USE OF INSTITUTE WOULD BE GIVEN LOCAL DOCTORS

Simpson Sanitarium Would Be Used; Dr. Simpson Approves Plan

Plans are underway to establish a Community hospital in the building now occupied by the Simpson Sanitarium, the object being to have all local physicians use such an institution for their patients. In an interview with Dr. J. D. Simpson, owner and operator of the Simpson Sanitarium, he said: "I am heartily in favor with such a plan. I think it feasible—I think it is workable—and I think it is the Community's duty, in the same way as to have a court house, or anything else that is of a public nature, to have a community hospital." At the request of local parties who are interested in the College property for a community hospital, a man capable of acting as business manager for the local institution, was here Tuesday investigating the matter, and will return Thursday for further consultation. Dr. Simpson stated he was planning on leaving Littlefield soon to take post-graduate work at the Medical Center, San Francisco, Calif., to be gone probably a year, and, gives this as his reason for urging the organization of a Community hospital at once.

Dog on Wheels Goes to His Reward

Barney, courageous Amherst bull-aidale, is dead. The husky six-year-old dog, owned by J. M. Brown, Amherst, went to his reward May 27 while all Amherst mourned. When Barney lost the use of both hind legs through an auto accident about a year ago, Brown built him a two-wheeled carriage which amply replaced the paralyzed limbs. Barney rolled blithely about Amherst and made a host of friends. Later a news service sent the big dog's picture to newspapers all over the southwest. Story goes that Barney saved the life of 11-year-old Weatherford Parks once when young Parks, entangled in the reins, was being dragged along a road by a runaway mule. Barney, they tell it, seized the reins in his mouth and stopped the mule. Barney's remains were laid to rest on a plot of ground near Amherst. The two-wheeled carriage was buried with him. But Amherst won't forget Barney for a long time.

AN OLD FRENCH CUSTOM

The appearance on the high seas of the gigantic liner Normandie, seeking to bring supremacy in Atlantic passenger transport back to the French flag, is a little reminder that French skill in building ships is a tradition with a very ancient lineage.

During the last century, it has been more or less taken for granted that the British were the world's most skillful builders. British navy and merchant marine outclassed all others; most of us assumed that it always had been that way.

Yet as recently as the day of Nelson, French designers were far superior to those of England. The ships with which Nelson destroyed French sea power were actually inferior, in design and construction, to the French ships.—Memphis Democrat.

COMES THE REVOLUTION

If you buy a meal in Wisconsin nowadays, and pay more than 25 cents for it, you have to eat some cheese with it. Or, to be exact, you have to buy some cheese, whether you eat it or not. This is under the terms of a new law, signed to stimulate consumption of Wisconsin's dairy products.

Maybe you don't like cheese? You'll buy it anyhow. And it somehow reminds one of the story of the radical who was haranguing a group of bums on the beauties of Communism. When the revolution came, he assured them, they would all eat strawberries and cream for breakfast.

One brave soul objected, saying that he didn't like strawberries and cream. The orator wagged his finger sternly and shouted: "Comes the revolution and you'll eat strawberries and cream—and like it!"

... And in Wisconsin, you'll eat cheese, nowadays—and like it.

Extend Sympathy to Parents in Death of Mary Louise Sanders

There were two speakers at last Thursday's luncheon of the Littlefield Rotary club. Tilden Wright, who has been a student at the University of Texas, and who will enter West Point in the near future, gave a very interesting talk on the life of a student in a modern university. Judge E. S. Rowe talked on the equipment, tackle and clothing to be taken on a fishing trip in Colorado.

The program for the luncheon was in charge of F. O. Boles, J. O. Garlington presided in the absence of president A. B. Sanders and the incoming president, J. S. Hilliard. A resolution of sympathy at the death of Mary Louise Sanders, daughter of President and Mrs. Sanders, was passed by the club. The resolution reads as follows:

WHEREAS, Almighty God, in his infinite wisdom and through his divine power, has seen fit to call from our midst the soul of Mary Louise Sanders, the beloved daughter of our president and fellow-Rotarian, A. B. Sanders, and his good wife; and

WHEREAS, A. B., by means of his unselfish devotion and service to our Rotary Club and the Community in general, has endeared himself to the Rotarians and his fellow-citizens, and it is fitting at this time that we extend to him and Mrs. Sanders our heart felt sympathy;

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the Littlefield Rotary Club, of Littlefield, Texas, that we express to said bereaved parents the fact that we miss little Mary Louise we do not understand the mind of the Divine Providence nor his divine purposes in all things, but we do believe he knows what is best for us, and we, therefore, commend the bereaved parents to look to him for comfort, cheer and support in this hour of their trial.

May we say with the poet:

"Now we who watched her sail away,
Will miss her barque come to us in the busy day;
For all our hearts hold memories dear,
And in silent sorrow will drop a tear.

But she has peacefully furled the sail,
In moorings sheltered from storm and gale;
And greeted the friends who have gone before,
O'er the unknown sea to the unknown shore."

And to A. B. and Mrs. Sanders we say:

"We pray God to bless you with strength and health
For these go farther than all wealth
That might be given to you on this day
Or words that any of us might say"

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that a copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Club and a copy sent to President A. B. and Mrs. Sanders.

LUMBERING GOLD

by Aubrey Boyd

AUTOCASTER SERV.

INSTALLMENT
 Young Ed Maitland, New England seafaring the hardened gambler met on a trip to the fields in '97, when rich ores there first Pacific coast. Maitland, New England seafaring was determined to was family fortunes, who took Lucky Rose, woman who had a keg for a keep-alive, the money man's attentions, the money man, and his drunk, Ozone, Brent, old and Garnet, a well-to-do, who hired Maitland to haul his stuff the mountains were among up the gold trail, a camp in the middle trail bow, because Speed in the trail till it was almost the hickie crowd. Fallon, Speed and a hand above the waters from breakers, came to offer his services and the king his partner had a drink, but he took a peep could fire on the trail to rush the camp. Speed, later old gun, added when Speed seemed the upper hand, Fallon with an exultant coming. "Now go on with surething gamblers herd through behind 'em. It means checkin' in to a mansize outfit. Will you go?"

 For an instant Maitland thought of trying to hold him by force, but something primal and absolute in his decision prevented. The police squadron was now within yards of the turn of the defile into the creek canyon.
 "I can't wait to argue with ye, boy," said the outlaw abruptly. "All I can say is, I'm wishin' ye a better run of luck than you've had. The best won't be too good." He wrung his partner's hand in a tight grip. Then, as remonstrance fell on Maitland's lips, he stepped over the rock corral and set down in the trail, with both eyes fixed on the red bandages from his head.
 The police captain halted his troop within a few yards of the surprising challenge, while the crowd backed up cautiously behind.
 "Gents," said Speed solemnly, "the trail's barred."
 A pair of level eyes eyed him in a cool, impersonal study. "Barred till when?" There was the unmistakable hint of irony in the exact casualness of the officer's tone.
 "Until I'm downed where I stand, or a pack of outlaws stambles out of ye does some chores on it."
 Inspector Drew eyed his command to certain gifts of understanding which had not been idle on his way from Skagway. His eyes wrinkled thoughtfully, and then with a slow gleam of humor, he asked a surprising question.
 "Would it be all right, so far as my men are concerned, if we fixed the bridge?"
 "By Jingo, Mister," said the outlaw blankly, "if you mean what that listens like, you sure take my money. But we couldn't leave ye do it."
 "Doesn't matter," Drew replied. "Bridges are in my line." He dismounted and gave an order to his men, who unlimbered some axes and other tools and went down to the bridge.

Speed made his partner sit down to rest in the shadow of a rock near the creek. Then he returned to Fallon who stood somberly quiet under Brent's guard, and told the old trailman to lower his gun.
 "You owe me a thousand dollars, Fallon," he said soberly, when the deposited camp boss was uncovered.
 "Give him his six-shooters, Brent," said Speed. This was done. "The trail's fixed," Speed explained, "and I resign all claims to the job of trail boss. We're talkin' level. I don't aim to tangle with the rangers' law after we cross the summit. But where we stand there ain't a law between you and me and the sky. We don't even know that it's Alaskan ground. You've got a bad arm, so I'll discard my best gun, and we'll settle the feud right here."
 "We'll settle it when I've got both hands limber," said Fallon, grimly, as the train, now in movement again, wound slowly by.
 Brent back-trailed toward Liarsville with the partners. Maitland felt weak from reaction to the scenes of blood which the other two had accepted so lightly. He was troubled in another way about Garnet's hauling job.
 This anxiety was relieved, however, in an unimagined way. When they reached the cache, they found that Garnet was gone. A note attached to one of the packs advised them that he had left Alaska, deferring his trip to Dawson till the following spring, when — he had learned — steamers would be running up the Yukon. The note, dated two days before, assigned them his outfit and the horses, free of all claims.
 It was windy dusk when they emerged from the river canyon and looked down on an astonishing apparition of canvas above the Skagway beach. A tent city had taken shape in their brief absence — a mushroom town of illuminated mushroom rooms, gowing in the mist and lit by kerosene flares that sputtered garishly in the wind.

 Through misted darkness, the camp lights defined a twisted main street whose course had been determined by the accidental camp sites of the first comers.
 Avoiding this, the two partners detoured around to the quieter section where they had left the unmoved part of Garnet's outfit. The spot was hard to locate in the maze of tents, and when they did find it, there was no sign of either of the cache or the horses.
 "I'll skin the thinnin' polecat who does this," Speed announced in a voice that carried over a wide area.
 Though the neighboring tents were empty, a man appeared suddenly in answer to his challenge, from one of the narrow lanes. He wore a dark suit of evening, but studied fashion, with the collar of the jacket upturned, set-socked shining shoes, and black dicer hat. "D-did you l-loose somethin'?" he inquired.

She stood framed for a moment between the door beams.

 "A team of horses and a pack," said Speed. "Don't get nervous, I ain't specially suspectin' you."
 "Well," said the other, "I seen a pair of horses like th-like that yesterday. A guy was leadin' 'em."
 "Know the man?"
 "I know where h-h-he hangs out. But I wouldn't want to be seen st-st-ting to be seen steerin' ye."
 This helped allay the remaining doubts in Speed's mind. "How careless would you get for fifty dollars?" he asked.
 "K-keep me in s-s-sight," said their informant. "B-b-b-b—" Leaving the word suspended, he moved silently away.
 The recovery of the horses was necessary, but Maitland wondered whether it would be worth what they might be walking into. It was the sociable hour after dusk when saloon door swung inward, and they followed their conductor's weaving course through the tent lanes without being particularly observed. He crossed the street at the other end, near the beach, stopping before a structure that had no sign.
 The stranger entered the place and came out a minute later. "G-go in and be havin' a d-a drink," he said as he paused for a moment beside them, speaking in as rapid an undertone as his tongue would allow. "The party you're lookin' for is liable to b-b-b—" And he drifted silently into the dark.
 Speed frowned after him; then stepped up to the pool of light under the swing doors and pushed them brusquely open. He nodded to Maitland and they went in.
 Speed bought drinks at the bar. "This don't look like a horse thief's hangout," he said, absently noting the card the dealer was turning. Gambling was the only vulnerable point his partner had ever observed in his armor of vigilance.
 When some minutes passed without a sign of the man with the dicer, he poured another drink and lifted his change off the bar. "This is interestin'," he said, "but it ain't catchin' us no horses."
 With the glass lifted halfway, however, a sound from outside checked his arm. Through the blended rumble of the camp and the beach surf, floated some chords of a deep-toned guitar. The swing doors opened, and Rose glided within them. She stood framed for a moment between the door beams with a charming, light-dazzled effect.
 When she saw the men at the bar, she stopped with a look of question and smiled slowly. Maitland caught his breath. Neither he nor Speed, who regarded her with a brooding stare, had guessed how beautiful she was, or how her gypsy grace could be heightened by light and color. She was immaculate—which some belles of the mining camps were not.
 She drew up before the outlaw with a whimsical look. Her voice was a rich overtone to the dreaming strings.

 "My Old Man—my father, I mean—thinks he knows everything! Why, gee-whis... he reads the gasoline ads, specially the ones with pretty girl pictures in 'em, and then he gets a tankful of stuff nobody ever heard of. Yeah, a swell guy but a poor picker."
 "Well, this afternoon being Sunday, we went for a ride... me all dressed up in a goofy bonnet with a big scratchy bow under my good ear. The traffic was terrific and the heat was goshawful. So out of sheer irritation I grabbed my fortywinks."
 "When I woke up, a motorcycle cowboy was telling Pops that he couldn't park in the middle of the parade. I thought there were tears in Father's eyes—maybe it was only perspiration—as he answered 'My engine's dead. Help me push the car over to the curb.'"
 "Boyishness, was that motor hot! Clouds of steam sizzling out of the radiator. Fuzzy gurglings and thumpings under the hood. For crying out loud, was Dad's face red when Auntie's car passed, and they saw us stuck there! But the real bad news is the bill we got for towing and for two new bearings."

"No sir, for the life of me, I can't see the economy of using cheap gasoline... especially when Phillips 66 is engineered for specific summer weather, same as it is for delimitate winter cold. Anyone can see that a gasoline made different for the different seasons of the year is gonna give better results. What's the sense of trying to save cents and wasting dollars, when you can get 100% custom-tailored gasoline—yes, I mean Phillips 66—for the same price as ordinary gas?"

My Daddy learned gasolines are different!

P.S. Since writing the above, the car's been fixed and we're using Phillips 66, and Mother says the budget's in better shape than ever because we're getting more miles and less repair bills.

"I heard you were looking for horses."
 She smiled a little at the inflection his anger had betrayed him into. "Lefty isn't much of a come-on. He doesn't know what it's all about. Only that I asked him to watch and let me know when you came into camp. The horses and outfit were rescued from a thief who was trying to sell them for his passage out. I held them so you wouldn't shoot up the camp and get shot, looking for them. And because I wanted to be sure of meeting you in a quiet place. That makes everything clear, doesn't it?"
 "It would be simpler for you, maybe, if Fallon was as dead as Owens?"
 She did not answer the reference to Owens. "I'd a lot rather it was Fallon than either of you," she said. "We have that much in common."
 Speed shook his head at her gravely: "I begin to feel sorry for this man, Fallon. And him figurin' all the time you're his friend."
 "He doesn't," she returned, in a voice that was both sombre and tense. "He's no fool. He just doesn't believe I'd play against him. The why of that doesn't matter. But I've no reason to be his friend. Less than ever now..." A deeper shadow crossed her face, and she added, with a vibrant fall in her tone. "It would have been simpler, as you say, if you'd killed him."

 The restivity of the outlaw slipped its rein: "Whatever Fallon may be, we don't need a woman's help to fight him. Do we go hunt those horses, or will you say where they are and what we owe you for your trouble? Come on, Bud."
 "They're out in back," Rose intimated, "through that door. You might live to think better of me if you listen to what I tell you now. When you leave this camp, go through the tent lanes the way you came. Don't follow the street, and specially keep clear of The Pack Train saloon. You're on the watch for Fallon, but sometimes the danger you're not looking for is the worst... My guesses have a way of coming true."
 Speed moved toward the door at the rear of the tent. He pulled it open, revealing a clear space of graveled between it and the next enclosure. The light fell on the gates, held by the man with the black dicer.

"Get out of my range," Speed growled, "before I push you over." And waiting till the man had vanished, he pulled the team into motion.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

BY GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent

Austin, Tex., June 19. (UP)—Governor James V. Allred is earning a reputation that may put him down in history with the "states rights" advocates since Jefferson Davis.

Latest plea for preservation of state sovereignty by the governor brought a prompt retort from Elliott Roosevelt, son of the president. The incident occurred when the two spoke on the same platform at the recent state Young Democrats convention in Amarillo.

The battle for "states rights" started in the governor's inaugural address.

Allred figuratively took off his coat and went to work when federal oil control seemed likely. He appeared in person before the United States Senate committee to speak against the Thomas control bill. The recent NRA decision, which doomed the Thomas bill, must have been a source of some personal satisfaction to Allred.

A state holiday was declared, incidentally, on Jefferson Davis' birthday.

Struck into a belated veto message with the bill to allow appointment of more nursery inspectors were other indications of Allred's creed:

"In my judgment, we have gone about far enough in the matter of regulating the minute details of business and personal life... the Department of Agriculture and other departments already have enough inspectors and representatives "inspecting around" at the cost of business and industry; and this bill in my judgment merely extends the functions and personnel of an already top-heavy government."

Sen. Arthur P. Duggan of Littlefield, chairman of the state senate tax research committee, back from an extensive tour of the state, has made up his mind Texans belong to the "best-government-least-government" school.

Said Senator Duggan: "I have arrived at the conclusion that the people of Texas at this moment want the state to confine itself to indispensable and accepted functions—keeping order, dispensing justice through the courts, providing the fundamentals of education and road maintenance.

—and the citizen, in order that he shall have money of his own, is determined that the state shall stop taking so much of it away from him in taxes."

Granting truth of Sen. Duggan's assumption, the increase to $50,000,000 in state biennial appropriations by the last legislature, was not strictly in line with the main-in-the-street's views.

To offset the larger appropriations, legislators levied one new tax, on marble boards and coin-operated machines, and tightened loopholes in three existing tax laws.

Occupation taxes on coin-operated machines are estimated to yield $700,000 annual revenue. Revision of cigarette tax laws should add $4,000,000 to the state's revenues, and improvement of the gasoline tax collections $600,000 more.

A "true labeling" act passed to prevent gasoline tax evasions is expected to add about $200,000.

How much the bill designed to push delinquent tax payments will bring cannot be fairly estimated. Possibilities are almost unlimited.

Washington, June 19 (Special) Constitution of the United States has not received so much attention in Washington as it is now receiving, since the historic occasion of the Hon. Tom Campbell, one of the early Tammany Congressmen, propounded on the floor of the House the classic question: "What's the Constitution between us and them?"

It has been a shadowy something in the background of the political scene, the Constitution has become the theme of almost every conversation. It promises to be the liveliest issue that the voters of the country have had to wrangle about in many years. Not since the free election of 1896, upon which the Presidential election of 1896 turned, has a fundamental question stirred up so wide-spread popular interest, as the question raised by the Supreme Court's decision invalidating the NRA.

Eyes on "Grass Rooters" It is not stretching the facts to say that a very considerable number of Senators and Representatives have been willing and even anxious to go along with the Administration are beginning to be seriously concerned over the outlook for the year's election.

The promptness with which the "Grass Rooters" conference of Midwestern Republicans seized upon the Constitutional issue, and the apparent enthusiasm with which the members of that group has been received by the rank and file of the Republican party, has set the boys on Capitol Hill to wondering whether the Elephant was really as dead as they thought it was.

That they are seemingly hunting for now is ways of carrying out the basic idea of a National Government centralized in and administered from Washington, without bringing about again of the nine members of the United States Supreme Court.

There are good constitutional laws in both parties and in both houses of Congress. For various reasons, chiefly concerned with their own political futures, most of them have kept their mouths shut. Their colleagues are running them for advice in the effort to find out what the Constitution does and does not permit them to do.

Supreme Court Record Some of these constitutional laws have been digging into the records and have put a pretty effective stop to the early outbursts against the power of the Supreme Court.

The figures show that in the 146 years since the Constitution has been in effect the Supreme Court has passed upon 24,016 public laws enacted by Congress, and has decided that only 59 of them were unconstitutional. In 27 of these cases the decision of the Court was unanimous. There have been only 10 of these much criticized "five to four" decisions.

Some of the constitutional sharks are getting a laugh by pointing out that 19 of the laws declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court were enacted between 1920 and 1929, a period in which the Republican Party was in complete control of Congress and the Executive. That is sauce for the goose, is pointed out, is equally good sauce for the gander.

Matter of Constitution As this is being written there appears to be no abandonment of the idea for a general policy of tightening Federal control over relations which have heretofore been left to the state to regulate. How much of his sort of thing can be done constitutionally is the question.

There is talk of promoting interstate agreements which could be ratified by Congress; there is also talk of strengthening and extending the powers of the Federal Trade Commission, which has been functioning effectively for more than 10 years in settling trade disputes and enforcing fair business practices.

The question whether even the states have the power to regulate hours of labor and wages has come to light with the re-examination of Supreme Court decisions. Several cases are cited in which the Court held that no state had such power, and one in which an act of Congress establishing minimum wages for women and children in the District of Columbia to be unconstitutional.

There are very few constitutional lawyers in or out of Congress who believe that the Wagner Labor Disputes bill is constitutional, but under the pressure of the Labor Lobby it possibly will be passed.

Cabinet Changes Rumored Some idea of confusion in Washington at this time is conveyed by the revival of gossip about changes in the administrative set-up. The latest rumor is that Postmaster General Farley is getting out in the fall and that Dan Roper will succeed him in the Post Office; that Frank C. Walker will follow Roper as Secretary of Commerce. Rumors that Madam Secretary Perkins and Attorney General Cummings are about to resign are unverified. There are at least three men after the job of Secretary of War, from which, gossip has it, Mr. Dern will shortly retire. General Hugh Johnson is credited with cabinet aspirations. So is Joseph C. Kennedy, chairman of the Securities Exchange Commission and Frank

Murphy, Governor-General of the Philippines. In the meantime, it can be set down as a fact that the Administration is having trouble finding good projects upon which to spend the President's four billion dollars Work Relief fund. It is rumored a personal feud is developing between Harold Ickes and Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins. Smart observers are betting on Hopkins to win.

CLYDE ARNOLD JOINS HALL MOTOR CO. Clyde Arnold, former resident of Littlefield who has been living in East Texas, has returned to this city, and is a member of the sales force of the Hall Motor Co., Ford dealers. A large number of friends are welcoming Mr. Arnold back to this city. L. A. Stanley of Memphis spent Monday in Littlefield looking after his farming interests here.

SUNNYDALE Everybody is sure busy fighting weeds and some are replanting on account of the heavy rain of last Friday night. We had 81 in Sunday School last Sunday. There was no preaching that day. Next Sunday is Methodist day. Mr. and Mrs. Jim Sizemore took dinner in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brown. Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Hanks are enjoying a visit with their grand children this week. Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Jaques of Earth and Miss Grace and Teddy Hanks of Lawton, Okla. Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Capes and children spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Brandon. Mrs. Kate Parlier and daughter Ruth of Lawton, Okla., are visiting their daughter and sister and family Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Hanks. ROCKY FORD NEWS

Well, it happened Sunday, this reporter learned something he did not know; here it is—last Sunday night week, someone announceed at church for everyone to bring sandwiches to church Sunday and just stay there after morning services through the afternoon singing, so the time came to spread sandwiches and to our surprise the ladies had everything one could think of that is good to eat, so we inquired of Mrs. Claud Rogers if that was what women call sandwiches, so she explained that two or more pieces of pastry put together with something between for fillin' could be properly called a sandwich, so they had two, three and four story sandwiches made with fillin' that came from the salt water, from the orchard, from the ranch, from the berry patch, from the garden and goodness only knows where else that must have been gathered everywhere from California to Maine. Well, it was what we told you about last week, we saw L. C. Briscoe with a plate in his hand looking up and down the forty foot table, on being asked what was wrong he replied that he must have been made wrong—too much appetite for the capacity.

Roy Ivey and family visited in our midst Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Roberson and wife spent some of the afternoon in the L. L.
 Dunn home Sunday.

Ed. Bussanmas is driving a mighty nice looking Chevrolet car.

Leonel Dunn of Dimmitt visited turned from several weeks tour of Bro. Davis who has spent several weeks with his son Ben Davis of Rocky Ford returned to him home at Handley, Texas, this week.

Joe Grimes of Shallowater spent the week-end in the D. J. Dunlap home.

R. R. Miller returned last week from Stamford where he was called on account of illness of his daughter Mrs. Noel Scott who had a major operation, he left her slowly improving, Mrs. Miller remained there for several days stay.

We had some visitors Sunday afternoon from Maple, sorry we don't remember their names.

O. E. Dickson and wife of Amherst were visitors among us at preach at Rocky Ford next Sunday gratulate the young folks for their loyalty, it is noticeable that they outnumber the older membership in the evening services. The three summer months are lean months for our churches, and it takes the greatest loyalty on the part of the membership to carry the work forward in a way pleasing to our Heavenly Father. The public is not only invited but greatly appreciated in all our services.

FROM RELIEF TO RICHES Or: Strong Hearts & Crippled Hands

Last week you had
The luck to hear
The biggest upset
Of the year;
A big relief man
On a spree
Made pugilistic
His-to-ree;
He knocked a champ
From off his peak
With lusty clouts
To chin and back.
Max got the dough
But lost his chair;
Twas almost more
Than he could bear.
This thing confirms
My strong belief:
There's something to
This here relief!

Encore
A 10-to-1 shot
Comin' home
Gave inspiration
For this poem.

Boy, am I glad that's over again until next week.

School trustees met last week, gave ear to the plea of Business Manager W. T. Hanes of 1935-'36 school athletics for $2,100 appropriation for athletic equipment, sorted through the setup approved by the athletic council some time ago, weeded out this and that, approved a few items, promised Hanes at least a part of the amount sought, then dismissed themselves to go into it further some time in the future.

Hanes in high spirits over getting promise of at least "enough to help put Littlefield schools on the athletic map next year," prepared for a summer jaunt to the Arkansas Ozarks.

Just how much will be set aside for equipment for Wildcat, grammar school and girls athletic togs and tools has not been definitely announced... but the belief persist that there will be enough to make past school years look puny... Even 6 or 7 hundred dollars, for instance, would help lift school athletics out of what could rightfully be termed a rut. Athletic councillors and school trustees, looking into the future, are apparently envisioning what school athletics would be without grammar school training to precede highschool sports... and the result of this little vision, we think, will be a little more cash for 1935-'36 athletics than for any previous years.

This ought to make a lot of folks happy.

Kid League ballsters are rising in righteous wrath at implications about what they do out there on the lot every afternoon.

"The things you fellows do give us lots of laughs," said one of them there smart City League fellers last week.

"It's not what we do that looks funny to you high-flyin' players," replies Kid Leaguer Norman Renfro, with spirit. "It's what we DON'T do."

Don't you reckon he's right?

4 times, 1 run, 2 hits, 2 errors; Kasseroler, 3b, up 4 times, 1 run, 3 hits, 1 error; Sparks, rss, up 4 times, no runs, no hits, no errors; Clark, rf, up thrice, no runs, no hits, no errors.

Presbyterian 15, Church of Christ 13

Eight Presbyterian hits, as against 10 by the losers, were enough to bring the Muellermen a victory last week. Slow fielding by the Church of Christ boys failed to staunch a flow of 11 Presbyterian scores in the sixth when every man except Judge Bills got a run. Mueller, Coen and Hemphill puffed home with the winning runs, after lagging several scores behind until the sixth.

Oran Bell hit for 4 sacks for the Church of Christ men in the second.

Everything in office supplies at the Leader office.

Methodist 12, Baptist 9

The Methodist boys led in the third for 9 runs up a fast affair at the week. Rothell's homer failed to lift Baptist rally point. Hits were winners a double and a single. Pitcher Sewell fanned two; Twilley dists, whiffed three.

Kruschen Salts is one safe reduction treatment—it's a health treatment—physicians prescribe it—just a half teaspoonful in a cup of water first thing every morning mixed with juice of half lemon—added—a jar lasts 4 weeks and costs but a few cents—a drugstore or Men Drug Store sells lots of it.

to the showers. (Part of the said shower program was furnished by the editor's wife tossing buckets of water over the contestants.)

The encounter started near the sign board at LFD drive and Fifth street. Thirty came round the corner at Dr. Simmons' office and observed Pete in the vicinity of the sign. The fight was matched and the initial encounter was underway in less time than it takes to say "Give me a 'coke'."

Pete shows promise of making a real scrapper. He nailed Thirty under the left side of his jaw and settled down to spend the rest of his life in that position. That round ended when the pair were taken apart by a variety of methods including the prying of jaws. Round two ended in about the same manner.

Rounds three and four were staged at the Cooper Apartment lawn. Pete made the mistake of taking a circuitous route back to the ice plant. It was quite apparent that Thirty wasn't very well pleased about Pete having made a swing out of his jaw. Thirty took out and landed on Pete, grabbing him by the throat and shaking him in every direction. Both young men took time out to get their wind between the third and fourth rounds. Fourth round started with Pete and Thirty each having a lip hold. Termination of the fourth round was speeded up considerably by a quartet of assistants. The editor had his dog by a back leg, somebody had Cotton's dog by a back leg, and Cotton and somebody else pried open the dogs' mouths.

Mercurochrome (we had Bill Norris, ye sports writer spell that word for us) was used liberally, the dogs were fed, and both contestants rested peaceably Tuesday, dreaming joyful dream of a battle royal.

P. S. Cotton has suggested that a new organization be established in Littlefield: the Society for the Separation of Dogs.

Amen, Cotton, it's a great idea; you and I wouldn't have so much work to do on the hot days that are to come.

WE THINK—

That too much space is occupied in parking too few cars on Phelps avenue.

If everybody would exercise proper care in parking their cars there would be considerable more space available.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

PAULINE, WE SALUTE YOU!

All about Pauline and her accomplishments should properly have appeared in the news columns of this newspaper; but, in view of the fact, etc. and etc., that a "colyum" nitter has license to write just about as he or she pleases, we elected to have something to say about the said Pauline in this here "colyum."

Pauline isn't the title of a new son; Pauline is Pauline Courtney.

When Pauline was a little girl she wanted to be an artist. It seems that she has at least partially attained that ambition.

And, by the way, when this "colyum" nitter was about 30 or 35 years younger he wanted to travel with a circus. We are looking forward to the time when our dreams will come true. We are not exactly certain what job we could get with a circus, but time will tell . . . time will tell.

But more about Pauline . . . more about Pauline.

Pauline was awarded a $5 prize for a sketch she prepared for the Columbia Axle Co. This sketch illustrated in cartoon the advantages of the Columbia Two-Speed Axle. It was a national contest and Pauline received one of the five awards.

Congratulation, Pauline!

An Old Settlers Reunion was also discussed by G. M. Shaw, it being the plan to have this reunion in the form of a basket picnic, with Littlefield providing the entertainment and eats. Action on this matter was deferred until next meeting.
