473 County Businesses Employ 2,477 People

How many business establishments are there in Lamb County? How many people do they employ? What is their annual payroll?

A new survey by the Census Bureau, aided by data supplied by the Social Security Administration, sheds light on the size and scope of the local business population.

It is part of a nationwide report, recently released, entitled "County Business Patterns."

For each section of the country it presents comparable figures on the number of local businesses engaged in retail trade, wholesale trade, manufacturing, finance, services and other branches of industry.

The figures show that Lamb County's business population is at a high level. New enterprises are constantly being launched in the area by local residents who are eager to be their own bosses.

Some existing businesses are discontinued each year, on the other hand, but the net change is on the plus side.

The report lists a total of 473 active enterprises in the county employing one or more people.

Of this number, 306 have 3 employees or less, 97 have from 4 to 7 employees and 62 have from 8 to 19.

The figures show that business establishments with fewer than 20 employees predominate in the local area, just as they do in every other part of the country.

All told, the local business firms provide employment for some 2,477 men and women of the area in jobs that are covered under social security. This does not include farm workers, government employees, domestic help and certain others.

The annual payroll for those covered by social security has been rising in recent years. Locally, it has reached a total of $8,280,000.

- FOR LAW, MERCHANTS, BANKS -

Check Violations Big Problem In County

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Check violations in Lamb County are a problem. But the problem is not a hopeless one. It can be solved with cooperation from the merchants and law enforcement officials. This is the first of two articles on the "hot check" problem. The first article is on the law itself, and the second will be on the problems encountered by the merchants and law officials in the county.)

BY TEX ROGERS

What takes up more time and is the biggest single law enforcement problem facing Lamb County today?

It used to be bootlegging. But not any more. Bootlegging offenses were overtaken a long time ago in this area by "hot check" violations.

Now the practice of writing checks with rubber ink is the biggest single headache on the books in both the county attorney and judge's offices.

"Working on hot check violations takes up as much time as all other criminal acts combined," says Curtis Wilkerson, Lamb County Attorney. "And it's not only a big problem here, but all over the state."

Besides being a problem for the county attorney, check violations deal misery to the stores or persons they are written on and to the banks, which must spend extra time and expense in bookkeeping procedures.

Bankers in Littlefield classify checks with insufficient funds or no account real headaches, because they require special handling and extra time.

No matter how you look at it, check violations end up costing a lot more than just the amounts they are written for.

Wilkerson explains that Texas has a law which is designed to help curb writing of checks by a person with the intent to defraud another. It is Article 567b of the Penal Code of Texas, and is divided into six parts.

The first section, titled "Unlawful Acts," gives the purpose of the law, and states:

"It shall be unlawful for any person or firm to make, draw, utter or deliver, or cause to direct the making, drawing, uttering or delivering, with INTENT TO DEFRAUD, any check, draft or order for the payment of money on any bank, person, firm or corporation knowing that the maker, drawer or payor does not have sufficient funds in or on deposit with such bank, person, firm or corporation for the payment in full of such check, draft or order, as well as all other outstanding checks, drafts or orders upon such funds then outstanding."

This section of the law simply says that there has to be an intent to defraud before the county attorney can set the legal wheels in motion. Many checks are written in complete honesty, so they are hard to be prosecuted on.

"Consequently," Wilkerson said, "Many checks never reach the court house. After a check is returned to a merchant he will simply locate the person who wrote the check and collect the money himself."

Or, when a check with insufficient funds goes through a bank, the bank itself will make an effort to get in touch with the writer so that the problem can be straightened out.

If the check is returned to the holder, then the second part of the law enters the picture. Section two, or "Prima Facie Evidence," states:

"Failure on the part of the maker or drawer thereof or the person causing the making, drawing, uttering or delivering of any check, draft or order, payment of which has been refused by the drawee, to pay the holder thereof the amount due thereon within ten (10) days after receiving notice that such check, draft or order has not been paid by the drawee, shall be prima facie evidence of intent to defraud and of knowledge of insufficient funds in, or on deposit with such bank, person, firm or corporation. Provided that nothing contained in this Section shall prevent the state from establishing intent to defraud or knowledge of insufficient funds in, or on deposit with, such bank, firm, person or corporation by direct evidence."

This section is set up to help prove intent to defraud, Wilkerson said. If a person is given notice of 10 days to pay the check and he does, then most likely there is no intent to defraud.

"But if a person doesn't try to pay back the check within 10 days, that fact can be used as evidence of intent to defraud in court," Wilkerson said.

The third section of the law, titled "Notice," is then used in connection with section two. It states:

"Notice as used herein shall be notice in writing sent by registered or certified mail or telegram addressed to such person or persons and firm at the place listed on the check, draft or order, and proof of compliance with this Section shall constitute prima facie evidence that such notice was given."

This means that it is very important that the address of the check writer should be on the check, Wilkerson said. Without an address, it may be very difficult to give notice, and without giving notice, the legal procedure is not fulfilled.

The remainder of the check law tells of the penalties involved, prosecutions and penalty for dismissal of complaints.

Punishment for a misdemeanor offense for a check written for less than $50 can be from two years in jail or a fine up to $1,000

CHECKS, WE GET CHECKS -- That's what Mildred Simmons, secretary to the Lamb County Attorney, says. Only these checks are worthless, Mrs. Simmons said that 107 notices of checks with insufficient funds or no account have been mailed to persons since Jan. 1. Check violations are a big problem in the county attorney's office, stores and banks.

Nutrition Important During Calving

Spring around the corner and Texas beef producers are in the midst of calving. Now is when the nutritional requirements are most important due to the effect they have on the 1968 calf crop, says Uel D. Thompson, animal husbandman at A&M University. During the calving season chores will soon be taking most of the producer's time and energy, and could well be the most important season of the year for him. The first question producers should answer before attempting to plan a breeding program is when should the calves be born. No one can give a recommendation that is agreeable to all beef cattle producers, but keeping the best marketing dates in mind is very important. For slaughter steer producers, their animals should be ready for market prior to June. Stocker cattle producers should plan for an October market. All cows should be bred in a 90-day period, says Thompson. During this same period, cows have to feed their offspring, maintain their own body, and carry on the reproductive function. It's just common sense that this much extra body activity will require more total nutrient intake to get the job done. First-year heifers have the added burden of growth, and should be fed separately from the mature herd. Breeding back could be quite a problem if these animals are not fed the best feed available, Thompson cautioned.

Beef cows can be rebred in about 60 days following calving. Some may settle in less time provided nutrition is good and no disease is present. Each producer should be sure his bull power is good enough to insure a profitable breeding season. A good rule of thumb for mating stock is one mature bull for 25-30 cows. Yearling and two-year-old bulls should have no more than fifteen and twenty-five cows, respectively. The bull battery should be subjected to a semen check prior to turnout time to eliminate any sterile bulls. A watchful eye is a good precaution against a calf crop loss after breeding occurs. Whether first-calf heifers should be bred to calve as two or three-year-olds is a perennial question. Much depends on their growth and development. They should weigh at least 700 pounds prior to breeding, explains Thompson. But it's only logical, concludes the specialist, that heifers to calve bred as two-year-olds will produce more pounds of marketable beef in their lifetime than those calved as three-year-olds.

Ruling Upheld Against Free Use Of Water For Flooding

In an opinion handed down Monday, the Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo affirmed the judgment of Judge Ledbetter in Hockley County in the case of Sun Oil Company v. Earnest Whitaker, et al. The High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 was an intervenor in this case. The Court of Civil Appeals held that Sun Oil Company failed to show its right to the free use of underground fresh water for water flooding purposes. Sun Oil Company contended that it had the right to use fresh water for water-flooding purposes by virtue of the "free wood and water" clause in its oil and gas lease. The Court rejected this contention pointing out that the intention of the parties should control and that the parties did not intend to allow the oil company to use water for this purpose when this

OWNER'S REPORT

It Would Be The 'Greatest'

By Bill Turner

Most people couldn't see them, of course, but most people tried hard.

AT ANOTHER "EXHIBIT" at the South Florida Fair and Exposition, a teen-age girl asked the fellow, quietly, "How do you tell the males from the females?"

"There are no fish in there at all," he told her.
"Startled, the girl declared: "Don't say that, I saw them."
This fellow concluded that Americans would believe anything, that they were pushovers for any kind of phony pitch.

ALL OF THIS, plus Jack Christian's windmill scheme, gives me an idea.

Four or five years ago, a fellow came into my office at Olton with samples of fish he had pumped to the surface with his irrigation well.

You could see these fish. They were about an inch long.
I laughed. When his story came out in the paper, everybody laughed, but a ton of folks went by his house to see his "underground fish."

The fellow swears to this day that the fish came from underground.

But some think a practical jokester planted them in his irrigation ditch.
It doesn't really matter.

All we have to do is make sure that people come to see the "tallest windmill in the world" that pumps up the "only underground fish in creation."

LET'S EXPLORE Jack Christian's idea to build the tallest windmill in the world in Littlefield.

It doesn't really matter how high it is. The American People are the biggest suckers in the world for anything that has the letters "est" behind it, or the word "most" in front of it.

We go to the "most exciting" show of all time, or the "wildest, toughest" rodeo ever, or the "most spectacular" unveiling of something-or-other.

Let's face it. If it's the "most" or the "greatest", we may as well give up.
We're hooked.

SO WHAT if Jack Christian's windmill were, say, six inches shorter than one in Podunk, Kansas.

It takes a long time for that kind of word to get around.

And besides, like the circus man said, "there's a sucker born every minute." If we're going to get the tourist dollar here, we need a gimmick.

It doesn't much matter if we can't prove it. You can fool some of the people all of the time and all of the people some of the time.

I READ an article the other day about a fellow who has been exhibiting invisible fish to people who insist they can see them.

At one presentation, a hobby show for employes of the USDA in Washington, D. C., this fellow got amazing results.

The apparatus was simple: a fish bowl filled to the brim with tap water and a little lamp to illuminate the project.

He also fixed up a mimeographed handout, "Some Facts about Tasmanian Invisible Fish," which explained that his collection of ichthyogocus raribus (four females, two males) were discovered in New Zealand's famed Crystalline Grotto.

It was explained that to count the fish, it was necessary to empty the bowl into a sieve of cheesecloth, which would strain out the fish.

When they were returned to the water, their number was ascertained by counting the splashes.

Really, all he meant to do was to be amusing.

BUT HE underestimated folks. A small boy started it. He had been staring at the bowl for five minutes when he shouted, "I see one, I see one."

The fellow asked the boy, "Where is it?" The youngster pointed toward the center of the bowl, but the man told him he still couldn't see it.

"Mister," he said contemptuously, "you must need new glasses."

Shortly two middle-aged women began gazing into the bowl.

"I only see two of them," one said finally.

"Where are the other four?"

The exhibitor decided the lady was on the level, so he suggested she look along the sides of the bowl.

"They like to stick to the sides."

Before long the ladies found a third fish, but the other three continued to elude them.

25 Years Ago

As announced by Mrs. E. B. Hewitt, Chairman of the local War Relief Production, the Red Cross Sewing room will re-open next Monday, March 23, with materials ready to continue the work.

The Upper Room

"Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst." (John 19:28)

Last summer the Frenchmen J.P. Marquant made a 102-mile hike through Death Valley in California. The air temperature reached 135 degrees, and ground temperatures went as high as 190. At the finish, he was described as appearing "in good physical condition except for swollen, blistered feet and a mighty thirst."

Another young man, Jesus, made a three-year hike among His fellowmen to transform the desert in men's souls. Men hanged Him on a cross, and He made it the supreme revelation of His Father's love.

Jesus went into the valley of death so that we may live in God's kingdom of life abundant. Only after He had helped others did He cry, "I thirst." The thirst of men's souls was more important to Him than His own physical thirst.

He believed that the love He came to reveal was worth any suffering He would be called upon to bear. How thirsty am I for this redeeming love?

PRAYER: Heavenly Father, we thank Thee that Thy Son believed we are worth suffering for. Help us to live in Thy love and to share it with others. In the Suffering Servant's name. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY: What a well of living water Jesus has opened to us by His thirst!

AMY'S ADLIBS

The Piper

By Amy Turner

THE SIGNS of spring are here. And, once again, all over town, the brave, lonely women are taking out their weeping handkerchiefs to bid their men farewell. The tune of the piper can clearly be heard as, up and down the street, they pour forth in a mighty stream, keeping time to sad cries of "goodbye, adieu, until we meet again." For she knows that he must go.

The time is here. The golf season is upon us once more.

THE LURE of the little white ball is an addiction with which no mere woman can ever compete.

Not that a lot of us, sadder but wiser, haven't tried.

In fact, that little white ball is the only thing I can think of that a man would rather chase after than a woman.

Give him a choice of Bardot or a foursome and, ten-to-one, the true golf addict will take the foursome every time.
Let's face it, He's sick.

ONE MIGHT think that the solution would be to join 'em, if you can't beat 'em. Not so.

In the first place, regardless of what they might say, men golfers just don't like lady golfers on their course.

In a way, this is easy enough to understand since they don't really play the same game. Women are much more flexible and, sensibly, tend to make up the rules as they go along.

Generally, women probably enjoy the game much more, since they often use the occasion to chat, discuss clothes, gossip, admire the scenery and, when possible, cheat.

On the other hand, the men like to cuss, tell jokes and, above all, feel absolutely, positively, beyond-all-doubt masculine.

So, it's easy to see how the ladies might cramp their style just a bit.

I DECIDED to try golf once and even had The Publisher agree to teach me, which decidedly was a mistake.

As we started out, I felt rather gay in my brand new outfit and marched up the tee to address the ball.

"Hello, ball," I said politely and took a good whack at it.

The Publisher winced and I couldn't understand because at least I hit it and I thought that was pretty good.

Besides, it was a beautiful day so I pointed out all the lovely cloud formations as we went along, stopped to listen to the birds singing and there were some flowers which I gathered.

All in all, I enjoyed the round but I noticed he was extremely quiet all afternoon.

In fact, he didn't say anything until I kept after him to tell me what I was doing wrong and, finally, he growled:

"Everything!"; then grabbed up his clubs and stalked off.

I can't say that I really received very much from that instruction.

AFTER THAT, I gave up the "trying to join 'em" bit and just resigned myself to the fate of a golf-widow.

I'm sure there are probably worse vices than golf. I don't know what they are but I'm sure there are some.

I can always console myself with the thought that fall will surely come with snows and cold, cold winds, my weeping handkerchief can be put away, the children's faces will shine with happy smiles. . . .

When Daddy comes marching home again. . . . from the golf course.

THE ABUNDANT LIFE

Travel Light

BY BOB WEAR

At best, the journey through life will be difficult; but this is not discouraging. We can make it much more difficult than it has to be; that is, we can decide, to some extent, what it will be. We can control many aspects of life, because we are not the helpless victims of a blind and cruel fate. We have the final say-so about most facets of the life experience.

Some find this journey we are making a hard and miserable way, but others find it delightful and rewarding. Those who find it relatively pleasant and satisfactory are the ones who travel light. These are the people who learn and abide by the Great Guide. They know that "the way of man is not in himself, that it is not in the man who walks to direct his own steps." Knowing this, they seek the guidance and help available to all of us.

Many, perhaps most, travellers are overloaded because they are carrying unnecessary burdens. They are carrying such things as memories of past mistakes and failures. Apparently, they fail to realize that remembering the miserable experiences of the past is, to some degree, just like going through them again and again. They have not forgiven themselves and forgotten. Too many of these people are dwelling on "what might have been" . . . they are "resurrecting vanished alternatives and brooding over past choices." All of us must realize that such mental morbidity is spiritually and intellectually unsound.

We must learn how to discard all excess baggage so we can travel light. Remembering and worrying about past mistakes, past sorrows, past losses and lost opportunities all belong in the discarded baggage. If we are going to remember, let us just remember the lessons we have learned from these experiences, and put the lessons with our happy memories. It is interesting to note that the message of the Christian concept tells us to travel light. In the true and wise view of life, today is today, and the light of this day should not be dimmed by the shadows of yesterday; the joy of today must not be debilitated by the sorrow of a past day. The viewpoint of Christian faith is in the following - - - "Forgetting what lies behind and straining forward to what lies ahead, I press on toward the goal. . . ."

We must also discard a feeling of over-anxiety about tomorrow. Reasonable and sensible concern is one thing, but anxiety is something else. We can easily overburden ourselves today by borrowing from tomorrow. This is such a tragic mistake. The truth is that we must throw off and discard whatever threatens to increase our daily load. We must do each day what is right, as we understand the right, and make sure to take care of all just and right obligations and duties which belong to the day. Inspiration teaches, ". . . let us strip off and throw aside every encumbrance (unnecessary weight), and sin which so readily clings to and entangles us, and let us run with patient endurance and steady active persistence the appointed course of the race that is set before us."

Let us travel light by discarding all that is unnecessary for the part of the journey we are travelling today.

SANDHILLS PHILOSOPHER

Saving Time

(Editor's Note: The Sandhills Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm expresses himself on daylight saving time this week.)

Dear editor:

There are times when I'm convinced I don't know anything at all about people.

For the last week or so I've been reading in every newspaper that turns up out here on this Johnson grass farm about the big hassle over daylight saving time.

As I understand it, Congress has passed a law installing daylight saving time all over the country and the only way a state can escape is to pass a special law exempting itself.

And last night when I saw a special television report on the situation was when I decided I don't know anything about people.

One man from a city said daylight saving time would give him an extra hour to play golf in the afternoons and he sure wanted that. A farmer said it would throw him and his cows and his milking and feeding schedule off and he was violently opposed to the change. A barber said he goes to bed at 9 every night and the thing would cause him to go to bed actually at 8 with the sun maybe still shining.

I don't understand any of this. There has been no Congress ever assembled that can tell me when to go to bed and when to get up, and there never will be. And while I don't play golf or mumbletypeg, I've never seen the day when I couldn't fish an hour longer if that's what I had in mind.

I go to bed when I'm sleepy and I get up when I wake up, and what difference could it possibly make to me what time Congress says it is? Any man who has to look at a clock to tell whether he's sleepy or not, probably needs a Congress to legislate his bedtime. Any man who has to appeal to Congress to give him an extra hour of golf, is a man I'm not familiar with.

And as for cows, it's durnp. you how many cows don't even know Congress exists.

There are times when I suspect the reason there are so many laws is that people want to be told.

Personally, I don't care whether Congress votes to turn the clocks backwards or forwards, or whether it votes to make every day in the week Saturday or summer to overlap winter. My clock hasn't kept correct time in years anyway, and I went six months once without turning the page on my calendar.

As I see it, the sun comes up in the morning and goes down in the evening in compliance with a law that got here before Congress did.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

THOSE SUNDAY DINNERS ARE TOO MUCH!

PAUL HARVEY SAYS

Infil-Traitors

Not all minorities are "colored." For example, certain intellectuals consider themselves to be a discriminated-against minority in a society where industrialists and athletes are often more prosperous.

Thus some intellectuals have been easy prey for Communists who promise a revolution to invert this ratio.

Similarly, some students, resentful of authority, readily turn rebellious when a trained revolutionary fans the flame.

Likewise, ethnic minorities are inclined to feel discriminated against and Communists are always seeking to convert their restlessness into rioting. In certain civil-rights organizations, they have had measurable success.

Presently, members of the Communist conspiracy in the United States are focusing their attention on Mexican-Americans.

Last month there was a meeting in Los Angeles attended by Mexican-Americans from California, Texas and other Southwest states.

Leading most discussions at this meeting was Communist Party Chairman Henry Winston of New York City. Also in attendance were Dorothy Healy and Mickey Lima, chairmen of the Communist Party's two districts in California. Other head Reds attending were Ben Dobbs, Sam Kushner and Bill Taylor. Kushner is Los Angeles editor of the Communist paper, "People's World."

First order of business was an attempt to rally border-area residents "to demand a White House conference to deal with their problems."

Another Mexican-American meeting has been scheduled for May "to protect the presence of Americans in Vietnam."

So while these misleaders profess to be interested in the Mexican-American's objectives, it is really their own Communist objectives they are trying to promote.

While Communists in the United States pose as champions of minority groups, they use these minority groups to advance worldwide objectives of the Communist conspiracy.

Their efforts might appear pathetic except that they have already come awfully close to getting some admitted Communists elected to public office in one border state.

Now if Henry Winston can form an organization of Mexican-Americans with enough border-states' votes to count, conceivably he could thus elect some Communists to Congress.

These sponsored politicians would then -- too late -- be revealed for what they are -- not minority spokesmen but Communist agents.

In the newest Communist Party publication, "Party Affairs," members are advised to use their positions in trade unions, nationality groups, community organizations and youth and student groups to urge the United States out of Vietnam.

Not all who want that war ended are Communists, which makes the Communists' disguise artfully deceiving. But if they are successful in using minorities to infiltrate Congress and to intimidate the White House, then the Reds could take the world one peace at a time.

Will just any milk do for your children?

Every day. The Borden Company invests a lot of extra time, effort and expense because we know that you want the best milk money can buy for your children. And why not, when milk is so important to a child's healthy growth? To produce the best milk, we at Borden's maintain the strictest quality controls, beginning on the dairy farm and continuing until the milk reaches you. Again and again — 23 times in all — we check Borden's Milk for freshness, purity, flavor and quality. The cream content of Borden's Milk exceeds all regulations and requirements. And that extra cream gives Borden's the taste and flavor children like best. We feel that anything less would be giving you less than you expect from Borden's — less than you want for your children. Borden's has been in the dairy business for over a hundred years. We've learned that mothers want the best milk for their children — even when the higher standards and extra care sometimes make it cost a little more.

Diversification Here Can Include Onions

IRRIGATION SHOULD BEGIN IMMEDIATELY ... right after onion plants are set

By TEX ROGERS

Folks on the South Plains are beginning to look around for something to grow besides cotton and grain sorghum. They're wanting to go into "diversified" agriculture.

Now, just about everyone knows that this country can grow almost anything. The problem is finding out what the farmers can grow that will have the most demand and greatest margin of profit.

In this area, the onion, that member of the lily family which dresses up many a hamburger, is finding a niche in giant tower of agriculture that stands over the South Plains.

There have been a few onions grown in this area for several years, but W. F. (Buster) Gilliam and Walter Hobgood are going at it in a big way with plans for setting 175 acres in the plants this year.

The two men have 50 acres planted near Shallowater, 48 acres at Anton and 27-28 more near Hart Camp. Plans call for about 50 more acres to be planted later in the season.

Hobgood has been in the onion business since 1957, while this is Gilliam's second year. The two men have joined together to make a good effort in onion-raising this season.

In partnership with Gilliam and Hobgood are Rhenard McCary of Littlefield and Toby Foster of Lubbock.

Last year, the men said, they had a good crop, averaging about 800 sacks at 50 pounds each per acre.

"A man can grow a lot of onions if the hail doesn't get to them," Hobgood said. "The problem after they're grown is finding a market."

Time of planting onions depends on the variety used, Hobgood said. The two men use a Grano variety and Spanish variety.

Grano is planted between March 1 - 25, and Spanish type between March 20 and April 15. Planting begins when the young plants are brought up from South Texas in the winter gardens around Carrizo Springs and Crystal City. But before setting starts, the land must be fertilized and the beds shaped.

Hobgood explained that the Grano variety can be set with three rows of onions to a bed, while the other variety can only take two rows. An average of 160,000 plants to the acre of Grano onions will be set.

Irrigation should begin immediately after the onions are set, Hobgood said, and the onions should be watered each week up to harvest time. The ground should be kept wet at all times and shouldn't be allowed to get dry moist.

"Irrigating for onions takes about the same amount of water per acre inch as it does for grain," Hobgood said.

Harvesting of the Grano variety begins about the 1st of June, Hobgood said, according to the amount of daylight the onions have for that time of year. Then the other varieties start getting ready to gather.

It takes about one month to harvest both types, he said. The amount of labor depends on the size of field being planted or harvested, Hobgood said.

A 27-28-acre field can be handled by 85-140 workers during planting.

Most labor is being furnished locally by crew leaders through the Texas Employment Commission office in Littlefield.

During harvesting, about 100 workers can gather the onions on the same field.

Both Gilliam and Hobgood are pursuing the onion venture with the idea of coming up with another crop for the South Plains.

"It looks like the farmers are going to have to come up with another crop besides cotton or grain," Gilliam said. "And this can be good onion country."

Hobgood said production costs run about $300 per acre, if the farmer owns his own land. It will be higher, he said, if the land isn't his own.

He explained that fertilizer costs from $35-$40 per acre, and the spraying with insecticides adds to the total.

"It takes about seven sprayings to do the job," Hobgood said, "and that amounts to about $4 per acre at each spraying."

"A farmer should gross about $500 on the average for a crop of onions, if the hail doesn't get it," he said. "That should leave a profit of about $200."

Come July or August, the men will have an idea of how good the onion business can be when tried on a large scale. Plans right now are calling for another crop in 1968.

Waggin' Tongue

By TEX ROGERS

We've written before about how much value the local 4-H and FFA livestock shows are to the participants and the rest of the community.

Just about everyone realizes the educational values such stock shows have to the young folks who will take up the plow and finish the row when the oldsters go to the house. Nothing more can be said also about the responsibility given to a young person who has an animal to care for and show in competition against others.

Of course, when a young man or little lady (she may live in boots and jeans and only wear a dress to Sunday School) take on an animal project they are engaging in a worthwhile activity which builds character and an interest to take up their time. Also, we know the value of sportsmanship derived from the project.

Now, it comes to another facet of the livestock show which every FFA boy and 4-Her hopes to gain the final reward.

That comes after the final show, after many hours of patient work and many miles on the road. It's the sale to wind up a long season of exhibiting. Of course, some boys and girls may get to sell their animals early if they win a championship.

But everyone can't be champions all the time. So that leaves them to sell at the local show.

When the Littlefield Area Livestock Show winds up Saturday with the judging of the steers, a lot of animals will go on the auction block. It seems only right that the youngsters should get a good price for their animals.

The average expense in a barrow project is about $30 for the animal and $30 for feeding and other costs, giving a total of $60.

Average expense in a lamb project is $35 for the animal and $20 for feeding, for a $55 total.

A steer project, however, is much more expensive, with a cost of $150 for the animal and $200 for feed and other costs.

Not figured in those costs are the extra expenses for making other stock shows, plus all the time spent on raising and grooming the animal so that it will be the best the boy or girl could exhibit.

Also, the qualities achieved and lessons learned through a livestock feeding program cannot be measured.

not be offset in a dollar or cents value. Knowledge of animals and how to produce better projects are just too valuable to measure by the dollar.

These boys and girls entering the Littlefield Area Livestock Show have devoted a lot of time to making their projects the best they possibly can. It is only right that they be rewarded for their efforts by the rest of the community.

The youngsters should be encouraged all they can today, because it is they who will be the community's leaders tomorrow.

Irrigation Age, that upcoming publication from Littlefield, has come out with an edition which winds up its season on West Texas Cotton: Can Solve Its Problems?

West Texas cotton problems are all linked to quality, it is said, but big strides are being made to come up with some good answers to the quality questions.

New and improved varieties which are fast-maturing, storm resistant, long-stalked and wilt-tolerant, are the ultimate goal. But these research projects are being done in the direction.

Also listed are quality planning programs and production improvements which should be of benefit to any grower who wants to see South Plains cotton get back on top as the leading money-making crop.

Texas Draft Call For May Is 885

The state's 155 draft board will be called upon to furnish 885 men for the armed forces in May, Colonel Morris S. Schwartz, state Selective Service director, said Thursday.

This compares with 675 for April, 761 for May 674 for February, and 761 for January.

There will be no question of the physical and mental production examination of men in April, Colonel Schwartz said.

This continues a ban on examinations since early January because of the budgetary limitation of travel funds.

The state Selective Service director said no decision has been made as to whether or not examinations would be held in May.

Wildlife Week Slated

Conservation districts, the Soil Conservation Service and other agencies are joining with the National Wildlife Federation to observe National Wildlife Week, March 19-25, according to Merrill Brigrance chairman, Lamb County Soil and Water Conservation District.

The theme, "This is Your Land," emphasizes the responsibility that all citizens have in protecting and improving the land and other natural resources, thus benefiting wildlife.

For years, the SCS has helped landowners through local conservation districts apply practices that benefit wildlife. These include stripcropping, grassed waterways, field borders of grasses and shrubs, woodland management, range and pasture development, farm ponds, watershed protection and flood prevention.

Disulfoton Has Label Clearance

Disulfoton (Di-Syston) a systemic insecticide, has received a new label clearance for cotton seed treatment from the Pesticides Regulation Branch, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

John G. Thomas, Texas A&M University Extension entomologist, said the prior label clearance permitted a maximum rate of 4 ounces per 100 pounds of cotton seed.

Thomas said the new label clearance would provide for cotton seed treatment at the rate of 8 ounces per 100 pounds of delinted cotton seed, an increase of 4 ounces of insecticide.

Once nematodes get at your cotton, yields go down and so do profits. But with FUMAZONE 86 soil fumigant applied at only 1 to 2 gallons overall an acre, you can take care of root-knot, sting, meadow and other nematodes—those microscopic, worm-like soil pests that attack plant roots, suck away profits.

FUMAZONE 86 soil fumigant increases yields up to 1/2 bale an acre. Many High Plains farmers just like yourself tell us that's exactly what happened to their yields after their soils were treated with FUMAZONE 86. It can be applied right from the drum. No mixing, no diluting, no nozzles clogged with foreign material. You can use the chisel method, the plowsole method or inject FUMAZONE 86 into your irrigation water. Could you ask for greater flexibility? Sure you could. So here it is. Apply FUMAZONE 86 before planting, at planting or after planting. It's the only type of soil fumigant that can be used on living plants. Ask your Dow farm chemicals supplier about it.

COTTON TALKS

area's cotton industry.

"The decision of a turban-topped Indian in Pakistan to plant wheat instead of cotton, or vice-versa; the decision of a housewife as to whether she buys and uses all-cotton fabrics or fabrics of cotton and synthetic blends; the results of an agronomist's effort to breed cold resistant cotton varieties with desirable quality characteristics; the economic and political climate of our nation in future years; the results obtained from increased cotton promotion — these and many, many other variables will determine our future," he said.

He pointed out that since it is impossible to assign a numerical value to the influence of any one of these things, it is impossible to pin down with any degree of accuracy where the cotton industry will be at any given time in the years ahead.

"So you can readily see that any opinion on the future of cotton must necessarily be based on faith. Faith in the people who are constantly conducting research on both the production and the utilization of cotton. Faith in the people of the Plains to put research findings to good use. Faith in the vast productive potential of the Plains. And last, but not least, faith in our system of government."

On the national cotton scene Johnson called attention to a number of facts he believes will make a substantial contribution to the future well-being of cotton. And he made it clear that the cotton industry of the Plains could never divorce itself from conditions which exist in the overall cotton picture.

By the end of the current marketing year, he said he expected to see the cotton carry-over in the U.S. reduced to about 12.5 million bales, down from almost 17 million the previous year.

He singled out the increasing popularity of durable or permanent press apparel as one of the things helping cotton's markets, telling the group that cotton is the "work-horse" in permanent press fabrics. When cotton and man-made fibers are blended, he stated, the man-made are added to bolster the strength of cotton, not to improve permanent press or crease-retention.

"And this is the reason we have seen in the past few months many manufacturers reducing the man-made fiber content of blended shirts from 65 per cent to only 50 or even 35 per cent."

free, glandless seed in some of our better known varieties, according to Johnson, shows great promise of improving the farmer's total income from a bale of cotton.

He quoted Dalton Gandy, Cotton Production Specialist for the National Cottonseed Products Association, to the effect that an international food manufacturing concern is now offering around 10 cents per pound for cottonseed meal made from glandless seed, which would mean at least $150 a ton for unprocessed cotton seed — more than double the 1966 price.

He predicted that 90 per cent or more of all cottonseed oil and meal would be going into food for human consumption within 10 years, or less, provided development continues at its current rate.

"This would mean somewhere in the neighborhood of $30 or $35 per bale more for the producer — the equivalent of six or seven cents per pound extra for lint."

Johnson noted that these and other bright spots in the cotton picture are the results of research and promotion on all levels, and said he expected even more rapid and spectacular results from the newly approved Cotton Research and Promotion Act.

Under that act, producers will contribute $1 per bale on U.S. production to pay for expanded efforts in the fields of research and promotion.

It was pointed out that in recent years some 60 per cent or more of High Plains cotton has been going into export markets. But Johnson said High Plains farmers now have the economic incentive to produce for domestic mill consumption, and will be using all the improved varieties and production tools available to compete in that market.

For the years immediately ahead, he told the bankers to expect four things: (1) Higher quality, more marketable cotton from the High Plains, (2) A reduction of the cotton surplus to around 7 million bales, which Washington planners consider a desirable reserve, (3) Increased domestic consumption of cotton as research and promotion funds begin to pay off, and (4) A gradual return to larger cotton acreage allotments to supply the growing demand.

Americans can choose from a variety of 6,000 foods in fresh, canned, frozen, concentrated, ready mixed or other forms.

Board of the Research and Promotion for the first time March 1967. They elected a manager, responsible for making collection, and administrative procedures for to obtain refunds. Cortwright, Mississippi farmer and former of the National Cotton was elected Chairman board. Named Vice-president was J. Russell Kennerly, California. Mr. Roy B. Davis, Mississippi Cooperative was elected secretary. Mr. Powers, former AS-Director of Field Service National Cotton regulations on how the program will work with the first buyer making collections have not been formulated. This could mean the collector would be the ginner (if he buys the cotton), the country merchant who buys either for export or domestic markets, the mill which buys direct from producers, or Commodity Credit Corporation if the cotton goes into the Government loan.

Refunds, according to the first information from Washington, will be made from serially numbered request forms through a central office, probably in Washington.

It is presumed that further details on both collections and refunds will be worked out by members of the Cotton Board, Powers and USDA officials at an early date.

.....we are going to have a flourishing cotton industry on the Texas High Plains for many years to come, but it isn't just going to happen — we are going to have to make it happen. And I have enough faith in this area's wisdom, ingenuity and pertinacity of its people to believe we can and will make it happen."

So concluded an address made March 17 to some 150 Panhandle and South Plains bankers and their wives by Donald A. Johnson, Executive Vice President of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. Title was "The Future of Cotton on the High Plains."

The bankers were gathered in Lubbock for the third annual meeting of Lubbock National Bank's area correspondents.

Johnson cited a multiplicity of factors which will have significant effects on cotton's future and the future of this

Minimum Wage

By Larry Fuhrmann

Our State Capitol Correspondent

ers of the minimum wage bill, now committee in the Texas House of Representatives, had their chance to testify before the Bernal-Cruz Fair Wage...

calls for a minimum wage of $1.25 for all employees within the state of Texas...

Democrats of Texas, represented by Wright of the University of Texas expressed their approval and desire for the minimum wage law passed in this Legislature in the past...

Dean pointed out that 20 per cent of the population live in dire poverty—that Texas is all the rest of the states in alleviating this large minority group...

But money is the deciding factor, say those arguing for the bill. Only when there is more money in the bill...

But, as a spokesman for the Texas Citrus Growers said, giving a man more money doesn't necessarily mean that he's going to spend it on an education for his children.

Minimum wage of $1.25 would not bring employment and depression to the Texas as some opponents of the bill forecast.

Some families whose incomes are $2,000 or less are working—with father and mother alike and sometimes the older children employed full-time.

Let us be sure that all who do put in an honest day's work are paid an honest living wage.

The Rev. James Navarro, a Baptist minister from Houston, told the lawmakers that the minimum wage is needed to free a "people held in economic bondage for over a hundred years."

When the town was laid, some sources show this was years after the meeting in Henry Miller's home...
