old people all around us who have been dead for years and don't know it. They don't think any more—their minds have died, although their bodies live on."

Then the famous physician explained in detail just what he meant.

"Think what has happened to us
 in 25 years," he said. "Our life, once largely agrarian, was paced to the horse. A man could keep up his business in longhand.

"Now it has speeded up. Tractors and typewriters—a man had to have a typewriter, then a stenographer, then a lot of secretaries. And what happened? In 25 years the percentage of insanity doubled. Men outlived their minds.

"Perhaps man is slowly adjusting himself to this age, this speed.
 But it is a slow process. Then tension has become almost too great."

Dr. Mayo is not the first medical man to issue this warning.
 But our usual custom is to stay about a generation behind our medical advisors in matters of this kind, and the killing pace of modern life has not yet really begun to worry us. We have wandered innocently into the midst of a lot of whirling flywheels, high-speed gadgets and rapidly moving assembly lines, and I, as hardly occurred to us that all of this is a little more than we can stand.

It is not only in the economic field that we have progressed too fast for our own good. The machine age has compelled us to live our lives under conditions unlike those faced by any other men in history. Hand in hand, with our efforts to adjust things so that over-production and unemployment may be abolished there must be a sincere attempt to slow down
 the tempo of the individual life.

As things are now we use ourselves up at a pitiless rate; as I Mayo says, we die long before we realize it.

The Next War Debt Payment

One week from today another payment on the war debts falls
 due. As yet there is no definite news as to what the governments concerned propose to do about that payment, and there are some reasons for thinking that they have not yet made up their minds. Yet they have been discussing the question for six months and every one interested has known that somehow or other an arrangement for dealing with this payment is urgently necessary.

The payment is required on the Thursday following the Monday on which the World Economic Conference opens, and nobody can have any illusions about the effect on the conference of a failure to arrive at some dignified solution. No one will have much hope that nations can make permanent agreements upon such complicated matters as the currency, gold, silver, and tariffs, if they haven't had the wit to make a temporary agreement on one installment of a debt.
 It is, therefore, absolutely essential that the June 15 payment be dealt with in such a way as to avoid all international bitterness and confusion.

How might this be done? We may rule out at once two theoretically possible solutions. There can be no final revision and settlement of the war debts before next Thursday. There is not time for that. There is not authority for that. On neither side is there the will to do it. The Europeans do not know what they are prepared to offer in final settlement and we do not know what we are prepared to accept. It is no less than true that the June 15 payment will not be made just because legally it is due. The European debtors have made up their minds that they will not, or cannot, carry out machine.

The five riding in the sedan were expected to recover.

How can the debtors recognize their obligation? Simply by saying that they recognize it. We cannot ask or hope to obtain a better guaranty than their word that they are not repudiating. How can we refrain from demanding the payment? Simply by saying that we shall not consider it a default if, with the legal obligation recognized, the payments are postponed pending the negotiation of a new settlement. Failure to pay is not in itself repudiation. There is no default if the creditor refuses to stigmatize non-payment as a default. A postponement, without prejudice either to our rights under the contracts or to the right of the Europeans to a review and revision of the contracts, is the honorable and practicable way out of the immediate difficulty.

One Veteran Pilot Flies As Passenger With Other Pilot

Imagine Howard Woodall stepping out of an American Airways plane in civilian clothes, and as a passenger.

That's what happened at the airport here Tuesday evening. And to make the situation more unusual Homer Rader was the pilot.

Homer and Howard are the veterans in service on the Dallas-El Paso leg of the southern transcontinental air mail and passenger line. In fact, they both flew a ship over the route, stopping here on March 15, 1929, the first day of operation of the old Southern Air Transport passenger line.

Woodall was returning from Phoenix, where he spent part of his vacation. He said he drove his car from Dallas to Muskogee, Oklahoma, and that it took so much time he put it up and went back to the air, even if he was supposed to be resting from flying.

Co-Pilot with Rader on the eastward trip Tuesday evening was W. L. (Bill) Hagman, who served as station manager of American Airways here until June 1.

WE LIVE TOO FAST IN THIS AGE OF HURRY.

The problem that gets the most attention these days is the problem of adjusting our economic relationships with one another so that all of us who really want to can get and keep remunerative jobs.

Behind it, temporarily forgotten is another problem which is perhaps even more acute in its demand for solution. It was touched on the other day by Charles H. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., in an interview at Memphis, Tenn.

"Life today," said Dr. Mayo, "is too tense. The mind gives out years before the body. We find

Figures Issued By Government Show Agricultural Expansion Achieved By People Of Texas

AUSTIN (UP).—Texas' conquest of an agricultural empire is the story told by 34 columns of statistical figures just issued by the crop estimates division of the United States Department of Agriculture.

It's a story of how Texas farmers pushed back a wilderness of underbrush to make room for their crops of cotton, wheat, corn, oats and potatoes.

It recounts how Texas farmers flung their wheat crop across the state to fill with bread the cupboards emptied by the world war.

It tells how Texas farmers added 30,000,000 bales to the cotton supply of 1931 and 1932.

"Revised estimates of acreage, yield, and production, 1866-1932," is the prosaic title of the wordless saga.

Back in the days of ox-cart and covered wagon, Texas had only 490,000 acres of cotton. But it yielded 325 pounds to the acre to make a total crop of 359,000 bales. In 1932 cotton production was at its lowest point, 215,000 bales, or 195 pounds to the acre. The average per acre yield for the nation was 142.4 pounds.

In 1931 the per acre yield for Texas was 173 pounds from a harvested area of 14,754,000 acres. Cotton production reached its peak, 5,322,458 bales. The 1932 crop was 4,501,000 bales.

The seven lean, and seven fat years of biblical days were reenacted in Texas from 1896 to 1908, statistics for the corn crop indicate. Despite a maximum acreage of 5,038,000 acres during the period 1896-1902, the average yield per acre was only 16.5 bushels. The average corn yield for the next seven years was nearly 20 bushels, a difference of nearly 250,000,000 bushels for the period.

Texas' corn crop totaled 22,400,000 bushels from 670,000 acres in 1896, and reached its peak at 124,500,000 bushels from 8,190,000 acres in 1908.

The "low" in Texas wheat production was 390,000 bushels in 1868. In the immediate post-war period of 1919, Texas wheatfields were flung over 2,415,000 acres that yielded 37,432,000 bushels. The peak year was 1929 with a harvest of 44,550,000 bushels.

High and low production figures for other crops revealed by the crop review are: Oats, 795,000 bushels in 1868; 85,205,000 bushels in 1919. Barley, 33,000 bushels in 1877; 3,818,000 bushels in 1924. Potatoes, 14,000 bushels in 1867; 3,072,000 bushels in 1928. Tame hay, 13,000 tons in 1866; 761,000 tons in 1919.

Browns Beat Chicago 14 To 1; Marberry Wins Ninth In Row

BOSTON (UP)—The lowly Red Sox took their third straight game from the world champion Yankees Wednesday as they connected with 15 hits off four pitchers for a 13-5 victory.

The Sox got away to a five-run lead in the early innings as Rick Farrell and Dale Alexander hit home runs and appeared well on their way to an easy victory with George Fippras shutting out his former mates for six innings.

In the seventh, however, the Yanks got to Fippras and his successor, Bob Kline, for five runs, enough to tie the score.

Are today's Tire Prices too low to last?

THERE has been a lot of talk about tire prices—a lot of speculation as to how much they will advance. Frankly, at this time, we cannot answer definitely. Tire prices today, in spite of slight increases, still are much lower than conditions warrant.

The industry has not been on a profitable basis. That's common knowledge. Prices have been too low. Also, it's generally understood that with the first up-swing of a market those commodities which have been most depressed are first to rise in price.

Then, too, there has been a substantial increase in the cost of both rubber and cotton—the two basic elements of a tire. So tomorrow, the day after, next week—tire prices are bound to go higher. It's simply not "in the cards" to manufacture and to distribute tires at a loss to both maker and dealer.

In all probability tires may never again reach such low price levels as have existed of late. Obviously, those who will need new tires within the next few months, and who buy NOW, before greater price rises, will be money ahead.

People of judgment and discernment, with one eye on the future and the other on their purses, clearly see the saving to be gained in buying tires today.

And today U. S. Tires built with TEMPERED RUBBER—far and away the finest, longest-wearing tires "U.S." ever made—are selling from coast to coast at prices that are not only lower than they should be, but lower than they will be.

Under The Dome

At Austin

By Gordon K. Shearer

AUSTIN—Not since the early days of Governor Miriam A. Ferguson's administration has her office been so crowded as in the recent two weeks.

The Texas senate may lose its only woman member. Possibility that Miss Margie Neal of Carthage, will be tendered a post in Washington under the new administration is frequently discussed at Austin.

News that a man had been sentenced to life imprisonment in Texas for possession of liquor came as a start to most people. The life sentence upheld by the court of criminal appeals, is under the habitual offender act.

On the other side of the picture came the statement of Lieut. Gov. Edgar Witt of Waco, announcing himself for repeal of the 18th amendment and for the beer amendment to the Texas constitution upon which Texans will vote Aug. 28.

In the clash of views of U. S. Senator Morris Sheppard and Attorney General James V. Allred over anti-trust laws and consequent speculation of what may happen if they are the contenders in the 1936 campaign, many have forgotten that U. S. Senator Tom Connally comes up for re-election in 1934.

Dispute still goes on about the capital as to whether Allred will be a candidate for governor in 1934 or be a candidate for senator in 1936.

A decision to start trial of anti-trust suits in which Allred is engaged in October makes it possible the trial may be before the next state campaign.

A victory for Allred in the case would add to his fame but past history doesn't indicate that it would be a vote getting matter. It V. Davidson of Galveston, noted for his trust prosecutions as attorney general failed in a race for governor.

Founder Of Texas' First Correspondence School Wins Claim

AUSTIN, (UP)—Miss Annie (Senator) Cooke, 70, who established the first correspondence school in the south early in the 1850s, is being recognized by the University of Texas extension service, held her gray hair higher today.

HEALTH MEANS CHARM AND HAPPINESS

Sparkling eyes and smiling lips speak of health and vitality. Clear skin attracts. The healthy active girl is both happy and popular.

Miss Cooke was born during the stormy winter of 1858, the daughter of F. J. Cooke who battled at San Jacinto and whose name was prominent in business and religious fields of early Texas times.

Her 25 years fight for approval of her claim has accentuated her gratitude for final success. The governor's signature of the claims bill was an "act of bigness" her approval of all major appropriations a "commitment seldom paid a legislature."

Today Senator Cooke was determined the money would be spent in furthering the project on which she has spent a life-time education by correspondence. Her Cosmopolitan Correspondence College was established in 1858.

By the end of the year students from seven southern states had enrolled. The 28th legislature passed a bill creating the Texas State School of Correspondence, but Senator Cooke was not reimbursed for the time and money expended in building up the mail order educational system.

DARLING FOOL

by MABEL McLELLON

CHAPTER XXXVIII

Monnie turned the letter slowly in her hands. Dan's familiar writing, black and bold, stared back at her. Her heart turned over. How odd—how very odd it was to receive a letter from him at this moment, when he was trying to make the most momentous decision of her life! It was as if Dan had reached across the many miles that separated them, saying, "Wait, Monnie! Do not forget me. I'm still here!"

Ah, but he was the one who had forgotten, her heart reminded her. He it was who had written that other letter, the cruel one telling her they'd better "hold up the plans" for the January wedding. No, it was no use depending on Dan. She'd done that in the past and her pride, her love, her faith in him had been wounded past bearing.

Should she open it? Should she make her decision first and by this time she had pretty well decided what she would say to Arthur Mackenzie on the morrow—she read Dan's letter afterward? Had he still the power to sway her past reason, past belief? Did she dare to see what Dan had written her on the very day before she had sailed from New York to adventure and another man's devotion? She wondered. While she was pondering the matter, flushed and disturbed, little Miss Anstie's blue ink came in.

"My dear, I had no idea you'd be home so early!" Miss Anstie, imposing in silver cloth with a collar of gray fox, stared frankly at her traveling companion. "I thought you'd be out until all hours. 'Painting the town,' as they say. Are you feeling all right?"

"Yes—no," Monnie stammered, not knowing how to explain. Then on a sudden impulse she blurted out the truth.

"Mr. Mackenzie's sailing unexpectedly for home tomorrow," she said.

"He—Miss Anstie, he wants me to marry him and go with him."

"Well, I declare!" Miss Anstie's beautiful coiffure of silvery Grecian curls fairly quivered. She sat down abruptly. "Of course, I knew something like this was in the air," she began breathlessly, "but not so soon! My dear!"

"I—I haven't decided," Monnie confessed. "I don't know what to do. Help me, Miss Anstie. What shall I say to him?"

"If you're considering me in this," cried the older woman shrewdly, "please forget all about it. I can go along splendidly although I shall miss you, of course. The truth is, Miss Richardson is dying to go Paris with me, with us, I mean, and wants to go on to Switzerland afterward. So you see I shouldn't be alone. Do as your heart bids you, my dear! I never advise in matters of this sort. Too risky. But I will say this. Mr. Mackenzie's a splendid man and very fond of you—anyone can see that."

"I—I don't love him," Monnie faltered. "I'm fond of him. I like him as a friend but—but—"

"He doesn't make your heart stand still, eh?" Miss Anstie considered this bright head on one side like a silver-plumed bird. "Well, my dear, I've seen many a marriage in my time. Love matches. They don't always turn out so well, either. You have an even chance for happiness, starting with friendship and respect. Then, too, my dear, there's the matter of money to be thought of. I'm not a worldly person. You know that. Been poor all my life until just lately. And now that I have had my taste of luxury I'm afraid I shall never be able to do without it again. It's all so pleasant—breakfast in bed, nice frocks, being able to tip the waiter without worrying about it. Yes, money's important."

"I'd be the last person in the world to tell a girl to consider money only when thinking of marriage and I know what poverty can do to young people. I'd like to see you get some of the whipped cream of life while you're young."

It was a long speech and Miss Anstie was rather breathless at the end of it. She stripped off her creamy gloves and smoothed them together.

"There's your family, too," she continued after a silence. "You think what a brilliant marriage would do for her."

"I've thought of that," Monnie said briefly. She crumpled the letter in her hands, looking at the fire in the grate.

"Child, child, you're shivering!" the older woman said, appalled. "Go to bed. You mustn't catch cold. We'll talk of this in the morning."

Monnie escaped her head in a whirl, the letter still clasped in her hand.

The clock struck one, struck two. In the room beyond she could hear the faint snore of her benefactress. Monnie knew that she herself would be a wreck tomorrow, look a perfect fright. If she didn't get some sleep. She tossed and turned restlessly between the crisp English sheets. Yes, Miss Anstie was right. Reason triumphed over emotion here. Her mind had been almost made up when the conversation had begun. Miss Anstie had crystallized her feeling. She would be a fool to throw away such a chance. She would say "yes" to Mackenzie on the morrow and go away with him as his wife. She would forget all the old ardours of young love. They were silly, weren't they? What was that old song she had heard somewhere? Oh, yes, "Oh, how I laugh when I think how I cried about you."

That was the right spirit, no doubt about it. Take love lightly! The trouble with her was that she had been too serious about her devotion. That wasn't what men wanted or what they laugh at. They liked you to be inconsequential. Monnie had been

Tech Feed Tests To Be Analyzed At June 18 Meet

LUBBOCK—Feeding experiments of beef cattle, hogs and sheep, fed on the college farm, will be analyzed and discussed at the first Texas Technological College Livestock Feeders' Day here June 18.

Several hundred livestock feeders, cattlemen, county agents, vocational teachers, packers, commission men, and others interested in producing, feeding, marketing and the packing of livestock are expected here for the first feeders' day.

Results of the feeding of 40 steers in 4 lots with four comparisons, 120 sheep in 6 lots with 11 comparisons, and 40 hogs in 4 lots with 4 comparisons will be discussed and analyzed.

The program opens at 10 a. m. Friday morning and will be held at the Stock Judging Pavilion at the college.

At noon the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce will be host at a luncheon to those present at the meeting.

Among those on the program are the following: Dr. Bradford Knapp, president, Texas Technological college; A. H. Leidigh, dean, division of agriculture, Texas Technological college; E. C. Mowery, department of animal husbandry, Texas Technological college; D. L. Jones, superintendent, station No. 8, Texas Agricultural experiment station; J. M. Jones, chief, division of range animal husbandry, Texas Agricultural experiment station; and W. L. Stangel, department of animal husbandry, Texas Technological college.

The crowd didn't know it but in mid-morning, the bride's father, O. E. Hayes, who had objected to the bicycle ceremony all along—or to any ceremony at all—went into action. Some of his relatives went by the bride's house, took her for a "little ride."

"Sure, we'll be back in time," they assured her.

When the time for the ceremony came, the bride was in Winkler, 100 miles away.

The wedding was indefinitely postponed.

PA'S SON-IN-LAW

MONNIE stared at it, turning the thick sheet in her hands. It was the longest letter she had ever received from Dan. The most ardent, but it wasn't performed. "The bride-to-be was 'kidnapped' by her father and taken from the city."

Miss Thelma Hayes, 18-year-old high school graduate, was scheduled to be married here Sunday to Seth Nicholson, University of Oklahoma sophomore, in all-bicycle ceremony at a cycling academy.

The Rev. R. H. Horton, first unitarian church pastor, arrived, and sorority sisters of the bride along without her. She would go along with her. She would go along with her. She would go along with her.

sumers in the Philippine legislature is meeting shortly to ratify independence. The authorities may decide to wait until that is over if possible before trying a general quota plan. Prof. Moley has a feud on with certain news writers. He thinks they treated him unfairly. Before he has been here four years however he will soon be a news writer. He writes about him. One of Moley's closest friends has threatened to give a detective investigate the private life of one newspaperer in retaliation. The idea will probably be forgotten. The result of this tilt is that Moley has practically dried up as a news source.

NEW YORK

Investigation—

Don't be misled by the apparent situation on the senate investigation. The show is about over for the summer. Mr. Pecora's assistants will keep busy during the hot months digging up further dope on the private banks, several commercial banks and the Stock Exchange itself. They will have a raft of stuff to spring this fall if it is wanted. Whether it is wanted depends entirely on how Wall Street behaves meantime. If the big fellows pitch in and do as they're told they probably won't be seriously bothered again. But if they persist in under cover opposition the whole inner workings of New York that will be spread before the public and legislation will be in order to strip Wall Street of its power forever. That's the story the private bankers have brought back from Washington. No one promised them a thing. But they got a distinct impression that they would be permitted to continue to function as long as they didn't try to steal the show again.

Caesar—

The boys inside will tell you the administration will be lucky to get through a year without investigation troubles. So much power and money are being handled so hurriedly that it seems impossible to keep everything on the up and up. The present setup is comparable to wartime. Days can be wasted on red tape. Contracts must be let without the slow motion picture action the government usually gives such things. But it is not so much the money as it is the power which is working those near the top. Congress has given the administration more power than any government of a democracy ever had. It can help or hurt any industry, any competitor in industry or any person in any walk of life. The utmost caution cannot prevent charges of favoritism being made. They have already been made in connection with the opening of certain banks. The prospects seem storm clouds in the offing.

London—

Our delegates are not going to be anxious to remain in London very long. It is costing them too much money. Senator Couzens contributed a laboring man's fortune to become a member of the delegation. The last American boat had sailed when he accepted the president's appointment. Mr. Roosevelt broke the news to him gently, saying: "You will have to pay your own way and that of your secretary. I know you won't mind, but I thought I ought to tell you."

Repeat—

The highest administration officials will issue a sigh of relief when the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed because it will solve their problem of what to do with Prohibition Administrator Delroy. His latest was an appeal to the house ways and means committee against the administration program. Wets on the committee pointed out that his recommendations were at variance with repeal. He told them: "I am unalterably opposed to repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment."

Notes—

The reason they may drag this Cuban sugar deal on through the summer is the Philippine legislature is meeting shortly to ratify independence. The authorities may decide to wait until that is over if possible before trying a general quota plan. Prof. Moley has a feud on with certain news writers. He thinks they treated him unfairly. Before he has been here four years however he will soon be a news writer. He writes about him. One of Moley's closest friends has threatened to give a detective investigate the private life of one newspaperer in retaliation. The idea will probably be forgotten. The result of this tilt is that Moley has practically dried up as a news source.

Bears—

The 60 per cent break in the stock of Chicago and Northwestern R. R. from 8 3/4 to 3 1/2 in less than an hour, was a manipulated raid if there ever was one. Although the instigators think that they have been pretty smart in covering up their tracks they may not be able to outsmart the sleuths of the much-alarmed Stock Exchange Governing Committee.

Restrictions—

New York insiders say that one of Washington's chief problems will be to raise tariffs without cutting it that. It will probably be done by a system of quotas and being demands from the producer of other basic commodities—wheat, corn, bugs, tobacco, rice and dairy products. For similar treatment.

Cuba—

The business about constitutional reform in Cuba and the creation of a vice president is part of Sumner Welles' diplomatic campaign to persuade Machado to quit. Machado will sing lusty songs about sticking to his guns but he will not be officially present much longer.

Sidelights—

Five women partners have been admitted to Stock Exchange floor this year. . . . That makes about 40 in all. . . . Only two or three are active. . . . The bull market has brought a real reemployment wave in Wall Street. . . . Professional pool operators are busier than one-armed paper-hangers. . . . There are almost as many pools as there are stocks.

HIGHWAY—

The federal government is going to give us $23,000,000 soon. That money is going to be spent somewhere. The people of this county will pay their share of the federal taxes levied to raise the money that we will use. Howard county can, if right-of-way is obtained by the county, have a good share of this money spent here. Howard county people will pay their part of the federal taxes whether they get any of the money back in the form of highway or not," he declared. "I told your commissioners court last week that insofar as I am concerned No. 9 will be built across Howard county whether you obtain right-of-way for No. 1 or not," said French. "We could have had all the plans on No. 1 in Austin and ready for contracts to be let as soon as the federal money is obtained if inclination to cooperate by obtaining right-of-way for No. 1 had been shown. As it is, we can finish plans on No. 1 in time to have it ready to let this fall if the county decides to go after the right-of-way. We might split No. 1 into two parts, and let the portion either east or west of Big Spring separately," he said. French said he believed in view of past experience in right-of-way matters, that cost to the county for widening the No. 1 right-of-way to 100 feet all the way would be as great as it will be. The present proposed route is followed. "Widening a right-of-way cost a lot more than you might think," he said. "I believe it would cost this county as much to widen No. 1 and let it follow practically the present route across the county as it would to follow the lines decided upon by the engineers," said French.

HOME TOWN—

Of interest is a matter left open by the law. It is believed 3 to 4 per cent will be the rate charged on most loans.

On road and highway building all funds allowed will be in the form of a direct grant, without obligation to repay. This holds true for state and federal highways and lateral roads alike.

Considering the provisions of the law, the needs of Big Spring and Howard county, the great need for employment, and other factors, it appears there are several projects that may be found to be practical here.

Somebody is going to get all this money. Howard county ought to get all it can use wisely.

A public meeting has been called southern states forwarded to the president a proposal that at least 10,000,000 acres, or better still, 12,500,000 acres be taken out of production in the cotton belt this year. They opposed, however, the timing of the proceeding tax. Wallace's announcement on Friday will specify the time the taxes are intended to go into effect. The act authorizes him to employ them at the start of a marketing year for a commodity. August 1 is by tradition considered the start of the cotton marketing year and July 1 for wheat. It was understood, however, that he will propose that the taxes on both commodities go into effect at the same time, August 1 being contemplated.

MAXIMUM—

No Public Hearing

If maximum taxes are levied, the act provides that no public hearing is necessary before ordering them into effect. If less than the maximum is levied a hearing is necessary. Wallace, it was reported, is of the opinion that hearings requiring ten days notice and a period of time for study of conclusions are unnecessary and would produce delays which he is anxious to avoid. Earlier in the week it was decided to postpone announcement of the plans until congress adjourned. This resulted in objection from many members, particularly a group from the south. T. Lister expressed opposition to a processing tax which they believe was made necessary by the Hankhead amendment to the industrial control-public works bill, which aside $100,000,000 for paying rentals to farmers, retiring lands from the production of basic crops. Another $100,000,000 was provided in the act itself making $200,000,000 available for getting the plans under way.

Wallace's determination to use a processing tax is based, it was reported, on statements made by President Roosevelt of himself throughout the past year in which they said any plan of adjustment must be self supporting and not financed from the public treasury. He has expressed the opinion that financing cotton acreage reduction from the treasury without provision for repayment would ad for 8 p. m. Saturday at the court house in discuss ways and means by which this city and county may obtain Public Works funds. All citizens are urged to attend and to express their ideas and opinions.

Truck Permit Must Be Obtained By Owner Of Load Leasing Vehicle

AUSTIN, (UP)—The Court of Criminal Appeals upheld the constitution of the state that a commercial truck permit must be secured for hauling goods even though the truck is leased by the person whose goods are hauled. The decision was made in affirming a fine of $125 imposed on Tom Reavley in Dallas county. I had leased a truck at $60 a week to Armour & Co., for hauling products from the Armour plant at Fort Worth. The court held the law was only a device to avoid the requirement for a permit and affirmed the Dallas county ruling. The case was looked upon as a test of the construction of the state motor truck law.

 DOING OUR PART

Taking Your DOLLAR TO MARKET

EVERY year your family, and every family of your acquaintance, spends about 70 per cent of its income just for living, exclusive of rent—so economic experts tell us. Think what this means—seven dollars out of every ten invested in food, clothing, household utilities and all the multitude of things that keep a family comfortable and happy.

That part of spending is readily understood. But do you realize that every manufacturer and retailer of these necessities is planning how he can get your dollar?

It's a big job to spend so much money wisely and well. It requires careful business methods to get the best possible returns from each dollar that leaves the family purse.

The clever woman goes for help to the advertisements in her daily paper. There she finds a directory of buying and selling. She learns about the offerings of merchants and manufacturers. She compares values. She weighs quality and price. She takes this opportunity of judging and selecting almost everything she needs to feed, clothe, amuse, instruct and generally bring up her family.

Do you read the advertisements! You will find them willing and able to serve you in the daily business of purchase.

ADVERTISEMENTS ARE GUARDIANS OF YOUR POCKETBOOK—READ THEM CAREFULLY

POMPTON LAKE, N. J. (UP)—
—Out here amid the mountains which resemble in more ways than one, Primo Carnera is preparing himself for Jack Sharkey and the writing of the final chapter in the book of his life, "From Rags to Riches."

Sprawled out in front of his house Primo, in that cross-eyed English of his, told us today he was a clinch to win the night of June 29; that nothing short of an order from Mussolini could prevent his knocking Jack Sharkey and gaining the heavyweight championship for Italy.

We asked him why he was so confident. Was it because Sharkey had been idle for a year, was growing old?

"No," he replied between bites on a handful of grass, "because Primo is so much better than he used to be. When Primo fought Sharkey two years ago Primo knew nothing. Now Primo knows better. He much faster, hit much harder and much smarter. Maybe Sharkey is just as good this time as he was last time, but that do him no good. Primo knock him out real soon, maybe late."

We asked him about that punch Sharkey floored him with in the tenth round of their first fight.

"Primo's fault. He feel so good in first rounds he grow careless and walk right into punch. Sharkey won't knock Primo down any more. Primo do the knocking down this time."

He would like to fight Baer? "Baer? He very nice if he fight Primo same as he did Schmeling. Primo knock out anybody in first round who sticks out chin and walks in with hands hanging down by sides. I like pop him very much. You come down watch Primo work and see if he not much better fighter."

So we did. And Primo is a much better fighter. He's not much of a hitter, still electing to paw and pummel instead of punching. But he's no longer the easiest target in the business. He's learned to block a bit, and he's dropped that leaning tower of Pisa stance which made his jaw as difficult to hit as the side of a warehouse. But the biggest improvement we noted was his left hand. He's honestly got a jab that's nice to watch.

And he pops it out with stinging force. More than once we saw him stagger Harold Maye with it, and Maye, while not one of the big ten, is a better than middleweight heavy-weight. Maye, you will remember, was the fellow Tunney nominated a few years ago as the coming champion. Tunney was right in one respect—Maye still is coming.

With the fight two weeks off, Carnera is just about ready. He weighed 264 today, just two pounds off his best fighting weight. From now on he'll work but five days a week.

Lack of Plums In New Laws Worries Many Lawmakers

WASHINGTON, (UP)—The administration now is turning from legislative efforts to the job of effecting administration of the new laws which are being counted upon to turn the economic tide toward better times. But even with the law making completed, congress still is worried because of the lack of political plums in the new measures.

Democratic senators are determined that in the future they shall be given the right to help select government officials appointed to carry out federal legislation in their various states.

The senators have felt that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, for instance, has ignored them and cut into their patronage. Senators wrote into the home mortgage bill an amendment providing the President shall appoint one home loan agent for each state "by and with the ad-

OIL WAS FOUND IN "OILLESS OIL FIELD"

TOMBALL, Texas (UP)—Symbols seldom come in pickle jars but there is one in a pickle jar full of crude oil perched atop the cash register of the Liberty Grill here.

Citizens could look at the jar and be reassured that oil has at last come to the Texas gulf coast's "oilless oil field."

The label was applied when operators appealed to state authorities for well-spacing orders although no production had been encountered. The discovery well, Magnolia Petroleum Company's No. 1 Koba, was brought in after dozens of "dry holes" had been drilled.

The town has boomed since completion of the well. New projects include two hotels, two lumber yards, an ice plant, three drug stores, a grocery store and a general merchandise store.

HONOR MAN REFUSED TO PAY $5 FOB DIPLOMA

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UP)—Declaring it an economic waste, Harry R. Washburne, Akron, a Phi Beta Kappa and honor student at Ohio State university, refused to pay $5 for a diploma.

Washburne, a student in the college of arts and sciences for four years, was scheduled for graduation with honors June 12. "College degrees and graduation exercises are a lot of sentimental rot," he said. "I cannot see that the world has much to offer a college graduate except confusion, chaos and no job."

MAYOR BOUGHT LICENSE FOR 12 HOMELESS DOGS

HORNELL, N. Y. (UP)—Mayor George E. Peters of Hornell has a warm spot in his heart for dogs. He has bought license tags for 12 of them, although he doesn't own a one of them. It came about this way:

Authorities became insistent that owners either purchase tags for canines or they would go to the lethal chamber; that is, the dogs would be dispatched.

Many came to the city clerk to see how their dogs could be saved and to inquire if they could not work $2.50 worth for the city and thus earn a tag. Denied, they turned away. On 12 occasions Mayor Peters was present and bought a tag for each.

Miss Dane's latest explorations were in the wide of South America, where she spent a six months hiking tour.
