Heart Trouble And The Causes

Pumping 2,500 gallons of blood every 24 hours is the astonishing work done by the heart, according to Dr. Geo. W. Cox, state health officer. The heart is about the size of a man's fist and is rated at 1/240th of a horse power; it never sleeps, loafs or takes a vacation from the beginning of life to the end. The only rest it gets is between beats. Yet with all the work the heart has to do it does not give out suddenly unless it has been injured or ill-treated.

Under pressure of work the average person neglects his heart and unwittingly abuses it. The chief causes of heart trouble, aside from the deterioration of old age, are rheumatic fever, acute infectious diseases, chronic infections, syphilis, too abrupt return to activity after a serious illness, too strenuous exercise and overweight may be a factor.

Many of the signs which you may think mean heart trouble can be caused by some other disorder. Indigestion, lung trouble, or nervousness may cause pain near the heart, shortness of breath, fainting and irregularity of beat. If you have any of these symptoms, do not try to diagnose the condition yourself, but go to your doctor for an examination. He will be able to find out what is wrong and may tell you that your heart is sound. Have a regular periodic examination and follow your doctor's advice.

Red Cross Starts Aid . . .

As the period of emergency mass care for victims of last week's southern tornadoes neared its close, the American Red Cross moved into high gear to rebuild the shattered lives and homes of the disaster sufferers.

For about three months, more than 150 trained disaster workers now in the stricken region will help the hurt and the homeless, the orphaned, the aged, the widowed, and the ill.

"Two categories of victims will receive special attention," James T. Nicholson, Red Cross Executive Vice President, said today. "One group will be survivors of the dead. Among these will be many dependent children for whose support and education we will make long-range plans where other resources are not available.

"The other category is the seriously injured. This disaster has caused an extremely large number of injuries—1,281 persons—of whom 731 are hospitalized. In spite of expert care, a number will be physically handicapped, needing medical treatment for months or years, and assistance not only for their injuries but for their livelihood as well. This we are prepared to give them where necessary."

In White County, Arkansas, thousands of dollars worth of strawberries for which the region is famous may be lost. The crop will be ready to harvest in two or three weeks, according to the growers, but many shelters for housing berry pickers and the transportation to bring them to the farms were destroyed.

Such is the case of 17-year-old James Black, operating the family farm near Bald Knob while his father is in the hospital. He has nine acres of strawberries. The twister destroyed his home and the house built for berry pickers and ruined his truck. The Red Cross will do what it can to aid Black, as well as other farmers who are storm victims.

Earl Wilson is a barber in Judsonia, Arkansas. He lives with his wife and three small children at Bald Knob, five miles away. When the tornado ripped through both communities, Wilson was a two-time loser—both his home and the barber shop were destroyed. Wilson, like many of his neighbors, has registered with the Red Cross for assistance.

For these and hundreds of other victims, the Red Cross has opened general relief operation headquarters in Little Rock, Ark., with additional offices in the stricken counties.

This week, Red Cross chapter officials in the tornado area are appointing local advisory committees on rehabilitation to work with the Red Cross disaster workers, who include social caseworkers, building advisers, accountants, doctors, and nurses. Local committee members will review individually each application for rehabilitation and advise on each Red Cross rehabilitation plan. Use of these local committees in relief operations is standard Red Cross practice, Mrs. Nicholson said, for they are indispensable in interpreting local conditions to the Red Cross workers and explaining Red Cross functions and the limitations on them to prospective beneficiaries and to the public.

Red Cross disaster relief is always a direct grant—never a loan, Mr. Nicholson said. It is a gift of the American people, with no obligation of repayment by the individual or the community. The disaster-caused needs of the individual or family, rather than extent of loss, are the basis upon which assistance is given. A person who has lost heavily in a disaster but who is able to stand the loss financially, without unreasonable hardship, is not eligible for Red Cross aid. The relief funds are expended to meet actual needs which the sufferers cannot meet from their own resources. Thus, two neighbors who have suffered practically identical losses may receive widely different help from the Red Cross, depending on their respective abilities to meet their own disaster-caused needs, Mr. Nicholson explained.

Red Cross rehabilitation assistance includes rebuilding or repairing of homes; replacement of furnishings, medical and nursing care; repair and replacement of farm equipment, supplies, and livestock; and rehabilitation of small family-owned businesses and other specific needs.

According to Red Cross estimates, 3,743 families were affected in the tornadoes, of whom an estimated 2,246 will register for rehabilitation aid. Red Cross surveys show 1,117 homes destroyed and 2,219 damaged.

the host was not liable for her injury.

Similar cases where social calls resulted in disaster involved a guest slipping on a small scatter rug, and another overnight guest who slipped and fell in a shower. Both cases were decided in favor of the homeowners—not the visitors.

From these cases it may be seen that the law is usually more strict about accidents befalling tradesmen and others who enter your premises in the line of duty, so to he knew of the defective condition and should have remedied it.

The law is especially zealous in protecting small children. In many situations where no liability would be imposed for injury to an adult, you may be held responsible to an injured child. If you have a piece of machinery, a pond, a well or some other apparatus or condition attractive and dangerous to a child on your property, it may be your duty to take special pains to keep children away from it.

IT'S THE LAW in Texas

A public service feature of the State Bar of Texas

Can a homeowner be held responsible for accidents that happen to other people while they are on his property? Lawyers say it is difficult to state a hard and fast rule about liability for such accident's because the facts differ so much from case to case. However, some conclusions can be drawn by noting how the courts have decided in specific cases which have been brought before them.

A postman delivering mail slipped on a child's roller skate one morning. He sued the homeowner for damages. The court held that the delivery of mail is for the benefit of the homeowner and that he must take care to remove any conditions on his property which would make delivery of the mail dangerous.

Then there was the case of the meter-reader who slipped and fell on the basement steps and the courts held the owner responsible because the steps were defective.

On the other hand, a guest sued her host because she slipped and fell when she stepped on some beans strewn about the owner's living room. The host's children had been playing with beanshooters on the day she chose to visit. The court held in this case that

2400 Restaurants Under New Ceiling Price Regulation In Effect April 7

Some 2400 restaurants and other eating and drinking establishments in the For West Texas district of the Office of Price Stabilization were reminded recently that the new ceiling price regulation covering their operation becomes effective next Monday, April 7. District price officials pointed out that the new regulation (CPR 134) freezes restaurant prices at the level shown on menus or charged during the week of February 3 to 9, 1952. It also requires operators of eating and drinking establishments to post dollars-and-cents ceiling prices for their principal meals, food items and beverages.

These frozen prices, with permissible adjustments by operators who have been charging lower than permitted under the present restaurant regulation (CPR 11) will be the dollars-and-cents ceilings which restaurants will post.

The posted prices may be changed in the future only by the direction of the Office of Price Stabilization. The regulation provides that future adjustments may be made if the OPS determines that food and other costs have changed significantly, either upward or downward.

A series of trade meetings will be held throughout the district by price officials in the next few weeks to acquaint operators of restaurants and other drinking and eating establishments of the detailed provisions of the new regulation. The schedule of meetings will be released as soon as it is available.

Meanwhile, restaurant price officials this week are attending conferences in the regional OPS offices concerning administration of the regulation.

The price stabilization agency is now sending out the posters which must be posted. They must be displayed not later than April 25, 1952, by restaurants in a place where they will be easily visible to customers.

The posters have spaces for 40 principal food and non-alcoholic beverage items customarily served by eating places. If an eating establishment also serves alcoholic beverages, a poster with spaces for listing ceiling prices for 20 items must be displayed.

For most eating places the new regulation will replace CPR 11 which has permitted restaurants to adjust their own menu prices so long as they gave the same percentage of food value per dollar of sales over a four-month accounting period as they did before Korea.

Brine Co. from laying brine pipeline in front of his home. The company suspended the project after Deuran stated his position. —AP Photo OPS officials said they did not expect any general change in over-all restaurant prices, either upward or downward, at the present time.

In addition to posting ceiling prices for the principal food and beverage items, restaurants must display on their menus a notice that all prices charged are at OPS ceiling or lower and that a list showing the ceiling prices of each item is available for inspection.

Railway dining cars, certain boarding houses, American-plan hotels, institutions, hospitals, colleges and bona-fide non-profit membership clubs are excluded.

The new regulation specifically applies to restaurants, European-plan hotels (including room service), taverns, cafes, cafeterias, soda fountains, catering establishments, field kitchens, lunch wagons and delicatessens.

Controlling Insects To Become A Major Job On Texas Farms

The problem of controlling insects may soon become a major job on a lot of Texas farms. Never before in history have agricultural producers been asked to plant and harvest crops as large as those asked for in 1952 and Allen C. Gunter, entomologist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, says the final production figures for the year will reflect just how well crop destroying insects were controlled.

He says there is a lot more in a good insect control program than buying an insecticide and applying it to the crop. First he suggests that farmers secure copies of bulletins and circulars from their local county agents that describe the insects and list the recommended control measures. The second suggestion is of prime importance. Know what insecticide is needed and then read the label on the container to make sure that it is the one recommended, says the specialist.

The great number of organic insecticides on the market today are offered in many different formulas and strengths and poor insect control will result if the correct materials are not used, says Gunter. He especially calls attention to the need for checking spray formula labels. In the case of cotton sprays, he suggests that the recommendations listed in C-182, Guide For Controlling Cotton Insects In Texas—1952 be followed. Then to insure proper dosage, read the label and follow the manufacturer's instructions to the letter. A lot of failures have resulted, says Gunter, because the wrong formula was used or in other words, the material was not checked for strength label was not studied—before it was applied to the cotton.

Gunter offers this word of advice regarding the mixing of spray materials. Use clean water and if necessary strain the water as well as the spray material. This precaution will prevent nozzle clogging and result in a uniform spray job. He points out that a more uniform mixture—of spray material and water—will be obtained if only enough water is put in the sprayer tank to get a good mixing job done. After the solution is mixed, add enough water to fill the sprayer tank to the desired level and then thoroughly mix the solution before applying the spray to the crop.

Gunter says farmers should remember that all insecticides are poisons and all precautions given on the labels should be strictly followed. Special precautions should be taken when handling TEPP and Parathion to avoid prolonged contact with the skin or breathing the vapors or drift from either spray or dust.

The specialist urges farmers to get their spraying and dusting equipment in top operating shape. Preparations made early may well be a determining factor in whether the insect control program on any given farm is a success or failure. It is good management, says Gunter, to be ready and waiting for the bugs. When they once go to work, time is on their side and successful control calls for immediate action.

RABBIT PARADE. This year's crop of Easter bunnies will cause squeals of joy from small fry. Newest are the giant-size plush bunnies designed for cuddling at bedtime. These come with sleepy eyes and soft bodies that may be counted on to induce happy dreams of Easter eggs. New crushed textures in plastics give a pert new look to another contingent of bunnies seen at the American Toy Institute's pre-Easter showing. Inflatable plastics are used for another new line of bunnies, chickens, ducks and eggs. In the musical toy department is a tiny box labeled "carrots" out of which pops a small rabbit when the music box plays "Farmer in the Dell."

It is estimated that the average U.S. farmer produces more today in one hour of work than the farmer of 50 years ago produced in two.

Although U.S. population grew 60 million between 1910 and today, the farm population dropped from 32 to 24 million.
