Beard Home Is Damaged; High Winds Primary Cause of Fires

Two very disastrous fires occurred in Littlefield the past week end. One about 9:30 o'clock Saturday night, the other at 4 a. m. Sunday morning.

The five-room house at LFD drive and East Seventh street, occupied by the F. E. Beard family, together with the furnishings, and some clothing, were considerably damaged by fire and water Saturday evening. The roof is said to have been a total loss.

Fanned by a stiff wind, the fire had made considerable headway before noticed by one of the firemen, who was downtown. He turned in the alarm. The family were away at the time, Mrs. Beard being out of town, and Mr. Beard and Miss Margaret both downtown.

It was only through the valiant efforts of the Littlefield fire department that anything was saved.

The house is believed to have been insured against fire. Mr. Beard is reported to have carried $1000 insurance on the furniture.

Mr. Beard and Miss Margaret were obliged to take shelter elsewhere, and are staying temporarily at the Carl (Continued on Last Page)

Financial statements issued immediately after the governor's first proclamation, showed the local bank to be in excellent condition. The action was not brought about by local conditions, but in an effort to stabilize economic conditions disturbed somewhat in parts of Texas by the closing of banks in other states.

The President, in his first step since inauguration, assumed war time authority, and brought about the nationwide moratorium in an effort to "bring back the normal free exchange of currency."

In a statement to the Leader, Mr. Hilbun expressed his appreciation for the co-operation given them during the holiday period, and said that the bank would aid in every way possible to accommodate their customers. He also requested the continued co-op- (Continued on Last Page)

WEST TEXAS STATE

Recent political events have served to arouse much interest in the formation of another state to be carved out of a portion of Texas, and each day favorable sentiment is crystalizing more definitely, until now the actual region to formulate this new state has been outlined.

Four years this newspaper editor urged the division of Texas into at least three states, and still favors the carving out of a portion of it for West Texas state. Crop conditions, political conditions, climatic conditions, and numerous other conditions of this area are at such wide variance with the state in general they can never be entirely harmonized.

East Texas today has the overwhelming balance in population and wealth, and will not permit the western area its just dues for years to come, or, until it has to do so. In more than one instance, West Texas is and has been for years, paying tribute to East Texas. Witness the school money paid out here that goes to East Texas counties by the thousands of dollars annually, as an illustration.

About three years ago John N. Garner urged the division of Texas into five different states, but according to the state constitution, an act of the legislature is necessary for such a division. Since East Texas has the majority of legislators, we do not believe such relief will be furnished by that body.

There is a way though, we believe this can be done. Let the proponents of the new state set forth its proposed meets and bounds. Call an election of the people within that considered area. If the measure carries, then let that area secede from the state proper. This would mean either putting the matter up direct to the national congress for action or requiring the rest of the state to put this area back where it originally was. In making this statement the Journal has no idea of advocating any form or traitorism, but merely getting around a condition which the framers of the constitution at that time could not foresee, thus remedying a condition that needs improving. —Muleshoe Journal.

In the same issue of the Journal, the following article appears:

"Definite action toward separating a region of the state from all of Texas and forming a West Texas state is crystalizing rapidly. For several years past the movement has been agitated more or less openly, and now a definite outline of the proposed state has been offered by some of the citizens of this western area.

"The proposed new state would contain 54 counties, having an area of 52,400 square miles or 12,000 miles larger than the State of Ohio. It would contain a population of nearly 694,000 people, 95 per cent of which would be Anglo-Saxon folks. This proposed area produces four-fifths of the state's wheat, two-thirds of the state's sorghum crop, one-third of the state's cattle, one-fourth of its cotton. It has large quantities of oil and gas. The entire area is virtually tillable. It has an excellent climate, generally a high altitude, good water, good schools, highways and railroads.

"The proposed area of the new state has Dallam for its northwest county, Lipscomb for its northeast county, Andrews for its southwest county, and Nolan for its southeast county, taking in all the counties between the four named to comprise West Texas."

We have not studied the matter sufficiently to express a definite opinion as to the advisability of creating a state of West Texas, but we do know that West Texas, as a part of Texas, is not enjoying the opportunity to accomplish all that it is possible to achieve in the development of this section of the state.

We ask this question:

WHY SHOULD THE GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT OF WEST TEXAS BE HAMPERED BY THE VIEWPOINT OF EAST TEXAS?

We also ask this question:

WHY SHOULD NOT WEST TEXAS, WITH HUNDREDS AND THOUSANDS OF CAPABLE MEN AND WOMEN WITHIN ITS BOUNDARIES, BE CAPABLE OF THE KIND OF GOVERNMENT THAT WOULD CARRY FORWARD A PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF THIS SECTION?

The attitude of East Texas toward West Texas' educational institutions should be sufficient to make any West Texan get his boots on and go places and see folks.

IF TEXAS TECH IS WRECKED, THEN EAST TEXAS WILL HEAR FROM WEST TEXAS. AND HOW!

IT NOW LOOKS LIKE THAT BUNCH IN EAST TEXAS WHO LOOK UPON WEST TEXAS AS JUST BROAD ACRES "WAY OUT THERE" WILL BE PULLING LEATHER IF THEY DON'T LEARN HOW TO RIDE ALONG PEACEFUL LIKE.

Senator Duggan is proposing that school funds be apportioned on a basis of actual attendance in school and not on school census rolls. That would be fair, and Duggan says it would save the tax payers of Texas millions of dollars. In some sections of Texas, they have been padding the scholastic census returns, and by this means they have been robbing the state. Mr. John Tax-payer has been footing the bills. It ought to be stopped. Senator Duggan's plan would stop it.—Lynn County News.

EIGHT YEARS AGO IN LITTLEFIELD

(Excerpts from Lamb Co. Leader)

In these days of thoughtless love affairs and reckless weddings, it is indeed encouraging now and then for a newspaper editor to have the opportunity of chronicling the record of a young couple who have good common sense in their selection of each other as life mates. Such was the marriage of "Jimmie" Brittain and Miss Patsy Lively, which occurred last Sunday afternoon.

Melvin M. Brittain is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. V. Brittain of Abilene. He came to Littlefield nearly two years ago and since that time has been employed in the Stokes-Alexander Drug Store. Mrs. Brittain, Nee Patsy E. Lively, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Lively of Seymour.

Miss Woody Light and Claud Gray were married last week at the home of the bride's parents at Ladonia, Tex., Rev. Welch of the Presbyterian church officiating.

The bride has been a Littlefield girl for the past two years, during which time she has been a teacher of music and expression in the local public schools.

Mr. Gray is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Gray of this city.

Replins closed a deal last week for two lots located just south of the Robinson Hardware Store, on which they expect to soon begin the erection of a brick store building 50x125 feet.

Ira Smith, Jr. stole the march on his friends last Sunday a week ago, slipping off to Lubbock, where he was united in marriage to Miss Ruby Minnis of Lamesa. The groom is connected with the Littlefield Motor Co., while the bride is one of Lamesa's most popular young ladies.

Final Installment

Dennis left New York by the afternoon train. He had wired to Pauline, said his bill, and departed. He knew what he felt, or if he felt anything at all, but he was conscious of a burning desire for the sun and the sea. He had been absorbed in watching the unreal drama on the stage and the now walks out again in the same old day.

Dennis tried to analyze himself and supposed that other men had named themselves desperately in with some woman other than his wives and had paid as he was. Imagined! Had he imagined it was it real? Was it still real? Had not found the answer he when the train stopped, and he was there at the window.

"Darling!" She rushed in the car, hugged him; she poured out all breath how happy she was to see him again, how awful it had been to lose him. "Really awful, Dennis!" How she was longing to be in her own home.

"Father's better, and Daddy's so tomorrow I think we might not you?"

"—anything you like," said Barbara? How is darling?"

Dennis was taking his bag down the rack. "She's all right. I saw this morning—just to say good-bye."

He wrote to her the day before yesterday. Pauline said. She was writing him with bright eyes. "Did you tell me, Dennis?"

"What did you write to her?"

Pauline smiled mysteriously. "I'll tell you tomorrow—when we're back in our own home." And then with a hand on his arm, "Oh Dennis, it's like to have you back again!"

There was such a child, Dennis thought, as he listened to her chatter.

His eyes danced, and she leaned back against him for a moment. "Believe you're really glad to see me back," she said.

"—very glad."

They were on the porch now, and they had taken from the status driving away down the road.

He put his arm round little Pauline and kissed her.

"Have you ever loved anyone but Pauline?" he asked.

She did not notice the little accent in the second word, she was too clamorous her reply. "Never, darling, never! and I never loved anyone else."

They went back to their own home following day. Pauline was very on the journey, and when they she went from room to room at everything with eager before she took off her hat and feel as if it's years since we went," she said. "Does it seem like to you, Dennis?"

Pauline had discovered letters on the mantleshef.

"One from Barbie," she said.

"How sweet of her to write welcome us back home."

Dennis did not answer, he was out of the window at the garden.

He absorbed in her reading, only gave a smothered cry. "Oh Dennis! What do you think?"

"She is going to be married—do you think it is?"

He didn't know.

Her husband—to Douglas Stark again! I can't believe it; she said—oh, poor Barbie! Oh, I wonder what has become of the other one she really loved."

"Do you think she ever did love you?"

Of course she did. I know her so well, she was someone she simply loved."

Dennis said nothing, but he was again of that day on the train when he and Barbara were moving together—of the moment she struggled out of unconsciousness the broken voice—"Oh, my darling, Dennis."

He moved abruptly. "Take your coat off, Pauline, and let's go."

"Well, I won't be a minute." She sat down by the fire. It seemed to be at home again—he himself wondering why he had ever gone away. And yet—if he had the time over again he knew he would do the same thing.

And now Barbara was going back to Douglas Stark! Why, in God's name? He shut his eyes and tried to picture her face—the face he had loved. Did he still love her, or had he never loved her? Or was it possible for a man to love two women at the same time? Did she love him? If so, why had she told him the truth about Barnet and so sent him away?

"Tea will be ready directly," she said. She sat down on the rug at his feet and snuggled up against him.

"Happy to be home?"

"Wonderful." She took his hand and kissed it, and Dennis hated himself because the sudden thought came to him that if he had been here with Barbara—he would have kissed her hands—her beautiful hands...

"I want to tell you something, Dennis, darling."

"What is it? Are you in debt? Can't pay the butcher or something?"

She pretended to be offended. "How dare you? I'm a wonderful housekeeper."

but tonight it seemed to appeal to him almost as if it had been a message from Barbara herself.

"Love locked out."

What had she intended it for—for him?—for herself—or just for nothing at all?

He turned away impatiently.

Why had it been allowed that he should love her—and where would they have drifted but for Barnet?

The dream ended. He was a married man with a wife who adored him—and perhaps soon the nursery of which he knew Pauline had dreamed so many dreams would be a reality. A son of his own.

Upstairs he could hear Pauline moving about, singing happily, and with a sudden sense of loneliness he went to the foot of the stairs and called to her: "Pauline."

"Yes, my precious."

"Come here. I want you."

It was some months later that Stornaway, up in town again for one of his flying visits, chanced across Jerry Barnet in the bar of a West End Restaurant.

"Dennis—would you like to have a son?"

"So you are." He kissed her and leaned back again. "Don't strangle me, my child—what is it?"

But she hid her face against his coat while she told him by asking a little question that wavered between happy tears and happier laughter.

"Dennis—would you like to have a son?"

It was some time later over the tea and hot toast that Dennis said: "This wonderful secret—does your mother know?"

"Not yet—only you, darling—and Barbara."

"Barbara?" The blood rushed to his face. "What made you tell her?"

And Pauline answered happily: "Because she is my best friend and because I love her."

There was a little silence, then Pauline said, "But I'm sorry about one thing."

"What is that, Tuppenny?"

"Barbara said in her letter, 'Don't ask me to be godmother—I'm not the right sort to bring up a child in the way it should go—I'm so sorry about that, because I know she'd bring him up most beautifully, bless her.'"

"Him?" said Dennis with raised eyebrows and a very softened look in his eyes.

"Of course it will be a him," Pauline said dreamily. "And I should like him to be just like you. Of course, if it is a girl I shall call her Barbara whether she'll be godmother or not."

"Oh, I shouldn't do that," Dennis said hurriedly.

"But why not? It's a lovely name." Yes, it was a lovely name. Once for a little while of madness it had been the most beautiful name in the world to Dennis O'Hara, but now—

"Pray God I never see her again," was his passionate thought as he sat there so still in the firelight and listened to his wife's chatter.

It was after tea, when Pauline was bustling about the house that Dennis got up from his chair and went over to the mantelpiece where Barbara's queer wedding present stood. Somehow it had never meant very much to him until now—ha had been rather impatient of its obvious sentiment—had been forced to borrow.

"Never been the same since Barbie Stark chucked me," he bemoaned his fate. "Never been the same since she went back to Douglas, blast him! Awful!"

"Of course," Stornaway remembered Barbara vividly—indeed, few people, especially men, ever forgot her. "Very fine woman," he said.

"Fine!" Jerry was almost in tears as he explained how fine, how damned fine she was. "I love that woman," he said, leaning heavily on the counter. "I'd 'ave—I'd 'ave died for her and she chucked me. I want t' see her," he added wistfully. "Want to 'poligize, say I'm sorry for what I told that chap O'Hara."

"What did you tell him?" Stornaway was not interested, he wanted to get away, but Jerry had him by the lapel of his coat.

"I told him disgustin' thing," Jerry said heavily. "Thing no man who's gentleman should say 'bout any woman, specially when it's not true. I was jealous of O'Hara, yess, I was. Always with Barbie at one time, always! Not fair; he'd got pretty little wife of 'is own."

"I don't expect O'Hara minded, whatever it was," Stornaway said. "He's not the chap to remember a thing or bear ill-will."

"Would this, though," Jerry sighed and ruffled his hair. "He was keen on Barbie, I know." He leaned forward and whispered something in Stornaway's reluctant ear—"that's what I told," he said ponderously. "Just that—and it was a lie—damned lie!"

Stornaway moved restlessly; he wished Jerry Barnet and his unsavoury confidences at the bottom of the sea, but Jerry still persisted.

"Often thought I'd like t' see him and tell him! Make honest amends. Can't bear think I told a lie. Awful. Barbie was the best—best in the world, and I'd like t' tell O'Hara." He dragged Stornaway closer to him.

"Here—if you were me, what'd you do? Would you tell him? You say, and I'll do what you say. Would you tell him if you were me—as one pal to 'nother, now?"

Stornaway looked away from his companion's flushed face, and for a moment he visualized Dennis O'Hara as he had last seen him, in own room, waiting restlessly downstairs, while in the room above.

Then when he—Stornaway—had come down to tell him, "It's all right—a boy—fine youngster"—Dennis's face. Dennis was very fond of his little wife, and Stornaway knew it.

Jerry bombarded him again: "If you were me would you tell him?"

Stornaway shook his head. "No," he said decidedly. "No, I don't think I should tell him."

History Repeats Itself

Investors in turnpikes, stage coach lines and canals stoutly resisted the development of railroads. They were joined by the owners of hotels and other businesses along the older routes of travel. Growers of hay and grain were alarmed. It was prophesied that the smoke would injure both animal and vegetable life, sparks would set fire to buildings, cows would be scared and stop giving milk, horses would become valueless and disappear, leaving no outlet for feed crops.

The Pennsylvania Railroad was required by law, in the interest of State canals, to pay a tax upon each ton of freight carried between March and December. The Baltimore and Ohio was denied the right to construct a bridge across the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal.

But railroads were needed and survived all attempts to throttle them. True, their early history was choppy, their practices questionable. Their legislative methods were scandalous, their rates and practices discriminated against cities and whole sections, and against certain businesses and in favor of others in which railroad officials had interests. Competition amongst them was destructive to themselves and the public alike.

It was James Stephen Hogg of Texas who first taught the lesson that the State must regulate railroads to save them from themselves and to save the business and farming interests of Texas. Other states,—then the nation,—followed.

Now that railroads have become the vested interest in transportation, they adopt much the same tactics as their own early opponents. They pretend to fret under their own regulation, until someone proposes to remove it! They demand identically the same regulation for trucks.

Width, length, height, brakes, lights, speeds, gross weights, rates, insurance are proper matters for regulation. But trucks have not the power to dominate whole territories, to discriminate against localities or individuals.

Shippers can operate their own trucks if not satisfied with service or rates obtained, but they cannot build railroads to protect themselves. Less than 3% of the trucks in Texas are public carriers.

Trucks should be regulated to promote safety and highway preservation. These restrictions should constantly improve. But there should be no regulation designed, as now, merely to increase costs and choke off competition. Regulation should not remain strangulation.

RENFRO BROS. TO OPEN NEW FEED AND SEED STORE SATURDAY; TO GIVE SEED

Norman and Raymon Renfro, "The Renfro Twins" owners of the Renfro Bros. Grocery and Market, will open one of the largest feed and seed stores in this section of the state, Saturday, in the building in the rear of their grocery business.

The Renfro brothers announced that they would carry a complete stock of all kinds of garden and field seeds and plants, as well as a complete stock of feeds. They stated that their purchasing in large quantities had enabled them to furnish the people of this section seeds and plants at prices equal to all mail order houses, and urged comparison.

As is their custom in the grocery department, the new store will give free delivery on all purchases of feeds and seeds.

The building is sufficiently large to house a large stock, conveniently arranged for shoppers, and a capable staff of clerks will be employed to give prompt attention to all customers.

To Give Free Seed

On opening day, all visitors to the store who raises a garden will be given a free package of seed. These seeds will be distributed throughout the day, whether or not the visitor makes a purchase.

Awakened Woman

The Perfect Serial

- * Mystery
- * Suspense
- * and Love

Joyce, as she opened her eyes on that memorable morning, was equally surprised at the warm, flower-scented air, at the luxurious sleeping porch where she lay and at the diamond circlet on her wedding finger.

Was she married? Was it summer? Surely the fruit-laden orange trees she could see were not in Chicago—this silk-covered bed was not a hospital cot. Yet—the last thing she remembered was a skidding taxicab on a sleeting November day in Chicago.

And when a man came and sat on her bed and kissed her goodbye for a hurried business trip, telling her to be careful after her fall from her horse the day before, her mystification was complete.

So she was married.

Later she discovered from her toilet article that her initials are F. L. P. . . . and that the house she lived in was rich—and beautiful.

Contract Bridge

Beginning with this issue of the County Leader, Mrs. C. E. Sadler, teacher of the Culbertson contract bridge will have a column in this paper each week under the laws and play of the new International Bridge Laws. Mrs. Cooper will also answer through this column any questions which reach her by Saturday of each week.

At most phenomenal "rightness" of hundreds of thousands of players on November 1, the old bridge laws with which we were familiar, were discarded and the new International Bridge Laws were adopted; there have been so many changes in the laws that it is hard to know which ones are the greatest number of changes. Before taking up the changes, therefore, we will review all of the outstanding changes in bidding and play according to the new code. The standard table of honor-tricks has been changed but the requirements of some of the bids and requirements are somewhat higher than before because of the greater penalties for failure to make contracts according to the new code.

Opening one bid (non vulnerable) still requires only 2 1/2 honor-tricks. However the player with a 4-3-3-3 distribution now has the privilege of passing. Open no-trump (vulnerable) now requires at least 4 honor tricks in any two bids are not greatly affected except that with a bare 5 1/2 honor-tricks the 4-3-3-3 distribution is no longer forced but bids one. Three bids in major suits are slightly lowered requirements. Vulnerable they still guarantee trump-tricks and a trick and side but if not vulnerable they guarantee trump-tricks and one outside suit netting about 7-8 playing four bids in minor suits are slightly less strength but over bids, four in a major in a minor are unchanged. Three no-trump bids now guarantee honor-tricks with all suits ing of a two-suiter or semi-suiter is somewhat changed. A 5-3-3-3 is now preferred to a 5-4-2-2 whether major or minor, and the 5 card suit is quite strong in the responding hand, the requirement for a raise from one to two is slightly lowered while from one to three has been raised from one to three playing but are a strong game. Raises from one to four include 2 1/2 honor tricks. Four honor tricks even with a forcing trick to raise to responding hand "pulls in" after an opponent doubles about a jump raise is preferred ing take-out requirement is about 1/2 trick but with a jump suit it can be made on a 1/2 as of old. The no-trump take-out bids are about 1/2 trick. The forcing overcall of opponent may now be made with a 5-3-3-3, or a singleton. Honor-tricks unchanged.

of the five forcing situations in the old code we now have four situations to consider. We will take up the changes in the new code.

How to train BABY'S BOWELS

Babies, bottle-fed or breast-fed, with any tendency to be constipated, would thrive if they received daily half a teaspoonful of this old family doctor's prescription for the bowels.

That is one sure way to train tiny bowels to healthy regularity. To avoid the fretfulness, vomiting, crying, failure to gain, and other ills of constipated babies.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is good for any baby. For this, you have the word of a famous doctor. Forty-seven years of practice taught him just what babies need to keep their little bowels active, regular; keep little bodies plump and healthy. For Dr. Caldwell specialized in the treatment of women and little ones. He attended over 3500 births without loss of one mother or baby.

PIGGY WIGGLY GROCERY AND MARKET MOVES TO NEW AND LARGER QUARTERS

The Piggy Wiggly Grocery and Market is now located in their new and larger store, the former location of Cobb's Department Store.

The new building offers 50 per cent more floor space than the former location, and provides extensive additional facilities in all departments for the serving of customers.

While in business for only a short time the Piggy Wiggly store has made rapid strides, as is indicated by the fact that the former location was entirely too small to meet the demands placed on it.

One of the important features of the new store is the great wealth of window space, which permits of the display of a vast amount of merchandise.

Extensive improvements are being carried out in all departments of the business, and elaborate and interesting plans are being made for the formal opening next week.

In the meantime, however, the facilities for serving the public are more extensive than in the former location. J. O. Garlington, who has had wide experience in business, is at the head of the Piggy Wiggly store. He established the business, and has made a large number of friends, and has built up a business of which any man might well be proud.

Dwain Kennedy is in charge of the market. Mr. Kennedy has had wide experience and enjoys the friendship and patronage of a large number of people in this district.

A complete announcement concerning the formal opening will appear in next week's issue of the Leader.

Condition J. W. Arn Slightly Improved

J. W. Arn, who was taken to the Lubbock sanitarium, Saturday afternoon, upon going through the clinic was found to be suffering from heart disease, Bright's disease and enlargement of the liver.

He became critically ill Saturday evening, and his immediate relatives notified. However, Sunday his condition was slightly improved, and though not out of danger, continues to feel better.

Hoover Home Destroyed

Early Sunday morning Mrs. Fred Hoover and daughter, Miss Fern, narrowly escaped being burned to death, when their eleven room frame residence on East Seventh Street was burned to the ground. A resident of the College grounds is reported to have first seen the blaze, and hurried to the residence of a neighbor and turned in the alarm.

The entire roof and upper part of the building were blazing before the firemen were notified. Mrs. Hoover and Miss Fern were asleep when the firemen arrived. They were awakened and carried to safety. John Blair and Max Touchon are given credit for doing this noble act.

Although everything possible was done by the firemen, the fire had made such headway, and with such a high wind blowing, it was impossible to save the structure. A piano and bedroom suite were saved, but the balance of the furniture, clothing, etc., were a total loss.

$3500 insurance is believed to have been carried on the house, with some insurance also on the furniture.

Carl Arnold, chief of the fire department, said that, in his opinion, the fires were caused by high wind disturbing electrical wiring.
