

WRITES FOR LAMB COUNTY'S FIRST TREASURER

For Fred Schreier At Olton Baptist Church, December 11

Wishes for Fred Schreier, 71, county's first treasurer, were spoken Sunday afternoon, December 11, at the Olton Baptist Church, by Rev. Ralph Wilt, minister of the Latter Day Saints Church of Odessa, and Rev. C. C. Griffiths, Olton Baptist pastor. Burial was in the Olton Cemetery.

Mr. Schreier departed this life at his home in Olton Saturday, December 10, after an illness of several days. He is survived by his wife and six children, Lewis, Walter and Bill Schreier, and Mrs. Stella Cowart, all of Olton, Fred Jr., of Glendora, California, and Charles W. Schrtier of Beaver

Chief Justice Attends Red Cross Meeting

Creek, Oregon. Born at Elleringhouson, Waldeck county, Germany on March 10, 1867, Mr. Schreier came to the United States when he was 19 years old, and became an American citizen five years later. He was married to Miss Emma Katherine Kilmer on August 8, 1888. To this union was born eight children, two of whom preceded him in death. Mr. Schreier and family moved south of Olton in 1906, where they lived until 1926, when they moved to the town of Olton and resided until he passed away. He worked actively in all civic and community enterprises. In the organization of Lamb County in 1908, he was elected the first treasurer, and he was actively engaged in the consolidation of schools in the county. He devoted much of his time to the promotion of the good highways and realroads as long as he was physically able.

at the close of the party, sandwiches, jello, fruit salad and hot chocolate were served. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Williams and daughter of Bakersfield, Calif., are here visiting over the holidays. At present they are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dillingham. Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Williams took dinner in the W. A. Dysart home Sunday. The H. E. O. ## Lutheran Church To Have Special Program Christmas

The wondrous Christmas season has come, the glorious festival of our Redeemers Birth. Will you enjoy the real Christmas happiness? Will the gifts you receive remind you of God's gift in Christ, and of the love you owe your fellow-man? Will the Christmas trees with their lights be a token of everlasting life through Christ who is the light of the world? Will you with the Shepherds and Wise Men humbly kneel in reverence before Him, who was born, lived and died, and rose again to bless you. Go to church on Sunday. A Christmas program by the children of the congregation, under the direction of Mr. C. T. Boriack, will be held Saturday night. The program will begin promptly at 7:30 o'clock. All parents are kindly requested to see that the children are present ten minutes before the opening. Visitors are welcome. Christmas services will be held Sunday morning at the usual hour. The pastor will speak on the topic, "Unto you is born a Saviour, which is Christ, the Lord." The choir will sing for both services. Sunday school and Bible class at 10:30. Sunday night a concert of Christmas chorals will be rendered by the church choir, under the direction of Mr. C. Boriack. The public is invited to attend this concert and enjoy the singing of the old familiar chorals.

The committee in charge of decorating the church have requested that those who are able to assist them come immediately after dinner on Saturday.

all means but don't waste your pity on the young one. I knew that boy, knew him from the time he was a kid. He was always a pretty slick young customer. Queer how it came out in him. He had a crafty gift for sleight of hand. He could make a pack of cards do anything. He'd pull coins out of the air. Got a circus chap to show him how to throw a knife. I got this little scar on my cheekbone letting Jock practice knife-throwing on me. I certainly did trounce him for that. He was a no-account entry from the starting post. Seemed to settle down at college and came through the mining school with honors. But that yellow streak was there; and when it came to riding life—to stick to our figure—he didn't put his spurs in straight and, well—he bit the dust.

"Did you dislike him always, Felix?"
"No, there was a time when I took an interest in him. I was fond of his father, of his sisters. Jock was ten years younger than I. But he cured me of my affection for him. He put me through a bad time with that mine. I never saw a crook so neatly caught out and tied with his dishonor." Again Felix uttered the flat dead laugh and swung his car out along the country highway in a burst of masterful speed.

Jocelyn pulled down her small hat and bent her head. Even behind the windshield the air of their flight caught at her face sidelong and whipped her eyes.

The fear that ran through Nick's delirium prompted his questions: "You won't leave me, Jock? Is that you, Jock? Ant then in a changed key of deeper terror, "Do you think we've lost her?"

"Sure, I'm here. Why should I leave you?"
But when it came to "Have we lost her?" the answers though patient had a different note: "Keep quiet, Old Nick. You haven't lost anything. Here . . . yes, she'll be back. Did you ever know a woman you could lose so easily?"

By ten o'clock of that Sunday morning Nick's fever, with the worst of his pain, had left him and he lay still with a white racked face and looked sanely at Jock. The young man had not yet changed from his evening clothes.

"You'd better go and get some sleep," Nick whispered. "Business good last night?"
"Pretty fair. We lost Judson." "Nick's eyes began to beg." "I'm a great one to call you a convict and a carsharper, eh? When I taught you most of the game myself and live on what you make from it. Why don't you chuck me, Ayleward?"
"Got the habit of holding on to you."

"Last night—when I came in . . . you and Lynda, you know I'd like you to understand why I—why I—flew out the way I did. When I saw you making love to her I thought of other women I'd seen you with—and of myself—and—"

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT SYNOPSIS

Lynda Harlowe, raised in a convent, at the age of eighteen meets her mother, Marcella, in a hotel. Worried about her safety, she is unfamiliar with the world woman, her mother, who wishes to get her safely home. Attending her first dance, Lynda meets Felix Kent, rich and nineteen years older than she. Encouraged by her mother and Felix quickly becomes infatuated. Alone in her apartment one night, a cripple, Nick, enters by the fire-escape, and Lynda, in her fear, faints. Her real name is Lynda Sandal. Uncertain about her future, she wants to get married. Lynda goes to talk with her mysterious mother. Lynda Sandal goes home, climbs three flights and enters a room where she finds several men in a card game. Later, Lynda and her mother, Mrs. Felix, and her mother-in-law, Jocelyn, returns to her home with her father. Lynda meets Jock Ayleward, a man from whom she seeks information about her father's life. He takes her to a restaurant to talk to her about him, but instead they spend their time talking about each other and dancing together.

"Nick's suffering terribly. I have to leave him."

His reasonable cool voice answered instantly, "I've been expecting it. I'll be there."

In fifteen minutes Lynda admitted him to Nick's bedroom. He passed her and went to Nick. The sick man's contorted face smiled crookedly. Jock passed his arm under the writhing body and seemed at once to give it greater ease. Neither of them said good-bye to Lynda nor even seemed to notice that she went away.

When she climbed in at her bedroom window she was scared by the brightening sky. She could not believe that she had not been seen. But she was more afraid of what she must meet when she should be in that small bedroom face to face with the future Mrs. Felix Kent. That interview, however, was postponed.

As she slipped into her nightgown she heard a movement somewhere beyond the bedroom passage.

It seemed to her that there was some sort of stirring as of step or dress in the living-room. The little clock on her dressing table told her the time, four in the morning. She put on her bathrobe, thrust her feet into soft slippers and stole out along the passage-way. At its end the door stood partly open and a faint and golden light shone from the room.

Jocelyn came as far as this door. She could see then that the leather entrance to her mother's little sanctuary had not been closed, that its curtains too had been pulled aside. The two tall candles burned steadily and a figure crouched, surely the figure of a stranger. It had neither the attitude nor the aspect of prayer. Dressed in a dark and flowing robe it bent sidewise with a sort of greedy fixity over some object on the top of the prie-dieu. Its long hair hung down in heavy braids on either side of this gloating face. It lifted itself slowly, saw the silent intruder and doubled down over its treasure. With a chill down her flesh Jocelyn then recognized Marcella.

There is a German word for that nightmare and ancient superstition of an astral body, of something that walks both together and apart with every human form, a Doppelganger, that which goes double. It was not Marcella but Marcella's Doppelganger that Jocelyn seemed to see. It spoke breathlessly and harshly, "Go back to your room. What are you doing there?" and as it spoke the young girl turned away, it drew the curtains close across that hiding place.

A few moments later there came a knock at Jocelyn's door. She opened it and stood aside. She was trembling. But the woman who entered in a long red dressing gown was now Marcella, her usual self, stern perhaps, prepared to deliver a reproof.

"Did you feel ill, Jocelyn?"

"No, Mother. I heard you moving about. I wondered who it could be."

"I'm sorry, Mother. I—I did not think that you were at your prayers. You were holding something. I thought you were—"

"That was the little cross at the end of my marker. It had come unfastened from the chain. I was trying to fix the links together so that I could leave in the book before I went back to bed. You startled me. You did not look like yourself. Jocelyn. Why didn't you speak to me?"

"Mother," Jocelyn's hand rose to her throat, "I too—I thought that you did not look like yourself."

Marcella bent over the girl for one of the dry kisses and went out.

Jocelyn lay broad awake. The clock in the living-room chimed five. Chimed six.

Her suspicion, her curiosity, had become a fever, a pain that she could not endure. Chast-sofly she crept again out to the living-room. Her heart pounded and her head swam. She went to the narrow leather doors, opened them, found herself within. Having closed herself safely both with doors and curtains, she lighted the two candles. Her heart stopped and started.

that altar piece, Marcella had been startled, had moved away quickly, had left her key.

Jocelyn tightened her lips and spoke to her uneasy conscience: "She will not let me know her secrets. She will not love me. I must learn the truth of my own life by my own efforts."

She turned the little key and pulled open the thick small metal door.

Behind it lay a leather box and this she drew out and set upon the top of the prie-dieu. She raised the lid.

The glory that had lain hidden there glittered across her eyes like a mesh of living stars. Jewels as rich as a queen's. Rubies, emeralds, sapphires and white diamonds cut into blazing angles and set in a heavy intricacy of dark gold. Two long ear-rings to match were cradled at either end of the old leather box which was decorated with a worn golden coronet. The value of these jewels in such a setting must be fabulous.

Jocelyn closed them in, returned the box to its place, snuffed out the candles and hurried to her bed. The shock and excitement of the long night were suddenly too much for her. She fell down and wept in a sort of helpless spiritual agony.

When Felix Kent came to see his young fiancée the next morning, which was a Sunday, he found her so white and heavy-eyed that not only his pride of a possessor but his lover's tenderness was roused, startled.

"Darling, do you feel ill?"

"I didn't sleep."

"Let me take you down to the coast. Sea air... how about it?"

"I'd love that. I've never been to the seashore. Boulogne, when we sailed, was just a wharf and the big steamer."

"Dear," he began when he was at the wheel of his car. "I wish you'd try to tell me what's in your mind. I hate you to worry and to keep things to your self. If you aren't happy—" the incandescent eyes turned toward her apprehensively.

Jocelyn was touched by him for the first time. Hitherto he had made no such appeal.

"Felix dear, I—I want to be happy. You are the only person in the world now who seems safe to me."

"Safe? What a queer little lingo you have all of your own. Doesn't your mother seem—safe?"

"I can't know her, Felix. Will you please let me know you? Don't keep your real self from me, please. I'd rather know anything, cruel or wrong or queer... anything, no matter how frightful, no matter how bad. I could love you better, I think, for knowing all there was to know about your life, about yourself. I would so hate to marry you, Felix, and then to find out—" she falter, her tilted wet eyes turned blindly now upon him.

"And then," said Felix, "and then to find out what?"

"That you were not this man at all. That you were not my Felix Kent."

"I'll be that in any case, child. What makes you think I'm going to change? You're going to be my wife, you see. And I don't want a morbid wife. I want a happy one."

"Yes. I want to be happy."

"Then we're agreed."

"And I want to make you happy. Are you happy, Felix?"

"Sure thing. That's easy, sweet heart. I'll soon teach you how to do that. If you'd stop all this questioning of yourself and me and just lay hold of life with some sort of confidence... you know, Jocelyn's queer sort of animal."

"A wild horse to ride, suggested Jocelyn remembering Nick."

"That's it. If you don't ride him with a spur and a quirt, he will sure enough ride you."

"Felix," her tongue felt dry and moved with difficulty but she forced it to shape the word, "did you ever hear of a man named—Ayleward?"

"What the dev—! Now where did you ever dig up that name, child?"

For the first time, to keep Lynda's secret, Jocelyn made use of an invention:

"Cousin Sara Muller once knew a clergyman of that name... who had a son."

"And who kicked the son out and changed his own name in order not to share it with a convict. Wam't that it? Yes, I knew that unlucky parson."

"What did the son do to be sent to prison? A clergyman's son—it seems so dreadful."

Col. Johnson Brings Very Informative Message To Civic Groups

In keeping with Rotary custom throughout the world, this week's luncheon is entirely given over to making merry and celebrating Yuletide. The Littlefield Rotarians will gather today and devote themselves to the joys of exchanging gifts and remembrances.

Don Harris who is in charge of the special Christmas program, has promised the members a most joyous program. There will be Santa Claus in person (Not a Moving Picture) and fine vocal music by the well trained choral club from the local high school.

This is the one meeting of the year which always draws a hundred per cent attendance and today should prove no exception.

Annual Christmas Party For Thursday Luncheon Club Tuesday Night

The lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Sales, was the scene of the annual Christmas Party Tuesday night, for members of the Business and Professional Women's club.

Beautiful in every detail was the spacious living room, with three small trees in the windows, and a large tree in the room. A yule log on the mantle, holly, mistletoe, and silver bells added to the yuletide atmosphere of the room.

The group enjoyed a game of Alaskan Rummy, then their voices harmonized in the singing of several Christmas carols, and Mrs. Sales told a Christmas Legend.

Gifts were exchanged in a novel manner.

Dainty refreshments were served on the table that was attractive with pine cones in the center, and red candles burning on each side. Misses Ruby Kingery, Naomi Whitaker and Margaret Bandy were hostesses.

Those who attended this delightful party were Miss Marie Gooch, Dr. Hazel Nelms, Mrs. Eama Cash, Miss Faye Martin, Miss Doris Allen, Mrs. Sales, and the hostesses.

Miss Lula Kendrick And Baxter Brown Wed Saturday Night

Miss Lula Kendrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kendrick of Spade, became the bride of Baxter Brown at the Methodist Parsonage Saturday night.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Marvin Norwood, at the parsonage at 8 P. M. Saturday in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard King and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gardner.

The bride wore a navy blue dress with blue accessories.

Mrs. Brown has attended both Littlefield and Spade High schools and is very popular among the young people of this district.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Brown of Spade. He has been assisting his father in the operation of his farm.

The happy couple will make their home with his parents for the present.

Miss Freddis Adkins To Be Complimented With Breakfast

Announcement of the marriage of Miss Freddis Adkins to A. E. Hammonds, Jr., of San Marcos which will take place Christmas morning in Lubbock, will be made this morning (Thursday) at a breakfast at the Littlefield Hotel dining room, when Misses Hazel Shore, Ruby Kingery and Maxine Cash will be hostesses.

Littlefield Kitties Win 12 Games

Soaring into high basketball circles at the Littlefield high school basketball girls who maintained their perfect record of 12 consecutive games, last Tuesday night, when they trounced the quintuplets of Spade high school, at the local gym. The final score was 55 to 14.

Study Club Has Christmas Party Wednesday Afternoon

The Yuletide Spirit reigned at the home of Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Payne Wednesday afternoon, when members of the Women's Study Club enjoyed their annual Christmas Party.

The tree in the bay windows was beautiful with silver, red and blue decorations, and candles burning in the arch niches near the tree. On the fire place were two large imported Italian urns, with red carnations deflecting in the mirror on the wall. In the center was the Nativity scene, and Yule Logs burning in the fireplace.

Mrs. W. D. T. Storey presided at the coffee service assisted by Mrs. W. H. Gardner. The table was laid with a white pineapple linen cloth, with a mirror ball in the center filled with red carnations on a reflector. Silver candelabra held red candles, and on the buffet was a miniature village with a typical snow scene.

The program included the Story of Christmas in Different Lands, by Mrs. Chester Hufstedler. Miss Viraly Patrick sang the carols of the different countries, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Ivan Fowler.

After the program, gifts were exchanged and a social hour was enjoyed.

About thirty members attended.

F. O. Boles' Father Dies Tuesday

Funeral services for C. C. Boles, about 60, father of F. O. Boles of Littlefield, will be held at Gordon, Texas, Thursday afternoon. Burial will be in the Gordon cemetery.

News of Mr. Boles' death Tuesday afternoon came as a shock to his son and family here, who left immediately for Gordon to attend the final services.

Mr. Boles had been ill for about four months, and had undergone several serious and tedious operations in Dallas for a brain infection, but his wife and sons and daughter had hopes of his slow recovery.

He had been rural mail carrier for a large number of years, but during the past few years he had been confined to his home.

Survivors include his wife, who was at his bedside when the end came; three sons, Cecil Boles of Houston; Howard Boles of Albuquerque, New Mexico; and F. O. Boles who is county superintendent of Schools of Lamb County; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Spears of Snyder; and four grandchildren.

The Children's Day

Nineteen hundred and thirty-eight years ago three Kings came out of the East guided by a star, seeking the cradle of a new-born child. They followed the star to Bethlehem, and here, before the manger in a stable, the infant Jesus, they laid the presents which their caravans had hood, that we know the child will grow into something different but into what we cannot foresee. So let everyone pay homage and lay gifts at the feet of children on Christmas Day, as to newcomers lately arrived from another world who may change our world all over, as He Whose birthday we celebrate did.

A Good Plan Daily

The 25th of December is the birthday of Christianity, the lighting influence that changed the world from darkness, ignorance and paganism, and has given us a knowledge that is essential to life and well being. Some religious zealots tell us we will find Christ at the mercy seat, others at the baptismal font, others that we only find Him by doing great penitence. But 2,000 years ago, the veil that conceals the heavens from the earth was drawn aside, and a band of lowly sheep herders was privileged to hear and see the glorious celestial choir, and the song that came to them was, "Peace on earth, good will to man"; and the message, "Unto you is born a Prince of Love, you will find him in a stall." The same message comes to us from heaven today. You can find Him not in the gilded palace among the rich and great, nor in the imposing cathedral, but in the stall of misfortune, disease, and poverty—for He says, "Inasmuch as ye did it not to the least of these, ye did it not to me." This is not only adaptable for the 25th of December, but for every one of the 365 days of 1939 and all the days to come.

Biblical legends this story of the Kings and their gifts on Christmas has the greatest influence upon the custom of the season a time of commemoration of Christ, but the something of the spirit of peace on Earth to Men of Good Will" which is the essence of Christmaside.

It is peculiarly meet and fitting that this should be, above everything else, the children's especial holiday. What parent does not rejoice in the privilege on this annual festival, the greatest of all Christian festivals, of gifts at the feet of the children, the Kings of the East laid theirs at the feet of One Whom they recognized as the King of Kings?

The Child was King in Bethlehem. Now, for a season, the child is King again, and all the world lays treasure at his feet. For the child of today will be the man or woman of tomorrow, and who can say which one of them may become a king among his kind? That is the mystery of child-

Howdy Folks:

For Sale, trade or will give away, a large collection of (Mostly unused) 1938 resolutions. Owner is getting ready to put in a brand new stock of "Resolves." Will throw in free, a lot of advice, hints and valuable suggestions. Also have on hand a large stock of assorted experiences, some of which were gathered at great cost. While the experiences are not for sale, I am forced by reason of advancing age, to discontinue the practice of lavish investments in experience. So I shall try and confine myself during 1939 and afterwards, to making the best use possible of the collection of experiences that I have gathered over a period of 55 years.

I think that Big Brother Lowell Short is one of the best looking men I ever saw. He certainly looked good to me when he came in the office Friday morning, and offered to buy a few pair of shoes, for some of the barefooted kids out at the primary school. As a matter of fact, we have a lot of handsome Big Brothers. Why, the way Floyd Hemphill, Ira Woods, J. A. Von Lancken, Leonard Brewster, Judge Crockett, Andy Bills, and a lot of other fellows, rushed at me to underwrite the purchase of shoes and things, for the poor children, made me prouder than ever of my Littlefield neighbors and friends. Brother Floyd is getting up a list of about 75 or 100 children that need shoes and stockings mighty badly. We're going to see to it that every last one of them struts out in a nice new pair of kicks on Christmas morning. Confidentially, I am going to publicize the name of every Big Brother who kicks in with the price of one or more pairs of kicks. I want you readers to know who the real Big Brothers of Littlefield are.

There has been entirely too much mystery at my house during the past ten days. Everytime I come home, the wife and daughter start hiding things and making signs to each other. They've been springing a lot of initials and first syllables at me. They torture me with suspense, and are giggling all the time. Sure will be glad when 4 o'clock comes next Sunday morning. Maybe I'll start to get up even sooner. But I'll get even with 'em. If they worry me too much between now and Christmas, I'm apt to get my revenge by giving them something "Practical and Useful" instead of remembering them with perfectly foolish and cheerful gifts.

The sensational disclosures following the suicide of F. Donald Coster, who emerged from the penitentiary and became one of the financial giants of the country, has cast a cloud of suspicion over every wealthy or successful man in the country. Several people have been looking sideways at me since last Friday, and, before they go any further in their investigations, I want to say right here and now, that I never even saw a million dollars; never had or did anything worth-while, and am just a plain, everyday nobody. So—don't go poking into my closets.

Down in Jim Wells County, twenty eight farm families, who moved there two years ago from the Dust Bowl, are going to enjoy a $68,000.00 Christmas. Last Saturday each of these families received a deed to a 100 acre farm. This is the first relocation project of the Farm Security Administration and has so far, turned out to be a tremendously successful experiment in rehabilitation. These families were on the verge of disaster after six crop-less years. They now face the future with confidence and spirit. And yet, the tribe of administration critics and knockers go on with whining and moaning. Why don't they interview some of these families in Jim Wells County, before they question the benefits of New Deal expenditures?

The Federal Writers Project, has completed historical and factual data about Dallas comprising some 2,000,000 words. Out of this material some 100,000 words will be used for a Dallas Guide that is to be published during the early part of 1939. Nobody has informed us as to what is to become of the other 1,900,000 perfectly good words. May I suggest that they be divided share - and - share - alike, among the underprivileged journalists of Dallas.

They Don't Fear Death

Twenty-one years ago Charles Frohman the rail of the S S. Lusitania as the boat was near the Irish Channel. Rita Jolivet, a member of the theatrical troupe that Mr. Frohman was taking rope, rushed up to him and shouted: "Save Mr. Frohman, the boat is sinking." The venerable producer calmly replied: "Why fear Death, Rita? Life's most interesting adventure!"

Much has been said and written, about Frohman's philosophic conclusion. Here was a man who had lived a wonderful life, and contributed to the living of other people; facing the end UNAFRAID. He had solved the great mystery of life and was not at all apprehensive as to the nature of the eternal future.

Whenever you find a man who fears death, find him equally afraid of life. Sounds paradoxical but it is true. How can he explore the deeper meaning of life when he has lost his way even in the struggle of this life? Oh yes, there are exceptions to the rule; there are those who dread death because they feel that they have not done quite enough good on this earth.

There was Leonardo DaVinci who grieved to death in the tragic pursuit of perfection. Other great men and women regretted the nearness of this life's end because they felt that there was much that they could give and do for others. Their regrets were not based on fear.

Show me the man or woman, who steps courageously into the darkness, and I'll show you a person who has achieved Light.

Alvin R. Allison Appointed On Child Welfare Committee

Judge Alvin R. Allison, Hockley County Judge the last four years and elected State Representative of the 119th district, last week accepted active membership on the State Advisory committee of Child Welfare.

Created by the State Board of Control, the Advisory group consists of 25 members chosen on a state-wide basis; it's first meeting will be held late in January or early in February.

As a member of the committee, Judge Allison plans extensive work in carrying out the two-fold purpose of the organization. He hopes to do his share in presenting plans for better social planning legislation and standards of child care.

Throughout his campaign for State Representative, Allison expressed himself in favor of "more money for our crippled children and less for ticks in the East."

Even as Hockley County Judge Allison has been instrumental in many improvements of conditions surrounding children of this section of Texas.

Current plans for the committee include three and possibly four meetings per year; each member to be appointed for a three year term. Judge Allison's long experience with aolesence children, especially in this section of the state, leaves him well qualified to lend active efforts toward making the destitute children of today the leaders of tomorrow. Allison's appointment was made known by Claude ... of the Board of Control.

TRY EVERY BRAND OF GASOLINE THERE IS

I'm safe saying that. My own customers won't do it. That's what they're through doing. Maybe they thought it was just another one of their guesses the first time they drove in here for my Special Winter Blend Conoco Bronz-z-z. Now they know they've got the right one, and every cold morning tells them so, and they're getting swell mileage along with starting that never misses. even got one man that always had beat in garage, but keeps it off now, and saves the pense, and tells me the car never used to start near as fast as it does on Conoco Bronz-z-z. ## Yuletide Spirit Prevails Over All Littlefield

Homes And Business Dis- trict Beautifully Dec- orated For Christmas

To drive on Phelps avenue and in the residential section of Littlefield at night, and look at the Christmas lights, trees, and decorations will give one the Christmas spirit whether he wants it or not.

The Santa Claus at the Dr. Payne home is so natural looking that one can realize that Old Saint Nicholas has just filled the stockings hanging nearby. This scene is located on the porch, surrounded with lights on vines. At the front of the house are three large electric candles that add much to the Christmas cheer.

Warning Given

The officers of this city are receiving many complaints to the effect that Christmas decorations placed out of doors, both on trees in front of residences, and in one case on the entrance to a local church, have been interfered with, and electric light globes stolen. These petty thieves are reported to have been active Monday night on a street in the western part of this city.

Parties tempted to interfere with any outdoor Christmas decorations are hereby warned that Officers are on guard from now on, and severe punishment is forthcoming to those who in any way interfere with such property.

MIND READING IS PART OF CIVIL SERVICE

Local Postal clerk can read Chinese!

At least they can read Chinese if there is ever a letter addressed in the Chinese language.

Of course, they had no difficulty in deciding to whom the Christmas card addressed to "Margie Goes Snooping," City of Littlefield, was sent, and the efficiency of the post office staff is to be commended.

Several weeks ago, two special delivery letters came to the local office with unusual addresses.

One was the stamp picture of the young lady, located where the name is ordinarily written on an envelope, then "Littlefield, Texas." The other had the picture of a tree with nuts on it, then an ocean, and the sand on a beach. To make it complete, there were palm trees on the shore, then "Littlefield, Texas," below the work of art.

DEPUTY STATE SUPERINTENDENT VISITS SCHOOLS

Checks For Rural Aid,
Transportation,
ary Aid, Etc.

As announced by F. O. Boles, Superintendent of Schools for Lamb County, E. E. Day of Lubbock, Deputy School Superintendent for the State of Texas, visited all the schools in the County Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, accompanied by Mr. Boles.

The purpose of this visit was to check all schools for rural aid, that is transportation, salary aid and high school tuition.

In an interview with Mr. Boles he said: "He will check up on budgets of the various schools to see how much transportation and salary aid, and high school tuition will be granted each school by the State, following which he will make the recommendations for next year."

Mr. Boles would also like those who are desirous of getting in touch with him on school matters to be advised that he is now living at 406 West Third Street, having moved from 718 West Second St.
