.A. with all the virtues and none of the vices of the old one. We cannot have both ways. If the right course in the summer of 1933 would have been to make haste slowly, then it is surely the right course in the summer of 1935.

It should satisfy those of us who believe that the N.R.A. has retarded recovery by introducing an undesirable rigidity into prices and wages. The President's policy puts this belief to a practical test, and we should be lacking in intellectual integrity if, after criticizing the N.R.A. for its "artificial rigidity" we now become alarmed about "competitive chaos."

It should satisfy those who profess to believe that industry can regulate itself by voluntary agreement. For the President's announcement has the clear moral implication that he will not start wholesale prosecutions under the anti-trust laws before April 1st of next year.

It should satisfy Senator Borah, who asked that no changes in the Federal character of the American government be undertaken until the people have made up their minds. This policy provides them the opportunity to make up their minds.

It should satisfy those who do not wish to see important constitutional changes brought about by indirect means. Any scheme which would have sought to revive the Poultry Code by some indirect device would have been open to this objection.

It will not, however, satisfy the partisans who are interested primarily in finding an issue to beat Mr. Roosevelt in 1936. They would like to have had Mr. Roosevelt go off the deep end, propose some half-baked amendment, and make them a present of the next election. They will be disappointed. Mr. Hoover, too, will be disappointed. His statement about "administration proposals to change to a European form of government" looks wishful in the light of the fact that there are no proposals to change to any other form of government. It does disclose Mr. Hoover's ambitions and his hopes: what a windfall it would be for an eager candidate of the opposition if only Mr. Roosevelt would propose to abolish the Federal Constitution! But it is the idea of an incurable amateur. Mr. Hoover must think that the President is as lacking in political insight as he is himself. He must think the President does not know that an amendment to turn over to the national government omnipotent powers to regulate wages, hours, working conditions, trade practices and prices would not be ratified by ten American states, that it would divide and wreck utterly the Democratic party, that it would be just about the most superlative piece of idiocy by which any public leader ever sought to cut his own throat.

The defense of the American Constitution is a serious matter, not one to be made the football of partisan politics. It cannot be conducted by adjectives, slogans, catchwords and small potatoes. The real defense depends upon demonstrating by actual results that the division of powers between the national and the state governments is such that every real need of the people, in emergencies and in normal times, can be dealt with. Sound constitutionalists, like Senator Borah, hold that all necessary power can be found. For they realize, as Alexander Hamilton pointed out when he was arguing for the constitutionality of the Bank of the United States, that unless adequate powers exist somewhere in our system "the United States would furnish the singular spectacle of a political society without sovereignty, or of a people governed, without government."

There are two questions which are now before the people. One is to determine how much of the N.

FAMED ATHLETES SET FOR PRINCETON MEET

An historic mile race is anticipated at Princeton's "super-invitation" meet June 15, with Lovelock of New Zealand, Cunningham of Kansas, Bonthron, formerly of Princeton, and Venzke of the University of Pennsylvania as the contenders. They are the only amateur runners in the world who have equalled or bettered 4:10. Another deadly duel of the meet will be the vaulting event in which William Graber, formerly of U.S.C., and Keith Brown, Yale, the only two men who have officially cleared 14 feet, 5 inches, will compete. (Associated Press Photos)

R. A. regulation of industry is in fact necessary to the national welfare. Much of it, like the regulation of the wages of chicken-killers in New York, is not necessary, as General Johnson admitted in his excellent speech on Tuesday night. Some of it, such as the regulation of the coal-mining industry, is by common consent recognized as necessary. Between these two poles lie all sorts of cases, some of which may and some of which may not need Federal control. Each would have to be decided on its merits precisely as the coal and poultry cases are being decided on their merits.

This first question is not a question of law but of fact and of public policy. When it is decided, the second question arises, which is whether, when Federal regulation is deemed necessary, the Federal power—as the Court interprets it—exists. Senator Borah thinks that the power will be found to exist, and our whole constitutional history justifies the belief that where the need of Federal regulation is clearly demonstrated and the method of regulation carefully considered the Court will sustain Congress. If it did not do that, we should have a dangerously rigid government whereas, in fact, we have a prudently flexible government. If we did not have it a nation of 120 millions would not have retained and continued to revere a Constitution which has endured longer than any other in modern history.

It can hardly be doubted that immense powers exist for regulating any industry which is truly national in its character. The anti-trust laws are an arsenal of powers which can be used to encourage socially desirable combinations and to discourage socially undesirable ones. We can doubt that where Congress can prohibit a combination in restraint of trade it can permit one under certain clearly defined conditions? The right to tax and to spend is another great complex of powers. Then there is the tariff. We hear much about the interstate competition of sweatshops. Is there any doubt that Congress can say to sweated industries, all of which are now highly protected, that an industry which cannot stabilize itself by voluntary agreement, trade union regulation and state laws, is a parasite and should be allowed to compete with the sweated labor of Europe and Asia. If, to obtain tariff protection, industries and the states (where those industries are located) had to meet decent standards, the tariff might become what it is always supposed to be and so often is not, a protection to labor.

There is nothing whatever in the idea that the Supreme Court has stripped the national government of all power over national economic problems. It has stripped it of unlimited and undefined power. Those of us who are glad this has been done must now show that sufficient and exact powers do exist in the Constitution. For in the long run no Constitution can be defended except by demonstrating to the people that it preserves their liberties and promotes their welfare.

JUDGES AS PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES

In summing up the "net results" of the Grand Roote conference, Mr. Theodore Wallen, of the New York Herald Tribune, said, among other things:

It tended to set the stage for the nomination of a strict constructionist of the constitution, thus virtually eliminating Associate Justice Harlan. F. Stone of the supreme court while leaving Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts in a preferred position.

While nothing may come of this boom, the mere fact that it is seriously considered is certain to cause acute embarrassment to the supreme court as a whole and to Mr. Justice Roberts in particular. It means that as long as the boom lasts every vote cast by Mr. Justice Roberts or Mr. Justice Stone will be examined by the politicians and by the political commentators for its bearing upon the campaign of 1936. These judges have still to sit in judgment upon much of the New Deal. Could anything be more unfair to them, more harmful to the court, or more destructive of popular confidence in its verdicts than to create a situation where two of the justices are treated as candidates who stand to win or lose the greatest political office in the land? And what could be less edifying than a political campaign in which a justice of the supreme court was defending his judicial opinions from the end of a railroad car?

It is true that the present Chief Justice, Mr. Hughes, left the supreme court in 1916 to accept the republican nomination. There are few, I believe, who would say that he established a good precedent. But at least this can be said for Mr. Hughes in 1916. The issues of the day turned on neutrality and war, and the opinions of the court were not involved in the partisan conflict. But now it is proposed to make the campaign on the very issues which the court is called upon to decide, and it is nothing less than an outrage to suggest that a member of that court should be a partisan candidate in such a campaign.

The mere talk about this boom creates mischief so serious that it may require some decisive action to dispose of it. The court is adjourned for the summer. But if, when the court reconvenes in the autumn, the boom has not been completely deflated, Mr. Justice Roberts will be compelled to take

ENEMY'S KISS

Chapter 25 PHONE CALL

Could Guy throw any light on it? she wondered. She glanced at the ivory and silver clock on her table. Still another ten minutes before dinner. She began to hurry, finished dressing quickly, clasped on her father's turquoise pendant and ran hastily down stairs.

After seven, he had said, and it was now ten minutes to eight. If she rang up now, she would catch him, she could tell him of the new development before her father got down or Daphne Summers arrived.

The light was out in the library but Alison did not wait; she ran to the desk and switched on the reading lamp, caught up the telephone book and flipped over the pages. Dundas—Doctor Dundas—here it was—an address down in the East end; she dialed the number with a finger that shook slightly as it fumbled for the right star. What a long time the bell took ringing!

"Hello?"
"Hello?"
"Hello?"

She now had expected a maid or Doctor Dundas instead of Guy himself.
"Hello?" Is that you? Alison Rede speaking. Listen, I've only a few moments but I wanted to tell you—something funny has happened—I can't talk about it now, she's dining here and may come in at any minute and the servants might hear. But can we meet tomorrow?—It's urgent. Yes! Lunch, then, the same place, same time? All right. Will you pick me up here? Yes, but I think it'd be better if we met just round the corner. Do you know? By the end of Ebury Street? I thought I ought to let you know after what you said today. Well, thanks most awfully. Good-night."

Alison set the receiver back. Infinite relief, to have someone to turn to in these troubles. Perhaps if she told him about that other bit of knowledge, the kiss, he would see more clearly than she could herself what was the right thing to do.

She went out and upstairs to the drawing room to wait for Daphne Summers.

Behind her, in the library, the honey wine-colored, damask curtains parted. Daphne came out of the window recess quietly and rather slowly. Crossing to the table, she took a cigarette out of the silver box.

She had a very long holder of amber, bound with gold—one of Robert Rede's presents; she fitted the cigarette into it with careful precision, all her thoughts elsewhere. When she had lit it, she went out of the room and up the stairs to the drawing room, her face without expression and her eyes no more than very faintly amused.

Dinner passed off so calmly that the girl began to hope that her father had listened to her after all. Daphne accepted her apology sweetly.

"Of course, I quite understand, I often do it myself. You didn't notice the time it doesn't matter in the least, we can shop tomorrow instead, can't we?" Not a single question about that lunch, not a word about the honeymoon plan! Before the evening was over Alison

Daphne came out quietly and slowly, found herself wondering if she had made too much fuss. It was not until the next day at one o'clock that anything happened. They were all three up in the boudoir, looking at patterns and approving Daphne's final choice. "Rather nice," Robert always agreed amicably on such points. He knew nothing of furnishings and cared less. He took a chocolate from the box beside Daphne and said, "I say, these are good! Your own making?"

"I made them specially for you. They're all the nutty kind that you like."
"You're a marvel!" He offered them to Alison, who could say truthfully that they were the best that she had ever eaten. But she sighed. They had been two hours choosing! Daphne seemed to like to keep them both there, centered on her affairs.

Her voice was cordial for she was thinking. "In two or three minutes, I'll be seeing him again! Oh, what a comfort!"
Comfort? A tiny stab of doubt followed the thought. Was it really no more than friendliness, this longing to see him, tell him all about her troubles? After all, in more than a year, he was a stranger, yet she did not think of him like that! It seemed the most natural thing in the world to tell him what she would not have told anyone else.

"Bye, darling." She waved to Daphne and ran to the door.
"Alison!" Her father spoke gravely.
"Yes?" With her hand on the door, she turned. "What?"
"I want a word with you."
She came back into the room slowly, her face growing pale. What now?
"Did you lunch yesterday with that young architect fellow, what's his name?" Robert Rede was always simple and direct.
"Guy Westurn?" Alison could not help a glance at Daphne, but she was sitting on the floor turning over her lapful of patterns, her face totally expressionless. Robert went on sternly.
"You're off to lunch with him again today." It was a statement, not a question.
"Yes." She could not guess how he knew but she threw it back defiantly.
"Well, you're not to! You're not to meet him again. I forbid it. Understand?" He put that quietly enough yet between them that special tone had always meant an order that must be obeyed.
"But why? I must know why!" Alison was white now as the wall behind her.
"Because I've found out all about him," said her father. "And he's not a fit person for you to know."

Theatre Code Suit Dropped

Litigation Had Involved Bank Night Award Plan

FORT WORTH—The first of several suits attacking the constitutionality of the NRA was dismissed Thursday morning in federal district court on an order signed by Federal Judge James C. Wilson at Lubbock.

The suit was brought by Robb and Rowley Theaters, Inc., Dallas, against the Adams Film Exchange and 11 other film distributors. The plaintiff operates two theaters in Sherman and holds each week what is known as a "bank night" to stimulate patronage, one patron being given a cash award each week in a drawing.

The defendants, contending that the "bank night" practice was a violation of the fair competition clause of the NRA code, threatened to cut off the film supply of the two theaters.

In their petition the plaintiffs contended that the NRA was unconstitutional and attempted to delegate unlawful legislative authority to President Roosevelt. This was so held later by the United States supreme court.

I Used To Be Private Secretary

BEFORE I married, I mean. Which was three years ago. But I still remember—and I'm never going to forget—how my boss ran his business.

I never saw such a successful man. When I first started to work for him, I thought he was just lucky. But I learned differently after I was with him for a while.

He never gave out a contract—never bought a thing, mind you—until he had studied all the bids made him, and compared all the points. I used to collect and file them for him, so he could get the facts when he needed them. So I know.

I know now, all right. That's the way I run my home. Only I don't have to collect and file my bids. I get them regularly in my newspaper. And do I study the advertisements carefully before I buy? You're telling me!

with the champion as they hampered along the ropes. Braddock swung a long left and two rights to the head. Baer drummed two rights to the body. Braddock pinned him on the ropes and hammered his head and body. They slugged furiously in a corner and Baer tore Braddock's body with half long-rights as they slugged furiously past the bell and the ring was in an uproar as the referee separated them. The referee took the round from Baer for fouling.

ROUND THIRTEEN

FOURTEENTH ROUND

Baer drilled both hands to the body, apparently feeling he was behind. Baer punched furiously at the head with both hands, but Jimmy stood flat footed and slugged with him and Max backed away. Braddock stabbed twice into the middle of Baer's face, but took a half dozen terrific right swings. Braddock threw two terrific rights into the champion's head. Baer - Braddock Blow - By - Blow

FIRST ROUND The champion sneered as Baer backed away and Braddock hammered two rights to his side.

SECOND ROUND Baer danced out and Braddock popped him twice with lefts to head. Baer laughed and posed as Braddock shot three lefts to his head and a right to the body. Braddock out-jabbed Baer with a half dozen lefts and knocked the champion's head with a right uppercut. Baer cut loose for the first time, with a two-fisted barrage to the body. Half a dozen times Braddock stabbed Baer's head with lefts, then crossed three full rights to the head. Max clowned, danced, laughed as he missed a long right to the head. The champion made a gesture as though he was holding back a right capable of letting it go for kill any time. He slapped Braddock in a friendly fashion on the shoulders as the bell rang. Braddock's round.

THIRD ROUND Braddock marked out with a chin tucked low, jabbing Baer's head with a left. Baer suddenly put on a fiendish visage and slung a hard left and right into Braddock's body. The champion stopped quickly and Braddock beat him about the head half a dozen times with lefts and rights. Baer missed a long right and they slugged at each other's body heads together in mid-ring with most of the blows landing on each other's elbows. Braddock's left hook twice was wild, but he drove two hard rights to Baer's head. Baer stalked him, sinking powerful lefts in Braddock's body, but Jimmy slugged a right back, having much the better of it as he poured lefts and rights into the champion's head. Braddock nailed him again with a left and a right as the bell sounded and Baer was spitting blood as he went to his corner. Braddock's round.

FOURTH ROUND They came slowly and Braddock stabbed three lefts to the champion's head. Baer drilled both hands into Braddock's body as they clinched. Baer nearly wrestled Braddock off his feet and the crowd booed Baer as he raised both hands apologetically to the crowd. Baer shot two rights to his side, caught the grim Braddock with a right uppercut, but Jimmy tabbed back with a left and made the champion bend with rights to the body. Braddock took a hard right to the chin against the ropes, the best blow Baer had landed, but fell into a clinch and took another right to the head. A long right to the cheek knocked Braddock to the ropes. He tore back with a right to the body. Baer's round.

FIFTH ROUND Baer came to midring as Braddock jabbed his head with a half dozen. Baer fore manly into close-quarters and hammered both hands into the challenger's side. A hard right bounced off Braddock's chin, Jimmy tore back with two rights to the head. Baer was warned for backhanding. Baer landed three right uppercuts and drove a hard right to the body and complained that Jimmy's right was low. Punching madly, Baer tore after the challenger and landed two long rights to the head, but took a half dozen full smashes to the chin. Referee McAvoy awarded the round to Braddock for backhanding.

SIXTH ROUND Baer landed half a dozen rights to the head. He split Braddock's nose with a right uppercut. Braddock stabbed two lefts into the champion's head. Baer threw a long right into Jimmy's head and Braddock smashed back with both hands rocking the champion's head with a volley of rights. Baer nailed Braddock inside with a half dozen short uppercuts. Braddock wavered as Baer hammered him mercilessly about the head. The challenger was punching even with the champion at the bell. Baer's round.

SEVENTH ROUND Baer tore into Braddock, but the challenger popped him with a half dozen lefts. Braddock shot a left and a right to Baer's head, and poked his face with a half dozen more lefts before falling in close to pound Baer's head. Baer shook the challenger with a half dozen rights and two rights smashed to the head. Braddock wobbled, but stabbed back gamely with his left. The champion hammered another left to the head. Jimmy shook his head and smashed a long right to the jaw, but took two right uppercuts, damaging punches. Baer ripped Braddock's head with a half dozen rights. Jim stabbed back with lefts and then flung a hard right to the chin. Baer's round.

EIGHTH ROUND Baer rocked Braddock's head with three short right uppercuts. The challenger whipped a terrific right to the head. Braddock pumped two lefts and two rights to the head as the champion's long right bounced off Braddock's jaw and two right uppercuts shot Jimmy's head back. They stood too far slugging evenly to the body in the middle of the ring as the bell long right. Braddock took short right uppercut to the chin but smashed a hard right to the chin. Max missed a left hook to the head and took two left hooks to the chin as the crowd cheered the challenger's fine start.
